

SCS #9009b

Thomas F. Torrance

The History of the Sufferings of the Church of Scotland,
By Robert Woodrow.
Vol II.

---

SCS #9009b

SCS #9009b

if they will forget the superior Laws of God, Nature, and Society: And if it reach this good End, there appears no Reason, why any concerned in the Persons named, ought to take this in ill Part, which is really unavoidable in Narratives of this Nature. After all, I hope it will appear, that all aggravating and personal Reflections are avoided; and if, at any Time, I have, by the Narratives I have made Use of, been insensibly led into any of those, which I as much as possible guarded again, I shall be heartily sorry for it.

IN short, were there any thing at all in this Objection, we must never more after this, have a History written, for what I can see; since a faithful Narrative of any Period, will have Persons Names and Designations in it, and some Side or other must be in the Wrong, and the alledged Consequence of reviving Heats, may still be cast up: But there is so much Unfairness, not to say ill Nature, in this Pretext, that I shall leave it. I hope, upon solid Consideration, it will be found to be altogether groundless.

MORE than once, in this Second Volume, I have pointed at the Necessity of an Abbreviate of the Fines and Losses through the different Shires and Parishes, as far as they have come to my Hand, and somewhere I almost promised it: Once I designed to have brought it into the Appendix, but, upon second Thoughts, it seems as naturally to come in here.

I may assure the Reader, that this Abstract of Fines and Losses throughout the Kingdom, hath cost me more Labour than many Sheets of the History: 'Tis formed out of several Hundred Sheets of Informations, from different Parishes through the Kingdom; many of them were gathered at and before the Revolution; yet, as will appear by the Lists themselves, no Informations are come to my Hand, from the far larger Part of the Parishes where the Persecution raged; and there are even several Shires where there were very sore Sufferings, from whom I have nothing almost, as Argyle Shire, Dumbarton, Stirling, Linlithgow, &c. Had Informations come to me from those, my Abbreviate had been much larger.

FURTHER, it would be observed, that, save in the Shires of Roxburgh, Renfrew, Fife, and Perth, the Fines I give the Abstract of by the Papers in my Hands, most of them signed, were actually exacted from the Country, and, generally speaking, in a few Years of the black Period I have described, mostly from the 1679 to 1685.

WHEN I went through this vast Heap of Informations, I found the Fines uplifted from the more common Sort, Country People, Tenants, and Cottars, save in a few Instances from Gentlemen, and meaner Heritors. The Forfeitures and exorbitant Fines from particular Gentlemen, and others narrated in the History, are omitted, save the Sheriff-fines last spoken of, those by Middleton's Parliament, and the Losses at Pentland, and by the Highland Host, which I have added, that the Reader may have them all together in his View.

I would willingly have inserted the Names of the Persons who were fined, and sustained those Losses in every Parish, according to the Lists I have; but that was impracticable, without adding a Third Volume to this History; and, in my Opinion, would have been of no great Use, save to preserve some Sort of Memory of the Persons, most of them truly religious; and, could this have been done easily, I should not have grudged it, since 10, 20, 40, or 100 Pounds from a Tenant, or Cottar, was as heavy to them as a Thousand to a landed Person.

ALL those Fines, even those accumulated by the Sheriff-courts, were in Terms of Law, and indeed are chargeable upon the iniquous Laws narrated in the History, excepting a few Losses by the Rudeness of the Soldiers, and the severe Courts, where very often the hard Laws themselves were exceeded.

story,

UPON every Turn, I find it observed in the Papers before me, that, for want of full Information, the Accounts given in them are defective and lame; and, considering this, and the comparatively small Number of Parishes here insert, at a moderate Computation, this Abbreviate may be reckoned to fall short at least one Half.

How much of these Fines which stand in the Decrees in the Sheriff-books, which I have inserted, were uplifted, I cannot say; but, by particular vouched Accounts, come to my Hand from the Shire of Fife, and that only in Twelve or Fourteen Parishes, I find upwards of Fifty thousand Pounds actually paid; and, considering the Expences in Attendance, the Money given to the Attendants on these Courts, and the exorbitant Compositions the Sufferers were at length obliged to, we may well reckon them near the Sums here.

I shall now insert this Abbreviate of Fines, if once I had noticed, that none of the Fines imposed upon every Turn by the Council-decreets, upon Multitudes, for Conventicles, Noncompearance, &c. are insert in this Account: These the Reader hath scattered up and down the History, and I have not had Time to gather them up; neither have I cast in innumerable Instances of Losses of Horses, Kine, Sheep, and whole Years Crops, in the Informations that are in my Hands, those not being liquidate, and I wanting Leisure for this, though I am perswaded they would amount to a prodigious Sum. Perhaps some of the Parishes may be inserted in other Shires than they belong to, but I have kept by the Lists before me.

Abbreviate of Fines and Losses in the different Shires and Parishes, from particular Informations in the Author's Hands.

Shire of Edinburgh .				Jedburgh
		L.	sh. d.			L.	sh. d.
Parishes of West-caldor	—	2958	16 8		—	6480	—
Livingstone	—	1787	17 8		—	366774	8 8
Abercorn	—	1243	—		—
Temple	—	3713	06 8		—
		9703	—		—
Shire of Forrest	—	50649	—		—
Parishes of Esdale and Etnick	—	2480	—		—
		53129	—		—
Shire of Berwick .				Shire of Peebles .
		L.	sh. d.			L.	sh. d.
By the Earl of Hume	—	26666	13 4	Parish of Peebles	—	978	6 —
Parish of Gordon	—	3328	4 —	Traquair	—	374	2 —
Lassiden	—	137	13 4	Kirkwood, Eddlestoun, Lintoun	—	506	16 —
		30132	10 8	Tweedmuir	—	1130	—
						2989	4 —
Shire of Roxburgh , by Letters of Horning, executed Aug. 11, 1684.				Shire of Anandale .
		L.	sh. d.			L.	sh. d.
Parishes of Ancrum	—	3349	6 8	Parish of Johnstoun	—	7512	1 8
Hallindean	—	11331	13 4	Lochmaben	—	4460	5 —
Bowden	—	480	14 0	St. Mungo	—	1178	—
Smallholm	—	612	—	Tunnergirth, Hutton, Wamfrey, &amp;c.	—	2134	1 8
Mehofs	—	40823	12 —			15285	1 4
Stow and Herriot-muir	—	8332	13 4
Selkirk-forest	—	26666	13 4
Stitchil	—	9413	14 —
Legerwood	—	1666	13 4
Earlston	—	781	16 8
Hownam	—	747	12 —
Oxnam	—	2484	—
Shires of Nithsdale and Dumfries .				Parish of Closburn and Dalgerno
		L.	sh. d.			L.	sh. d.
				More in Closburn	—	3006	5 8
				Mortoun	—	665	13 4
				Keir	—	333	6 8
				Kirkmahoe	—	159	—
				Tindram	—	2142	—
				Kirkmichael and Gavil	—	2473	6 8
				Tinwald	—	343	—
				Torthorwald	—	968	5 —
				Carlawerock	—	1192	11 —
				Glencairn	—	372	—
						2313	6 8

	L.	sh.	d.
Penpont	182	13	4
	14152	8	4
More from this Shire at Pentland	9517	9	10
	23669	18	4

Shire of Galloway.

In the Stewartry	2889	14	-
Burgh of Stranraer	2365	5	4
Kirkcudbright	2184	18	4
Parish of Borg	6472	-	-
Twinnam	813	-	-
Anworth	333	6	8
Kirkmabrick	563	12	8
Lochrooton	519	13	4
New-abbay	948	-	-
Old-luce	6871	-	-
New-luce	6506	14	4
Balmaghie	363	16	-
Partan	5087	-	-
Orr	889	13	4
Cosmichael	300	-	-
Carsfarn	18597	-	-
Balmacellian	2126	-	-
Dalry	3200	-	-
Kells	9511	10	8
Penningham	4490	-	-
	74832	4	8

More fined before Pentland, besides Middleton's Fines

41982	-	-
116814	4	8

Shire of Air.

Parish of Ballantree	3619	14	-
Colmonel	6545	16	8
Dalmellington	15780	-	-
Barr	20856	10	4
More in that Parish	417	6	4
Straitoun	6748	-	-
Kirkmichael and Maybols	1953	-	-
Kirkoswald	8104	-	-
Muirkirk	5726	6	8
Sorn	1800	-	-
Dalgen	1118	6	8
Cumnock	5366	13	4
Auchinleck	1646	-	-
Lowdon	2713	12	4
Kilmarnock	31700	-	-
Other Parishes here	6715	-	-
By the Highland Host, 1678.	137499	6	-
	258309	13	2

Shire of Renfrew.

Parish of Eaglesham	3645	-	-
Cathcart	1256	1	-
Eastwood	650	-	-
Lochwinnoch	4579	13	4
By Decree against Gentlemen, about 1673.	368031	13	4
	378162	7	8

Shire of Lanerk.

Parish of Libbertoun	232	8	-
Whatquhan	182	-	6
Biggar	1071	5	-
Walstoun	308	8	-
Dunsyre	177	12	-
Carmichael	266	13	-
Carnwath	6739	19	8
Lanerk	5000	-	-
Cambusnethan	6947	-	6
Dalziel	35	-	-

	L.	sh.	d.
Shotts	1708	10	8
Bothwell	11206	-	-
New-monkland	16674	5	4
Old-monkland	2666	13	4
Cambustang	3864	19	-
Hamilton	22681	6	4
Glasford	911	13	4
Dalserf	773	6	8
Evandale or Strathevan	54085	-	-
Kilbride	19570	6	8
Carmunnock	23299	2	4
Rutherglen	2171	6	4
Govan	1444	6	8
Calder	837	-	-
Kirkintilloch	700	-	-
	183554	3	4

Shire of Fife, by the Sheriff-books of Cowpar.

Parish of Scoonie	6800	-	-
Cameron	8268	-	-
More from the same	13600	-	-
Deninno	1400	-	-
St. Andrews	10400	-	-
Cairnbee	5712	-	-
St. Fillans	13415	-	-
Leuchars	16340	-	-
Cleish	8700	-	-
Portmouk	32700	-	-
Aberdour	2100	-	-
Dalgaty	8400	-	-
Markinsh	5000	-	-
Falkland	3300	-	-
Auchterdeer	5040	-	-
Kinglassie	11800	-	-
Carnock and Dovehill	6700	9	-
Dysart	12000	-	-
Beeth	600	-	-
Auchtertule	4500	-	-
Abbotshall	10700	-	-
Kinghorn	1500	-	-
Largo	17400	-	-
Newburn	2700	-	-
Burntisland	22500	-	-
Inverkeithing	13400	-	-
Aberdour more	1200	-	-
Kilrinnie	4200	-	-
Anstruther-wester	4800	-	-
Anstruther-easter	8100	-	-
Pittenweem	3300	-	-
St. Minnan	5500	-	-
Ely	2700	-	-
Kilconquhar	8500	-	-
Munzie	900	-	-
Logie	6100	-	-
Ceres	12500	-	-
Orwel	1500	-	-
Ferry	2700	-	-
Balmerino	700	-	-
Kembach and Darfie	1800	-	-
Cult	4500	-	-
Leffy	10600	-	-
Kennoway	300	-	-
Cowpar	3700	-	-
Kirkaldie	10600	-	-
Coleffe	1200	-	-
Kettle	1500	-	-
Hindlie	2100	-	-
Auchtermuchty	1800	-	-
Dumfermlin	9600	-	-
Ballingie	600	-	-
Tory	5000	-	-
Stramiglo	5071	-	-
By the Sheriff-books of Falkland, S. J. Cal.	30000	-	-
	396050	9	-

Shire

	L.	sh.	d.		L.	sh.	d.
Shire of Perth.				Summa totalis	1743999	18	8
By the Sheriff-books there, where the				Middleton's Fines in the History	1017353	6	8
Extracts do not many times distin-				Gentlemen in Renfrew Shire, 1684.	237333	6	8
guish the Parishes.				as in History	55200	-	-
Persons, without Parishes named	107400	-	-	Gentlemen in Dumbarton Shire, as
Parish of Forgundennie	11335	10	-	in the History	120933	6	8
Fosfoquhie	3000	-	-	Gentlemen in the Shire of Murray,	1430820	-	-
Kippen	2000	-	-	as in the History, 1685.
Town and Parish of Perth	44000	-	-	Summa totalis	3174819	18	8
Perth	167735	10	-

THIS is the shortest View I could give the Reader of the Fines, during this Period; a vast Number of others are to be found in the History it self, and far greater Numbers of Fines imposed and exacted, are not come to my Knowledge.

SINCE, in this History, I have frequent Occasion to name the Persons I speak of by their Offices, I thought it might be convenient for the Reader to subjoyn here a List of Persons, in such Offices, from the Restoration to the Revolution, as ordinarily come to be spoken of in this Work, and I may well begin with the Bishops, they being, as I have often remarked, the Springs of much of the Persecution I have described, though the Share of some of them was greater than that of others.

Archbishops of St. Andrews.

1662. Mrs. James Sharp.
1679. Alexander Burnet.
1684. Arthur Ross.

Bishops of Dunkeld.

1662. Mrs. George Halyburton.
1665. Henry Guthrie.
1677. William Lindsay.
1679. Andrew Bruce.
1686. John Hamilton.

Aberdeen.

1662. Mrs. David Mitchel.
1663. Alexander Burnet.
1664. Patrick Scougal.
1682. George Halyburton.

Murray.

1662. Mrs. Murdoch Mackenzie.
1677. James Atkin.
1680. Colin Falconar.
1686. Ross.
1688. William Hay.

Brechin.

1662. Mrs. David Strachan.
1671. Robert Lawrie.
1678. George Halyburton.
1682. Robert Douglas.
1684. Alexander Cairncross.
1684. James Drummond.

Dumblane.

1662. Mrs. Robert Leighton.
1671. James Ramsay.
1684. Robert Douglas.

Ross.

1662. Mrs. John Paterson, Father.
1679. Alexander Young.
1684. James Ramsay.

Cathness.

1662. Mrs. Patrick Forbes.
1662. Andrew Wood.

Orkney.

1662. Mrs. Thomas Sydsers.
1665. Andrew Honnynman.
1677. Murdoch Mackenzie.
1688. Andrew Bruce.

Edinburgh.

1662. Mrs. George Wisheart.
1671. Alexander Young.
1679. John Paterson, Son.
1688. Ross.

Archbishops of Glasgow.

1662. Mrs. Andrew Fairfoul.
1664. Alexander Burnet.
1670. Robert Leighton.
1674. Alexander Burnet restored.
1679. Arthur Ross.
1684. Alexander Cairncross.
1686. John Paterson S.

Galloway.

1662. Mrs. James Hamilton.
1673. John Paterson S.
1680. James Atkin.
1688. John Gordon.

Argyle.

1662. Mrs. David Fletcher.
1666. William Scrogie.
1675. Arthur Ross.
1679. Colin Falconer.
1686. Hector Maclean.

Isles.

1662. Mrs. Robert Wallace.
1677. Andrew Wood.
1680. Archibald Graham.

IN this List I have marked the Year of the Admission of each Bishop, and the Entry of his Successor; and, save the Time of Vacancy, which generally was very short, the intermediate Space is the Time of their Continuance in their Sees.

The Lord High Chancellors in this Interval were as follows.

1660. The Earl of Glencairn.
1665. Rothes.

1680. Aberdeen.
1684. Perth.

I might go on to the rest of the Officers of State, Secretaries, Justice-general, Advocate, and others; but the Time of their Admission and Continuance, may be found in the History it self, from which I shall no longer detain the Reader.

ADDITIONS

AND

AMENDMENTS to Vol. I and II.

I With my Friends, who have given themselves the Trouble of reading the former Volume; had been so kind as to send me their Remarks upon it. Nothing this way has come to my Hand, save a few Hints from a very intelligent Gentleman; for which I own my self in his Debt, and insert them as sent me.

‘ In your History, (Book I.) you mention Mr. James Robertson as one of the English Judges; it is true, he was nominate, but did not accept.

‘ You speak (on the Year 1678.) of the Lord Melvil as Earl, whereas he was not advanced to that Degree till after the Revolution.

‘ When you name the Members of the Council-committee 1677 and 1678. you give the Earl of Cathness as one of the Number, which is true; but lest it should be mistaken for Sinclair Earl of Cathness, in my Opinion it were not unfit that you notice, that the Laird of Glenorchy had at that Time the Title of the Earl of Cathness, and kept it some Two or three Years; but the nearest Heir-male of the Sinclairs, having the Title of the Earl of Cathness declared to be his Right, Glenorchy got, in room of it, that of the Earl of Broad-albin.

‘ You design Mr. James Ramsay (on the Year 1669.) Dean of Hamiltoun. The Title of his Office at that Time was Dean of Glasgow, though he was commonly called Dean of Hamiltoun, because he was Incumbent in that Charge.

‘ You say, There was never, as far as you know, an Episcopal Incumbent in the Parish of Finwick; which, no doubt, is true as to your Knowledge; but I can assure you, one Mr. Andrew Crawford was Episcopal Incumbent there.

‘ You mention (Page 356.) the late Earl of Kinnoul as fined for a Conventicle; I suppose the Person fined was George Hay of Balhouseie his elder Brother, who died unmarried.

‘ In one Place, you mention William Lockhart as Justice-clerk. You might have observed that this was the famous Colonel Lockhart, who succeeded his Father Sir James Lockhart of Lee, in that Post.

‘ I wish you had a little more clearly distinguished between the Time of Mr. Robert Leighton, his being Commendator of the Archbishoprick of Glasgow, and his being afterwards put into the Office of Archbishop.

What further hath occurred to my Observation, needful to be added here, take as follows. P. 218. I said, p. 218. That the King was pleased to be at the Charges of the Earl of Glencairn's Burial, and I am warranted to say so from his Majesty's Letter to the Council declaring so much: But I am since well informed, that the great Charges of the Funerals were never (for what Reason I know not) refunded to that noble Family, notwithstanding the singular Services they had done the King.

P. 266. In room of Robert Gordon, read John Gordon; he was elder Brother to the present Robert Gordon of Garvery, who after his Brother's Decease succeeded to him. I have lately sent me an attested Account of this worthy Gentleman's Sufferings, too large to be insert here. They began after Bothwell, where Mr. Gordon was; his House at Carnavel lying on the high Road 'twixt Air and Galloway, was often spoiled by the Soldiers in their Marches, and the Gentleman was forced for a long Time to forsake his own House, and wander in the Mountains, and in his Absence great Ravages were committed. Three Troops were quartered upon his Family, who cut down a large Bank of young Trees, destroyed his Corn and Meadows, killed great Numbers of his Sheep, and took away what they pleased from him and his Tenants. At the same Time Four Companies of Foot encamped in the Church-yard of Carsfairn not far from his House, and they brought in Multitudes of his Sheep, killed, and ate them. In short, Garvery was forced to retire to London, and after he had ventured home, 1683. he underwent great Hardships, and was obliged to hide till the Liberty 1687.

P. 268. When I was giving some Account of the Disposal of the forfeited Estates after Pentland, in common Course with the rest, I noticed, that the Lairds of Wishaw and Halcraig had Major Learmond's and Quarreltoun's given them; it would be remembered, that those Two Gentlemen had the Gifts of those Estates, not as General Dalziel and others mentioned, but through Interest made for the Gentlemen forfeited, and for their Behoof, as I am informed since.

Additions and Amendments to Vol. I and II.

P. 414. Line 58. Instead of Arnbuckles, a Country Village in Old Monkland, read New Monkland.

P. 416. L. 60. There is a Mistake in the Remark I make upon the Words in the Proclamation against Conventicles, And the Magistrates are to have their Relief from the common Stock of the Town; which I say is unaccountable, and the Way to ruine the Royal Burghs. I have overlooked the following Expression in that Proclamation, where, upon a second View, 'tis plain the Magistrates were to have no Relief from the common Stock of the Town, as may be seen in the Proclamation it self, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 77. In some former Proclamations and Bonds, Relief was indeed allowed them in this Manner, and I have not observed the Change here. It is probable I may, through Inadvertency, have fallen into other Escapes in my Remarks on publick Papers, and, upon Discovery, I shall cheerfully amend them. But since all the Papers themselves are annexed as Vouchers, I flatter my self, any Error that has slipped in, can have no ill Consequence.

P. 521. As to the Process against James Learmond, I have certain Information which may be depended upon, that my Lord Castlehill, though his Name be marked in the Registers, when that Process came before the Justiciary, and he was present, yet his Lordship was so dissatisfied with what he saw in Design against that good Man, that he left the Justiciary Court, and went to the Country. When, as hath been observed, the Lords could not agree, the first Diet, upon the Sentence of Death, which my Lord Castlehill very much opposed, the Matter was delayed till next Day, when the Weight of an Act of Council was to be thrown in upon them. That Day my Lord ordered his Coach to be ready, being determined to leave the Justiciary, and go to his Country-house, if, after he had offered his Reasons against so iniquitous a Sentence, he could not prevail. Accordingly, after Reasoning against it, when he found all to no Purpose, and the Matter resolved on, he left them and went to the Country. The Accounts of my Lord's Carriage in this Affair, were immediately set up to Court, and my Lord Castlehill was straight turned out of his Place in the Justiciary, and was not restored for Three or four Years, when, upon a Turn in the Ministry, he was taken in again. I could not but insert this here in Justice to my Lord's Memory, and as a new Evidence of the Injustice of this Time, in removing a Judge for acting according to Law and Reason, when those did not agree with the Measures laid down by the Managers.

P. 525. The Case of Mr. John Govan, the present worthy and useful Minister of the Gospel at Campsie, is inserted as it stands in the Registers. In the Preface to the first Volume I signified my Fears, that my keeping close by the Expressions of the Records, might in some Cases be unfavourable to the Sufferers, and it is so in this reverend Person's Case. His Modesty, and mean Thoughts of his own Sufferings, kept him from giving me the Account of them I desired from himself. I am glad I can now give a fuller Narrative of them, and do him Justice here, in a Point wherein he is wronged in the Article formerly published from the Registers. Mr. Govan had come from St. Andrews to his Brother in Law, the reverend and learned Mr. Thomas Forrester, his House in Monteith. During his Stay there, a Party of Soldiers came on a Sabbath Evening to seize Mr. Forrester, and happily missed him; they forced Mr. Govan and John Graham in Lodlewain to go with them to Stirling, only (as they said) to verify that they had observed their Orders, promising they should have Liberty to return next Day: But when brought to Stirling, upon their refusing the Bond of Regularity, they were both clapped up in Prison. There Mr. Govan continued Two Years; after which, at the Primate's Instigation, as he was informed, he was brought under a Guard to the Canongate Tolbooth. Thence he was brought before the Council, and had a Libel given him for being at Conventicles in many Places, in none of which he had ever been present; and therefore he had full Freedom to declare negatively as to all the Points libelled; mean while, he frankly acknowledged Converse with his Brother in Law. Whereupon he was again remitted to the Tolbooth. In a little Time his Father in Law, when the Primate was absent, through his Interest with my Lord Roths, procured an Act of Liberation for Mr. Govan, and brought it to him in Prison, and he was let out presently. But Mr. Govan is positive, no Bond for living orderly, and not keeping Conventicles, was offered him, far less did he give one, or any for him, that ever he knew of. If any other of the Sufferers be misrepresented in the Extracts from the Records, I wish I had got the Accounts of them, and they should have been added here.

This is what offers to me at present as to the former Volume. I have only an Amendment and Addition or Two as to the Second Volume, which are come to me lately.

P. 173. In my Account of the Place where the Reverend Mr. Blackadder died, there is a Mistake which I was led into by a Narrative I had after the first Volume was printed off, and that occasioned the last Line of the Errata to that Volume, (which I now desire may be deleted) and by the peremptory Acts of Council for Mr. Blackadder's Liberation, which stand in this Volume, P. 480. from both those, I concluded this good Man had been liberated from the Bast, and that he died in a little at Haddingtoun. But I find now, by certain Information from his surviving Sons, that he actually died in the Bast, as I had said Volume I. P. 393. and these Acts for this excellent Person's Liberation never took Effect. The Place of his Death is of very very little Importance, but I am still ready to amend the smallest Mistake when informed of it.

P. 394. After the Case of that singular Person Mr. Baily of Jerviswood was printed off, I received a Narrative of some further Circumstances of his Trial from a worthy Friend of mine who was present, and a mournful Spectator. What passed made so deep Impression upon him, that he is distinct as to the very Words and Phrases that were used, and I thought they deserved a Room here.

Jerviswood being much indisposed, came to the Bar of the Justiciary in his Night-gown, attended by his Sister, who several Times gave him Cordials, he being so ill as he was obliged to sit down on a Stool. He heard all very patiently; only when long Narrative, Jerviswood would now and then look upwards, and hold up his Hands. When the Declarations and Affidavits that came from England were read, he appeared to be in some Concern, and said, Oh, oh! staring upon the King's Advocate.

But when the Advocate, in his Discourse to the Assize, insisted on those Declarations and Affidavits, and enlarged more fully upon them than in the Speech he caused print in Jerviswood's Trial, then Jerviswood stared him very broad, and appeared to be very much troubled.

After the Advocate had ended his Discourse, Jerviswood desired Liberty of the Earl of Linlithgow, to speak a few Words, not being able to say much because of his great Weakness. Which being granted, he spake to this Purpose. "That the Sickness now upon him in all human Appearance would soon prove mortal, and he could not live many Days; but he found he was intended for a publick Sacrifice in his Life and Estate; that he would say nothing as to the Justice of their Lordships Interlocutor, and was sorry his Trial had given them so much and long Trouble, by staying so long in the Court, it being then past Midnight. And then addressed himself to the Assize, telling them, he doubted not, but they would act as Men of Honour; that there were hard Things in the Depositions of the Witnesses against him, which was to be their Rule, and that nothing he could say was to prevail with them; yet for the Exoneration of his own Conscience, and that his poor Memory and Family might not suffer unjustly, he behoved to say, that the most material Witnesses were Correspondents, and Life might be precious to some; that one of them was very happy in a Memory, yet he was sure there were some Things said to be spoken in a Meeting where he was, which, he was positive, were not at least while he was there; withal he most heartily forgave them. But there is one Thing, says he, which vexes me extremely, and wherein I am injured to the utmost Degree, and that is for a Plot to cut off the King and his Royal Highness, and that I sat up Nights to form a Declaration to palliate or justify such a Villany. I am in Probability to appear, in some Hours, before the Tribunal of the great Judge, and, in Presence of your Lordships and all here, I solemnly declare, that never was I prompted, or privy to any such Thing, and that I abhor and detest all Thoughts or Principles for touching the Life and Blood of his sacred Majesty, or his Royal Brother. I was ever for monarchical Government.

And then looking directly upon the King's Advocate, he said, "My Lord, I think it very strange you charge me with such abominable Things; you may remember, that when you came to me in Prison, you told me such Things were laid to my Charge, but that you did not believe them. How then, my Lord, come you to lay such a Stain upon me, with so much Violence? are you now convinced in your Conscience, that I am more guilty than before? You may remember what passed betwixt us in the Prison.

The whole Audience fixed their Eyes upon the Advocate, who appeared in no small Confusion, and said, "Jerviswood, I own what you say, my Thoughts there were as a private Man; but what I say here is by special Direction of the Privy Council; and, pointing to Sir William Paterson Clerk, added, he knows my Orders. Well, says Jerviswood, if your Lordship have one Conscience for your self, and another for the Council, I pray God forgive you, I do. And turning to the Justice-general, he said, My Lord, I trouble your Lordships no further.

P. 563. As to the Murder of Gilbert Macadam, I have several Circumstances sent me since the short Hint in the History was printed; but at present I shall only take Notice, that the Cloud of Witnesses most injuriously represent, P. 281. that John Reid of Ballachmile was actively concerned in this Murder. I am well assured, and it can be attested by several yet alive, that he was not in the least concerned in that barbarous Murder. All the Gentlemen in that Neighbourhood, under Colzean's Command as Captain of the Militia, were advertised to go with him to the House of William Lockhart in Tranore (as I am told it was, though in the former Hints it be said to be the House of Hugh Campbel) where the Murder was committed. But none of them came up so soon as he had ordered, Gentlemen not being very forward in those Cases; and I am assured none were with Colzean save Ardmillan and one Kennedy. Indeed after that young Gentleman Mr. Macadam had received his Wounds, and when he was in the Agonies of Death, Mr. Reid and some others came up, and Ballachmile prevailed so far with the Captain, as to get Liberty to carry in Mr. Macadam to the foreſaid Houſe, for which Mr. Reid received his dying Thanks and Bleſſing. So that he is moſt injuriouſly repreſented in that Book.

Additions and Amendments to Vol. I and II.

In this Volume I more than once mention Captain Bruce as concerned in the Barbarity of this Period: I am told there were Two Gentlemen in the Army of that Deſignation, Bruce of Earſhall, and another; the laſt named, I am aſſured, was very moderate, and far from running to the Heights of the other.

P. 590. I find that the Biſhop of Aberdeen, mentioned P. 590. was Mr. George Halyburton, who lived till within theſe few Years, and was the longeſt Liver of the Scots Biſhops in this Period, ſave Mr. Douglas of Dumblane, and Mr. Alexander Roſs of Edinburgh, who was the laſt Liver of them all.

P. 608. I obſerve, that Sir George Mackenzie was turned out of the Poſt of King's Advocate, and I am told the Reaſon of it was, that great Lawier was not hearty in the Matter of the Repeal of the penal Statutes. And next Year (P. 627.) when Sir George was reponed, Sir John Dalrymple was made Juſtice-clerk, and a Lord of Seſſion in room of the Lord Collingtoun, the Father, deceaſed.

P. 627. In that Page laſt named, I obſerve, that my Lord Harcarſe was turned out, and now I add, that both Sir Roger Hog of Harcarſe, and Wauchop of Edmonſtoun, were turned out of the Seſſion, being ſtanch to the Proteſtant Interelt, and Gordon of Auchintoul a Papiſt, and Alexander Swintoun of Merjingtoun put in their Place.

Edinburgh, May 16. 1722.

WHEN I reſolved to publiſh this History, I could not but expect Attacks from the Advocates for the Bloodſhed and Severity of the Reigns here deſcribed; and it was a little ſtrange to me, that my Firſt Volume has been now abroad for a Year, and nothing this way hath appeared. After my History was printed off, this Day I had a printed Letter put in my Hand, dated May 10. and ſigned Philanax.

This Performance is ſo indiſcreet, low, and flat, that I can ſcarce prevail with my ſelf to think it deſerves any publick Notice, yet having Room for a few Lines in this Place, I ſhall obſerve once for all, that I don't look on my ſelf as obliged to take any Notice of unsupported Assertions, ſcurrilous Innuendo's, and unmannerly Attacks of this Nature; they do a great deal of more Hurt to the Authors and Publiſhers, than to me or this History. I pretend to no Talent in Railing and Billingsgate, and ſhall never be able to make any Returns this way.

When the Letter-writer's Friend publiſhes his History, tho' Recriminations don't affect me, yet I doubt not but it will be conſidered. The Sketch he is pleaſed to communicate, ſeems to be taken from the unsupported and ill-natured Memoirs publiſhed under Biſhop Guthry's Name. Any Thing that will ſet the Period ſpoken of in a true and juſt Light, will be acceptable to me and all Lovers of Truth; but for the Hiſtorian's own ſake, I hope he will take Care not to copy after his Friend's indiſcreet and indecent Way, elſe I am of Opinion no Body will reckon themſelves obliged to loſe Time in reading his large Work.

ERRATA.

PAGE 12. Line 2. approved read appointed. p. 22. l. 34. thith r. with. p. 23. l. 26. 13. r. 12. p. 38. l. 63. Gentlemen r. Gentleman; & have r. hath. p. 45. l. 46. Daniel r. Danziel. p. 52. l. 15. at r. of. p. 55. l. 54. Conſultation r. Conſultation. p. 64. l. 33. there r. were. l. 61. Manner r. Matter. p. 74. l. 23. of all r. at all. p. 83. l. 6. Letter r. Letters. p. 113. l. 4. left r. loſt. p. 115. l. 21. Macdonall r. Macdonald. p. 128. Margin at Line 23. Graden r. Down. p. 130. l. 9. to Margin add conſidered. p. 134. l. 48. July r. June. p. 139. l. 7. now unreaſonable r. new and unreaſonable. l. 20. Bounds r. Bonds. p. 140. l. 44. after Enemies add and fought deſperately. p. 153. l. 53. law r. lay. p. 159. l. 3. Perſecutions r. Proſecutions. p. 166. l. 17. tho' r. the. p. 170. l. 37. after Advocate and Clerk, add, and the Confeſſions ſigned by the ſaid Lords, Advocate, and Clerk. p. 175. l. 3. Caſtrati r. Calbarts. p. 180. l. 22. after People, add, who did not go to the Extremities ſome of the poor People went unto. p. 185. l. 21. after were excommunicated, &c. add, if there was an Excom- munication. p. 188. l. 41. know r. renew. p. 209. l. 24. beſt r. beſt way. p. 211. l. 39. after App. 70. No. 5. dele unto this the Advocate gave Duplies added, &c. r. and Sir George Lockhart added Replies, which follow App. 70. No. 6. and ſo on the Margin. p. 221. l. 62. to to r. to be. p. 234. l. 57. 25 r. 29. p. 240. l. 37. of r. at. p. 246. l. 13. after attacked him, add, and ſent Ten Dragoons to apprehend him. p. 246. l. 62. yet r. and. p. 256. l. 25. brought r. bought. p. 257. l. 32. 1682. r. 1683. l. 48. Liberation r. Liberty. p. 273. l. 34. Conventions r. Conventicles. p. 276. l. 49. Act r. Articles. p. 280. l. 20. Diets r. Trials. p. 287. l. 58. there r. Comp. there. p. 299. l. 52. incorrect r. and incorrect. p. 302. l. 53. by the r. of the. p. 307. l. 31. John Ochiltree r. in Ochiltree. p. 311. l. 25. Worceſter r. Rochefter. p. 321. l. 62. dele Johnſton. p. 327. l. 26. as this r. at this. l. 29. after few or no Perſons r. few or no Partheſes eſcaped. In the Town of, &c. p. 329. l. 50. others r. Orders. p. 332. l. 40. Extremities r. extremely. p. 358. l. 35. 15. r. February 15. p. 363. l. 14. I find r. the ſame Day I find. p. 380. l. 50. his to them r. his Triphes to them. p. 382. l. 26. Advocates r. Advocate. p. 441. to the Sheriff r. for the Shire. p. 457. l. 11. del. p. 426. l. laſt Gentleman r. Gentlemen. p. 429. l. 46. preſcribed r. proſcribed. p. 441. l. 36. Wallace r. Wales. l. 40. dele July 24. p. 483. l. 22. add r. only add. p. 484. l. 55. engaging to riſe r. engaging not to riſe. p. 481. l. 36. Sir James, dele Sir. p. 494. l. 56. Callow r. Galloway. p. 483. l. 22. as his r. as to his. p. 483. l. 55. engaging to riſe r. engaging not to riſe. p. 518. l. 31. Oppoſitions r. Poſitions. p. 519. l. 38. dele againſt. p. 521. l. 10. dele about 515. l. 55. r. a ( ) at Fanaticks; and Aſſailinations dele ( ) p. 518. l. 31. Oppoſitions r. Poſitions. p. 519. l. 38. dele againſt. p. 521. l. 10. dele about the 1633. if I remember. p. 527. l. 54. 2 r. 4. p. 529. l. 20. Materials r. diſtinct Materials. p. 550. l. 59. Prelate r. Prelates. del r. reſt and ſtole. p. 551. l. 31. Hat r. with his Hat on. p. 559. l. 43. what ſhall we think r. we muſt think. p. 601. l. 8. Deſertions r. De- ſections. p. 609. l. 39. Proceſs r. Princeſs. p. 628. Margin to l. 44. July r. June. p. 630. l. 53. 21 r. 27. p. 632. l. 16. ſet down r. ſet down at large. p. 640. l. 22. for r. for it. p. 643. l. 50. any r. many. Append. p. 172. l. 64. There is a Blank in the autograph Part of the Writ, being eraſed: But, as far as it can be reached, it ſeems to run, ſeignal very evidently. In the Liſt of oured Miniſters Volume I. App. No. 37. Mr. Thomas Caſſe r. Mr. Thomas Gloſt. Mr. H. Pitcairn is ſaid to be oured, whereas he con- formed. Mr. David Orm, and not the Perſon named, was in Fergandenme. Mr. Robert Campuel is placed in Angus, whereas he was in Perth.

The

The Contents of the Second Volume of this History.

Book III: from 1679 to 1688.

- Chapter I. Of the State of Affairs from the Beginning of the Year, 1679. to the Rising which ended at Bothwel Page 2
- Sect. 1. Of the Proceedings against Presbyterians for Conventicles, and other Branches of Nonconformity in the Beginning of this Year, 1679. p. 3
- Sect. 2. Of the more publick Proceedings, Proclamations and State of Affairs from January till May, 1679. p. 9
- Sect. 3. Of the violent Death of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Saturday, May 3. 1679. p. 28
- Chap. II. Of the Rising this Year in the West of Scotland, which ended by the Defeat at Bothwel-bridge, June 22. 1679. p. 34
- Sect. 1. Of the Consequents of the Primate's Death, Procedure of the Privy Council, and other Things till the End of May, 1679. p. 34
- Sect. 2. Of the Occasions, Causes of, and Inlets to the Rising at Bothwel p. 40
- Sect. 3. Of the Declaration at Rutherglen, May 29. and the first Rencontres, and smaller Skimmishes at Drumclog and Glasgow, in the Beginning of June p. 43
- Sect. 4. Of the Procedure of the Council and Motions of the King's Forces, until the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth's coming down, June 18. 1679. p. 48
- Sect. 5. Of the State, Declarations and Divisions of the West Country Army, from their leaving Glasgow till the March of the Army under the Duke of Buccleugh p. 54
- Sect. 6. Of the Arrival of the Duke of Monmouth, and March of his Army, the continuing Divisions, and Supplication of the West Country Army, with an Account of their Engagement and Defeat at Bothwel-bridge p. 61
- Chap. III. Of the Consequents of this Rising and Defeat at Bothwel, and other Things this Year 1679. p. 70
- Sect. 1. Of the immediate Consequents of the Defeat at Bothwel, the harassing the Country, and the Actings of the Government and Soldiers ibid.
- Sect. 2. Of the Treatment of the Prisoners taken at and after Bothwel p. 77
- Sect. 3. Of the Trial and Execution of Mrs. John Kid and King, August 14. 1679. and the Trial and Death of the Five who suffered, November 18. at Magusmoor Page 83
- Sect. 4. Of the Circuits held, and the Gentlemen who were tormented after Bothwel this Year p. 90
- Sect. 5. Of the State of Presbyterians who had not been concerned in Bothwel, their Third Indulgence, the Debates 'twixt Duke Hamilton and Lawderdale, and some other Things this Year p. 94
- Chap. IV. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1680. p. 112
- Sect. 1. Of the Persecutions relative to Bothwel, rising for Nonattendance on the King's Host, and the Forfeitures this Year 1680. ibid.
- Sect. 2. Of the more general Procedure of the Council relative to Presbyterians this Year, the Repeal of the Third Indulgence, and other Hardships on them p. 116
- Sect. 3. Of the Persecution up and down the Country, from the Donators, by Courts and otherwise, and the Hardships Noblemen, Gentlemen, Ministers and others underwent for Nonconformity this Year p. 122
- Sect. 4. Of the Queensferry Paper, the first Declaration at Sanquhar, and their Consequents, with an Account of the Engagement at Airs-moss, July 21. 1680. p. 132
- Sect. 5. Of those who were executed after Airs-moss, and other Branches of Persecution which followed it, of the Torwood Excommunication, the Proceedings of the Council upon it, and some more Executions this Year p. 141
- Sect. 6. Of some Proceedings in Council this Year, the Trial of my Lord Bargeny, and other incidental Matters which fell out this Year p. 148
- Chap. V. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1681. p. 155
- Sect. 1. Of the Procedure of the Council, their Proclamations, and the more general harassing of the Country, by Courts, Soldiers and Informers p. 156
- Sect. 2. Of the Proceedings of the Justiciary this Year, against many Heritors for alledged being at Bothwel, and their Process against John Spreul, with the Pleadings before them, upon

The CONTENTS.

- upon Torture and other Points Page 161
- Sect. 3. Of the Sufferings of particular Gentlemen, Ministers and others this Year, not unto Forfeiture or Death p. 171
- Sect. 4. Of the Sufferings unto Death, and publick Execution of Mr. Donald Cargil, and a great many others this Year 1681. p. 180
- Sect. 5. Of the Laws and Acts made in the Parliament, which met July 28. this Year, in as far as they relate to the Church p. 189
- Sect. 6. Of the Imposition of the Test, its Explications, and the begun Persecution upon it this Year 1681. p. 193
- Sect. 7. Of the Trial of the noble Earl of Argyle for his Explication of the Test, his Sentence and Escape in December this Year p. 205
- Sect. 8. Of several other Things this Year, which fell not in on the former Sections p. 217
- Chap. VI. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1682. ibid.
- Sect. 1. Of the further Proceedings about the Test, the Changes in publick Posts, and other incidental Matters this Year p. 223
- Sect. 2. Of the Procedure, Proclamations, Commissions and other Actings of the Council against Conventicles and suffering Prebyterians this Year p. 230
- Sect. 3. Some general Account of the Persecution up and down the Country this Year p. 239
- Sect. 4. Of the Sufferings of the Reverend Mr. Patrick Warner, Mr. Henry Erskine, and some other Presbyterian Ministers and Gentlemen this Year 1682. p. 247
- Sect. 5. Of the criminal Prosecutions before the Justiciary, and publick Executions of the Sufferers this Year p. 259
- Chap. VII. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1683. p. 270
- Sect. 1. Of the Proclamations, Commissions and Instructions given in order to the further prosecuting of Presbyterians this Year p. 271
- Sect. 2. Of the Sufferings of some particular Gentlemen, Ministers and others this Year p. 280
- Sect. 3. Of the criminal Processes before the Justiciary, and the publick Executions this Year p. 292
- Sect. 4. Of the Circuit Courts held up and down the Country, with some other Severities following them this Year p. 313
- Sect. 5. Of some other Branches of Persecution, the Plot, and other incidental Things this Year p. 320

- Chap. VIII. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1684. Page 334
- Sect. 1. Of the Procedure of the Council relative to the Sufferings this Year p. 335
- Sect. 2. Of the Sufferings of particular Persons, Noblemen, Gentlemen, Ministers and others, not to Death, this Year p. 351
- Sect. 3. Of the Proceedings of the criminal Court, Forfeitures and publick Executions this Year p. 368
- Sect. 4. Of the Council and criminal Processes against the Laird of Cesnock, the Earl of Lowdon, Mr. Spence, the Reverend Mr. William Carstairs, the Laird of Jerviswood, and others alledged to be concerned in the Plot this Year p. 379
- Sect. 5. Of the Procedure at the Circuit Courts October, 1684. p. 400
- Sect. 6. Of the exorbitant fining, and long Imprisonment of a considerable Number of Gentlemen after those Courts, November and December, 1684. p. 419
- Sect. 7. Of the apologetical Declaration emitted by the Society People, the Murder at Swine Abbey, and the severe Procedure, Commissions and Proclamations following thereupon, November and December, 1684. p. 429
- Sect. 8. Some general Hints of the Persecution, particular Hardships and Murders in the Fields, with some other Accounts which came not so well in upon the former Sections this Year p. 444
- Chap. IX. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians during the Year 1685. p. 454
- Sect. 1. Of the Persecution this Year on the Score of the Society's Declaration p. 455
- Sect. 2. Of the Procedure of the Council, and their Committees till, the King's Death p. 460
- Sect. 3. Of King Charles his Death, Feb. 6. the Accession of his Brother, with the more general Procedure of the Council, during the following Part of this Year p. 469
- Sect. 4. Of the Sufferings and Treatment of particular Persons this Year, before the Privy Council p. 477
- Sect. 5. Of the Procedure of the Justiciary Court this Year p. 487
- Sect. 6. Of the Murders in the Fields, the barbarous Drowning of Women within the Sea Mark, the Murder at Polmadie, and others this Year p. 498
- Sect. 7. Of the Searchings, Oppressions and Harassings through the Country and

The CONTENTS.

- and other Sufferings of Presbyterians, not unto Death, till the Parliament this Year 1685. Page 510
- Sect. 8. Of the ~~Acts~~ of the Parliament convened April 23. as far as they relate to the Church p. 515
- Sect. 9. Of the unsuccessful Attempt of the Earl of Argyle, May, 1685. to rescue the Nation and Church from the Burdens they were under, with some Account of his Taking, Trial and Martyrdom p. 529
- Sect. 10. Of the Acts of Parliament against the Earl of Argyle, the Execution of Rumbold and Mr. Thomas Archer, and the Forfeitures and great Trouble others were brought to for this unsuccessful Attempt p. 540
- Sect. 11. Of the Sufferings and Hardships endured by the Prisoners sent to Dunnotter May this Year, with some further View of Severities exercised through the Country during the sitting of Parliament, and after the Earl of Argyle's Attempt p. 557
- Sect. 12. Of the Hardships of the Prisoners transported to America with Pitlochie, in September, particularly those of the Laird of Barmagechan p. 565
- Sect. 13. Of the Sufferings and Deaths of which I have not the particular Dates, with some other incidental Things this Year 1685. not formerly noticed p. 569
- Chap. X. Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians in the Year 1686. p. 585
- Sect. 1. Of the Procedure of the Justiciary, Murders in the Fields, and other Branches of the Persecution this Year 1686. p. 586
- Sect. 2. Of the Proceedings of the Parliament which met April 29. this Year, with the Disappointment of the Project for rescinding of the penal Statutes Page 589
- Sect. 3. Of the King's remarkable Letter after the rising of the Parliament; the State of Mr. Renwick and his Followers, some Proclamations, and other Things this Year, which came not in so naturally upon the former Sections p. 597
- Chap. XI. Of the State and Circumstances of Presbyterians during the Year 1687. p. 606
- Sect. 1. Of the Procedure of the Justiciary and Council, with the general State of the Persecution through the Country, this Year 1687. p. 608
- Sect. 2. Of the various Acts of Indulgence granted this Year, and particularly that Liberty in July, which Presbyterian Ministers fell into, with some Remarks p. 613
- Chap. XII. Of the State of Matters in the Year 1688. when the Sufferings of Presbyterians ended by the happy and glorious Revolution p. 628
- Sect. 1. Of the Procedure of the Justiciary, and Acts and Proclamations of Council this Year 1688. ibid.
- Sect. 2. Of the Taking, Trial and publick Execution of Mr. James Renwick, in February this Year. p. 630
- Sect. 3. Of some particular Instances of Presbyterian Ministers, and others their Sufferings, not unto Death, this Year p. 638
- Sect. 4. Of some other Things which passed this Year, with the Council's Procedure, and other Remarkables more immediately preceeding the glorious and never to be forgotten Revolution, November, 1688. p. 643

Appendix to Vol. II. Book III.

Numb. i.

- Proclamation, February 6. 1679. Page 1
- 2. Council's Act about the Forces, February 13. 1679. p. 2
- 3. Speech, Sir Francis Winningtoun, to the House of Commons ibid.
- 4. Speech of the Earl of Shaftsbury to the House of Lords, March 24. 1679. p. 3
- 5. Reasons against a Popish Succession ibid.
- 6. Proclamation about Major Johnstoun, March 12. p. 5
- 7. Act of Council, March 12. 1679. ibid.
- 8. Commission, Committee at Lanerk, Edinburgh, April ult. 1679. p. 6
- 9. Report, Committee at Lanerk, April 4. 1679. Page 7
- 10. Narrative of the Murder of the Archbishop, published by Authority p. 8
- 11. Proclamation for Discovery of the Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, May 4. p. 9
- 12. Proclamation against Arms, May 8. 1679. p. 10
- 13. Instructions Sheriff-deputes of Fife p. 11
- 14. Proclamation against Arms at Conventicles, May 1679. ibid.
- 15. Proclamation against Rebels in Arms in the West, June 3. 1679. p. 12
- 16. Pro-

The CONTENTS.

16. Proclamation for the Militia's being in Readiness, June 5. 1679. Page 13
17. Proclamation calling out Heritors to attend the King's Host, June 7. 1679. ibid.
18. Letter containing Advice to a Gentleman going to the Army, June 7. 1679. p. 14
19. Council's Letter to Lawderdale, June 3. 1679. p. 19
20. Council's Letter to Argyle, June 9. 1679. p. 20
21. Lawderdale's Letter to Chancellor, June 9. 1679. ibid.
22. Council's Letter to Lawderdale, June 13. 1679. p. 21
23. Lawderdale's Letter to Chancellor, June 11. 1679. p. 22
24. Letter, Council to Lawderdale, June 15. 1679. ibid.
25. Declaration, June 1679. p. 23
26. Two Letters from Linlithgow to the Chancellor, June 17 and 18. 1679. p. 24
27. King's Letter to Council, June 16. 1679. p. 25
28. Council's Answer to the King's Letter, 1679. ibid.
29. Council's Letter to Lawderdale, June 22. 1679. p. 26
30. Proclamation against Rebels, June 26. 1679. ibid.
31. King's Letter to Council, June 29. 1679. p. 27
32. Indemnity after Bothwell, July 27. 1679. published August 14. p. 28
33. Letter, King to Council, August 15. 1679. ibid.
34. Proclamation for Circuit-courts, August 14. 1679. p. 30
35. Presbyterians Address to the Duke of Monmouth, 1679. p. 31
36. Proclamation suspending Laws against Conventicles, June 29. 1679. p. 32
37. Proclamation against Conventicles, November 13. 1679. p. 33
38. Proclamation anent the Rebels who have not yet taken the Bond, November 13. 1679. p. 34
39. Answer out of the West, to a Question out of the North, 1679. p. 35
40. Letter, Council to the King, July 11. 1679. p. 39
41. Commission in favours of James Duke of Buccleugh, July 29. 1679. ibid.
42. Proclamation against Murderers of the Archbishop, September 20. 1679. p. 40
43. Report about the Model of the Militia, December 18. 1679. p. 41
44. Two Commissions, April 8. 1680. p. 42
45. Letter, Council to the King, anent Lord Cardross, February 12. 1680. p. 43
46. Queensferry Paper ibid.
47. Sanquhar Declaration, 1680. p. 47
48. Proclamation against R. Cameron, and others, June last, 1680. p. 48
49. Rathillet's Account of Airs-moss p. 49
50. Proclamation, November 22. 1680. p. 50
51. Letter, Council to the King, anent Mr. Donald Cargil, November 22. 1680. Page 52
52. Council's Letter, November 21. 1680. ibid.
53. Proclamation against Field-conventicles, April 8. 1681. p. 53
54. Proclamation for a Fast, June 16. 1681. p. 54
55. Mr. Donald Cargil's last Speech, July 27. 1681. ibid.
56. Mr. James Boig his Testimony, in a Letter, July 27. 1681. p. 55
57. King's Letter to the Parliament, read July 28. 1681. p. 56
58. Duke of York's Speech to Parliament p. 57
59. Parliament's Letter to the King, August 1. 1681. ibid.
60. Act ratifying all former Acts anent Religion, August 13. 1681. p. 58
61. Act 2. Parl. 3. Charles II. anent Succession p. 59
62. Act 4. for securing the Peace ibid.
63. Act 6. anent Religion and the Test p. 60
64. Act 17. additional Act anent this Test p. 61
65. Bishop and Synod of Aberdeen their Sense of the Test ibid.
66. Bishop of Dunkeld, and Clergy of Perth, their Sense of the Test ibid.
67. Act of Council, November 3. explaining the Test p. 62
68. King's Approbation of it, November 15. 1681. ibid.
69. Earl of Argyle's Explanation of his Explication p. 63
70. No. 1. Indictment against the Earl of Argyle ibid.
2. Earl of Argyle's Speech after his Indictment p. 64
3. Sir George Lockhart's Plea for the Earl of Argyle p. 66
4. The King's Advocate's Argument and Plea p. 70
5. Sir John Dalrymple's Reply to the King's Advocate p. 73
6. Sir George Lockhart's Reply to the King's Advocate p. 75
7. The King's Advocate's Triplies p. 77
71. Proclamation anent the Earl of Argyle, December 21. 1681. p. 78
72. Council's Act about the College of Edinburgh, February 1. 1682. p. 79
73. Gib's blasphemous Paper, May 1. 1681. ibid.
74. Mr. Cargil's Letter to the Prisoners in the Canongate Tolbooth p. 82
75. Council's Letter about the Earl of Argyle's Jurisdictions, January 31. 1682. p. 84
76. Letter, Scots Bishops about the Duke of York, March 9. 1682. p. 85
77. Council's Letter to the King, about the Duke of York, May 20. 1682. p. 86
78. French King's Edict, March 1682. ibid.
79. Pro-

The CONTENTS.

79. Protestatio Cleri Gallicani, May 6. 1682. Page 88
80. Commission to Claverhouse for Wigtoun, January 31. 1682. p. 89
81. Commission to Archison for Renfrew, June 8. 1682. ibid.
82. Proclamation, July 8. 1682. p. 90
83. Proclamation about Pedagogues, June 4. 1683. p. 91
85. Commission for Air-shire, July 28. 1683. p. 92
86. Act, Magistrates of Edinburgh, against Conventicles, December 19. 1683. ibid.
87. Proclamation for Circuits, &c. April 13. 1683. p. 93
88. Proclamation against the Duke of Buccleugh and other Traitors, July 4. 1683. p. 95
89. English Declaration for Thanksgiving, September 9. 1683. p. 96
90. Proclamation for a Thanksgiving, August 7. 1683. p. 99
91. Decree of the University of Oxford, July 21. 1683. ibid.
92. Petition of French Protestants, July 1683. p. 101
93. Another Petition presented by M. Schomberg, for the French Protestants p. 103
94. Proclamation with a List of Fugitives, May 5. 1684. p. 104
95. Proclamation against Rebels, July 22. 1684. p. 121
96. No. A. Cesnock's Indictment ibid.
- B. Cesnock's Advocate's Defences p. 123.
- C. King's Advocate's Answers p. 126
- D. Cesnock's Lawiers Duplies p. 128
- E. Sir George Lockhart's Triplies to Cesnock's Advocates p. 131
- F. Cesnock's Lawiers Quadruplies p. 132
97. Proclamation for the Oaths of Masters of Vessels, September 15. 1684. p. 136
98. Proclamation for Passes, September 16. 1684. ibid.
99. Society People's Declaration, especially against Informers and Intelligencers, November 8. 1684. p. 137
100. Proclamation against a treasonable Declaration, December 30. 1684. p. 138
101. A. Proclamation for Lieutenant in Tarbet and the Highlands, May 5. 1684. p. 140
101. B. Secretary's Letter to the Council upon the King's Death, February 6 1685. p. 141.
102. Proclamation, King James VII. Edinburgh, February 10. 1685. ibid.
103. King's Indemnity February 26. and March 2. 1685. p. 142
104. Commission to Colonel Douglas, March 27. 1685. p. 143
105. Proclamation, Magistrates of Edinburgh, January 9. 1685. p. 144
106. King's Letter to Parliament, Commissioner and Chancellor's Speech, with the Parliament's Answer, April 28. 1685. ibid.
107. Parliament's Offer of Duty, April 28. 1685. Page 148
108. Proclamation for putting the Kingdom in a Posture of Defence, April 28. 1685. p. 149
109. Act for the Test, May 13. 1685. p. 150
110. Act anent Justices of the Peace. p. 151
111. Act for Regularity ibid.
112. Declaration of the Earl of Argyle, with the Noblemen, Gentlemen, &c. 1685. p. 152
113. Argyle's Declaration to his Vassals p. 155
114. Proclamation against Traitors and Fugitives, June 24. 1685. p. 156
114. B. Act, Magistrates of Edinburgh, October 28. 1685. p. 157
115. King's Letter to the Parliament, with the Parliament's Answer and the Commissioner's Speech, April 29. 1686. p. 158
116. Act anent the penal Statutes, 1686. p. 160
117. Reasons why none who own the present Government, can consent to abolish the penal Statutes, 1685. p. 161
118. Reasons for abrogating the penal Statutes p. 163
119. Answer to a Paper writ for abrogating the penal Statutes p. 168
120. Letter from the Freeholders of the Shires of Argyle to their Commissioners to the Parliament, 1686. p. 173
121. Robert Cathcart's Information against Mr. Renwick and his Party, 1686. p. 177
122. Irish Proclamation against treasonable Speeches, February 26. 1686. p. 178
123. King's Letter to the Archbishops, with Directions to Preachers, March 1686. p. 179
124. Proclamation against Slanderers and Leasing-makers, June 16. 1686. p. 181
125. Proclamation pardoning the Shire of Argyle, September 16. 1686. ibid.
126. A. Criminal Letters against Dr. Gilbert Burnet, 1687. p. 182
- B. Dr. Burnet's Answer p. 184
- C. Dr. Burnet's second Citation p. 185
127. Proclamation against Conventicles, 1687. p. 186
128. King's Letter to the Council, February 12. 1687. p. 187
129. Proclamation, February 12. 1687. for first Indulgence ibid.
130. Some Reflections on the fore said Proclamation p. 189
131. Council's Answer to the King, February 24. 1687. p. 191
132. King's Letter to the Council, March 31. 1687. or the second Toleration p. 192
134. King's Declaration for Liberty of Conscience in England, April 4. 1687. p. 193
134. Proclamation, June 28. and July 5. 1687. or the third Toleration p. 194
135. The Presbyterian Ministers Address of Thanks, July 21. 1687. p. 195

The CONTENTS.

136. Address of the Inhabitants of Edinburgh and Canongate, 1687. Page 196
137. Act, January 17. 1688. for a Thanksgiving upon the Queen's being with Child ibid.
138. Proclamation, May 15. 1688. or the fourth Indulgence p. 197
139. Act for a Thanksgiving, June 14. 1688. p. 198
140. Proclamation against Mr. David Houston, June 12. 1688. p. 199
141. Proclamation, August 15. against Books and Pamphlets ibid.
142. Rules of the Schools at Holy-rood-house p. 200
143. Proclamation for raising the Militia, and setting up Beacons, September 1688. p. 201
144. King's Answer to the Council, October 1688. p. 202
145. Proclamation calling out Heritors, October 3. 1688. ibid.
146. Act anent the Militia, October 9. 1688. p. 203
147. Letter from the Scotts Bishops to the King, November 3. 1688. p. 204
148. King's Answer to the former, November 15. 1688. ibid.
149. Proclamation, November 10. against Spreaders of false News Page 205
150. Proclamation, December 14. 1688. anent Papists ibid.
151. Proclamation, December 24. 1688. calling forth the Heritors p. 206
152. First Draught of an Address to the Prince of Orange p. 207
153. Address from the Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers, to the Prince of Orange p. 211.
154. Claim of Right p. 212
155. Act abolishing Prelacy, July 22. 1689. p. 214
156. Draught of an Act of Parliament excluding Persons from publick Trust p. 215
157. Act of Parliament, April 25. 1690. restoring Presbyterian Ministers ibid.
158. Act of Parliament, June 7. 1690. ratifying the Confession of Faith and settling Presbyterian Government p. 216
159. Reasons for rescinding the Forfeitures p. 217
160. Act of Parliament rescinding Fines and Forfeitures p. 219

List of the Subscribers omitted in the First Volume, and come to my Hand since it was published.

THE Right Honourable Hugh Earl of Lowdon, his Majesty's Commissioner to the General Assembly.

The Right Honourable James Earl of Hyndford.

The Right Honourable Lord Alexander Hay.

The Honourable Mr. Hary Maule of Kelly.

The Library of the Faculty of Advocates at Edinburgh.

The Reverend Mr. James Bathgate Minister of the Gospel at Oriel.

The Reverend Mr. John Brice Minister of the Gospel at Salin.

The Reverend Mr. Samuel Brown Minister of the Gospel at Kirkmabrick.

Mr. Gilbert Burnet Esquire, one of the Commissioners for his Majesty's Excise.

John Callander of Craigforth.

The Reverend Mr. Thomas Campbell Minister of the Gospel at Monigaff.

The Reverend Mr. Samuel Charters Minister of the Gospel at Inverkeithing.

The Reverend Mr. William Coupar Minister of the Gospel at Mochrum.

Bailie Craig in Edinburgh.

Robert Davis in Dumbarton.

Mr. James Douglas.

The Reverend Mr. Joseph Drew Principal of St. Leonards College.

Patrick Dunbar of Machrimore.

The Reverend Mr. Ralph Erskine Minister of the Gospel at Dumfermlin.

Mr. Thomas Erskine Advocate.

The Reverend Mr. Hugh Falside Minister of the Gospel at Newmills.

The Reverend Mr. Robert Fergusson Minister of the Gospel at Calmonell.

Mr. Andrew Friskin.

Dame Elizabeth Gordon Relict to the Honourable Mr. William Stuart of Castle Stuart.

Thomas Gordon of Earlstoun.

Dame Jean Hacket Lady Borthwick.

The Reverend Mr. William Hardie Minister of the Gospel at St. Andrews.

Mr. Robert Hepburn.

The Reverend Mr. James Hog Minister of the Gospel at Carnock.

Mr. Hume of Bassendean.

The Reverend Mr. Thomas Kennedy Minister of the Gospel at Balantrea.

The Reverend Mr. Thomas Ker Minister of the Gospel at Wigtoun.

The Reverend Mr. Archibald Haldane Minister of the Gospel at Sorbie.

Mr. Charles Inglis one of the Clerks of Bills.

The Reverend Mr. Robert Kinloch Minister of the Gospel at Dundee.

The Laird of Lamington.

The Reverend Mr. Walter Lawrie Minister of the Gospel at Stranraer.

The very Reverend Mr. Robert Macbride Minister of the Gospel at Ballemony in Ireland.

The Reverend Mr. John Maccaul Minister of the Gospel at Whithorn.

The Reverend Mr. James Macclellan Minister of the Gospel at Kirkcowan.

The Reverend Mr. Archibald Marshal Minister of the Gospel at Kirkcolm.

Colonel William Maxwell of Cardonefs.

The Reverend Mr. John Millar Minister of the Gospel at Penningham.

Thomas Murdoch of Camlodden.

Mr. Alexander Nimmo of Hillhouse.

The Reverend Mr. Simon Riddel Minister of the Gospel at Tindram.

Mr. Henry Rob.

John Russel of Bradshaw Writer to his Majesty's Signet.

The Reverend Mr. Robert Seton Minister of the Gospel at Glassertoun.

John Skene of Dyce.

Mrs. Nicolas Stuart Spouse to Colonel Maxwell of Cardonefs.

The Reverend Mr. Andrew Tait Minister of the Gospel at Carmonnock.

The Reverend Mr. William Trail Minister of the Gospel at Benholm.

The Reverend Mr. James Wardlaw Minister of the Gospel at Dumfermlin.

The Reverend Mr. John Willison Minister of the Gospel at Dundee.

THE HISTORY
OF THE SUFFERINGS
OF THE Church of SCOTLAND.

BOOK THIRD.

From Bothwel-bridge to the Revolution.

THE large Accounts given in the former Books, may let the Reader in to somewhat of the State of Things and Persons in Scotland, under the black Period I now enter upon: The former Scene was dark enough, and the Rigours and Severities of it natively paved the Way for more horrid Things in the Years before me.

1679.
The former Part of the History prepares for this.

Since Pentland Engagement till this Period, it was comparatively but a few who were banished, and suffered unto Blood; and there was some Kind of Shadow from the present iniquous Laws, to countenance what was done this Way: But in the Period we are now entering upon, besides the new barbarous Laws made, the Execution of them was bloody and very extensive; and the blood-thirsty Executioners, in many Cases, gave not themselves the Trouble to keep by their own Laws, but harassed and murdered in the publick Roads, open Fields, and almost every where upon the South-side of Tay.

Severities increase in the Period before.

A very small Part of this Inhumanity can now be represented, in comparison of what might have been, had this History been writ Thirty Years ago; yet, as much is come to my Hand, as may astonish the Reader, and make him value our present and happy Settlement: And from the Papers I have had Access to, I shall essay some Account of it.
Indeed the Difficulties in giving a distinct and methodical History of the Nine Years before me, are far greater than I met with in the preceding Books: The Multitude of Instances,

Which at this Distance cannot be fully narrated.

Difficulties in giving an Account of the Period.

1679.

Division of
this Book;

Instances, with the Want of Dates in some, otherwise very distinct, Accounts before me, increase these; and the Nature and Circumstances of not a few of the Acts of Cruelty, were such, as publick Documents cannot be expected to vouch; therefore, I promise myself, the Reader will take in good Part the Accounts I am able at this Distance to give, after all the Pains I have been at to have them well vouched, tho' they are not, in some Cases, what I wish I were able to give.

The Field before me is so vast, and the Incidents so various, that I shall not offer any general Scheme of them. As much as may be, this Book shall be divided by the Years it contains the History of; but this remarkable Year I begin with, affords so much Matter, hath been so much misrepresented by the Advocates for the Severities of this Time, and, if I mistake not, is so very little known to many Presbyterians themselves, that it will take some Time to go through it.

Of this Year.

From this melancholy Year 1679. a new and horrid Scene of cruel and, in this Nation, unparalleled Severity, hath its Date. Matters in this Church and Kingdom take a new Turn. The former Hardships, new Severities and Oppressions in the Beginning of this Year, with several unforeseen Incidents, drew on a Rising this Summer. This native Fruit of their own Oppression, was greedily laid hold on by the Prelates and Managers, to exasperate the Government, and screw up the Persecution to a terrible Height, this and the succeeding Years; and the Duke of York's coming down some little Time after Bothwel Engagement, did not a little help this forward.

Upon this Turn of Affairs, the Sufferings of Presbyterians altered somewhat from their former State, and the Violence of the Persecutors vented it self in new and unheard of Methods: And tho' I am very far from vindicating any Excesses that Oppression and a long Tract of Severity might force any to, yet I hope the candid and fair Account I have to give of plain Matters of Fact, will sufficiently remove the Aspersions and Reproaches cast most maliciously, and without the least Shadow of Ground, upon the Body of Presbyterians who suffered during this Period.

In the Beginning of this Year, the Council and other Courts went on in their former Chancel of Persecution, until the remarkable Incident of the Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews. This, in some Measure, opened the Way for a Gathering in Arms in May and June. The Occasions, Beginning, Progress of this Rising, and Defeat of the People who rose, need the more distinct Consideration, because, as far as I can find, we have as yet no tolerable Accounts of them; and the State of Matters, after their dispersing, wants likewise to be set in its due Light.

Into Three Chapters.

This History then, as far as this Year carries us, will take up Three Chapters, one with relation to what past before the Rising, another to give some View of the Occasions, Progress, and dissipating of this Rising at Bothwel-bridge, and the last will contain the State of Things during the rest of this Year.

C H A P. I.

Of the State of Affairs from the Beginning of this Year, unto the Rising which ended at Bothwel.

Division of
this Chapter.

SUCH a Multitude of Things, and all of them some way or other tending to enlighten the Circumstances of suffering Presbyterians, offer themselves to me now, that I am obliged to parcel them out in different Divisions, the best way I may, in the Order of Time they fell out; and tho' this Method perhaps will not be so agreeable to the nicer Taste of some critical Readers, yet I am necessarily led to it by the Variety of my Matter: And as it was needful to my self, in order to bring my Materials into some Kind of Shape and Coherence, so it will not be altogether useless to the Reader, to give him the distinct Views of Things, and help him to mind them the better.

The publick Registers give the surest and plainest Hints, as far as they go; and from them I shall carry down the Accounts of Prosecutions, and other Hardships for Conventions and Nonconformity, this Year before Bothwel. And after those Accounts of particular Persons, I shall give a more general View of the State of Affairs until the Beginning of May, when the Death of the Primate fell in. These will be Subjects for Three Sections.

S E C T.

S E C T. I.

1679.

Of the Proceedings against Presbyterians for Conventicles, and other Branches of Nonconformity, in the Beginning of this Year, 1679.

I Design this Place for a Narrative of what was done against Presbyterians before Bothwell, from the Council and Justiciary Registers, that so the Accounts of the more general Management this Year, the Particulars of the Death of Bishop Sharp, with the History of the Rising which ended at Bothwell, may be the less interrupted afterwards.

None of the various Methods made use of in the former Period, for hindring the Preaching of the Gospel by Presbyterian Ministers, had their wished for Effects to the Prelates. The more moderate Part of the Managers had prevailed to get an Indulgence, at first very much clogged, and Year after Year more and more cramped. The violent Side had got down the barbarous Highland Host, and almost laid the West Country desolate; and this, towards the End of the last Year, was succeeded by a rigorous Exaction of the Cess imposed by the Convention: Yet Conventicles in Houses and Fields were still continued, and great Numbers of good People were resolved to venture their All, before they would want the Benefit of Ordinances purely dispensed.

The Council and Justice-court, by their Order, are not idle, but very diligent in every thing which may discourage and prevent Nonconformity to the established Church.

Thus, January 2. I find the Council did write a Letter to the Bishop of Edinburgh, who, to be sure, was not backward, but desired such Orders, appointing him to call before him all the Masters of the College of Edinburgh, and all Schoolmasters in that Town and other Places of his Diocese, and enquire if they had taken the Oaths appointed by Law, and oblige such as had not, presently to take them, or deprive them of their Offices and Benefices. I have formerly noticed the Care of the Managers, that all concerned in the Education of Youth should be of their own Kidney; and yet at this very Time many excellent Youths had the Benefit of University-learning, who have been singular Instruments for the Good of many, since these Times of heavy Persecution. At the same Time, Letters are writ to the Archbishop of St. Andrews, and the Bishop of Aberdeen, to undertake the same Work in these Universities. No Orders are given with relation to the University of Glasgow, whether because the Bishop of that Place was present in Council, and received his Orders personally, or from what other Reason, I know not.

Upon the 6. of February, I find a Report from the Bishop of Edinburgh, made to the Council upon this Head, which, with the Council's Orders thereupon, I have insert. 'The Council having considered the Return made to them by the Bishop of Edinburgh, in obedience to their Letter of the 2. of January last, for calling before him the Principal, Professors, Regents, and the Masters of the College of Edinburgh, as also such Persons who teach any publick School within the Town of Edinburgh, Leith, Canongate, or Suburbs thereof, without his Licence, and requiring them to subscribe under their Hands, the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and that they submit to, and own the Government of the Church by Archbishops, and its Establishment, conform to the 4th Act of the 2d Session of his Majesty's first Parliament, with the Report of a Committee of their own Number thereanent. They find the Return made by the Bishop of Edinburgh satisfactory, except as to the Persons following, Mr. Alexander Dickson Professor of the Hebrew Language in the College of Edinburgh, Mr. Alexander Herriot Schoolmaster of the High School of Edinburgh, Mr. George Sinclair Schoolmaster in South Leith, and Mr. George Allan his Assistant, Mr. Alexander Strang Schoolmaster in the Canongate, and Mr. John Govan his Assistant, and Mr. James Scot junior, one of the Masters of the High School, who have not subscribed as aforesaid: And therefore the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do ordain the Magistrates of Edinburgh, and other Patrons, to put to Execution the Certification of the foresaid Act, especially against the foresaid Persons who have refused to give Obedience, by removing them from their respective Charges foresaid, and putting other sufficient Persons, qualified conform to the said Act of Parliament, in their Places, except, betwixt and the First Day of March next, they give Obedience in Manner foresaid.' Whether any of these worthy Men complied, I have not learned; several of them, I know, did not, and underwent a Course of Suffering. The Council find the Reports from the rest of the Colleges satisfying.

That same Day, a Letter comes from the King to the Council, ordering Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart to be sent under a Guard from the Castle of Dumbarton to that of Stirling. His Lady is allowed to be in the Room with him.

1679.

Mr. Thomas Warner, cited, and upon Noncompearance, denounced.

January 6. Mr. Thomas Warner, who outlived this melancholy Period, and many of his Fellow-sufferers in the Ministry, to be very useful since the Revolution, and died in a good old Age, in full Assurance of Faith, September 10. this Year I am writing in, (1716.) being the last of the Antediluvian Presbyterian Ministers, that is, such who had seen the Glory of the former Temple, and were ordained before the Restoration; this excellent Person, I say, was cited before the Council, and a Libel was given in against him, bearing, 'That whereas he had been indulged to the Parish of Balmaclellan, (in Galloway, to which he had been ordained, and where he continued till his Death) he had broke his Confinement, been present at House and Field-conventicles, had preached and prayed at them, and conversed with intercommuned Persons.' He not compearing, is denounced and put to the Horn.

Further Procedure against him.

And February 18. the Council pass the following Act against Mr. Warner. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, That Mr. Thomas Warner late Minister at Balmaclellan, is declared Fugitive for his declared Contumacy, in not compearing before them on the 16. of January last, to have answered at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, for preaching in the Fields with Mr. John Welsh, communing and corresponding with him and other declared Traitors and intercommuned Persons, with other Disorders of that Nature; the Parishoners of Balmaclellan are discharged to pay to the said Mr. Thomas Warner any of the Stipend this Year, or in Time coming, till they receive further Orders; and appoint the Solicitor to acquaint the Parishoners.'

Further, and Thirteen other Galloway Gentlemen denounced for Noncompearance.

The same Day, several Gentlemen, some of them of known Piety, meet with the same Treatment, Gordon of Earlstoun, Gordon of Holm, Gordon of Overbar, Neilson of Corsack, George Mackartney of Blaicket, Maxwell of Hills, Hay of Park, Macdougall of Freuch, Macdougall of Corrochtree, James Johnstoun late Provost of Stranraer, William Spittle at Port, Johnstoun Collector there, Mr. William Cathcart, and John Inglis Commissary of Kirkcudbright, being cited to answer for being present at House and Field-conventicles, since the Year 1674. and for Refet and Converse with intercommuned Persons, and not compearing, are all ordered to be denounced, and put to the Horn.

Softest Measures taken with John Inglis Commissary of Kirkcudbright.

The last named John Inglis Commissary of Kirkcudbright, is further proceeded with, February 25. and the Council declare his Place to vaik, and recommend it to the Bishop of Galloway, to put another in his Room. March 11. a Petition is presented for him, with a Certificate that he was unable to travel. In the Petition he engages to live orderly in Time coming. He is remitted to the Bishop of Galloway, to be reponed or not, as he finds Cause.

James Lawless, a Boy of about 14 years, imprisoned for Conventicles, liberated.

In Persecutions for Conventicles, no Age almost was thought too young to be attacked. Some Time ago, a Boy, not much above Thirteen Years of Age, had been seized at a Conventicle, and was carried to Prison. After he had continued some Weeks there, and would make no Compliances, some of the Counsellors were informed about him; and, being ashamed of such Severity to one who was, as it were, but a Child, I find the following Order given. January 23. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council give Warrant to the Bailies of Leith, to set at Liberty James Lawless, a Boy about the Age of Fourteen Years, Prisoner there upon the account of Conventicles.' We shall afterwards meet with some more of these young Sufferers.

Mrs. Barclay, Neice to Col. Barclay, imprisoned for Conventicles, is liberated.

January 9. There is a Petition presented to the Council by Margaret Barclay Neice to Sir David Barclay of Collernie, Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh for Conventicles, supplicating for Liberty, because she is valetudinary, and that she may recover her Health. She is ordered to be liberate, upon Caution of 500 Merks, that she re-enter the Tolbooth of Edinburgh the 20. Instant, if called, or when called; and that in the mean time she confine her self to her Chamber under the same Penalty. This Hardship of imprisoning Gentlemen till they turn sickly, merely for hearing the Gospel, is peculiar to this Period I am giving the History of.

Mr. John Wallace and Mr. Patrick Simpson, cited before the Council, and upon Noncompearance, are denounced.

Last Year in November, Mr. John Wallace indulged at the Largs, and Mr. Patrick Simpson indulged at Kilmacomb, had been cited before the Council, for breaking their Confinement. Mr. John Wallace appeared, and was remitted to the Committee for publick Affairs. And this Year, February 15. I find the Council again call Mr. Simpson, and, upon his Noncompearance, they order him to be denounced. What kept him from compearing I know not, but it hath been some necessary Excuse, for I know he continued several Years after this in the peaceable Exercise of his Ministry in that Place.

Mr. John Wallace, cited before the Council, and upon Noncompearance, is denounced.

Mr. John Wallace is called before the Council, February 18. and no Probation being admitted as to his Breach of his Confinement, he deponed upon the Verity of his Libel, and frankly told them how Matters stood, as to that Practice common to him and his Brethren. It was but few of the Council were for depriving him of his Indulgence upon this score, and so other Occasions against him were sought: And being called in, after he had been removed, the Council interrogated him, as they say, For the further clearing of his Deposition, tho', as far as I can find, his Deposition had no Connection with this, 'Whether he would for the future refuse to give Baptism to the Children of such Parents as took the Bond for publick Peace.' This being new to him, and what he did not understand, the the Design of, he craved he might be spared as to such Things as related to the Discharge of his ministerial Office. He is presently removed, and the Council decern him to have lost the Benefit of his Indulgence at the Largs, or any where else; and appoint their Sentence to be intimate to the Parishoners, that they may pay him no more Stipend. I do not find the indulged Ministers were before challenged upon this Score.

1679.

At this Time, no doubt upon Application from Glasgow, the Troubles we heard that good Man, and his Family, Thomas Blackwell underwent, are renewed by the Council. And February 18. The Magistrates of Glasgow being formerly ordained to take Possession of the House and Goods of Thomas Blackwell a Fugitive, who broke Prison, for their Relief of Ten thousand Merks, wherein they were fined for the said Blackwell and William Stirling their Escape, yet the said Thomas Blackwell's Spouse having got back the Keys, and re-entred to the Possession of what her said Husband had, he being Fugitive, and in the Company of Mr. John Welsh, and one of his Guard; the Lords of Council ordain the said Magistrates to return to their Possession according to the Decree of Council."

Further
You see on Thomas Blackwell and his Family
at Glasgow.

February 20. The Council being informed, that John Arnot in Greenside, William Page in George Marshall in Balvaird, have for Four Years withdrawn from publick Ordinances, and been present at Field-conventicles in Glenveale, and other Places in Fife, kept by Mrs. Thomas Arnot, John Walwood, John Rae, David Orie, Alexander Schaw, and other intercommuned and vagrant Ministers, they all compearing, and confessing they had been at Conventicles, the Council fine William Page in a Thousand Pounds, John Arnot in Five Hundred Merks, and George Marshall in a Hundred Pounds Scots; and ordain them to ly in Prison till they pay the same.

John Arnot, indicted 1727,
a young Man just fined for Conventicles
in Fife.

Upon the 27. of February, the Council having cited before them Mr. Samuel Nairn, Brother to the Laird of Sandford, Mr. James Rymer in Pitlochrie, James Thomson, William Beltie, Thomas Nef, James Nef, John Wisheart and David Ready, to answer to the Charge of being at House and Field-conventicles since the Year 1674. They not compearing, are all denounced, and put to the Horn.

Mr. Samuel
Nairn, Mr.
James Rymer, and Seven others denounced for Con-
venticles.

The same Day Mr. James Dalrymple, a Person not in Orders, that is, in the Stile of the Registers, one ordained by Presbyterian Ministers since they were outed, is informed against as having taken upon him to preach in the Fields, and likewise within the City of Edinburgh: It was urged by way of Aggravation, that he had been taken at a Conventicle in the Year 1676. and was dismissed in Hopes of good Behaviour in Time coming; yet since that Time he hath preached at Field-conventicles, and conversed with intercommuned Persons; and January last he kept a Conventicle in the House of James Fea; the said James and other Hearers of him are called by the Council, and fined in a Hundred Merks each, and Mr. James Dalrymple is continued.

Mr. James Dalrymple indicted for preaching
at Conventicles.

A very severe Prosecution of a worthy Lady, yet alive, follows March 4. Sir William Fleming of Ferm and his Lady appear before the Council, and a Libel is read at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, bearing, "That whereas Mr. John Welsh and some others having kept a Conventicle, at Langside in the Parish of Cathcart, and Shire of Renfrew, upon February 9 last: And Dame Margaret Stuart, Spouse to Sir William Fleming of Ferm, Commissary of Glasgow, and Macdougall, Spouse to William Anderson late Provost of Glasgow, were present at the said Field-conventicle upon high Chairs on either Side of Mr. John Welsh, and kept Company with the said Mr. Welsh at other Times: The Premises being verif'd, their said Husbands be decerned to pay to the Treasury the Fines they have incurred." It was further charged, that since the first of October last, there have been Field-conventicles kept in the House of the said Sir William Fleming of Ferm, in regard some were without Doors, at which Mrs. John Dickson, Robert Muir, Gilbert Kennedy, James Wallace, John Pettigrew, Alexander Hasty, John Law, Andrew Mortoun, Donald Cargill, James Drummond, James Kennedy, James Woodrow, Matthew Crawford, John King, William Wardroper, or one or other of them did preach, pray, or expound Scripture, and were entertained before or after the said Conventicles by the said Lady; and that she was present at the Craigs of Glasgow at several Conventicles kept by some of the foresaid, and hath withdrawn from her Parish Kirk.

Libel against Dame Margaret Stuart, Lady
Fleming, for Conventicles,
March 4.

The Lady acknowledged she was at the Conventicle at Langside, and at another in the Craigs of Glasgow, and does not deny but Ministers preached in her House at the Ferm. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do fine the said Sir William her Husband in the Sum of 4000 Merks, reserving to the said Sir William and his Heirs Relief off the said Dame Margaret Stuart her Joynture, in case she survive him; and ordain the said Sir William to pay the said Fine before he leave the Town, or give sufficient Caution to pay it within Ten Days. This is not the only Instance we shall meet with of making Husbands, who were every way regular themselves, pay for the alledged Guilt of their Wives.

Her Husband
Sir William Fleming fined in 4000 Merks.

Towards the End of March a Process begins against the Reverend Mr. William Veitch, since the Revolution a worthy and useful Minister in the Town of Dumfries, yet alive, whose Sufferings were not small in England; and by his being reckoned, as it were, naturalized in England, because he was long there, he was saved from our Blood-thirsty People at Edinburgh.

Mr. William
Veitch his Sufferings this Year.

1679.

After his former Forfeiture he returns to England, and after preaching several Years there, he is taken Jan. 19. and put in Morpeth Goal.

We have already heard, that Mr. Veitch was forfeited in Absence for his alledged Accession to Pentland, and forced to leave his native Country, and retire with his Family to England. I have in mine Eye a pointed and distinct Narrative of the Hardships and various Removes this worthy Person met with in the North of England, interspersed with several very remarkable Appearances of Providence in his behalf, too long to be here insert. I shall only notice, that about 1671. he fixed with his Family in the County of Northumberland, at a Place named Harnam-hall, where he preached near Five Years to a numerous Meeting with very much Success. Upon the Disposal of that Ground to another Master, he removed 1677. to Staunton-hall in the Parish of Long-horslie, a Place abounding with Papists. There he also preached with much Acceptation, and both the Papists and Clergy in the Neighbourhood, especially Mr. Bell a Scotsman, Minister of the Place, raised a Storm upon him; but he was still preserved, and sometimes very remarkably. At length Mr. Bell made a Complaint of him to Lawderdale when going for London, and of the Infections spreading in England by the Sermons of the Scots Preachers in the Northern Counties; and the Bishop of Durham seconding these Complaints, Orders were given to some Forces to come to those Parts under Majors Main and Oglethorp: And particular Care was taken to apprehend Mr. Veitch. After many Escapes, January 19. this Year, Major Oglethorp seized him in his own House, having ventured home only the Night before from Newcastle, where he lurked, to see a sick Child of his. He was carried to Morpeth Goal, and made close Prisoner, and Notice sent up to Court of his being taken. By the Council Registers I find a Letter, dated Whitehall, January 25. is read Jan. 31. directed to the Council. The Tenor is, 'The King being informed that Mr. George Johnstoun, alias Veitch, a notorious Ringleader in Field-conventicles, is in Goal in Morpeth, hath sent Commands this Night to Colonel Struthers, Deputy Lieutenant of Northumberland, to deliver him safe to the Sheriff of Berwick; and the Council are to order him to be received there, and brought to Edinburgh, and proceed against him with all Diligence according to the utmost Severity of Law. His Majesty (to dash the groundless Hopes of Knaves and Fools who expected a Toleration) being fully resolved to put the Strictness of Law in Execution against such notorious Contemners of his Majesty's Law and Authority. This is signed by, &c.

LAWDERDALE.

His Examination before the Committee of Council, Feb. 22.

According to this Letter he was received upon the Borders, and brought Prisoner to Edinburgh, and February 22. he was fitted before the Committee for publick Affairs. The Primate presided, and put many ensnaring Questions to him, which were urged by the Bishop of Edinburgh, such as, Have you taken the Covenant? The Prisoner answered, This honourable Board may easily perceive that I was not of Age to take the Covenant, when you and other Ministers of Scotland tendred it. When urged, if he never took it since; he waved it, by saying, He judged himself bound frequently to give himself to God in a Way of covenanting. The Bishop of Edinburgh asked him, if he was at Pentland; he answered, If you will give me Liberty and Power, I shall prove by Witnesses I was in Edinburgh the Night before, and that Day. His Examination was read over, and he required to sign it, which he refused till it was amended in several Phrases he reckoned wrong, and put in mundo, after which he signed it; but nothing in it could militate against him.

Council write about him, March 11.

February 25. the Council meet, and "approve the Report of the Committee for publick Affairs, that Mr. William Veitch be sent to the Bas, till the King's Pleasure be further heard, in regard he is forfeited for the Rebellion 1666. and the Forfeiture ratified in Parliament." And March 11. the Council write a Letter to Lawderdale upon this Subject, which I insert here, being short.

Edinburgh, March 11. 1679.

May it please your Grace,

"His Majesty having commanded us to proceed against one Mr. George Johnstoun to be sent from England, we found upon his coming here, that although the Prisoner had past under that Name, yet his true Name is Mr. William Veitch, whom we are informed to have been one of these who was forfeited for being in the Rebellion in the Year 1666. And we find there is a standing Act of Parliament, which is the 11 Act of the first Session of his Majesty's second Parliament, whereby one Mr. William Veitch, amongst others, is thereby declared forfeited, and the Probation led before the Justices is thereby ratified: Likeas he has confest that he has preached sometimes in Scotland when he came occasionally to see his Friends, having had his Residence in England, near these Twelve Years, where he was a Farmer when he was taken; and albeit we be most willing to comply with and execute his Majesty's Commands, so that we may shew that our Obedience proceeds as well from Inclination as Duty, yet in this Case, finding that his Majesty's Orders did relate to another Person than this Prisoner, and that the Prisoner was not apprehended in any Crime, and offers him to prove that he was in Edinburgh the Time of the Fight

"at

“ at Pentland; we have therefore thought fit to desire your Grace to represent the Condition of the Prisoner to the King's Majesty, to be yet further considered, whose royal Pleasure (how soon intimated to us) shall be exactly obeyed. In the mean Time we have appointed the Prisoner to be sent to, and kept in Firmance in the Bast. Signed in Name and by Warrant of his Majesty's Privy Council, by 1679.

Your Grace's most humble Servant,

ROTHES Cancel. I. P. D.

That same Day Mr. Veitch is ordered to the Bast by the Council, after which I find no more about him till March 18. when the Advocate is ordered to insist against Mr. Veitch, before the Justiciary, upon the Sentence of Forfeiture formerly pronounced; and in pursuance of his Majesty's Commands, in a Letter from the Duke of Lawderdale, Intimation is made of his Majesty's Pleasure to the Justice General, and that the Justiciary meet Wednesday the 24. Instant. And upon the 24. of March, by the Criminal Records, I find the Advocate appears and produceth the following Warrant from the Council. ‘ Edinburgh, March 18. 1679. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, did intimate to the Lord Justice General his Majesty's Pleasure, signified by his Secretary the Duke of Lawderdale, that Mr. William Veitch, alias Johnstoun, now Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, should be proceeded against according to Law; and that the Lords of Justiciary meet for that end the 24. of this Month.’

And March 18. he is ordered to be criminally prosecuted.

A. GIBSON.

‘ The same Day the Council grant Warrant to his Majesty's Advocate, to insist immediately against the said Mr. William Veitch, alias Johnstoun, against whom the Sentence of Forfeiture was pronounced, for his Accession to the Rebellion 1666.’

A. GIBSON.

Accordingly the Advocate insists, and craves the Lords may proceed according to Law. Mr. Veitch being brought to the Bar presents two Petitions, the one begging that he may be allowed Advocates to plead in his Defence, and manifest his Innocence; and the other humbly craving that the Lords may represent his Case to his Majesty.

Procedure before the Justiciary March 24.

When both these Petitions were read, the Advocate takes Instruments. The Lords of Justiciary continue the Diet against the Pannel until the 8 of April next, and order him to be kept close Prisoner. It seems the criminal Lords were not so willing as some would have had them, to proceed to a Sentence of Death, upon a Forfeiture in Absence, near thirteen Years ago.

When they meet again April 8. I find the following Act recorded in their Books the said Day. “ Anent an Act of the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, produced by his Majesty's Advocate, intimating his Majesty's Pleasure to the Justice Court, for proceeding against Mr. William Veitch, alias Johnstoun, according to Law; and the said Mr. William having petitioned that his Lawyers might be heard in his Defence, the Lord Justice General, Justice Clerk, and remanent Commissioners of the Justiciary, considering that this Court would not proceed in the Matter of Forfeiture in Absence, until they had the Opinion and Advice of the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council and Session in so weighty an Affair; and finding no Precedent in this Court for the Execution of such Sentences in Absence, when the Persons so forfeited do compare and offer Defences; and that the high Court of Parliament upon such Occasions repone Parties to their Defences; and this being a Matter fully of as great Consequence as the former of Forfeiting in Absence, and of very great Import to his Majesty's Service, and the Interest of the present and succeeding Generations; they find themselves in Duty bound not to proceed in a Thing of so great Consequence, until, according to the laudable Custom of their Predecessors, they have the Advice of his Majesty's Privy Council, and Lords of Council and Session, which they earnestly intreat and expect: And recommend to the Lord Justice General, to represent this to the Council the very next Council-day, and to the Lord Justice Clerk to lay it before the Session as soon as they meet. And in the mean Time ordain the Prisoner to be securely kept, and continue the Diet to the first Munday of June next.”

And April 8. when Mr. Veitch's Case is delayed till June.

It seems the Persons whose Advice was sought were not agreed in their Sentiments in this Matter; for I find the Process June 2. continued until the second Munday of July, and from July 13. continued again till July 25. and that Day what follows is in the criminal Registers. “ July 25. This Day appeared Mr. William Veitch Preacher, late Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and produced an Act of the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, dated, Edinburgh, July 24. Forasmuch as the King's Majesty, having by a Letter under his Hand, of the Date July 17. direct to us, signified, That whereas Mr. William Veitch, having been forfeited by a Sentence of the Justice Court, as being accessory to the Rebellion

After several Delays, by a Letter July 17. from the King Mr. Veitch is liberated, and Process is finished at Edinburgh, July 24.

“ lion

1679.

“ lion 1666. was lately taken in England in the County of Northumberland, and was by his Majesty’s Order sent Prisoner to Edinburgh, there to be pursued by his Advocate for that his Accession. And whereas it is now humbly represented to his Majesty, that the said Mr. William Veitch was not actually present at the Fight at Pentland; and having retired timeously from the Rebels, hath ever since lived peaceably in his Majesty’s Kingdom of England: And his Majesty being graciously desirous to encourage those that repent for their Accession to such rebellious Courses, hath therefore ordained, and by the said Letter authorized and required his Privy Council to set the said Mr. William Veitch at Liberty, he always enacting himself to remove forth of his ancient Kingdom of Scotland, and not to return to the same; and that his Majesty’s said Letter shall be his Security until he return to that his said Kingdom. In which Case his said Warrant is hereby declared ineffectual. The Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council, in pursuance of his Majesty’s said Commands, do ordain the foresaid Mr. William Veitch be set at Liberty; and recommend to the Lords Commissioners of the Justiciary to sist any Procedure before them against the said Mr. Veitch upon the criminal Pursuit extracted by Alexander Gibson. The Lords of the Justiciary ordain the said Act to be insert in their Books, and sist any Procedure against him accordingly.”

The Spring of this sudden Turn in Mr. Veitch’s favours.

The Spring of this sudden Turn was in short this. When Mr. Veitch was taken not far from the Border of Scotland, he was sent for by the Managers. When he was first before the Justice Court, his Case was so favourable, that he was like to get off: The Prelates could by no Means be persuaded to pass him; and, after much Dealing among People concerned in Council, Session and Justiciary, his Death came at length to be resolved on, and Sentence was to have been pronounced the above Day. He getting Notice of this, and finding all Intercession precluded in Scotland, prevailed with his intimate Friend, Mr. Gilbert Eliot, since the Revolution Clerk to the Council, and at present one of the Lords of the Session, which Bench he fills yet with much Vigour and Diligence, to go up Post for London, with a Representation of his Case. When Mr. Eliot addressed Lawderdale, there was no Access for the Duke, tho’ a Relation of Mr. Veitch’s was pre-engaged. Then he applied to the Earl of Shaftsbury, and some others of that Side, who were setting up upon the Foot of the Liberties of England, who advised Mr. Eliot to print an Abstract of Mr. Veitch’s Case, that he was seized in England and without any Fault, after near Thirteen Years Abode there, carried down to Scotland, to be judged for old alledged Crimes; and to give a Copy of the Case to the Members of Parliament of both Houses. This was done, and made a great Noise, and the Parliament was very willing to enquire into it. While Things stood thus, the King was applied to, and little less than threatened with a parliamentary Enquiry into this Carriage to an English Subject, as Mr. Veitch might be called. Upon which the above Letter is writ down, which came very seasonably, within an Hour before the Sentence of Death was to have been pronounced against him. This is all I have of this worthy Person’s Sufferings this Year.

Landlords in Edinburgh fined for House conventicles in their Land. George Turnbull in 300 L.

April 2. the Council, being informed that Conventicles were held in Edinburgh pretty frequently, resolve to prosecute the Heritors of the Land where they were held, tho’ conform enough themselves, and fine them in Terms of former Acts of Council. Accordingly I find George Turnbull, Baxter in Edinburgh, before them, for Three Conventicles alledged to be kept lately in Isobel Crawford (who had a Chamber in a Tenement of Land belonging to him) her House. The said George is required to depone upon the Rent of the whole Tenement of Land, which upon Oath he declared to be a Hundred Pounds every Year. The Council decern him to pay Three hundred Pounds Scots for Three alledged Conventicles in that Woman’s House in this Tenement of Land. And, for any Thing I can learn, there were more Dwellers in the Tenement, and the Landlord was not at all privy to the Meetings.

About 16 Gentlemen and Ladies in Galloway denounced in Absence for Nonconformity.

At the same Diet I find a good many Gentlemen and Ladies in the South cited before the Council for Nonconformity. Gordon of Craichlaw younger, and his Spouse, Gordon of Colvannen, Macghie of Drumbay, Ramsay of Boghousie, Dame Stuart Lady Castl Stuart, Macghie Laird of Larg, Heron of Littlepark, Dunbar younger of Machiemore, Archibald Stuart of Causeyend, Anthony Heron in Wigg, and his Spouse, Stuart of Tondergie, Macghie in Penninghame, Macmillan in Craigwell, Stuart of Ravenstoun, Brother to the Earl of Galloway, and Dame Dunbar his Lady, and Provost of Wigtoun, are charged with withdrawing from Ordinances, and being present at Conventicles. None of them compearing, they are all denounced, and put to the Horn.

Informations against the rebels, and others, sent in by the Incumbents. This Oppression forced many to join in the Rising at Bohazel.

It may be worth while to notice here, that Lists of those, and Multitudes of others, which have not come to my Hand, were sent in to Edinburgh by the Episcopal Incumbents in the Places where they lived, and vigorously urged in Council by the Bishops and their Party to be prosecuted. Letters used to be directed against them, upon such Information, to appear in a very short Day before the Council; and, upon their Noncompearance, they were held as guilty, and denounced. We shall find a good many mentioned in this Session, forfeited after Bohazel: And indeed this severe and iniquitous Persecution of them obliged them to retire tire from their Houses, and betake themselves to hide and wander up and down; and we need not be surpris'd to find them, and many others thus oppress'd, take hold of any Opportunity which offer'd, to relieve themselves from these hard Circumstances.

Mr. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, of whom before, was before the Council May 13. and charged with being present at Conventicles. The Libel was referred to his Oath, and he refusing to depone, was fined in a Thousand Merks.

The same Day Two excellent Gentlewomen had a little Favour granted them. Upon the 4th Instant a Conventicle was discovered in Mrs. Durham's House: And Margaret Muir Relict of Mr. James Durham, and Janet Muir spouse to Mr. John Carstairs, were taken and imprison'd in Edinburgh Tolbooth. This Day they petition the Council to be releas'd out of Prison. With some Difficulty, some Friends of theirs got the Council to remit them to the Magistrates of Edinburgh.

May 14. George Scot of Pitlochrie is conven'd before the Council, for alledged being at Conventicles, and is libell'd, 'That notwithstanding, in the Year 1677. he had given Bond and Caution, under Ten thousand Merks, to confine himself within his own Lands, and not to keep Conventicles, yet he had contravened.' The Matter is referred to his Oath, and he refusing to depone, the Lords hold him as confess't. And the Council ordain his Cautioners presently to pay Three thousand Merks, and supersede the rest of the Fine until they see how the said George carries in Time coming. They allow him to return to his Confinement.

Next Day, the Council ordain the Magistrates of Edinburgh to pay the Fine the Law obliges them to, for a Conventicle kept in Mrs. Durham's House, where Mr. William Hamilton, a Relation of hers, and Brother to the (afterwards) Lord Halcraft, did preach.

The same Day, John Spreut Writer in Glasgow is liberate from Prison, upon Bond to compare, when call'd, under the Penalty of Two thousand Merks. And Mr. Robert Wylie, formerly mentioned, being apprehended, and having lien in Prison some Time, and fallen into Sicknes there, the Council liberate him, upon Bond to appear before them, if his Health recover, upon the first Thursday of June, or at any Time after, that if his Sicknes be lengthned out, under Penalty of Two thousand Merks. The Ruling at Bothwell falling in, he was overlookt, and met with no further Trouble this way.

No more of this Kind of Persecution offers till July, when the Prosecutions after Bothwell-bridge run in a new Chanel; and the Accounts of those will fall in afterwards in their own Room. Here I have call'd together from the Registers what I noticed before Bothwell. Some other Instances of Severities for Nonconformity will come in upon the more general Account of Things in the Entry of this Year.

1679.

M. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn fined in 1000 Merks for Conventicles.

Mrs. Durham and Margaret Muir Carstairs are releas'd from Prison, and remitted to the Magistrates of Edinburgh.

Scot of Pitlochrie fined in 3000 Merks for Conventicles.

Magistrates of Edinburgh fined for the Conventicle in Mrs. Durham's House. Mr. John Spreut liberate. Mr. Robert Wylie in prison till he is recover'd, and then liberate under Caution.

SECT. II.

Of the more publick Proceedings, Proclamations, and State of Affairs from January to May 1679.

IN the Beginning of this Year, the Council come to give Orders about the Forces levied formerly: One Part of them they leave to ramble up and down the Country, and harass such as did not fully joyn in Conformity with the Episcopal Incumbents, and to lift the Cess, which a great many did not pay till they were forced to it, and others of them they placed in Garisons, the largest of which was in Lanerk for some Time, another was at Air, a Third at Kirkcudbright, a Fourth at Dumfries, and a good Number were posted at Glasgow. Their Orders were, to pursue and search for such who haunted Field-meetings, to kill all who refused them, and to imprison and deliver to Magistrates, or send in to the Council all whom they apprehended. Those Garisons proved very uneasy to such as clave to the Gospel preached by Presbyterian Ministers, and many Outrages were committed up and down the Country by the Soldiers.

Instances might be given in Multitudes. A Party of the Soldiers in the Parish of Evan-dale seized some Twenty three Country-men, many of them Herd-lads, and made them swear whether they saw any armed Men going up and down for a Month's Time. Terrible Outrages were committed; they destroy'd great Quantities of Corn with their Horses, and in some Places threw the Corn they could not make use of into the Rivers, and in other Places they burnt it. But particular Accounts of these would be endless.

I choose rather to give the Reader the Foundations laid down by the Council for all these Severities, under the Pretext of securing the Peace, while, in the mean Time, the natural Tendency of such Methods was really to force People to another Rising; and probably this Disposition of the Forces thro' the West and South in the Beginning of this Year.

Some Instances of their Severities.

Foundation laid for those by the Council.

1679.

was the Design of some of the Managers. Many Consultations were held, toward the End of the last Year, about the bearing down of Presbyterians, regulating the Forces, gathering the Cess, and other Things of that Nature. The Result of all is, January 9. the Chancellor by a Letter signifies to Lawderdale, 'That the Committee for publick Affairs have, after many Meetings, and much Reasoning among themselves, formed the Articles herewith sent, to the end that, before they be presented in open Council, we may know his Majesty's Inclinations as to them, which shall be obeyed.' We see those Articles are framed by the secret Managers; but, before they venture to propose them in Council, they must have the Weight of the King's Sentiments to make them go down.

Accordingly, January 23. a Letter comes down from the King, approving them in as full Terms as they can desire. The Overtures themselves, being the Result of so much Thought, and the Ground-work of the after Severities, deserve a Room here.

Overtures for suppressing the Schism, &c.

Overtures to be proposed to his sacred Majesty by his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale, for suppressing of the present Schism and Disorders of the Church, and frequent Insurrections following thereupon.

THE Lords of the Committee of his Majesty's Privy Council for publick Affairs, considering, 'That, notwithstanding of all their former Endeavours, manifold Disorders do still abound, arising from withdrawing from the publick Worship, and from the dangerous and pernicious Principles instilled into the Minds of unwary People, by seditious Preachers in their scandalous Conventicles, whereby many are hardened in a most violent and unreasonable Schism, and animated to most turbulent virulent Practices, threatening the Subversion of the Protestant Religion, as well as the Peace of the Kingdom, have thought it their Duty (now that the Forces are raised, whereby these seditious Disorders may be easily and effectually suppressed) humbly to represent to the King's most excellent Majesty,

1. That, in regard many of the Enormities are committed in remote Shires, so that Probation can neither so easily be had, nor the Laws receive their due Execution, when the Guilty are proceeded before the Council, as if Persons of Knowledge and Integrity, living in or near these respective Shires, who best know their Faults, and how the same may be effectually punished, should be intrusted and impowered to that effect; his Majesty may be pleased to empower and authorize his Council to nominate such Persons to be Sheriff-deputes, Bailie-deputes of Regalities, Bailiaries, and Steward-deputes (where the Council shall find Sheriff-deputes, and other Deputes foresaid, to have been remits) who are, upon the Council's Recommendation, to receive Deputation from the principal Sheriffs, Bailies and Stewards, to put the Laws in Execution only against Withdrawers from publick Ordinances, Keepers of Conventicles, such as are guilty of disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, resetting and communing with fugitive and intercommuned Persons, and other vagrant Preachers; and that the former Commissions given by the Council, in August 1677. to the Noblemen and Gentlemen in the several Shires, for pursuing and punishing such as are guilty of these Delinquencies; and Instructions given to them, may be renewed to them, or such as the Council shall think fit; and that the Council may be empowered to grant such further Instructions as they shall find necessary for this Service; and that his Majesty's Forces, who ly in the respective Shires, may be ordered, upon all Occasions, as they shall be required, to concur with these Commissioners, or these intrusted by them, for the more speedy and effectual Execution of the Decrees and Sentences of the Sheriff, and other Deputes, and Letters of Horning, Poining and Caption to be raised thereupon, as they will be answerable.'

2. That the Soldiers may be commanded to disperse the Persons who shall be found at Conventicles, by Force of Arms; and if they refuse to dissolve these Meetings (being required so to do in the King's Name) or shall make Resistance, and that therethrough Mutation or Death shall ensue, that the Soldiers may be secured against any Hazard upon what they do in Prosecution of their Duty, as if by Law allowed, in case the said Persons refuse to disperse, being required in manner foresaid, or make Resistance.'

3. That the Soldiers may be commanded to seize and secure in Prison the Preacher, and so many others present at Field-conventicles as they can conveniently carry alongst with them, until they find sufficient Caution to answer for their Crimes according to Law (except the Preachers, or any others who are declared Traitors, or are intercommuned, or make Resistance at these Meetings, for whom no Caution is to be taken, but that they be secured in Prison.) And in regard the Multitudes who frequent these Rendevouzes of Rebellion, are such as they cannot all be seized, nor Probation easily led against them, the Soldiers may be empowered to take from the rest of the Persons found thereat (whom they cannot conveniently carry to Prison) their upper Garments, that the same may be a Mean of Conviction, and Evidence of Probation against them; and that the Soldiers may be impowered to seize and take all the Arms that any persons shall be found to have at these seditious Meetings, and the Horses of any who shall be found to have Arms thereat. 1679.

and

4. That in respect Scholars, Merchants, and Tradesmen, are the chief Persons who are ordinarily possessed with factious and schismatick Principles; that therefore none be allowed to enter into the second Class into Colleges, nor received Prentices, till they enact themselves to keep the Church.

5. That his Majesty may be pleased to give Order to the Council, to be careful to see that the 5 Act of the 2 Sess. and 2 Act of the 3 Sess. of his Majesty's first Parliament, appointing Magistrates and Council of Burghs, and others in publick Trust, to take the Declaration; as also the Acts of Parliament anent Teagognes, Chapmains and Schoolmasters, discharging them to officiate without Licence from the respective Ordinaries, and the Acts and Proclamations of Council emitted thereupon, to be put to due Execution.

6. That his Majesty may be pleased to give Order and Warrant to the Lords of the Treasury, to make Payment out of the first and readiest of the Cash, Five hundred Pounds Sterling to any Person who shall apprehend Mr. John Weisb, Three thousand Merks to any Person who shall apprehend any of these Preachers who are declared Traitors, Two thousand Merks for ilk one of these Preachers who are declared Fugitives, or are intercommuned, and Nine hundred Merks for ilk one of these vagrant Preachers who preach in the Fields; and that the same be ordered to be paid instantly upon the Delivery of them Prisoners to the Council; and that these Persons, who have already apprehended any of these Preachers, may, for the Encouragement of others, have some suitable Reward.

And lastly. That his Majesty may be pleased to give Order to the Council to take exact Notice of, and proceed against these indulged Ministers, who do not observe the Rules and Instructions prescribed to them at their Indulgence; and that, upon the Decease or Removal of any of these indulged Ministers from their Kirks, the Council may be careful to see orthodox Ministers planted in these Kirks; and, if the Patron do not present such Persons within the Time prescribed by the Law, that the Ordinary be ordained to present jure devoluto. Underneath, Edinburgh, Ninth of January, 1679. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having considered the Overtures above contained, and offered by their Committee for publick Affairs, do approve thereof, and ordain the same to be transmitted to the Duke of Lawderdale, to be offered to his sacred Majesty.

ROTHES Cancel. I. P. D.

The King's Letter, approving them, I likewise insert from the Registers.

King's Letter. approving them, Jan. 18.

Edinburgh, January 23. 1679.

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. We greet you well. Having seen and considered your Letter of the 9th Instant to the Duke of Lawderdale, with the Overtures proposed by you, for securing the publick Peace of that Our ancient Kingdom, against all schismatick and seditious Distempers; We are so well pleased with them, that We have thought fit, without any Delay, to return you Our hearty Thanks for your great Care and Zeal in Our Service upon all Occasions, and to let you know, that albeit We did formerly appoint the Duke of Lawderdale to signify Our Approbation of those Overtures to the Committee of publick Affairs, yet We do now again repete Our Royal Approbation of them all to you Our Privy Council, as you have them here inclosed. And therefore it is Our Will and Pleasure, and We do hereby authorize and impower you to issue Acts, Orders, and all other Papers conform to the said Overtures, and to use all such legal Ways and Means as you shall find most expedient for putting the same in effectual Execution: For doing whereof, this shall be your Warrant. And so We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 18. Day of January, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirtieth Year.

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

When thus they have the King's Consent, the Overtures are read and approven in the Council, and by them remitted again to the Committee for publick Affairs, that they may bring in their Opinion as to the Manner of putting them in Execution. Their Report is brought in January 28. and follows.

Report Committee of publick Affairs
as to their Execution.

1679.

The Report underwritten from the Committee for publick Affairs, with the Act therein mentioned, being read in Council, were agreed to, and appointed to be recorded conform to the Tenor thereof, which is as follows.

- ‘HAVING considered these Overtures approved by his Majesty, in order to the drawing of Acts and Orders thereupon, and for putting the same in Execution.’
- ‘As to the first Overture anent the naming of Sheriff Deputes, and for executing the Laws (only) against Withdrawers from publick Ordinances, Keepers of Conventicles, Persons guilty of disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, resetting and communing with fugitive and inter-communed Persons, and other vagrant Preachers, ’tis our Opinion that Deputes shall be named to that purpose in the Shires underwritten, and Jurisdictions within the same, viz. Lanerk, Renfrew, Ayr, Wigtoun, Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Perth, Dumfries, Stewartry of Annandale, Dumbarton, Linlithgow, Fife, and Kinross, Stirling, Haddingtoun, Berwick and Roxburgh; and we have appointed some of our Number to think upon fit Persons for that Service in the several Places.’
- ‘As to the second Part of the said Overture concerning the Commission and Instructions formerly given to several Noblemen and Gentlemen anent Conventicles and other Disorders, it is our Opinion, that the said Commissions and Instructions may be revived, and Missives directed to the several Persons commisionate to proceed according thereto.’
- ‘Having considered the second and third Overtures, and an Act of Council in the Year 1674. we have turned the same in an Act, which is offered to your Lordships Consideration.’
- ‘As to the fourth Overture concerning Scholars, Merchants, and Tradesmen, their enacting themselves to keep the Kirk, it is our Opinion that the same be turned in an Act, and sent to the several Universities and Burghs.’
- ‘Upon the sixth Overture, offering a Reward to such Persons as shall apprehend Mr. John Welsh and others therein related, it is our Opinion, that a Proclamation be drawn conform thereto, founded upon his Majesty’s Letter; and an Act drawn, recommending to the Lords of the Treasury to give these Rewards to such as shall deserve the same.’

Murray, Charles Maitland, Linlithgow, George Mackenzie, Eiphistoun, Maitland,
 Ross, Drummond,
 And the Approbation of Roths Cancel. I. P. D.

Act about
 Conventicles.

‘THE Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council do hereby give expresse Order and Command to all Officers and Soldiers of his Majesty’s standing Forces, or of the Militia, or any Part thereof, to dissipate the Persons who shall be found by them at Conventicles by Force of Arms; and if they shall refuse to dissolve, being required so to do in the King’s Name, or shall make Resistance, and that therethrough Mutilation or Death shall ensue, the said Lords do hereby indemnify them from any such Slaughter or Mutilation, and declare that they shall never be questioned either criminally or civilly for the same in all Time coming. As also, the said Lords give Orders to the said Officers and Soldiers to seize and secure in Prison the Preachers, and so many others present at Field-conventicles as they can conveniently carry alongst with them, until they find sufficient Caution to answer for their Crimes according to Law, except the Preachers or any others who are declared Traitors, or are intercommuned, or make Resistance, or stir up others to make Resistance at these Rendezvous of Rebellion, for whom no Caution is to be taken, but that they be secured in Prison. And in regard the Multitudes that frequent these Rendezvous of Rebellion, are such as that they cannot all be seized, nor Probation be easily had against them, the said Lords do empower the Soldiers to take from the rest of the Persons found thereat, whom they cannot conveniently carry to Prison, their upper Garments, that the same may be a Mean of Conviction, and Evidence of Probation against them; as also, to take and seize all the Arms that any Person shall be found to have at these seditious Meetings, and the Horses of any who shall be found to have Arms thereat. And further, the said Lords do hereby give Order and Warrant to the said Officers and Soldiers to take, apprehend, and imprison any Persons declared Fugitives by Sentence of Council or Justice Court, any that were in the Rebellion in the Year 1666. and did not take the Benefit of his Majesty’s Act of Indemnity, or any against whom Letters of Intercommuning are direct, wheresoever the said Persons can be apprehended, with Power to them to make open Doors and other lock’d Places, in searching of the said Persons. And the said Lords grant Warrant to any of the Officers of the Foot, standing Forces, or Militia, to seize upon, and make use of any Horses in the Country, which can be readily had when they have Occasion of the same for executing any Orders directed to them, the Officers;

cers being always liable, immediately after Performance of the Service wherein they shall be employed, to cause return these Horses to the Owners in as good Condition as they were when they were taken. 1679.

The Council, we need not doubt, approve all their grand Committee does; and in further Prosecution of the Report, February 6. a Proclamation comes out, which was better looked after, and more carefully prosecuted than that we shall just now hear of against Papists: I have annexed it, App. No. 1. Therein is promised 9000 Merks to any who shall discover and apprehend Mr. John Welsh, 3000 Merks for Mrs. Semple and Arnot, 2000 Merks for any of the Field-preachers declared fugitive, and 900 Merks for any of the vagrant Preachers. The Pretence of debauching People to Atheism and Popery in the Proclamation hath formerly been considered and answered.

Proclamation
against Mrs.
Welsh, Semple, and Arnot.
App. No. 1.

I shall not enlarge on the Severity and Temptation in the Promise of so great Sums in Scotland, for the apprehending of so good and useful Men as Mr. Welsh, and the others named. I know that about this Time some in the Government were so sensible of the moderate and loyal Principles and Usefulness of Mr. Welsh that a Proposal was made to him to accept of a Church, and an Indulgence was promised him. Neither shall I expose this ungenerous Method of ensnaring People to be Sharers of Managers Guilt, or insist on the many Instances might be given of the Care of Providence in preserving Mr. Welsh, thereof, and Multitudes of others intercommuned at this Time. I may rather notice that our Protestant Bishops and Counsellors did little or nothing against the Popish Priests and Jesuits, tho' there were vast Numbers of them up and down the Nation; and about this very Time Doctor Oats had made such that several of that Cattle were sent down from England to Scotland, besides Sholes of them daily coming in from beyond Sea. This was not the Chase the Government was set upon, but a standing Army must be maintained, and new Levies made, and the Country depopulated, to destroy the most zealous Enemies of Popery in the Nation, while the Favourers and Abettors of it were overlooked. Tho' by this Proclamation, all who were wicked enough, were set to hunt for these good Men, in order to get the Price of Blood, not only of those, but of the Souls of Thousands, who were seduced by them; yet none that I hear of were tempted by so great Offers.

Remarks upon
it.

To execute this and other such Laws, the new levied Forces are ordered West, and Part to Glasgow, there to ly, and prevent preaching the Gospel in private Houses, and the Fields thereabout. This was at the particular Desire of the Prelates and Clergy, that City being an Eye-sore to them, many Presbyterian Ministers getting Shelter there.

Accordingly upon the 13. of February the Council agree upon the Disposition of the Forces, and form an Act thereupon, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 2. No Remarks need to be made on it, they are all so ordered as they may be most useful for bearing down the preaching of the Gospel. It is of more Use to take Notice of some new Powers granted them upon the Proposal of the Committee for publick Affairs. I give them as they stand in the Registers, February 13.

Act about the Disposition of the Forces.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 2.

The Council approve the underwritten Report from the Committee for publick Affairs. "Whereas by the late Act of Council January 28. Warrant is given to Officers and Soldiers to dissipate Conventicles, and seize Preachers and other Persons thereat. And seeing it may be presumed, where any Number of Persons are found together in the fields, near to the Place, before or after Conventicles have been kept, that they have been going to or coming from Conventicles, that Order be given to the Officers and Soldiers, for seizing and securing such Persons going to or coming from Conventicles, upon the Day of the keeping thereof, until they give Bond, or enact themselves under particular Penalties, according to the Quality of the Persons, that they shall live orderly, keep their own Parish Kirks, and not go to Conventicles thereafter, or appear before the Council at a certain Day, and that those Bonds be sent forthwith to the Clerks of Council." And to give all relative to the Army in this Place; February 25. the Army being now to march, the Council order them to be furnished with Ammunition: And next Day they appoint that Magistrates in Burghs, and Heritors in Landward Parishes furnish seven Baggage Horse to each Company of Foot, and that for one Day's Journey, or a little further, if Necessity require, as the Parties shall demand.

Further Powers given to the Army.

I shall not enter into any large Accounts of the Trouble the Army at this Time brought to the West and South. It was in the Beginning of March that they came to the particular Places assigned them. My Lord Ross, and others who commanded them, made a very strict Search there for intercommuned Ministers, Field Preachers, and all others obnoxious to the standing Laws. These Searches were very troublesome to the Lieges, and many Disorders and Cruelties were committed at them, some of which may be observed in the Progress of this Book. At this Time a good Number very narrowly escaped, and were put to no small Hardships and Difficulties in their Wandrings and Hidings.

A strict Search at Glasgow and the Country
about.

At this Search two were only taken, a worthy, old, and very infirm Minister, Mr. Archibald Maclean, who by reason of his Age and Weakness, could not step out of their Way; and Mr.

Mr. Arch. Maclean and Mr.
William Kyle taken.

1679.

The Search repeated, and
Mr. John Law
taken. Great Cruelty used toward him.

Mr. William Kyle, since the Revolution a Minister in Galloway, and at this Time a Preacher. Yea such was their Vigilance and Concern in this Work, that in a very few Days the Search was repeated, they hoping some would venture out of their lurking Places, not looking for so sudden a Return of the Trial.

The reverend Mr. John Law, of whom in the former Book, was caught at this second Search, in a House of the Laird of Kincaid, and the Cruelty of his Persecutors to him deserves particular Notice. His Wife was extremely ill, and given over by Physicians, and it was this brought Mr. Law to the Place. He offered all Bonds and Security they could desire, and to render himself their Prisoner whenever they should appoint, or begged a Guard fire, and to render himself their Prisoner whenever they should appoint, or begged a Guard might be sent with him to the House: But by no Means could he prevail to see his dying Wife; and he was straight and most unmercifully sent to Edinburgh, and from thence to the Bass. Upon his Road East, he was not only guarded by the Way, but Soldiers were constantly kept in the Room with him, never once allowing him to be alone, to commend himself and his dying Wife to the LORD.

At a Search
in Edinburgh
Mr. George Barclay taken, but escaped from the Guard-
house.

Much about the same Time there was a most violent Search at Edinburgh, where the reverend Mr. George Barclay, whom we shall afterwards meet with, who since the Revolution hath been for 23 or 24 Years an useful and successful Minister at Uphall, was taken. His excellent Character is so well known in this Church, that I enter not upon it. When taken he was put into the Guard-house at Edinburgh; there by his Agility he escaped out at a Window into the Street, and got off. Afterwards he endured a long Trial of various Afflictions, and Wanderings, sometimes in foreign Countries, and sometimes in the North of England, and for some Years in Scotland, wherein he met with many remarkable Preservations and singular Providences, as I have sometimes with Pleasure heard himself relate.

Mr. Ross and
Mr. Macaulay apprehended and sent to the Bass
with Mr. Law.

Much about this same Time in Leith were apprehended Mr. Robert Ross, Mr. James Macaulay, Preachers, and another who was with them, on his hiding for Nonconformity. By the Registers I find the Council, April 4. approve the Committee for publick Affairs their Report: That Mr. John Law, Mr. Robert Ross, and Mr. James Macaulay be sent to the Bass; and the rest of the Prisoners continue in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh till further Order.

List of Commissioners to execute the Laws against Nonconfor-
mists.

I shall only acquaint the Reader further, That in prosecution of the Overtures above insert, and just before the March of the Army, upon the 27 of February the Council descend upon the following List of Commissioners to execute the Laws against Nonconformists in the several Places underwritten, in the Terms of the first Overture.

LIST of the Commissioners appointed by the Council in August 1677. with the Names of the Commissioners now added.

Shires.	Commissioners formerly.	Commissioners added.
Edinburgh Haddingtoun	Lord Treasurer Depute Earl Wintoun Lord Belhaven Earl Linlithgow Marquis Athole Earl Hume	Wauchope of Stotencleugh. Millar of Gourlaybank.
Linlithgow Perth Berwick Roxburgh		Marquis Montrose.
Selkirk	Philiphaugh and Hayning	Earl Roxburgh Sir John Scot of Ancrum
Renfrew and Netherwar of Clydsdale Upperward of Clydsdale Dumfries and Stewartry of Annandale Wigtoun and Stewartry of Kirk- cudbright Ayr and Dumbartoun Argyle Fife and	Lord Ross Earl Wigtoun Sir Robert Dalziel of Glenall Richard Murray of Burghtoun Earl Glencairn Earl Argyle Earl Strathmore, except the Presbytery of Dumfermlin, and Parishes of Culross, Tul- liallan, Mucker, Logie, Arn- gosh, Saline, and Fossua, en- trusted to Clackmannan	Hamilton of Raploch of Earlsball
Kinross

Peebles

Peebles	Sir William Murray of Stenhope	James Nasmyth younger of Posto.	1679.
Stirling and Clackmannan	Earl Mar, Lord Elphinstoun	Lord Canender, Laird of Clackmannan.
Aberdeen and Bamff	Earls of Errol, Marishall, Kintore, and Lairds, Auchmedden and Boyn
Kincardin	Earl Marishall
Elgin, Nairn and Innernefs	Earl Murray	Lord Duffus.
Cromarty		Laird of Cromarty.
Forfar	Earl of Airly

To these Commissioners they send the underwritten Letter, and additional Instructions, which deserve a Room here also.

Letter and additional Instructions to the several Commissioners.

Right honourable,
 His Majesty's Privy Council considering the great Scandal given to the true Protestant Religion, and the Occasions given for Inlet and Increase of Popery, Impiety Schism, Fanaticism, and Sedition, by the unchristian and factious Carriage of sundry Persons, who not only withdraw from the Worshipp of God in their own Parish Kirks, but are guilty of keeping seditious Meetings, and other Disorders of that Nature; they, for Remedy thereof, did grant Commission to you, or such as you should appoint, to take under your particular Care and Charge the executing of the Laws made against these Disorders within Scotland, and did give you particular Commission and Instructions for that Effect, bearing Date the 7th Day of August 1677. And whereas these Disorders do yet increase, and the Council, being very confident that there cannot be a more ready Way to reduce them, than by the due and vigorous Execution of the Laws, which have been so particularly entrusted to you by your Commission and Instructions, hath thought fit to revive and renew these Commissions and Instructions to you, and hereby to joyn— with you in the said Commission, and to desire and require you and him to follow forth the same with all Faithfulness and Diligence; as also some additional Instructions to these formerly given, herewith sent: And that there may be no Delay in that Service, either through Negligence or Connivance of the Sheriff-deputes, the Council has thought fit, by his Majesty's special Warrant, to recommend to the Sheriff-principal of _____ or _____ to nominate _____ to be his Depute in the said _____ for pronouncing of Sentences, and putting of the Laws in Execution against these Delinquents (to whom we are to send particular Instructions) and in the mean Time, until the said Deputations be got, we have commisionate him to act in that Affair as a Justice of Peace, with whom we desire you to keep Correspondence, as also with the commanding Officers of such Forces as are quartered near to you, who have also particular Orders to give you their Concurrency either for apprehending Delinquents, or poynding of Goods upon the said Sentences: This being an Affair wherein his Majesty's Service is in a special Manner concerned in this Juncture, we expect that you will use more than ordinary Diligence in the Prosecution of what is committed to you, and to have frequent Accounts of what passes. Signed in Name and by Warrant of his Majesty's Privy Council, by

Your most humble Servant,
 ROTHES Cancel. I. P. D.

Additional Instructions to the Commissioners, anent Conventicles, &c.

Since, by the 5 Act, 2 Sess. Parl. 2. the Fines of all Men and Women, who are not Heritors, are disposed to the Sheriffs, Stewards, Bailies of Regality, and their Deputes, so that no Part thereof can be applied to the Commissioners, and those deputed by them; therefore you are to apply the one Half of the Fines of all landed Men, and Women, and their Children, not foristamiliat, who live within the Bounds of your Commission, to your own Use, and such as you shall employ.
 It is declared, That such Persons as have taken the Bond to live orderly, and have since recanted the same, or have kept field-conventicles sensyne, or baptized their Children disorderly, shall have no Benefit by their taking the Bond, but may be proceeded against for their Delinquencies since the Act of Indemnity in March 1674. according to Law.

Albeit

1679.

Albeit there be particular Bonds appointed for each Commissioner and Sheriff-depute, for dissipating of Conventicles, and apprehending of Conventiclers at these Meetings, or passing from them; yet every Commissioner and Depute are authorized to pursue, dissipate, and apprehend them in any neighbouring Place or Jurisdiction, and to judge them before the Sheriff-depute or Justice of Peace of that Jurisdiction, or before the Council, as the said Commissioner or Depute, who apprehends them, shall think fit.

List of Sheriff-deputes named by the Council.

Further, every way to secure this Matter, the Council nominate Deputes in the different Shires, and require a Deputation from the Sheriff-principals, according to the subsequent List, to the Persons here nominate, which I shall likewise add, with the Council's Letter, and the Form of Deputation.

LIST of the Sheriffs and other Deputes nominate.

Shires, and Jurisdictions within the same.	Jurisdictions.	Deputes.
Edinburgh Haddington	Lord Treasurer-depute Sheriff D. Lawderdale Sh. Laird of Hopetoun Sh. Reg. of Kinniel Kirkcristoun Torphichen	Mr. Thomas Skene. Haliburton of Egliscairn.
Linlithgow	Marquis of Athole Stewartry of Falkland E. Eglintoun D. Hamilton Sh. And for Netherward D. Hamilton Sh. and Reg. of Glasgow E. Queensferry Sh.	James Dundas of Mannor.
Perth and Regality of Athole		Sir Pat. Threpland of Fingask. Will. Carmichael of Thurstoun. Semple of Beltrees. Mr. Will. Cochran of Rochfoles.
Renfrew Netherward of Clydsdale		Mr. William Nimmo.
Upperward of Clydsdale		Lairds of Claverhouse and Earlshall.
Dumfries and Stewartry of Annandale Wigtoun	E. Annandale Steward Sir Andrew Agnew Sh.	Claverhouse and Earlshall. Lin of Larg, Claverhouse and Earlshall.
Stewartry of Kirkcudbright	E. Nithsdale St.	Captain John Paterson. Claverhouse and Earlshall.
Air and	E. Dumfries Sh. and for Kyle and Kyle Stewart E. Eglintoun Bailie of Cunningham E. Cassils Bailie of Carrick E. Wigtoun Sh. Hamilton of Orbistoun Bailie of the Regality of Kilpatrick Lord Chancellor Sh. Reg. St. Andrews and Crawford Reg. Dumfries E. Tweeddale Reg. Pittenweem Easter	Mr. James Cunningham late Sheriff-depute. Mr. John Montgomery of Beath. Blair of Blairstoun.
Dumbarton		Major George Grant.
Fife and		William Carmichael of Thurstoun.
Kinross

Letter to the Sheriffs, &c. for nominating and deputing the foresaid Persons in the respective Jurisdictions abovementioned.

Letter to the Sheriffs.

My Lord,
His Majesty, for securing the publick Peace of the Kingdom against all schismatick and seditious Distempers, amongst other Directions, hath thought fit, by a particular and express Warrant, dated at Whitehall the 18th of January last, to impower his Council to nominate such Persons to be Sheriffs, Bailie-deputes, in such Bounds as the Council should find necessary, who are upon their Recommendation to receive Deputation from the Sheriffs-principal, and Bailies, to put the Laws in Execution, only against Withdrawers from the publick Ordinances, Keepers of Conventicles, and such as are guilty of disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, resetting and communing with fugitive and intercommuned Persons, and and vagrant Preachers: Which Deputation his Majesty desires may be required from you, to shew how unwilling he is to derogate from your Rights. And his Majesty's Privy Council finding it necessary for the King's Service, that be by you named Depute in the Sheriffdom of for putting in Execution the Laws and Acts of Parliament foresaid, they desire your Lordship to sign the inclosed Deputation, and to return the same to the Council betwixt and the second Day of April next, which is to be without Prejudice to any other of your Sheriff-deputes, to judge jointly with the said Deputes, or separately. This being an Affair wherein his Majesty's Service is specially concerned, we doubt not of your Compliance with this our Desire. Signed in Name, and by Warrant of his Majesty's Privy Council, by your Lordship's most humble Servant,

1679.

ROTHES Cancel. I. P. D.

The Tenor of the Deputation.

WE Sheriff Principal of the Sheriffdom of conform to a Recommendation of his Majesty's Privy Council signified to us by their Letter of the Date the Eleventh Day of March 1679. founded upon an express Warrant from the King's Majesty, dated at Whitehall the Eighteenth Day of January last, do hereby make and constitute to be our Sheriff-depute within the said Sheriffdom, to the effect underwritten only, with full Power and Commission to him to affix and hold Sheriff-courts at the ordinary Places accustomed, issue forth Precepts for summoning Persons within the said Shire, guilty, or that shall be guilty of contravening the Laws made against Separation, and with drawing from publick Ordinances, Keepers, or being present at Conventicles, Persons guilty of disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, resetting and communing with fugitive and intercommuned Persons, and vagrant Preachers, and to pronounce Sentence against the Persons guilty, conform to the Laws and Practick of this Kingdom, and to direct Precepts and other Executorials for putting the same to due Execution, and generally all and sundry other Things necessary in the Premises to do, use, and exerce, as fully and freely as any other Sheriff-depute has done or may do, promitten. de rato, &c. providing that thir Presents is to be without Prejudice to any other of my Deputes already named, to judge jointly or separately with the said Sheriff-depute; and that the granting hereof shall no ways derogate to our Right of Jurisdiction as principal Sheriff, as accords of the Law; and that this Commission continue during the Pleasure of his Majesty's Privy Council. In witness whereof, these Presents are subscribed with our Hand at, &c.

Tenor of the Deputation.

How far this was an Encroachment upon the legal Establishment of so important an Office as Sheriffs are, I must leave to others to determine: 'Tis a Question of Law; but one would think at this Rate the Council might take any other Branch of their Power, and place it in the Hands of Deputes of their own Nomination. But nothing now is stuck at, which was thought for the enlarging the Prelates Power, and the oppressing of Presbyterians.

Remarks upon this Procedure.

Jointly with this Commission or Deputation, each of those Persons were clothed with the Power of a Justice of the Peace in the respective Shires, and have large and severe Instructions given them for carrying on the Severities against Presbyterians, as follow.

Their Instructions from the Council.

Instructions given by his Majesty's Privy Council to Sheriffs and other Deputes, to act as Justices of Peace in their respective Bounds, until they receive their Deputations.

1. AS you are by your Commission (which is to be sent to you) appointed Sheriff-depute of the Shire of You are hereby empowered as one of his Majesty's Justices of Peace within the Bounds of the said Shire, with Power to you to call the remaining Justices of Peace to the Quarter-sessions, according to the Act of Parliament; and such as you shall convene, they are hereby authorized to appoint Constables in each Division, as you shall think fit; and upon any Emergent, where more than one Justice is necessary, you shall call any other of the next adjacent Justices to your Assistance; and in case of their Refusal, you shall inform one of the Clerks of his Majesty's Privy Council.

2. You are to use diligent Endeavour to inform your self of any intended Conventicle, on whatsoever Account, which is prohibited by the Laws, and you are to call to your Assistance these Forces adjacent to you in the Country, and therewith not only to dissipate the said Meetings, but to apprehend such Persons, and to imprison such as shall be found thereat, or returning from any such Meeting, and to seize all such Horses and Arms as you shall find thereat; and if need be, you shall give Information to any Commander of his Majesty's Forces who is most adjacent, of any such Convocations, and either require their Con-
E

1679. ' rence with you, or require them to proceed against these Conventicles, as they will be answerable.'
- ' 3. You are to endeavour to apprehend all vagrant Ministers, or who preach without Allowance of their Ordinaries, all intercommuned Persons contained in the List herewith sent to you, or hereafter to be sent to you by Order of his Majesty's Privy Council; as also, all Persons declared fugitive by the Council or criminal Court, as Lists are, or shall be sent from these Courts to you; and, on apprehending of the said Persons, to secure them in secure Prisons within Burghs, and to acquaint one of the Clerks of his Majesty's Privy Council therewith; and in the mean while to require the Magistrates of the Burghs to whom they are delivered, to secure them, as they will be answerable. And for enabling you to perform the said Services, you are to call for Assistance from any of his Majesty's Forces next adjacent to you, who have Orders to concur with you, when, and as you require them, in Execution of their Employments.'
- ' 4. You are likewise to apprehend and imprison all such Persons as at any Time shall be ordered by one or more of his Majesty's Privy Counsellors by Writ under their Hands, till they find Caution to answer as Law will.'
- ' 5. You are to cite before you any Person or Persons, Men or Women, who shall be at Field-conventicles, or who are guilty of illegal Marriages or Baptisms within your Jurisdiction, albeit perhaps the Meeting was without it; and albeit the said Person was no constant Residenter within your Jurisdiction, but a Remainer there for Forty Days, and that by Officers appointed by you for that Service: If they be cited and personally apprehended, whether they compear or not, you are to proceed according to the 2 Act, 3 Sess. Parl. 2. Char. II. and 5 Act, 2 Sess. 2 Parl. Charles II. As also, according to the printed Proclamations of Council, and punctually to observe and apply the said Laws to each several Person, of what Quality soever or Sex, toties quoties, as they shall be found guilty from the 25 of March 1674. and to imprison them till they pay, or find sufficient Surety for Payment of the said Sums, the Women always to be fined according to their Husbands Quality.'
- ' 6. And if they be cited personally and compear not, they are to be proceeded against, and unawed in Fifty Lib. Scots, toties quoties, as frequently as you can.'
- ' 7. If they be cited at their Dwelling-houses, and not personally apprehended, you shall likewise cause their Officers cite them at their Parish-church immediately after Sermon, and at the Market-cross of their Head-burgh; and if they compear not, you shall fine and unaw them in such Sums as the Sheriffs within that Shire are accustomed to unaw Absents from their Courts, and that toties quoties as they shall be absent.'
- ' 8. And notwithstanding of their Imprisonment in the said Case, if they pay not, or find not Surety, you are to proceed to poind their Moveables in the ordinary Way (forbearing always labouring Oxen or Horse from the last of October to the last of May for labouring) and to apply the same for Payment of the said Fines.'
- ' 9. So soon as they either pay or find Surety, you are to dismiss them, and so to proceed toties quoties.'
- ' 10. You are warranted and desired to apprehend any Person who shall contemptuously disobey the Discipline and Censures of the Church, and imprison them till they find Surety to obey the Church in that Censure; and this upon the Desire of the Minister of the Parish. Act 38. Sess. 2. Parl. 2. Charles II.
- ' 11. You are to put the Laws in Execution against such as ordinarily and wilfully withdraw from the ordinary Meetings of divine Worship in their own Parish Churches, Papists or others, according to the 2 Act, 3 Sess. 1 Parl. Char. II. whether Men or Women, and conform to the late Proclamation of Council.'
- ' 12. You are to give timely Information to one of the Clerks of Privy Council of such as are imprisoned by you, either as intercommuned Persons, Fugitives, vagrant Ministers, or are apprehended by you by Orders from the Council, or any Counsellor, with the Cause of their Imprisonment, and Place where they are, and Magistrates Names to whom, and what Time they were delivered.'
- ' 13. You are in these Things, and what further shall be ordered, to act in Concurrence with the other Sheriff-deputes and Justices of Peace, and once to require them to concur with you; and you are also to concur with them in these Things when they require you thereto; but you are also impowered to act solely in any Emergent, or in case of their Absence upon any account.'
- ' 14. If any Sheriff, Sheriff-depute, Magistrate of Burgh, Bailie, or Bailie-depute of Regality, Stewartry, or Barony, or any other Heritor, or other Person whatsoever, especially any of his Majesty's Forces, refuse to concur with, or assist you in Prosecution of the Laws against these who oppose the same, you are to certify the same to the Privy Council.'
- ' 15. You are to apply the whole Fines of all the Persons who are not landed Men, to yourself, and the other Sheriff-deputes, who concur mutually with you at each respective Sentence tence and Proceeding, and to their Members of Court, and Collectors; and the Fines of all landed Men, and their Wives and Children, the one Half to the Commissioners appointed within their Jurisdiction, the other Half to be forthcoming to the King, which the Commissioners are appointed to uplift, and be countable for the one Half.

1679.

16. If any Person, cited or pursued by you, shall flee from your Jurisdiction to any other, you shall with all Conveniency inform the Sheriff, or other Deputes of that Jurisdiction to which they flee, and desire them to pursue them, or to return them to you; and you shall give the like Concurrence to them, on their Desire.

17. You are to hold Courts once every Week at least, and oftner as you find fit.

18. That, for such Heritors as are fined, you cause arrest their Mails and Duties, and pursue Actions to make forthcoming, and see the same receive due Execution.

19. You are hereby impowered to appoint your own Fissals, and other Members of Court (except Clerks) to pursue Keepers of Conventicles, and others guilty of such like Disorders mentioned in the preceeding Instructions; and you are to employ the ordinary Clerks.

Lastly. You are hereby impowered to proceed and act as a Justice of Peace within the said Shire, against Delinquents, conform to the preceeding Instructions, until you receive your Commission as Sheriff-depute.

The Reader will easily guess what sad Work so many different Persons, clothed with so large Powers, and an Army to support them, would make in these Shires. The Particulars, being in no Register, are not come to my Hands; but we may easily form an Idea of what People, nominated and hounded out by the Prelates, would do in these Circumstances: And many of the Finings and Hardships up and down the Country, for some Years, were the Fruits of those various Commissions; tho', after the Rising which ended at Bothwell, to which such Severities gave great Provocation, the Persecution fell a little into another Chancel than was at first designed.

But the Divisions among the persecuted Party themselves last Year, and the Entry of this, were heavier to good Peoples Spirits than all that the Soldiers or Commissioners could do. The Debates about the Cess were over-ruled by Force; that Imposition was cramm'd down, and the Act indeed executed itself. However, Debates and Disputes continued, and Papers were spread about it. I have seen one vindicating the paying of it, intituled, Queries anent the Cess, too long to be insert here, and others against it.

Divisions among the Persecuted, about the Cess.

But the Division upon the Indulgence ran yet higher: So much was said in the Close of the last Year upon this, that I shall add little now. Ministers who preached in the Fields had not formerly meddled with this Subject; but January this Year, some Preachers, formerly pointed at, began warmly to preach up Separation from the Indulged, and in such a broken Time as this, no doubt such Doctrine would take, when Peoples Spirits were rankled with so many Evils.

And the Indulgence and Separation from the Indulged began to be preached.

When this Flame was rising, several Ministers and Probationers in and about Glasgow, with a good many of the solid and knowing of the old Elderships in that City, who had been Witnesses to the sad Consequents of the last Rent in this Church, upon the publick Resolutions, had frequent Meetings, and endeavoured what in them lay to put a Stop to the growing Division, but were not able to do so much as they wished.

Meetings in order to quench the Flame at Glasgow.

About this same Time Mr. John Welsh, Mr. George Johnson, Mr. Gabriel Semple, Mr. John Rae, very noted Field Preachers, with some others, got a Meeting with some of these young Preachers, and gave it as their Opinion, and advised them to go to the Meeting of Ministers who had licensed them, and subject to their Direction; without which, and the Invitation of some Body of Ministers, they gave it as their Mind, that they ought not to take upon them to preach up and down the Country. And they earnestly dealt with them to forbear preaching up Separation at such a Time as this, when Union among Presbyterians was so necessary.

Mr. Welsh and other Field Preachers here Endeavours.

They likewise appointed Two of their Number to write a Letter to one of the indulged Ministers, to be communicated by him to the rest, intreating, that, for Union's sake, they would endeavour to concert Matters so among themselves, as to take away, as much as might be, some of the Occasions of Clamour against them: And in particular, that they would now and then come out of their Charges, and preach the Gospel to desolate People who wanted it, which they were of Opinion might be of great Use at this Juncture.

All those Essays did not stop the breaking off of considerable Numbers from the Indulged: However those Things did not hinder the Endeavours of some Places to have Presbyterian Ministers settled among them in a private Way. And in January this Year, I had upon a Call from the People of Eastwood, now vacant by the Death of that excellent and successful Minister, Mr. Hugh Smith, that Mr. Matthew Crawford is entred upon his Trials, in order to Ordination, and was ordained privately among them. And the reverend Mr. Neil Gillies, after the Revolution Minister of Glasgow, and before this ordained to the Family of Argyle, had a Call to the Town of Greenock.

Mean while vacant Parishes called privately Presbyterian Ministers. Mr. Matthew Crawford ordained. Mr. Neil Gillies to Greenock.

There

1679.

Councils
Letter desiring a Frigate to carry off the Banished.

Proclamation.
Jan 23 against Papists.

Abstract of it

There is not much more offers during the Beginning of this Year from the Registers. It seems Difficulties cast up in the Transportation of such whom the Council had banished to the Plantations; and therefore January 16. they write the following Letter to Lawderdale.

“ Having, after much Pains and many Procelles, sentenced, according to exprels Act of Parliament, and sent away several disorderly Persons to his Majesty's Plantations in a Ship, which sailed hence in December last, we find the Preparative would contribute much to quiet our seditious Distempers, if great Pains were not taken to perswade People here, that such Obstructions will be made as will hinder their Transportation. And therefore, from a just Zeal to his Majesty's Service, and for Preservation of the Government of the Church, as it is at present established by Law, we thought it our Duty to interpose with your Grace, that you would use all possible Endeavours for securing their Transportation effectually to the said Plantations. And particularly, if your Grace find it necessary, you may interpose with his Majesty for procuring one of his Frigats to carry them thither, without which there can be very little Hopes of deterring such as will not cease to trouble the Peace of the Kingdom, unless that they see that his Majesty and his Judicatories will concur steadily in punishing these who offend.” I do not find their Request was granted; but this Letter shews with what Vigour they pursued their Sentences.

Towards the End of January, the Council issue forth a large Proclamation against Papists. The Noise of the Popish Plot lately discovered in England was the Occasion of this sham Proclamation, which did (as one of good Intelligence at this Time writes upon the Copy of it, now in mine Eye) help to usher in the Trouble and Bloodshed which follows, the real Design of it being against others who did not joyn with the established Church. The Proclamation is long, and contains a great many excellent Clauses against the Papists, of which no manner of Care was taken in the Execution. I shall only give an Abstract of it. “ CHARLES R.

“ Whereas We have still made it Our chief Care to preserve Religion in its Purity, and to see almighty GOD (from whom alone We derive Our Power) worshipped; and having found of late, that the bloody, as well as idolatrous Principles of the Papists, have incited those of that Profession to contrive Plots against Our Person and Authority, Alterations in the Government, and the Subversion of the Protestant Religion, endeavouring to enslave Us and Our Subjects to the Pope and See of Rome; and yet We, being ever unwilling to punish such as may be reclaimed, or even to surprise such as are irreclaimable, have therefore thought fit, with Advice of Our Privy Council, hereby to command all Jesuits, Priests, or trafficking Papists, to depart the Kingdom betwixt and the first Day of March next, with Certification that they shall be proceeded against criminally, according to Act 120. Parl. 12. Jam. VI. whereby they, and such as reset them, are declared guilty of Treason; and that the Laws against Sayers and Hearers of Mass will be executed. All Papists, of whatsoever Quality, are required to deliver up their Arms of all Kinds, besouth the Water of Esk, against the 20 of February, benorth it against the 20 of March, under Pain of being punished as Contemners of Authority; and all Magistrates are ordered to seek and search for Arms in Papists or suspected Persons Houses, as also all Jesuits, Priests, and trafficking Papists, and commit them to the next Prison, that they may be punished conform to Law, and to return a Report of their Diligence at their highest Peril. Further, We command, That no Papists be suffered to bear any publick Office, or bear Arms in the Army. Noblemen and others are discharged to send abroad their Children with Pedagogues, without a Testimonial from the Bishop, discharging their Parents, if they turn Papists, to entertain them, under the Pains, Act 71. Parl. 6. Jam. VI. and Act 1. Parl. 16. Jam. VI. and ordain the Council to see to the Education of the Children of Papists, conform to Act 9. Sess. 1. of Our 1. Parl. And to the end all Our good Subjects may unanimously joyn, not only in hearing the Word of GOD, but in participating of his holy Sacraments, We do hereby revive that excellent Statute made by Our Royal Grandfather, Act 17. Parl. 16. That Subjects of this Kingdom shall communicate once a Year; and that if any shall abtain, upon any Pretext whatsoever, they being by their Pastors thereunto required, shall pay the Penalties mentioned in the said Act; every Earl 1000 Pounds, Lord 1000 Merks, Baron 500 Pounds, Freeholder 300 Merks, Yeoman 40 Pounds, and Burgees according as the Council shall modifie. Requiring all Magistrates and Judges to put the said Act in Execution, against all Persons of what Profession soever, conform to the Words, as well as the Meaning of the Act itself. And which We the rather do at this Time, because many of the Romish Church do delude and abuse our People, under the Profession of some or other of those who refuse to conform to the Worship of this reformed Church, as it is established by Law: And, that all Papists may be either convinced or convicted, We command and appoint them to appear before, and confer with the Bishop or Archbishop of the Diocese, twixt and the 20 of March, and obtain Testimonials of the Satisfaction they have given. And, in case they fail, the Bishops and Archbishops are required to take up Lists of all Papists, particularly such as are excommunicate, or have made Defection from the Reformed Religion, and send in to Our Council, betwixt and the first Thursday of April next; with Certification to all such as do not compear, as

“ said

" said is, that Letters will be directed against them, to appear before the Council, on Pain
 " of Rebellion, and their Moveables, and the Liferent of their Lands, Rooms and Possessi- 1679.
 " ons, shall pertain to Us as Escheat. And We declare, That neither such as shall be de" nounced, or any others for them covertly, shall be permitted to enjoy their Lands, Rents,
 " or Revenues. And ordain Lists of all excommunicated Papists to be printed, and affixed
 " in publick Places, that no Judges may suffer any in that List to pursue or bear Witness in " any Cause, till they be reconciled to the Church, conform to Act 25. Parl. 1. and
 " Act 3. Parl. 20. Jam. VI. Our Will is herefore, &c. Given under Our Signet, Janua" ry 23. 1679."

I can meet with no Prosecution of Papists at this Time, for as numerous and growing as they were, unless it be that this same Day the Council order G. Young, a Papist Priest, to be sent to the Bass, till further Order. And indeed, as far as I can find, not one of the Clauses in the above Proclamation were taken any Care of by Bishops, Judges, or others concerned, in as far as they related to Papists: But the other Branch of it, against Nonconformists, was made a Handle of to harass them.

At that same Diet there is a Dispensation granted by the King to the Bishop of Galloway, for his Nonresidence in his Diocese, tho' he wanted not a good Number of Papists to look after in that Country: 'Tis a little singular, and the curious Reader will desire to see it. King's Dispensation to the B. of Galloway for Nonresidence.
January 23. His Majesty's Royal Dispensation was read, and ordered to be recorded.
 " Whereas none of Our Archbishops or Bishops may lawfully keep their ordinary Residence " without the Bounds of their Diocese respective, unless they have Our Royal Dispensation, " Warrant, and Licence for that effect: Those are, That in regard John Bishop of Galloway
 " is not provided in a competent Manse or dwelling House in the Diocese of Galloway, and " for the better promoting of Our Service in the Church, to allow and authorize the said
 " Bishop to live in or near the Cities of Edinburgh or Glasgow, or in any other convenient " Place, where he may be able to attend the publick Affairs of the Church. With whose Non-" residence in the Diocese of Galloway, We, by virtue of Our Royal Supremacy in Causes Ec" clesiastical, do by those Presents dispense, as well with the Time past preceeding the Date " hereof, as for the Time to come, during Our Royal Pleasure; any Canon of the Church, " or Acts of Parliaments, enjoyning Residence, notwithstanding. And We strictly require
 " all Our Subjects, Church-officers, and others, never to quarrel or call in question the said
 " John Bishop of Galloway, during the Continuance of this Our Royal Dispensation and Li" cence, as they will answer to Us at their Peril. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, May 28.
 " 1678. and of Our Reign the 30th Year."

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

This singular Dispensation affords Room enough for Remarks upon that exorbitant and boundless Supremacy and Power over Churchmen, and Matters now lodged in the King's Hand. Nonresidence in Churchmen is what will not vindicate; and this Dispensation looks forward as well as backward, and might be given to all the Fourteen Bishops, and their Underlings too, for any Reason I can observe to the contrary. The Way to help the Bishop's House had been, to oblige him to reside at his Charge: And the publick Affairs of the Church talked of, if any Thing be in this but Form, one would think the Argument would hold for the Nonresidence of the rest of the Prelates, as well as his. How long the Bishop enjoyed his Licence I know not, but it is probable it continued till he was advanced to the See of Edinburgh. Remarks upon it.

Upon the 13 of February, the Council approve of the Report of the Commission for publick Affairs, 'That Twenty four Soldiers of the Earl of Mar's Regiment be sent to the Castle of Stirling.' The Occasion of this I know not; what follows is of more Importance. 'That the Committee for publick Affairs be authorized and impowered to name some of their own Number to be a close Committee, with Power to give Warrant to seize and secure such Persons as they saw fit.' This was a vast Power indeed, to be lodged in the Hands of Two or Three, and those were either Prelates, or such as were violently for them. 'That, during the Remainder of this Session, the Council be kept Tuesdays and Thursdays weekly; and that the Prisoners, seized and examined for Conventicles, have their Libel on Tuesday.' The Council still approve all that comes from this Committee. Secret Committee, with Power of imprisoning whom they will, allowed.

Beside what has been already remarked, upon the 25 of February, the same Committee propose, and the Council approve, 'That some Persons, who attend the Session-house as Agents, are Instruments of Disorder through the Nation, and correspond with vagrant Ministers, Traitors and Fugitives, be called before the Committee, and give Security for their good Behaviour in Time coming, or take the Oath of Allegiance, otherwise that they be banished' Patrick Gless liberate, after Four Years Imprisonment.

1679.

Mr John Mosman
manicized.The English Parliament sit down March 6.Sir Francis Winnington's Speech
App. No. 3.Earl of Shaftes-bury's.
App. No. 4.The Duke of York retires from Court.Upon a Letter from the King, Feb. 20.In May the Commons bring in a Bill excluding the Duke of York
from the Succession.Heads of the Bill of Exclusion.

banished the Town of Edinburgh; That Patrick Glasf, Prisoner now these Four Years, be liberate, upon his paying 200 L. of the Fine the Council imposed; That the Town Major have 50 L. Sterling Reward, for taking Mr. John Mosman a vagrant Preacher, according to the King's Proclamation. And, February 27. the Council order a Letter of Thanks to be writ to the Earl of Seaforth, for his Diligence in suppressing Conventicles in his Country. So far North was the Desire got, after Ordinances dispensed by Presbyterian Ministers.

Upon the 6 of March, the English Parliament sat down at Westminster. The former had been dissolved last Year, in Hopes that a House of Commons might be got, more pliable to the King's Designs; but a Spirit of Liberty seem'd to be upon the growing Hand among the Commons, and a good many of the Members in their Speeches and Actings made very bold with the King, and such whom they took to be evil Instruments and Pensioners to France about him. There was at this Time there a great Current against the Duke of Lawderdale, and the Administration of Affairs in Scotland, as very much favouring Popish Designs. And that the Reader may know somewhat of the Freedom taken in England to oppose arbitrary Measures, and the Oppression of the Subjects, tho' their Pressures were not near so great as ours in Scotland, I have insert a Speech handed about at this Time, said to be delivered by Sir Francis Winnington late Solicitor General, and now an eminent Member of the House of Commons, March 27. App. No. 3. And upon the 29 of the same Month, the Earl of Shaftsbury had another in the House of Peers, when upon the Consideration of the State of the Nation, which relates so much to our Scots Affairs, and made such Noise at this Time, that I likewise insert it App. No. 4. These Patriots in England had a much deeper Sense of the Hardships put upon us in Scotland by our Council than many of our selves.

The Duke of Tork was reckoned, by such who appeared for the Liberties of England, to be at the Bottom of all the Maladministrations they would have been rid of. Even before the Parliament sat down the King found a Party forming against his Brother, and towards the End of February gave it him as his Mind, that he should retire from Court. The Duke was averse, till the King sent him his Mind in Writ, under his own Hand as follows. Whitehall, February 20. 1679. I have already given you my Reasons at large why I think it not you should absent your self for some Time beyond Sea. I am truly sorry for the Occasion; for you may be sure I shall never desire it longer than it shall be absolutely necessary for your Good and my Service. In the mean Time I think it proper to give you it under my Hand, that I expect this Complaisance from you, and desire it may be as soon as conveniently you can. You may easily believe with what Trouble I write this to you, there being nothing I am more sensible of than the constant Kindness you ever had for me. I hope you are so just to me as to be assured, that no Absence or any Thing else can ever change me from being truly and kindly Tours, C. R.

When the Duke had stepped out of the Way, and after the utmost Endeavours of the King and Courtiers to prevent it, the House of Commons now appearing vigorously for the Protestant Religion, and the civil Rights of their Country, in May brought in a Bill for excluding the Duke of Tork, and to bring the next Protestant Heir to the Succession. And considering that the Struggles of the Sufferers I am accounting for, were with the Duke's Party in Scotland, and really upon the same Foot with these of the Patriots in England, and that too many in these Lands are yet hankering after the Chains the English Commoners would fain have thrown off, even when now we may feel the inexpressible Benefits of the Protestant Succession's happily taking Place among us by an after Establishment upon the same Bottom with this Bill, setting aside the whole Popish Race of Claimants: Upon these Grounds I take it not to be improper to insert an Abstract of this Bill in this Place.

'Forasmuch as the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, have long since been delivered from the Slavery of Popish Superstition, for that it advances the Power of the Pope, and diminishes that of sovereign Princes, and makes him Monarch of the Universe, withdraws Subjects from their Allegiance, and subverts the End of the Christian Religion.'

'But notwithstanding Popery hath been condemned by Law, for its detestable Doctrine, and traitorous Attempts against the Lives of sovereign Princes, yet the Pope's Emittaries and Agents resort to this Kingdom, and have by their own Arts and Policies, and the Assistance of foreign Princes, contrived and carried on a Conspiracy to murder the King, subvert the Government, and destroy the Protestant Religion; and for the better effectuating thereof, have seduced the Duke of Tork, the presumptive Heir of the Crown, to enter into Negotiations with the Pope, his Cardinals and Nuncios, for promoting the Popish Church and Interest, and, by his Means, advanced the Power of the French King, to the manifest Hazard of these Kingdoms.'

'And forasmuch as the Parliament of England have hitherto directed and limited the Succession to the Crown, frequently out of its ordinary Course, but never had such Reasons as now to use their extraordinary Power.'

Be

Be it enacted, That the Duke of Tork, (having publicly professed the Romish Religion, which hath notoriously given Birth to the late Plot) be excluded and disabled for ever from inheriting the Imperial Crown and Government of this Realm: And that upon the Death or Death of the King, the Crown and Government shall be devolved to the next Heir of the Protestant Religion; and whatever Acts of sovereign Power the said Duke shall exercise, shall be judged high Treason, and punished accordingly.

And forasmuch as the Safety of the Kingdom depends upon the Execution of this Law, be it further Enacted, That if any Person shall aid, counsel, or correspond with, or contrive his Return to any of the King's Dominions, or declare him to be lawful Heir, or, after the King's Death, publish or declare the Duke to be King of England or Ireland, or to have Right thereunto, by Word, Writing, or Printing, shall be guilty of high Treason. And forasmuch as the Duke's Return into any of the King's Dominions, will naturally conduce to great Mischiefs upon them, be it enacted, That if the Duke return to any of the said Dominions, he shall be attainted of high Treason; and all Persons are required to apprehend and secure his Person, and in case of Resistance, to subdue and imprison him by Force of Arms.

The Event of this Bill every Body knows: The King resolved to venture all before he would permit it to go through. To support the Bill, without Doors were handed about Reasons against a Popish Successor, a Paper not long, and much liked, and which deserves our Consideration still, and it follows App. No. 5.

But I leave the English Affairs to their own Historians, and return to what passed among our selves. Sometime in the Beginning of this Month, a few Persons by a Trick got in Major Johnstoun, one of the Captains of the Train-bands of Edinburgh, a most violent Persecutor, to a House under Pretext of a Conventicle, and threatned and soundly beat him. This taking Air, the Council were extremely hot upon the Discovery of it, and issue out a severe Proclamation, March 10, which I have insert App. No. 6. Every Body who hath any Humanity, much more such as have any Sense of Religion, will abhor the murdering Tenets spoken of in the Narrative. Who they were who overturned the Principles of all Society, and printed Jesuitical and murdering Tenets at this Time, I know not. After all the Enquiry I can make, I can find none of the suffering Presbyterians guilty of any Thing of this Nature. The Things alleged pointing this way some Years after this, shall be candidly considered, and I must, till I see the Matter vouched, reckon this a Piece of necessary Stile, upon the false Information the Council had got; since I find by several Accounts of this Matter at this Time, that no Assassination or Murder of the Major was ever once thought of; and if it had, it might have been easily accomplished: But no such Thing was in design. So that what follows of an Attempt of killing the Major, and mortally wounding some of the Soldiers, must be looked on as the aggravated Information of the Party. And if any such villanous Attempt was made, I shall be the last Man to say any Thing in its Alleviation. After all these Aggravations, a Thousand Merks are promised to the Discoverers, as in the Proclamation.

Had the Information given to the Council been true, there had not been wanting Ground for this severe Proclamation. By a Letter of theirs to the Duke of Lawderdale, March 11. I find the Story told them was: "That Eighteen or Twenty armed Men, prompted by the bloody Principles of their traiterous Books, did send for the Major to the House of one Mrs. Crawford, a known and most irregular Fanatick, and at his Entry discharged several Shots at him, and those he had with him; after which, with drawn Swords, they beat, bruised, and threatned to kill him, if he would not swear never to dissipate Conventicles; which he having refused according to his Duty, they mortally wounded him, and some that were with him." This, no doubt, was represented; but 'tis odd how it could be believed by the Council. He was frightened and beat, but for mortal Wounds, 'tis a mere Aggravation. We have already met with a Story of this Nature trumped up by Carstairs, tho' with less Ground than was here; and we shall soon find the Major well again, and as violent as ever.

I am well assured this Business stood thus. Two or Three Persons whom the Major had been hard upon, got some Body or other to give him a Hint of a Conventicle in a House where they were: He took it, and straight went there; and when he came in, he was indeed frightened and beat, and threatned till he promised never more to be so violent against Conventicles; and it was merely a Piece of private Revenge for personal Injuries.

However, the Jest and Affront put upon the Major was carried a terrible length by the Council; and to shew that every Thing was made a Handle of against the suffering Ministers, I have annexed an Act of Council made this Day, Appendix No. 7. where they order Lists of all Lodgers in Edinburgh to be given up every Night to the Magistrates, and most unmercifully vent their Spite against the Wives and Families of all outed Ministers, and order them to be turned out of Town against the 21 of March, under the Pain of an hundred Pounds Sterling. One may justly ask, what had they done? And was this Justice or Reason, because the Major had been drabbed by some, at whose Hands, it may be, he deserved this, that the innocent Wives and Families of Presbyterian Ministers, who knew nothing of the Matter, should 1679.

Reasons against a Popish Successor.

App. No. 5.

Attempt made on Major Johnstoun, March 12.

Proclamation thereupon March 13. App. No. 6.

Remarks upon 16

Account of the Matter as laid before the Council.

The true State of this Attempt.

Act of Council March 12. very severe.

App. No. 7.

1679.

Act for citing Persons, under Penalty of being held as contest.

should be sent a wandering and begging? I find this Act was likewise extended to Glasgow, and the Magistrates there received the same Orders, which put many religious harmless Families to sore Straits, many of them not knowing whither to flee.

That same Day the Council pass a very severe Act against such as are denounced for their Noncompearance, in Process for Conventicles and Nonconformity. "The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering that the late schismatick Disorders have (upon frequent Citations before the Council on pain of Rebellion) increased scandalously the Number of Rebels, and the Offenders expect Impunity by being denounced Rebels, knowing too well, that they cannot be otherwise punished than by Declarators upon Rebellion, whereas the Smallness of their Estates will not bear the Charge, nor will the Nature of the Process allow so long Delay, have therefore thought fit to order his Majesty's Advocate to add to the ordinary Certification of Rebellion, that the Persons to be cited personally shall be holden as contest, and fined in the respective Sums appointed by Act of Parliament in case of Noncompearance, and that the Council may make Choice of either of the Certifications, for the Peace of the Country and his Majesty's Service, as they shall think fit, where the Defenders are personally cited." The Hardships of this Act I leave to the Gentlemen of the Law: It seems beyond the Council's Power to introduce a new Manner of Citation, especially when so captious as this is.

The State of Conventicles, and the Divisions among the Preachers in the Fields
this Spring.

Little more offers till the Beginning of May, unless it be some Things with relation to Field-conventicles in April this Year, and the barbarous Murder committed upon the Twentieth of that Month near Lowdonhill. From the parcelling of the Soldiers up and down, and their Numbers and Activity, the Keepers of Conventicles were obliged a little to alter their Method. Towards the End of the last Year, some Ministers began to withdraw from preaching with their Brethren, with whom they used to preach in the Fields formerly, who were not now for entering either upon the Indulgence or Cess in their Sermons to vulgar Auditories, and drew up with the young Preachers I have formerly spoken of, and continued to preach together with them pretty much on these Points this Winter and Spring. Some Papers before me, writ by some of that Side, say, That Field-meetings in the Beginning of this Year were more numerous than formerly, and many were obliged to come with Arms to defend themselves, because they were frequently attacked by the Soldiers and Garisons; and for their Safety as well as Harmony, the Ministers and such who waited upon them, resolved to keep as close together as might be. They had found that by preaching in separate Places, and scattering themselves, they were very much weakened, and the Soldiers got Advantage this way against them, and sometimes the Ministers were in Hazard to be seized, and several of the Hearers were taken. Therefore they determined to narrow themselves into one Meeting in such Places which stood most in need of the Gospel, and where they might gather and preach in the greatest Safety. Thus they continued for Twenty Sabbaths without Intermission, from December to May. I do not doubt but this Course they took tended to heighten the Separation; and when they were alone without conversing with others, and preaching with Persons more moderate, several who joyned with them did heighten the Breach, and screw up Matters the length they came to. Mean while, Mr. Weish and others of his Temper preached in other Places, with whom there were not many in Arms, and endeavoured to calm Matters as much as might be.

Conventicle
near Lanerk, with a Scuffle that happened twixt some sent from them and a Party of Soldiers.

Upon the 30 of March there was a Sermon and large Meeting at Cumberhead, in the Parish of Lefmahago, not far from Lanerk. The Soldiers hearing of it, sent a good Body of Men to dissipate them: The Party understanding the Numbers of the Meeting, and how well many of them were armed, did not find it convenient to attack them; but kept at some Distance, and satisfied themselves with rifling some Women, who were going to the Meeting, of their Plaids, Bibles, and the like, and seizing some Men. This coming to the Knowledge of the Meeting, a good Number was sent off in Arms to require the Prisoners, and the Womens Plaids, &c. The Commander of the Soldiers refused both, and a Scuffle ensued, wherein the Officer was wounded, and some of the Soldiers taken Prisoners; but they were soon dismissed. When the Account of this came to Glasgow, my Lord Ross and the Soldiers there, marched up towards Lanerk, and the Country thereabouts was sore harassed for some Weeks.

The Council's Procedure
upon it.

A Committee appointed with jurisdiction Power, their Commission.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 8.

Their Report.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 9.

The Accounts of this Scuffle came in to the Council, April 3. very much aggravated: "And they order the Commissioners for Assessment in the Shire of Lanerk, to meet and provide Hay, Straw and Corn for the Forces to be sent there against some Rebels who have lately appeared in Arms about Lefmahago, where it seems the Scuffle was; and if it be not timely provided, the Major-general is allowed to give Orders to take it where it may be had, upon paying the established Prices." And next Day they appoint the Earls of Mar, Glencairn, Linlithgow, Lord Ross, the Advocate, and several others as a Council Committee, with a justiciary Power to sit at Lanerk, and examine this Matter. Their Commission I have annexed Appendix N<sup>o</sup>. 8. Accordingly they met April 25. and made a most diligent Enquiry, and were not unwilling to have found some of the Country People guilty; but nothing further than what is above could be found. This Matter will appear best from their own Report which they make to the Council April last, which I have insert Appendix N<sup>o</sup>. 9. The Reader will observe that they take Notice of the Murder of Two Soldiers near

New-

Newmills, which I now come to give some Narrative of, as what made a great Noise at this Time.

And I shall give a candid and fair Account of it from Letters writ by good Hands, the rather that this was the only Thing which could give any Colour for charging those who did not conform with Murders and Assassination: It was carefully improven, and maliciously magnified, and laid upon Presbyterians most groundlessly. All sober Persons abominate the Fact; and as, I must own, 'tis uncertain who were the Actors, so after my utmost Enquiry into it, to me it seems to land upon a Tool and a Spy sent in among some who haunted field-meetings.

This Matter stood thus: Three Foot Soldiers of Captain Maitland's Company had been sent to quarter upon a Countryman near Lowdonhill, because he had not paid the Cels: They continued there near Ten Days; the Man in the House being sick, they were not altogether so outrageous as many of their Gang at this Time used to be. The Wife, or Woman Servant had during that Time threatned them, that if they left not the House they might come to repent it; but they were not much careful about that, and answered, they came by Orders, and behoved either to have their Errand, or Orders to go away. One of the Three went down to Newmills upon Saturday, and staid all Night, whether he was any way conscious to the Design, or only affrighted by the Warning, was not known. But upon Sabbath Morning April 20. Five Horsemen, and about as many Foot, came about Two of the Clock in the Morning, and rudely knocked at the Barn-door where the remaining Two Soldiers were lying. They taking it to be their Comrade come from Newmills, one of them rose in his Shirt, and opened the Door: He was saluted with reproachful Words, Come out you damn'd Rogues, and was shot thro' the Body, and fell down dead without speaking one Word. The other got up upon this, to put to the Door, and received a Shot in the Thigh from the same Hand. The Assassin alighted from his Horse, and came in upon the Soldier, who grappled a little with him, till another came up and knocked him down. He was perfectly dammish'd with the Stroke; and when he recovered his Senses, he thought it convenient to ly still in the Place as dead. The Murderers came into the Barn, and took away the Soldiers Arms and Clothes, and in a little went off.

1679.

Two Soldiers murdered near Lowdonhill,
April 20.

Circumstances of this Murder.

This Soldier lived till the Friday or Saturday after, and then died of his Wounds. The People of the House said, they knew nothing of the Matter: All the Account that could be had was from this second Soldier before his Death, and he declared what is above, and added, That, to the best of his Knowledge, the Person who shot was one John Scarlet; the rest he did not know, there being but little Light, and he in a Confusion. This Scarlet was a notorious Rogue, a Tinker by Trade, and had Six or Seven Women whom he termed his Wives, who went about the Country with him. Two or Three Years before this, he had been taken, and gifted to be a new Levy to some French Captain, and procured a Mutiny in the Ship, and got off. After this he was in the Army, and several Accounts bear, that he was in that Party before spoke of, commanded by Captain Carstairs, when Garret was wounded. Last Harvest he was in Home's Troop, and was cashiered for some Misdemeanour, or, as some at that Time thought, dismissed upon some Design: For a Month before this, he had been in the Shire of Air, and was lately in Kilmarwers, in a Change-house, a Night or two, with Three of his Wives.

Probably committed by one
Scarlet, a profligate fellow, and a Spy.

And, that I may give all I know of this Villain, it seems he was after this taken, or offered himself as an Evidence; for by the Justiciary Record, I find, May 12. this Year, 'John Scarlet Tinker, being examined by the Lords of Justiciary, declares, That, in Summer 1674. the Declarant did take on to serve with Mr. John Welsh, and was to have Twelve Pounds in the Half-year, and Clothes; that he had a Horse from him, with a Sword and Pistols, upon which he rode; and that he was but with him a Fortnight, and there were in Company one Bell, and Sutherland, and some others, who still had Swords and Pistols. Declares he cannot write.' Signed, G. Mackenzie, Tho. Wallace, James Fowles, David Balfour, Roger Hog.

Some further Account of this
Scarlet.

There is no more about him in the Registers: Only I find, in one of the Prints anent the Bishop of St. Andrews's Death, that in June he was arraigned for his treasonable Crime of assisting and guarding a declared Traitor: But as the Justiciary made nothing of his being Fourteen Days or thereby riding with Mr. Welsh, who probably, seeing his Looseness, dismissed him; so this is a very slender Ground to make him of Mr. Welsh's Guard, and far less will it be a Proof that afterwards he might not serve under Carstairs, or at this Time that he might not be made use of for a Tool.

I have Ground to think, that the Managers were not ignorant of what the Soldier had declared about him, since the Gentlemen of the Shire of Air, as we shall hear, sent in my Lord Cochran and others to Edinburgh upon this Incident; and the Letter from which the above Account is given, was writ by a very worthy Person in my Lord's Family, and, no doubt, but the Matter in it was communicate to the Council: So that I cannot help jealousing, that this Villain Scarlet, on whom no Punishment was inflicted at Edinburgh, that I can hear of, hath been of design dismissed from the Army, to mix himself with some others of another Character, and put them to Extremities.

Indeed

1679.

Indeed I find it alledged, That, at this Time, this Rascal came and joyned himself with some others in Arms, who were a kind of Guard to Mr. R. Cameron, who preached in the Fields: Whether it was so, or not, I cannot affirm; but this Report was certainly the Ground upon which these who haunted Field-meetings, and particularly Robert Hamilton, and some others who rode in Arms, were loaded with this barbarous Murder. Be who they will who committed it, from this fair and just Account I have given from Letters writ at this Time, it appears to have been a villainous Act, and that Scarlet was the Actor, and that suffering Presbyterians cannot be charged with it. Indeed all good Men must lothe such a Wickedness.

The Heritors of the Shire of Air their Application to the Council on this Incident.

This falling out in the Shire of Air, where a Handle had been taken from Things less clamant than this, last Year, to harass and depopulate that Country; and the Noblemen and Gentlemen there detesting such Villanies, they met at Air upon the 28 of April, agreed upon, and by Three of their Number sent in the following Letter to the Council, which, I am well informed, was designed both to exoner themselves, and to be a Preamble to an intended Address to the King, for some Relief to their Burdens, and further Liberty to Presbyterians.

My Lords,
The Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Heritors of the Shire of Air, underscribing, being met here this Day, by the Knowledge and Allowance of several of the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having heard of an horrid Murder committed upon the Person of one of his Majesty's Soldiers, and the wounding of another, upon the Borders of this Shire, as also of some armed Field-meetings of some Numbers of the Commonalty, sometimes in one Place, and sometimes in another, upon the Confines of this and other neighbouring Shires, occasioned by a few unsound, turbulent, and hot-headed Preachers, most part whereof were never Ministers of the Church of Scotland, making it their Work to draw People to Separation and Schism from pure Ordinances, and insil in them the Seeds of Rebellion, by their Informations, Exhortations, and Doctrine, as we are informed: We, in the Sense of our Duty to Authority and Religion, and the Peace and Quiet of this Kingdom, have thought it fit and incumbent upon us, in all Humility, to signify to your Lordships our Detestation of, and Dissatisfaction with these horrid and dangerous Courses; and we shall endeavour not to be wanting, in our Capacities and Stations, in any Thing that becomes good Christians and loyal Subjects. And that we may not be further troublefom, the Earl of Lowdon, Lord Cochran, and Sir John Cochran, will give a fuller Account of the Matter of Fact, which we humbly intreat may be communicated to the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, from,

My Lords,
Your, &c.

Observations on the Doctrine preached by some Field-preachers.

It is very certain, that, about this Time, Matters were running to sad Heights among the armed Followers of some of the Field-meetings. Whether the Information here as to their Doctrine was true, I do not know; but, as far as I can learn, there was yet no disowning the King's Authority, tho' it was some of these the Gentlemen point at, who afterwards did come this length: And, until this Spring, nothing of unsafe Doctrine could be at all charged upon Field-preachers, and it was but some few run this way either. Indeed Separation and Schism from the Indulged, was now violently inculcate: And at one of the Meetings this Month, the Letters before me bear, That Robert Hamilton spake publicly to the People, and discharged any Hearers of the Indulged, any Banders, or Payers of Cess, to joyn with them, or bring any Arms with them. One of them cried out, We are all almost Cess-men; and, after some Confusion among them, Mr. Richard Cameron, who preached that Day, settled the Matter, by telling Mr. Hamilton, That it would be impossible to purge the Meeting that Day: Yea, some of them did openly threaten, they would insult the indulged Ministers, if they met with them; upon which some of these found it needful to retire from their Houses.

The Country
People miserably distempered and rankled.

These Things did miserably distract and distemper some of the common People in the Places where they haunted most, and this same Spirit, as we shall hear, perfectly broke the People who met together before Bothwell; and indeed the Imposition and violent Exaction of the Cess, and Carriage of the Soldiers through the Winter and Spring, mightily rankled Peoples Spirits. However, there was no formed Rising till June.

Some further Hints from the Registers.

Having thus candidly given an Account of the State of Things during the Beginning of this Year, I shall now end this Section with some few Hints from the Council Registers, April 3. The Council being informed, that Andrew Kirkaldy at the South-ferry of Dundee, his Wife, and several other Persons about that Place, are guilty of deforcing a Party that were appointed to transport the Person of Mr. Walter Denoon from Sheriff to Sheriff, till he came to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, the Sheriff-deputes of Fife are ordered to call them before ‘ before them.’ Mr. Denoon was a worthy Presbyterian Minister in the North, and I have no further about him.

Next Day a Letter is read in Council from his Majesty, “ Thanking them for their Care of the Peace of the Highlands, and approving all they had done, particularly the prudent Management of the Earl of Argyle, and allowing them to make use of the Army for further suppressing of Disorders there.” And upon the Twelfth the Council grant a Commission to the Earl of Argyle for the further securing the Highlands. “ Whereas upon the Discovery of a horrid Plot in England, all Papists were ordered to be disarmed : But the Lord Macdonald, and several Gentlemen of the Name of Macleans, have disobeyed several Missives of the Council to disarm themselves, and compare at Edinburgh, therefore the Council grant Commission to Archibald Earl of Argyle, to disarm and reduce the said Lord Macdonald, Keppoch, Macleans of Torlaisb, Macleans of Ardgower, and Macleans of Borlois, or any others suspect of Poper.”

Upon the 4th of April, the Council approve the Report of the Committee for publick Affairs, “ That Andrew Kinnier, an intercommuned Person, now a Prisoner, be proceeded ; that the Horse taken with him be kept by the Soldier who took him ; that he be fined in 500 Pounds, and the Horse Price allowed in the Fine : That whereas Mr. Thomas Ramsay, Minister at Mordingtoun, connived at in preaching there, hath permitted several vagrant Preachers to preach in his Pulpit, and that several other indulged Ministers have done the same, that the said Mr. Ramsay, and others guilty, be proceeded for the same, and turned out ; that William Douglas of Mortoun be joyned as Depute in the Shires of Dumfries and Annandale.”

The Council, April 12. nominate a Committee to meet in Time of Vacance, and upon emergent Occasions to give Orders to Magistrates, and the Officers of the Army, and secure suspect Persons. They are, “ The Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, the Earls of Murray, Linlithgow, and Strathmore, the Bishop of Galloway, Lord Elphinston, Treasurer-depute, Register, Advocate, Lords Collintoun and Maitland, the Lairds of Lundin and Tarbet, or any Three of them : With Power to issue such Orders as they think fit, for executing the Laws as to the publick Peace, and particularly those against Conventicles, and other Disorders, with Power to call before the Council or themselves, noted Delinquents, secure their Persons, examine Witnesses and Parties upon Oath, pronounce Sentences and Decrees against guilty Persons, and give what Orders they shall find needful to Sheriffs, Magistrates and Officers of the Forces, and generally to do every Thing for the publick Peace; with Power to nominate a Committee of themselves by Turns to perform what is committed to them, with full Power to call the Council, and to issue out Orders for discovering any Powder or Lead lately brought into the Kingdom.” Remarks have been made before upon such Committees as this ; and their Quorum of Three being impowered to sub-commit such Powers as they are vested with, is perfectly unaccountable.

After the Report of the abovenamed Committee at Lanerk, May 1. the Council being alarmed with the Accounts brought them of the armed Field-meeters, pass the following Act. “ The Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council considering, that it is notour, that there is a Party who continue in Arms, and follow Welsh, Cameron, and some other of their Accomplishes, at their several Field-conventicles, do therefore give Warrant to the Earl of Linlithgow, Major-general, and Commander in Chief of his Majesty’s Forces, to order a commanded Party of his Majesty’s Forces, Horse, Foot, and Dragoons, to prosecute and follow that Party, into whatsoever Place Welsh, Cameron, Kid, or Douglas keep their Field-conventicles, or any other whom that standing Party follows ; with Power to the Commander of that Party to give Money for Intelligence where those Conventicles are appointed, that thereby they may be able to seize and apprehend such as shall be found at the said Conventicles ; and in case of Resistance, to pursue them to the Death ; declaring the said Officers and Soldiers shall not be called in question therefore civilly or criminally. And recommend it to the Earl of Linlithgow to muster his Majesty’s Forces, and see they be full and ready for Action.” The Executions of these Orders, as we shall hear, gave the Beginning to the Rising in June.

I shall only further observe, April 3. William Carmichael, Sheriff-depute of Fife, is appointed by the Council to proceed against Persons guilty of Conventicles and such Disorders, in the Parishes of Kinross, Orwal, and Cleish. It was this violent Man’s oppressing the Country thereabout, which provoked several Persons to essay to put a Stop to his Extravagancies ; and missing him, they fell upon the Archbishop of St. Andrews. This remarkable Incident is the Subject of 1679.

Council’s Diligence to secure the Peace of the Highlands, with their Commission to the Earl of Argyle to disarm Papists.

Andrew Kinnier fined in 500 lib.

Indulged Ministers to be proceeded for admitting vagrant Preachers in their Pulpits.

Nomination of a Committee for publick Affairs with their Powers.

Act of Council May 1 impowering the Army to pursue Field-meeters to Death.

William Carmichael impowered to harass several Places in Fife.

1679.

S E C T. III.

Of the violent Death of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Saturday, May 3. 1679.

Necessity of a just Account of the Arch-
bishop's Murder.

THe violent taking away of the Life of that bitter Persecutor Mr. James Sharp, at this Time Archbishop of St. Andrews, is a Subject not a little misrepresented by Tory Writers, and what was the Occasion of much Reproach to, and Persecution of Presbyterians; I cannot therefore pass it altogether, but shall endeavour an impartial and just Account of Matters of Fact relative to it, not with any Design to vindicate the Action, Actors, or Circumstances of it, which I freely own I do not approve, and, as much as any, do heartily abhor all Assassinations, with the Principles which lead thereunto; but only to let my Readers into a just View how this Matter really stood, which, as far as I have seen, hath not been yet done, and this is my Work as an Historian.

It was gone into suddenly, and without a ny foregoing Design.

This bloody and perfidious Man was cut off, and came to this fatal Exit by no premeditated and formed Design; but Circumstances offering an Occasion, it was very suddenly given into: And however this Prelate, in the Opinion of many, deserved such a Fate as Laud the Archbishop of Canterbury met with at London, if Justice had got its free Course; yet as the Actors had no Power of the Sword, nor were in any publick judicative Capacity, so whatever be talked and writ of former Lists of Persons who were to be killed, and Enquiries the Night before about him, yet I am well assured the People concerned had not the least View of this, or any Design this way, till the Accounts of his being near them were brought to them.

None of the Persons actively concerned in this Matter were ever reached.

And tho' it does not vindicate the Fact at all, yet it deserves Notice, That after the most diligent and exact Search, and the most fervent Endeavours to come at the Actors, yet none who had any active Share in this Matter were ever apprehended. The four Men executed on this Score at Magus-muir, as we shall hear, were no wise concerned in this Murder, and the Laird of Rathillet was indeed taken and executed; but tho' he was present, he peremptorily declined acting in the Affair. Andrew Guillan was likewise present, but was not at all active.

The Body of Presbyterians
through Scotland, no way
Sharers in this Fact.

It is without the least Shadow of Reason that the Fact is charged upon the Body of Presbyterians, who neither knew any Thing of the Matter till it was over, nor reckoned themselves bound to approve of it when done. 'Tis very true some of them under their heavy Sufferings, refused to declare it a Murder, and gave Reasons for their so doing, which want not their own Weight; and tho' they had less than they really had, in such Circumstances and under such Pressures, yet this will never, to any judicious Person, fix the Charge upon the Generality of suffering People and Presbyterians, which their spiteful Accusers draw from it.

Remarks upon
some Sufferers their refusing to condemn this Fact peremptorily.

The Matter is evident, Multitudes of Cases fall in, wherein Persons may be very clear as to what they would do in their own Practice, and yet not knowing all Circumstances, they neither will nor can peremptorily judge of the Practice of others: And in the general 'tis plain, there are Cases wherein a Person may have such Evidences of the Lawfulness of, and Reasons for doing a Thing, which may be sufficient to himself, and, if known to others, for his Justification; and yet both in their Nature and Circumstances these may be unknown, yea, incommunicable to another. I do not say this was the Case here; but I say the Reflection upon this appeared a strong Reason to many, not peremptorily to declare themselves upon this Head. And in such Circumstances, a Person who is really tender as to what he does and says in publick, may be at a Stand, and refuse positively to condemn even a Thing he does not approve, yea, he must judge it the safest Course to leave the Determination to that Day when the Secrets of all Hearts shall be revealed, and to judge nothing before the Time. But after all, by far the greater, and the most knowing Part of Presbyterians, yea, of Sufferers, did disapprove of the Action, and yet humbly adored the Righteousness of the LORD's Way with this ill Man.

The Bishop's Dream fulfilled in the Manner of his Death.

I have formerly waved a Character of him, and by this Time the Reader will be in Case, from the Matters of Fact narrated, to form one for himself. I shall only here remark, that in the Manner of his Death, the Bishop's Dream, while at the University, which was known and generally spoke of many Years before this Incident, was very plainly accomplished, as the former Steps of his Life had fulfilled some other Branches of it.

By this Death several Projects for new Violences against the Sufferers were broken.

By his Death itself, new and cruel Projects were disappointed, which had been formed against Presbyterians. We shall afterwards find that the last Thing he did in Council was the voting and pushing a very violent Proclamation upon the First of May; and upon Tuesday the 6 of May he was to have taken Journey to Court, to have made his Representations there, and used his Interest for more vigorous and cruel Methods against the Sufferers. When

When Saul was breathing out Cruelty, he was converted ; but this Apostate went to his Place.

Having premised these Things, I come now to give a short Narration of the Matter of Fact, as it appears to me from several Papers before me, writ at this Time, from a Narration of it a Person of very good Sense and Credit had from the Mouths of some who were present, and a pretty large Account under the Hand of one of the Actors ; and I hope it will be the fullest, as well as the fairest that hath been yet given.

Last Year, and the Beginning of this, the Shire of Fife had been mightily harassed and persecuted. The Primate was much fretted to have Field-meetings just under his Nose, and Presbyterian Ministers and People lurking so near him, and sometimes appearing just under his Eye. Besides the Sheriffs their Deputes, and others appointed by Law, to look after Conventicles up and down the Country, the Prelates in many Places got others joyned to them, with equal Powers from the Council, or some Counsellors, especially if the Executors of the Law were less cruel, and any way moderate in their Temper, and where the Presbyterian Way was recovering Ground.

No doubt the Archbishop would not fail to cast a Pattern to others in the Shire of Fife. Accordingly by a Commission from Council, as we have seen, William Carmichael a bankrupt Merchant, and once a Bailie in Edinburgh, is impowered in that Shire, to seek for and persecute all Nonconformists and intercommuned Persons ; this he owed intirely to the Primate, who, as a Privy Counsellor, added Instructions and Powers to summon, fine, imprison, poynd, spulie, and unlaw all who absented from the Church, and were at House or Field-conventicles.

This Man is said to have spent any Thing he had of his own in riotous Living, and greedily enough embraced this Post for a Livelihood, and continued, while in it, most profane and profligate : This qualified him the better to be a Tool for carrying on the Archbishop's Designs ; and not satisfied with going the Length of his Fellows in that Work and the Council's Commission, he went much further, as the best Way to make up his broken Fortune, and recommend himself to his Patron.

It would be endless to narrate all his Cruelties and Oppressions. Besides his apprehending, fining and imprisoning Multitudes, and poynding, harassing and plundering them, it was his Custom to seize Servants, and put fiery Matches betwixt their Fingers, and torture them many various Ways, till they should discover where their Masters were, or any Thing belonging to them ; frequently also he used to beat and abuse Women and Children to make them inform against their Husbands and Parents. Innumerable more Cruelties and Violences are charged upon him, besides Rapes, Adulteries, and other abominable Wickednesses in Informations before me.

And Matters now stood so, that no legal Method of Redress from such Hardships could be expected : All Doors were shut ; and this heavy Oppression put People upon Measures they would have been perfectly averse to, under a limited and well regulate Government ; therefore several of the Wanderers of this Shire, who were hiding the best way they could, and keeping together in Dozens and half Dozens in Arms, where they might, having their Spirits fretted with their own Hazard and Harassings, together with the heavy Circumstances of their Families and Friends from this merciless Persecutor, resolved, if possible, to rid themselves of him, at least to fright and threaten him, so as they hoped he should leave Fife, and they be freed of him, and for this Purpose fixed upon the Third Day of May, when, as they were informed, he was to be at the Hunting.

Mean while Bishop sharp had been some Days in Edinburgh, putting Things in order for his going up to Court : He had, upon the First of May, got the Proclamation anent Arms (published May 14.) passed in Council with some Struggle ; and May 2. in the Afternoon, he went over the Firth, and came to Captain Seton's House in Kennoway, where he lodged all Night. If any Body came that Night to Kennoway enquiring about him, as the printed Accounts by the Prelatick Party say, I am assured it was none of the People who fell in with him to Morrow. May 3. he went homeward to St. Andrews, and took Ceres in his Way, stopped there, and smoked a Pipe with the Episcopal Incumbent.

The Persons before spoken of, Nine in Number, some of whom were Gentlemen of good Families, being fond of a Meeting with Carmichael, came abroad pretty early upon the Saturday Morning, and traversed the Fields up and down, searched the Hills above Ceres, and some other Places, for some Hours, but did not find him. The Reason of their not finding him, as the above Accounts bear, was, that when Carmichael came out to his hunting about Scotstarbet, a Shepherd there about advised the Bailie to go home, for some Gentlemen had been enquiring about him, at him, and were very desirous to meet with him ; And Carmichael, not without some Fear, returning from his Sport, went homeward.

They continued searching till near the Middle of the Day, and by this Time they were come about a Mile to the Eastward of Ceres ; and being wearied, and beginning to despair of meeting with Carmichael, they were just talking together of parting and quitting their Project, when a Boy, a Servant of

H

1679:

Narrative of this fact.

The Persecution in Fife very severe last Year and this.

Wherein William Carmichael hath a great Share.

Some Instances of his Cruelty and Barbarity.

All Redress being unobtainable, these Persons upon their hiding resolved to rid themselves of him.

Mean while the Archbishop comes to Edinburgh, and is May 3. going from Ceres to his own House.

The above specified Persons come in quest of Carmichael, but miss him.

When just parting, a Boy brings them notice the Archbishop is going to his house.

and 1679.

Which surprised them.

and informed them, that the Archbishop's Coach was in Ceres, and within a little to come up towards Plebshole, not far from them.

This, as some of them in their Accounts say, did very much surprize them; and raised many Thoughts of Heart; the Incident was so odd, that just when parting, and giving over their Search for the Servant, the Matter should fall into their Hands; that when they had missed the Enemy they were looking for, their Arch-enemy and Fountain of all their Wo should fall in their Way.

In their Reasoning, what to do, Hackstoun of Rathillet unclear to kill the Bishop :

One of them said, It seems he is delivered into our Hands, and proposed they should cut him off, having such an Occasion. Mr. Hackstoun of Rathillet opposed the Motion, as being a Matter of Blood, and, as he thought, of the last Consequence to this Nation and Church, and what required more Deliberation by far. But what he very strongly urged was not of Weight enough to stop them from the Attempt. I find some Accounts add, that, after reasoning upon this Head, one of them prayed for Conduct and Direction; and after that Rathillet told them, though for what he saw, they seemed to be clear to go on, yet he was not at all satisfied in his own Mind anent it. However the rest went forward in their Design, and he would not part with them.

And declining to head them, another is chosen.

In their going towards the Coach, one of the Company proposed that some one should take the Leading and Command of the rest, and that they should exactly obey his Orders whatever fell out, and Rathillet, notwithstanding his Opposition, was generally named, but he told them there had been a Difference betwixt the Archbishop and him in a civil Process, wherein he reckoned he was wronged by the Primate; and tho' in any other Case he would not refuse to do them all the Service he could, yet by no Means could he at all act in this Matter; and he was of Opinion, that it was very improper, tho' he could joyn with them, that he should command them, since it would give the World Ground to say, that what they did, was from personal Pique and Revenge, which he protested he was free of. They all declared their having no personal Grudge at the Man, but at his Way and Practice, and so chose another of their Number to be their Leader.

They come up with the Bishop's Coach, * swift.

By this Time they were come to a little Village about Two Miles from St. Andrews, called Magus, near to which they descried the Bishop's Coach; whereupon one of them, upon a fleet Horse, rode up to the Coach, to see if the Bishop was in it. The Bishop noticing him, cried out to the Coachman to drive. The Gentleman hearing this, cast his Cloke from him, and pursued at full Speed; the rest did the like, and came up as fast as they could; only the Person who had the Debate with the Bishop kept at some Distance, and did not at all engage in the Action.

and stop it.

While pursuing a little this way in Magus-muir, one of the Bishop's Servants, named Wallace, turned upon them, and cocked his Piece; but Two of them coming up, soon dismounted him, and took his Carbine from him. Mean while, as the Coach drove furiously away, they shot their Musquets at it, but could not stop it, till the Person upon the fleet Horse came up to the Coach, crying out, Judas, be taken. The Primate called the more violently to the Coachman, Drive, drive, drive. The Coachman kept off the Gentleman's Horse from him with his Whip; but he came up with the Postillion, and called him to stop; and he driving on, he struck him over the Head with a Sword, and dismounted him, and straightway cutted the Traces of the Coach, and stopped it.

and discharge their Pieces upon the Bishop.

By this Time the rest were come up, and found the Bishop and his Daughter in the Coach. The Captain ordered him to come out, that no Prejudice might befall his Daughter, whom they would not willingly hurt. This he refused; whereupon Two of them, the rest being taken up in dismounting and securing the Servants, poured in their Shot on the Bishop's Body, his Daughter shrieking and weeping most bitterly, and were mounting their Horses to go off, assuring themselves he was killed. But one of them heard his Daughter say within a little, O! there is Life in yet; upon which he got again to the Coach, and called the Captain, and the others, who found the Bishop safe and whole, not in the least touched.

They come into the Bishop out of the Coach, with the Discourse which passed twixt him and
them.

Whereupon the Captain commanded him to come out, and some Discourse passed 'twixt them, which I shall set down, as left under the Hands of some who were present. While the Bishop lingered, and cried for Mercy, the Commander said, 'I take GOD to witness, whose Cause I desire to own in adhering to the persecuted Gospel, that it is not out of any Hatred of your Person, nor from any Prejudice you have done or could do to me, that I intend now to take your Life, but because you have been, and still continues to be an avowed Opposer of the Gospel and Kingdom of Christ, and a Murderer of his Saints, whose Blood you have shed like Water.' Another of them said, 'Repent, Judas, and come out.' All the Bishop answered was, 'Gentlemen, save my Life, and I will save yours.' The first replied, 'I know it is not in your Power either to save us, or to kill us; I again declare, 'It is not any particular Feud or Quarrel I have at you, which moves me to this Attempt, but because you are an Enemy to Christ and his Interest, and have wrung your Hands in the Blood of his Saints, not only after Pentland, but several Times since, and particularly for your Perjury, and shedding the Blood of Mr. James Mitchel, and having a Hand in the Death of James Learmont, and your perfidious betraying of the Church of Scotland: These

Crimes,

Crimes; added he, and that Blood cry with a loud Voice to Heaven for Vengeance, and we are this Day to execute it. And again he ordered him to come out, and prepare for Death, Judgment, and Eternity. The Bishop still refused, and cried for Mercy, and offered him Money to spare his Life. The Captain said, Thy Money perish with thee, and told him, he allowed him Time to pray, and commanded him again to come out. The Bishop still refused. One of the Company, at some Distance, cried, 'Seeing there have been so many Lives unjustly taken by him, for which there is not the least Sign of Repentance, we will not be innocent, if any more be taken that way.'

1679.

Then one of them fired a Pistol at him in the Coach, which it seems did not touch him, and another wounded him with a Sword; at which the Bishop cried out, Fy, fy, I am gone: Yet the Wound was not mortal. And being again called to come out of the Coach, he said, I am gone already, what needs more? Then they stepped near him, to pull him out; upon which he cried, I know ye will save my Life, I will come out; and accordingly came out. And being again pressed to pray, he fell upon his Knees before the Captain, and said, For GOD's sake, save my Life, save my Life; offering him Money, and promising to lay down his Episcopal Function. The Commander told him, he had been without Mercy, and needed expect no Mercy, and he could not spare his Life, and again pressed him to prepare for Death, and pray. One of these present, Andrew Gullan, told my Informer, That they were stunned to see his Carriage, and that by no means would he be prevailed with to pray; and another observes, That they were mightily surpris'd at his Obdurateness, and that there was not the least Sign of Concern about him as yet. This Andrew was present, and did not touch him, but endeavoured to secure his Daughter from Hurt and Danger, when she would interpose 'twixt the Actors and him.

They forced him out of the Coach, with what then passed.

Instead of offering to pray, he, seeing Rathillet at some little Distance, crept towards him on his Hands and Feet, and cried, Sir, I know you are a Gentleman, you will protect me. Mr. Hackstoun answered, Sir, I shall never lay a Hand on you; and rode a little off, for all this Time he did not alight.

The Bishop finding this Art to fail him, turned to them, and begged they might save the Life of an old Man, and promised he would obtain them a Remission, it being capital to attempt the Life of a Privy Counsellor. The Captain warned him, that they would not spare him longer; if he did not address GOD presently, they knew what to do. The Bishop's Courage still continued, and he proposed some new Desire; upon which they discharged another Shower of Shot upon him, whereupon he fell back, and lay as dead.

But one of them giving him a Prick with his Sword, he raised himself; then they began to imagine Shooting would not do, and the Commander ordered them all to draw their Swords. Andrew Gullan's Expression to my Informer is, That, upon the Sight of cold Iron, immediately his Courage failed; and tho' before he still insisted in his Petitions, and seemed not to regard their Warnings much, yet now he made hideous and terrible Shrieks as ever were heard.

The Commander seeing no Warnings would prevail with him to go about any Thing like Preparation for Death, with a Shabble struck him on the Face, and one of his Chops fell down: He essayed to speak somewhat, but was not understood. They redoubled their Strokes, and wounded him in several Places, and killed him outright.

At length they kill him.

After the Bishop was killed, the Captain received any Arms which the Servants had, who were Five, Two Riders, a Footman, the Coachman, and Postillion. He ordered them to deliver all their Papers; they said, they had none: Then he went to the Coach, and got a little Trunk, and finding nothing in it but Hoods and Clothes belonging to the Bishop's Daughter, it was set in again. He found another little Box with Papers, which he seized. In a Trunk upon the Coach he found a few more Papers, and a large Bible full of fine Cuts, and the Pictures of Christ and the New Testament Saints, and some Passages of the History of the Bible in Taliduce, and a Case of very fine French Pistols, all which they took. The rest of the Trunk contained Clothes and Furniture, which they did not touch, taking nothing but Papers and Arms.

and take nothing with them, but Arms and Papers.

In the Bishop's Pockets they found neither Silver nor Gold, but only some Letters and Papers, and a Whinger with Silver Roves, and Knives conform. Several of the forementioned Accounts bear, that they found on the Bishop a Box with some Pistol-ball, Threads of Worsted, and other odd Things in it, which they knew not what to make of.

This is all I have met with as to the material Circumstances of this Fact, and I have given it as I found it in Papers which are writ by Persons present, who only indeed could give Accounts of this Matter; and they agree, as far as I can learn, with the Accounts which went up and down after the Murder was committed. All this took up about Three Quarters of an Hour about Mid-day, 'twixt Twelve and one of the Clock, Saturday May 3. this Year.

Things found on the Bishop.

As they went off, they met a Man very well mounted, and asking him what he was, he answered, One of my Lord St. Andrew's Servants, whom, it seems, the Bishop had sent off to pay his Respects to some Persons about: They dismounted him, took his Arms from him, and After dismounting and disarming the Bishop's Servants, the Actors so drove off.

1679.

and, without being discovered, continue together till Night.

What Papers they found with the Bishop.

At Night they separated, and shift for themselves the best way they could.

Narrative of this Matter, published by Authors.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 10.

Remarks upon some other Accounts of it.
One by D. M.

A true Relation, &c.

An Answer to it.

Remarks upon the Account of this as it stands in the Spirit of Popery.

Names of the Actors.

drove away his Horse to shift for himself, as they had formerly done to the other Two riding Servants, and thus rode away in a Body to a Place Three or Four Miles distant from Magus-muir, where this Action was done.

The Actors in this bloody Tragedy could not but wonder at their own Preservation, and that, when this Fact was a doing in the open Fields, at the Height of the Day, in this Season of the Year, and so many Pieces discharged, they were neither interrupted or discovered; and this was the more strange to them, that there were Soldiers lying upon every Hand of them, in Largo, Balchrissie, Ladernie and Corepar, all within a very few Miles of the Place, beside Parties of Troopers continually ranging up and down the Shire; and yet they got off without Observation, and continued together till Night, looking over the Papers they had got.

Among the Papers they found, these are the most considerable. A Gift of Nonentries of several Gentlemens Estates in Fife, and elsewhere, to Alexander Lesly of Kinninvie, with Instructions and Informations how to prosecute, in order to the Exile of the Lands, the Patent of the Bishoprick of Dunkeld, in favours of Mr. Andrew Bruce Archdeacon of St. Andrews, several Presentations to Churches whereof the King is Patron, Instructions to conjunct Deputies, and new Gifts of the Heritors Fines, a Paper about Popery, whereof a full Account could not be given when the Information whence I take this was writ, several Misfives, and other Papers of no Consequence.

After they had lookt through the Papers, they continued together in the foresaid House till the Evening, and then separated, and every one shifted for himself the best way he might. This is the best Account I can give of this Matter; and in the Matters of Fact there is a Concurrence of Two or Three Accounts I have seen, none of which that I know of have been printed, and therefore I have given them at the more Length.

They are indeed all upon one Side; and therefore, in a Matter of this Nature, which only can be fully known by balanced Accounts of both Sides, I think it but fair the Reader should see what is said upon the other Side. As far as I have noticed what is printed, there is no very great Difference as to Matters of Fact; there is indeed considerable Difference as to the Carriage and Character of the Bishop. The written Accounts I have made use of, represent him as most averse to prepare for Death, and the printed Accounts represent him as a Saint. It is my Business to give Matter of Fact as I find it; and therefore, that the Reader may have the other Side of the Story, I have insert, Appendix N<sup>o</sup>. 10. an Account of this Matter, published by Authority and Order of the Privy Council. The former Accounts are taken from the Actors Papers and Relations, and this from the Bishop's Daughter and Servants, and I shall make no Reflections on it; only, the Matters of Fact formerly related in this History, and the known Tenor of the Primate's Actings, give no Foundation for such a Character as the Bishop gets in this Paper.

Some other Accounts of this Matter I have seen, which I shall very shortly pass. One was printed at London, a few Days after this Fact was done, for D. M. which is the flattest and most insipid Account I ever almost saw of any Thing, and it deserves no further Notice. Another Account was published about the same Time, intituled, A true Relation of what has been discovered concerning the Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews: Wherein this Murder is lodged upon Rathillet, and his Brother in Law John Balfour of Kinloch; and these Two Persons are represented to have been wronged by the Primate in some civil Affairs, and to have murdered him in Pique. This Paper was answered by another, intituled, A clear Discovery of the Falshoods of the former, wherein indeed the Matters of Fact advanced in the former seem plainly enough overturned; but when this is done, very little Light is brought to this Matter, and therefore I say no more of it: Only it appears to me undeniable, that Rathillet was not actively concerned in this Matter. And as to John Balfour, tho' it be true what is in this Paper asserted, That he had withdrawn from Ordinances for many Years, and was very active about Field-conventicles; yet a Person's doing so will neither make him a Saint, nor make the People he joyns himself to, chargeable with every Thing he does: And I cannot find that this Gentleman had ever any great Character for Religion among those that knew him; and such were the Accounts of him when abroad, that the reverend Ministers of the Scots Congregation at Rotterdam would never allow him to communicate with them. Indeed upon him I find this Action is generally and principally lodged.

A third Account of this Matter I find in that virulent Pamphlet formerly spoken of, intituled, The Spirit of Popery speaking out of the Mouths of phanatical Protestants, Lond. 1680. This Writer hath little of Fact, but what is taken out of the Council's Narrative: He adds the Certificate of a Physician and Three Chirurgeons, who inspected the Bishop's Body, to prove they found one Wound below the right Clavicle by a Shot; and in the same Certificate they declare, they found Three Wounds in his left Hand, which might have proved mortal, tho' he had had no other. I am so ill a Physician, as not to understand how a Wound in the Hand in itself can be mortal. He adds the Names of the Murderers in red Letters, John Balfour of Kinloch, David Hackstoun of Rathillet, George Balfour in Gilstoun, James Russel in Kings-kettle, Robert Dingwall a Farmer's Son in Caddam, Andrew Guilian Guillan Weaver in Balmerinock, Alexander Henderson and Andrew Henderson Sons to John Henderson in Kilbrachmont, George Fleming Son to George Fleming in Balboothy. As far as I can learn, Andrew Guillan was only called by the Actors to look to their Horses, or some such Thing, but was not active, tho' present at the Action. Two Hendersons were afterwards imprisoned 1682. on this account, and let go. How many other Mistakes are in this List, I know not: Indeed this Writer hath too many false Facts and Blunders for me to follow; neither shall I consider what he pretends to bring to vindicate this Fact from Presbyterian Writers, Knox, Naphthali, Jus populi vindicatum, since none of his Citations came at all up to this Case. What follows in point of History, anent the Highland Host, the Murder at Lowdon-hill, and Major Johnstoun, is false, and his Misrepresentations are already taken off in the former Part of this History.

1679.

The last Account of the Bishop's Death I have met with in Print, is in the Caveat for the Whigs, Lond. 1711. Part I. p. 57. wherein all the spiteful Lies any where published seem to be cast together. It would be tedious to go through the Mistakes of this ill-natured and malicious Author in this Matter. What he talks of Lists of Persons to be murdered, handed about, with the Archbishop on the Head of them, of the relenting of the Assassins, their trampling his Daughter, and many other Things, are unknown to such who were present. The Remounter was certainly undesign'd, till they got Notice of the Bishop's coming that Way; and they were so far from being stirred up by Field-preachers to it, that they themselves had no Thought about it till the Hour in which it was done. The Christian Temper of the Primate at his Death, which this Writer harangues on, is very peremptorily denied by such as were present, as we have seen; and I very much jealous of those religious Expressions are made for him.

Remarks on the Account given by the Author of the Caveat for the Whigs.

Thus on both Hands I have laid this Affair before the Reader, from what I have seen in Manuscript and Print relative thereunto; and tho' many Remarks might be made upon the Whole, yet I shall confine my self to one or two, which are properly historical.

One is, That as none of the real Actors were taken, so, when the Murder was over, they came out of Fife for their own Safety, and joyned themselves to these who attended these Field-preachers who set up against the Cess and Indulgence, of whom before; from which the English Papers, yea, the Narratives of the after Acts of Council, as we shall hear, load the Rulers at Bothwell with being Art and Part in this Action. I do not question but several of them were at Bothwell for their own Safety; but it is very ill Reasoning, and unfair, to lodge this Fact upon the whole Party, when perhaps not one of a Thousand knew them, or what they had done.

The Actors joyn themselves to the Preachers against the Indulgence.

Their being at Bothwell, for their own Safety, not chargeable on Presbyterians.

Another is, That this Incident of the Bishop's Murder became not only Matter of Reproach to the whole suffering Presbyterians, as Rathillet fairly insinuated to the Actors, tho' indeed the Calumny was groundless, as hath been noticed, but also the Occasion of very heavy Oppression and Persecution. The Prelates and Council took hold of it, as a Handle for prosecuting the cruel Designs the Primate was cut off from finishing. This was made use of as a Shibboleth for many Years, to vex poor innocent and ignorant Country People with, when seized: And so far is it from Truth which Lestly advanceth, Cassandra, N<sup>o</sup>. 2. p. 'That the worst of the Primate's Enemies had nothing to lay to his Charge but Episcopacy,' that he was generally lookt upon as a very ill Man; and the Impressions of his Wickedness, with some other Things before suggested, made not a few unwilling peremptorily to judge of this Action, which a great many others had Freedom enough to condemn as Murder. Several were executed as accessary to his Death, who were entirely free of it, and many others harassed upon that score, against all Law and Justice, as shall be noticed in the succeeding History.

This Incident made a Handle for severe and heavy Persecution.

Upon the Whole, tho' the most Part of good People in Scotland could not but observe and adore the holy and righteous Providence of GOD, in the Removal of this violent Persecutor and Spring of the most Part of the former Severities, at such a Juncture when just upon new and violent Projects, yet they could not approve of the Manner of taking him off, nor would they justify the Actors: And the known Stanza of that excellent Man, and, in his Time, good Poet, Sir David Lindsay of the Mount, upon Cardinal Beaton's Death, could not but come in Peoples Minds, as not unapplicable; with it I end this Section and Chapter.

A Stanza of Sir David Lindsay of the Mount, applied to the Bishop's Death.

As for this Cardinal, I grant
He was the Man we might well want,
God will forgive it soon:
But of a Truth, the Sooth to say,
Altho' the Lown be well away,
The Fact was foully done.

1679.

C H A P. II.

Of the Rising this Year in the West of Scotland, which ended by the Defeat at Bothwel-bridge, June 22. 1679.

The Necessity of a large Account of this Rising.

Am now come to the Rising in Arms in the West Country, May and June this Year, commonly called, from the Place of its fatal Issue, Bothwel-bridge. Here I reckon my self obliged to give as particular a Detail of Facts as my Materials will allow me. The larger Accounts are necessary, because it very much concerns the persecuted Party, that this Transaction be set in its due Light. No tolerable Narrative of it, as far as I have observed, hath been given to the Publick; and I hope when this Matter is fairly narrated, it will not appear so odious as some have represented it; and whatever Extremities may have been with some at this Rising in some Things, the Body of Presbyterians in Scotland are not chargeable with them.

Divisions ruined the Party who rose.

Indeed it was the Divisions and Heights run into by some who joyned in that Rising, contrary to the Inclinations of the better and greater Part, with the Indiscretion, Rashness, and ill Conduct, not to say Cowardice of Robert Hamilton, who took the Command upon him, which ruined that Design, and effectually broke all their Measures, much more than any Opposition which was or could be made by the King's Troops.

After their Defeat, much Severity follows upon Presbyterians.

And the terrible Handle made of this Rising by the Bishops and violent Party in the Government, in Severities, Circuits, and Oppression of all Presbyterians for many Years after it was over, appears a sufficient Ground for me to insist at more than ordinary Length, in giving the Account of this lamentable Story.

Summary of this Chapter.

Therefore upon this Chapter it will be necessary to give some Accounts of what succeeded the Death of the Archbishop, with the Procedure of the Managers, until the Beginning of this Rising; then the particular Occasions and Beginnings of it will come to be enquired into; next, the Narration of the lesser Rencounters at Drumclog and Glasgow will fall in: After which the State and Divisions of the West Country Army, till the Approach of the King's Army. And lastly, the Engagement itself at Bothwel-bridge, and in Hamiltoun Muir, where the West Country People were defeat, must be considered. These Things will take some little Room to go through, so as to give a fair Deduction of them, and afford Matter for the following Sections.

S E C T. I.

Of the Consequents of the Primate's Death, Procedure of the Council, and other Things until the End of May, 1679.

IN this Section I shall only give a few Instances how much the Incident of the Primate's Death was improven by the Managers, to harass a great many innocent People, with some Account of the Proclamations issued out during this Month, before the Rising at Rutherglen.

The Council meet upon the News of the Bishop's Death, May 4. Proclamation against the Murderers. App. N. 11. Remarks upon it.

As soon as the Accounts of this Attempt upon the Bishop came to Edinburgh, the Council met upon Sabbath, May 4. and took the Oaths of some of his Servants, and used all imaginable Care to discover the Actors. The Records have not the Depositions, but the Substance of them I take to be in the Narrative above insert. Expresses were dispatched to Court, and they published the Proclamation, which I have insert App. N. 11.

The Fervour the Council could not but be in upon the Representation made to them by the Bishop's Daughter and Servants, will be a Kind of Excuse for some Things in this Proclamation, which at another Time might deserve far more severe Reflections. All I observe upon it, shall be only, that a Handle was taken from every Incident, to rail at the whole of the persecuted Party, and then notice a few Things which even the present Circumstances cannot vindicate.

vindicate. It is hard, after so many rhetorical Aggravations of this Assassination, some of which will scarce bear Examination, particularly, that 'tis equal to any Thing that Papists had done; 'tis hard, I say, to make the King add, "Daily Instances whereof we are to expect, whilst Field-conventicles, those Rendevouzes of Rebellion, and Forgers of all bloody and Jesuitical Principles are so frequented and followed." The Field-conventicles, whereat the outed Presbyterian Ministers preached, were hitherto as free of any such Doctrine as the Churches were, and neither taught nor vindicated this Attempt upon the Bishop; and if we shall judge of Principles from incidental Actions of some in a Society, we know where to lodge many Murders in cold Blood, for one alledged upon the Frequenters of Conventicles. And as in the whole of these Twenty Eight Years I am describing, there are but Four or Five Instances of any Thing like Assassinations attempted that I mind of, and none of them ever defended, that I know of, by the suffering Presbyterians, but disclaimed: So in a few Months Time, we shall find Twenty Times that Number cut off, without any Process or Ground, by People upon the other Side: And 'tis well known since the Revolution, where repeated Attempts of assassinating Kings (as they called them) de facto, landed. So I wish, for their own sakes, the high-flying Prelatists would from henceforth spare such Insinuations as they lick up from some of the venomous Papers of this Time.

The Proclamation goes on to require all Magistrates to apprehend the Persons guilty, and Subjects to joyn with them in this. And the Act 144. Parl. 12. James VI. is revived: And particularly in Fife, the Heritors are required to bring all their Tenants and Cottars, and Masters their Servants, to the Places named, that such of the Bishop's Servants as were present, may know their Faces. No doubt, all Methods should be taken that are suitable to discover Assassinations, but one would think this a very improper Way to discover them; and 'tis scarce to be thought any of them would compear so publickly. And Masters and Heritors are made liable for Absents, if afterward upon their Grounds; which was a good Handle for much Severity in that Shire. Captions and Intercommuning are taken off for Forty Eight Hours Space, to encourage such to appear: But then, they did not know, but upon other Pretexts they might be detained, and few or none such appeared. In short, an Indemnity is offered to any of the Assassines, who shall discover his Accomplices, and Ten thousand Merks to any who shall inform against any of them, so as they may be apprehended.

With this Proclamation the Council send a Letter to the King, much of the same Strain with the Narrative of the Proclamation, and so I need not insert it. In it they complain of a Paper spread (as they seem to suspect, from England) in Vindication of Mr. Mitchel, which I have not seen. And at the same Time, send another Letter to Lawderdale, with the Proclamation; and acquaint him with a Paper dropt in Cowpar some Days before the Bishop's Murder, threatening such as should buy any of the Goods of denounced Persons.

All discovered by the Multitudes of Oaths taken, and the utmost Enquiry could be made, was the above List of the Names of Persons reputed to be Actors, who came to the Barn at Teuchits about Three in the Afternoon, and continued till Seven. In September, as we shall afterwards hear, another Proclamation for apprehending the Murderers, was published.

This same Day, May 4. there was a Meeting at Night in the House of Mrs. Durham. Many Conventicles had been in that House formerly, I may say, one almost every Lord's Day; but they were either overlookt or not known, tho' I am informed the Town-major knew of them generally as well as the People who came, and used to take Money to overlook these House-meetings. But this Day, all being in a Stir about the Accounts which came from Fife, the Major came upon them in a great Fury. The Preacher was Mr. William Hamilton, Brother to the Laird of Halcraft before described. This young Gentleman was a very pious and excellent Youth, and a solid serious Preacher. He was a Relation of Mrs. Durham's, and had about Thirty Hearers, most of them I believe near Relations. All of them were forthwith committed to Prison, where some continued longer, and some shorter, as their Interest was greater or lesser with the Managers.

But they were extremely hard on Mr. Hamilton the Preacher. After some Weeks close Imprisonment, by his ill Treatment there, he fell ill of a Flux, which turned very dangerous. His Friends presented a Petition to the Council, offering Bond and Caution for his compearing, if he lived, under what Penalty they pleased, and at what Time; begging he might be liberated, that he might have a Change of Air, and Liberty to go to the Country, with an Attestation under the Hand of Two Physicians, that his Life was in extreme Hazard; and this Method proposed a proper Mean for his Preservation. Nothing could be laid to the young Gentleman's Door, but that he had been licensed by Presbyterian Ministers, and had now and then preached to his own Relations in a House.

Yet so inhumane were the Managers, tho' the Fret by this Time, raised by the Primate's Death, might have been off their Spirits, that they not only refused the Supplication, but assured his Friends they would prosecute him for House-conventicles next Council Day. Before that came, he died in Prison, and had, I may say, a Crown of Martyrdom, since this Carriage may as well almost be lookt upon as killing, as if they had sent him to the Gibbet: And yet this excellent Youth had never broke their Laws in preaching in the Fields. He 1679.

Council's Letter to the King and Lawderdale, sent with this Proclamation.

Conventicle in Mrs. Durham's May 4. and many imprisoned.

Great Cruelty used against Mr. Hamilton the Preacher.

1679.

was of known Loyalty, and of a peaceable Temper. He was under no Sentence, and had nothing judicially proven against him; and all they had to lay to his Charge, was his preaching once in a Relation's House to a few Friends, after publick Worship was over. Tho' Comparisons be what I don't like to make, there are some Things in this circumstantiated Carriage, which do in some Measure look as much towards Jesuitical Popish Carriage, as many Things charged on the Sufferers.

Severity exercised in Fife at this Time.

Besides this Instance of Severity to a Person who could have no Accession to the Bishop's Death, there were vast Numbers in Fife and other Places, put to great Hardships. It was not enough for them to compear at the Courts the Council appointed, but afterwards, upon every Jealousy any of the Primate's Friends were pleased to take up, they were seized and sent into Edinburgh. I find by the Books of Council, a good many Persons in Fife and Perth taken up, May and June, and lying in Prison till the End of the Year, without any Trial, when upon their Petitions they are released by the Council.

John Archer in Stramiglo his Sufferings at this Time.

I shall but give one Instance of their Iniquity this way, upon John Archer Candlemaker in Stramiglo in Fife, Brother to Mr. Thomas Archer, whom we shall afterwards meet with in this History. This solid and judicious Christian had been since the Year 1674. several Times searched for, and forced to abscond, and at length was denounced Rebel for Noncompearance, for no other Crime but Nonconformity to Prelacy, and sometimes hearing Presbyterian Ministers. During several Years he was for the most part obliged to leave his House, Trade, and small Family, and frequently Soldiers were quartered upon his poor Wife and Children in his Absence, who, beside their Meat and Drink, and what they saw good to take away with them at Removal, had Sixpence a Day, which they forced his Wife to pay, reckoning both the Day they came to the House, and that wherein they left it. This was the Case of many as well as his, and therefore I have insisted the longer upon it.

Some time after the Bishop's Death, he was seized, when at his Work publickly in his own House, by John Paterson of Chanwell, who commanded a Party of Horse, and was carried straight to the Tolbooth of Falkland, and from thence very quickly to Edinburgh, without any Reason given him; neither could he guess wherefore it was, till in a little Time he was brought before the Council, and charged with Accession to the Archbishop's Murder. As soon as he heard this, he begged that such Persons in Town as he should name, might be called to exculpate him, which being done, and they appearing, all declared they knew him to have been in Edinburgh at that Time, and for some Days before and after.

Notwithstanding of this clear Exculpation, he was remitted to Prison, where he continued for some Weeks. Upon Application by his Friends to the Chancellor at Leith, he signed a Warrant and Order to the Clerk of Council to liberate him. The Chancellor knew the Man and his Conversation, and believed the fair Representation given of his Case; but when John presented the Order to the Clerks, it was not at all regarded.

Within a few Days Rother came to Town, and when he enquired, and found his Orders not obeyed, the Clerks laid the Blame on Sir William Sharp of Stonyhill, who came to the Chancellor, and alledged he would prove John Archer guilty of the Bishop's Death, tho' he had already proven himself at Edinburgh for some time before that Day and after. Such was the Equity of this Period!

Thus he continued in Prison four Months after this, without any Libel given him, or any Shadow of Proof advanced, which was indeed impossible; for he was a Man of quite other Principles and Practices. At length, when nothing could be laid to his Charge, the Chancellor prevailed to get him liberate towards the End of the Year. His Imprisonment merely for Fees, besides Maintenance, Loss of Time and Employment, cost him upwards of a hundred Pounds. Many others were this way oppressed most wrongously; but this Instance may suffice.

Murder of the Laird of Inchdarnie, May 3. with a Hint at the Character of that excellent Youth.

I know no Place fitter than this, to bring in the base Murder of one excellent young Gentleman Andrew Ayton younger of Inchdarnie, by the Soldiers in Fife at this Time; and it was one of the Fruits of the furious Prosecution of the Primate's Death. I give it from an attested Narrative sent me from a reverend Minister of this Church present with him that Day. This young Gentleman had the Blessing of early Piety; when at the University of St. Andrews, he spent much of his Time in Prayer. After his leaving that, he was much concerned to have Presbyterian Ministers brought to Fife, and the Gospel preached to these who could not hear the Incumbents. When little more than Seventeen Years of Age, he was intercommuned, forced to quit his Father's House, and to go to some of his Relations in the Shire of Murray. When there, Mr. Walter Denoon, as we have heard, was sent South Prisoner. Inchdarnie followed him at some Distance, till he was brought to Dundee, and came over to Fife, gathered some of his Acquaintances, and rescued that good Man. He continued lurking till May 3. this Year, when my Informer dined with him in his Father's House, and parted with him about Two of the Clock, when neither of them knew any Thing of the Bishop's Death. Thence Inchdarnie went towards his Aunt the Lady Murdocairnie her House; and not far from Auchtermuchty he saw a Party of Horse at some Distance riding most furiously to Cowpar, upon which he rode a little hard to escape them, which one of them them perceiving, broke off from the rest, by Order of the Commander, and first wounded his Horse, and then wounded Inchdarnie mortally, by shooting Two Balls through his Body, without ever asking any Questions, or requiring him to surrender himself; and then the Soldier rode back to his Party, and came with them to Cowpar. It was with Difficulty the Gentleman could sit his Horse till he came to the next House, where he got the Benefit of a Bed, and sent for his Relation, Sir John Ayton of that Ilk, whose House was near by. Sir John came, and immediately dispatched a Servant to Cowpar for a Chirurgeon. But the Party had given Orders that no Chirurgeon should leave the Town without Allowance from them. When they were applied to, some of their Number were sent immediately to the Place to bring the wounded Person to Cowpar; when they came, Sir John Ayton represented the Cruelty of taking the dying Gentleman three Miles to Cowpar, and offered them Bail, or to entertain them there till Chirurgeons were brought, and they saw what became of Inchdarnie. But nothing could prevail, he was hurried away that Night upon one of their Horses to Cowpar; he fainted four Times through Loss of Blood. And the Magistrates of Cowpar allowed him to be carried to an Inn, where he died next Day about Twelve of the Clock in much Peace and Serenity, with the Comfort of his Parents being with him at his Death. The Soldier who killed him, was a Relation of his, one William Auchmutie, and came to him professing much Sorrow for what had happened, begging Forgiveness, which Inchdarnie very cheerfully gave him, with some Christian Advices. This poor Man died in the Year 1682. under great Terror for this Fact. But I return to the Procedure of the Council.

1679.

Upon the 8 of May the Council emit a Proclamation against travelling with Arms without Licence, which is annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 12. It is founded upon the atrocious Facts committed by Persons who go to Field-conventicles, which hath been already considered; and discharges all Subjects to travel with Arms without Licence, and appoints all Magistrates to seize such, except Noblemen, landed Gentlemen, and their Children, and Servants in Company with them, if they be found with Arms; and the Soldiers are likewise ordered to apprehend such. This Proclamation wants much of the Virulence of many at this Time, and so I say no more of it, but that it was a plain Insult both upon the Safety and Liberty of the Subjects, and a good Handle for the Soldiers to spoil many of their Arms, and brought much Trouble to many of the persecuted People.

Proclamation
May 8. against travelling with Arms.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 12.

That same Day the Council send a Letter to Lawderdale, acquainting him with the Order they had given for discovering the Bishop's Murderers in the Shire of Fife, and the diligent and strict Search which had that Day been made in Edinburgh, which they term the strictest that ever had been made in it for suspected Persons. That the Reader may see the Pains used in Fife, I have annexed the Instructions to the Sheriff-deputes there, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 13.

Letter to Lawderdale, as to Pains taken to discover the Murderers of the Bishop. Instructions for Sheriff-deputes in Fife.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 13.
Urquhart of Meldrum has many Polls bestowed on him.

The Care of the Managers is not confined to Fife at this Time. The Earl of Linlithgow is impowered, "to dispose of his Majesty's Forces, as he thinks most convenient for reducing Conventicles and all unlawful Conventions." And Adam Urquhart of Meldrum, whom we shall frequently meet with afterwards, having signalized himself by appearing against the persecuted People, is made a Justice of Peace in the Shire of Roxburgh, and is to act in Conjunction with Henry Ker of Graden, conform to the Instructions, March 11. last. And this Month I find the Council heap Places on him: He is made a Justice of Peace in Teviotdale and the Merse. And May 27. he is made a Justice of Peace and Commissioner against Disorders in the Shire of Selkirk.

That same Day the Council approve of the Report of the Committee for publick Affairs, and continue Earl Stoun's Case till next Diet. The Report is, "That they had writ a Letter of Thanks to C. Carne, and William Carmichael Sheriff-deputes of Fife, for their Diligence in searching after the Murderers of the Primate; and had impowered them to secure and put under Inventory the Goods of John Balfur of Kinloch, Blackstoun of Rathillet, the three Balfours in Gilstoun, Persons most suspect of the Murder, until they themselves be brought to a Trial: That they had called before them Ten Persons apprehended in the South by the Laird of Meldrum, Two of which, Robert Neilson and Nicol Story, can make great Discoveries of Wells his Haunts and Reset, Neilson having confessed that he rode with him and Story; that he collected Contributions at their Meetings, Rolls of which were found on him. They are remitted to the Advocate, with other Four Prisoners sent in from Air by Captain Murray; and are to continue in Prison till they receive a Libel for being at Conventicles. That the Cautioners of Mr. Alexander Gordon having forfeited their Bond, by not producing him, be charged for five Thousand Merks; that Mr. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, upon refusing to depone, be held as confest, and fined in a Thousand Merks; that Mr. Robert Maxwell now confined at Paisly, because of his great Age and Infirmary, have the Diet continued against him, he finding Caution to appear when called, under the Pain of a Thousand Merks; that, upon the Testimony of the Archbishop of Glasgow, Mr. John Law be dismissed, upon Caution, to appear when called, upon Bond of a Thousand Merks; that Bennet of Chesters continue in Prison till he receive an additional Li-

Report of the Committee for publick Affairs.
May 8.

Robert Neilson
and Nicol Story
taken.

Mr. Alexander Gordon,
Mr. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn,
Mr. Robert Maxwell continues.

Mr. John Law
dismissed.
Chesters and Bis- hop.

1679.

"bel; and Scot of Pitlochrie, and his Cautioners be cited to the next Council Day." I can only set down those Hints of Things and Persons as I meet with them; if the full Minutes of the Committee of publick Affairs had been preserved, larger Accounts might have been given of them. We had some Hints about some of them upon the first Chapter.

King's Letter
read: May 13.

Upon the 13 of May the Council meet, and a Letter is read from the King, approving the Draught of the Proclamation about Conventicles, which, it seems, had been agreed upon May 1. He gives them Thanks for it, and declares, "That he will maintain his Authority, and countenance them, notwithstanding of the Aspersions cast upon them and their Proceedings, as contrary to Law and Reason. And from the Satisfaction he received last Year, by some of their Number coming up, and setting their Procedure in due Light, when Noise was made against them unjustly, he desires them now to send up some, that he may have a fuller View of the State of Things at present, and signifie his Pleasure about many Things he cannot impart by a Letter. He names the Clerk Register, Advocate, Justice Clerk, Prefident, and Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbet Justice General, to come to him, that he may have Information in Law and in Fact."

Proclamation
against Conventicles, May 13
App N. 14
Remarks on it.

Upon this Letter they order the Publication of the Proclamation against Conventicles, May 13. which is so remarkable, that it deserves a little more to be noticed. The Reader will find it App. N. 14. It begins with an Assertion that doth not so well agree to a limited Monarchy, "That by the fundamental Laws of all Monarchies, the Power of Arms is lodged in the King, and Rising in Arms is punishable as Treason." This was indeed the Doctrine now set up for, but that 'tis the fundamental Law of Monarchy, is more than I have seen proven by the Passive-obedience Gentlemen. Next follows a Recapitulation of the Spite and Venom now ordinarily poured out upon the Period from the 1638 to the 1650. To call these Times of Reformation, Rebellion, is now common Stile: But one must be surpris'd at the Penner of this Paper, his asserting, That then the Liberty of the Subject was destroyed. This is an odd Proposition to be asserted by the Managers, till once they had got all the excellent Laws, made for securing Liberty and Property, and restraining arbitrary Attempts upon both, by Princes or their Servants, not only rescinded, but all the Copies of them destroyed; for as long as these remain among Peoples Hands, they will easily be in Case to disprove this wild Assertion; and perhaps a Parallel to the good Laws 'twixt the 1640 and 1650. as to their Advantage to the Subject, can scarce be produced any where.

The Acts of Parliament referred to in this Proclamation, have been already considered. The Clemency of the Government, in not putting these Acts in Execution, is mightily insisted upon; and the former Part of this History will shew what was the clement Executors Methods. They never had any Risings in Arms, but that at Pentland; and we have seen how much Blood was shed upon that Score. People's meeting at Conventicles, in Arms, was not yet declared a Rising in Arms, or treasonable, otherwise there was no Need of this Proclamation, or of the King's signing it, before they durst venture to publish it; nor would the passing it in Council, have cost the late Primate such a Struggle as it did.

After they have made the King offer an Apology for the former Lenity, as laying a Snare for his Subjects, all Judges and Officers of the Army are appointed, "To proceed against all such who go to any Field-meetings with Arms, as Traitors." Judges Procedure against them is plain, but for the Officers of the Army, their doing so, needs to be explained a little: More must be necessarily included in it, than their seizing them, and delivering them up to other Magistrates and Judges; for they were thus to proceed against such who had no Arms at Conventicles. 'Tis then either to call an Assize of their own Soldiers, as their Practice after this explained it, and proceed to a Sentence of Death; or to kill and destroy them where they found them, without giving themselves this Trouble; both which they frequently did, and I know no other Warrant but this Proclamation.

Great Caution is used in what follows, lest any Favour might be supposed to be in the statutory Part, towards such who came to hear the Gospel without Arms, and had the Courage to venture themselves on the Mercy of the Soldiers and Government; and they are fairly warned that no Mercy is to be shewn them, and all concerned are required to execute the Laws against them.

The Ground of all this Severity, is, "That now the King is convinced fully, that these Meetings, (either with or without Arms, that is, the Preaching of the Gospel by any who will not subject to Prelacy) do certainly tend to the Ruin and Reproach of the Christian Religion, and Discipline, Introduction of Popery, Subversion of Monarchy, and Contempt of all Laws and Government." It will certainly, when remarked by Posterity, leave a lasting Reproach upon this Period and Government, to find such a publick Declaration concerning the pure and peaceable Preaching of the Gospel. The ill grounded Nature of his Majesty's Conviction on these Heads hath been frequently shewn.

Bishop Sharp's Share in this Proclamation.

I shall only remark further, That the Gentlemen I have formerly spoken of, have this Observe upon a Copy of this Proclamation now in mine Eye. Nota, "This was the last Act of Council the Bishop of St. Andrews had the Honour to be present at upon Earth; for it was passed in Council upon Thursday the First of May, and sent up to his Majesty, and

“ and by him subscribed the 6 of May, and emitted here, and published the 13 of May. In the interim the Archbishop went over the Water on Friday the 2. and was cruelly murdered upon Saturday the 3. his Burial was upon Saturday the 17 of May.”

1679.

By other Accounts, and from the Nature of the Thing, it appears that the Archbishop met with some Opposition to this severe Proclamation. And they all saw need, before it was published, to have it signed by the King, that this might be a Warrant to them, if afterwards called to an Account for it; and Care is taken to insert so much in the Title of the Proclamation. So we may reckon this the Primate's Legacy, and an Earnest of what he would have essayed had he got up to Court.

No wonder such a Proclamation drove People to Measures which otherwise they had no Mind to. The former Laws, and their severe Execution, forced People to come with Arms to hear the Gospel; now this is made Treason, and they Traitors. And when no Way of Relief was possible, but by standing their Ground, we need not be surpris'd, after what went before, and this Proclamation, to hear of a Rising very soon, especially if we consider the further severe Methods agreed upon at this Time.

That same Day the Council remit the Consideration of an Overture proposed, for obliging Masters either to produce their Tenants, or be liable for their Delinquencies, if they do not produce them to the President, Advocate, Justice-clerk, Collingtoun and Tarbet. Upon the 15 of May, the Overture is approved, and transmitted to his Majesty by such as are to attend him; the Tenor of it follows. ‘ That it is thought convenient and legal, to the end that every Master may be watchful over his own Tenants, and that every Tenant may stand more in Aw, because he knows that his Master stands engaged, that the 6 Act, Parl. 3. Jam. V. be put in Execution in this way and manner: That his Majesty and Council issue out a Proclamation, ordaining the Justices to hold Courts twice a Year in those Countries that are most irregular, and to take up Dittay particularly against Tenants guilty of Field-conventicles, and such Disorders. And where any Tenant is delated upon Oath by an Informer, and is named and set down in the Porteous-roll, as Use is, that immediately the Names of the Tenants so delated be given to the Clerk of the Justiciary, who must produce them at the Day assigned for their Compareance, or else pay their Unlaw, to be modified by the Justice according to the Nature and Quality of the Case and Delinquency. But if the Master does exact Diligence, in putting the Tenant off his Land, and does not after reset him, then he shall be free of those Unlaws, conform to 107 Act, Parl. 7. Jam. VI. This, we shall hear, was gone into, and became the great Foundation of harassing Gentlemen and their Tenants in the following Years.

Overture transmitted to the King, obliging Masters to produce their Tenants, or to be liable for their Delinquencies.

i.e. Their Fine for Absence.

May 14. they have the King's Letter, in answer to theirs of the 4. dated May 10. wherein he declares, he will resent the Inhumanity and Barbarity in the Primate's Murder; that he approves of their Proclamation, and hath caused reprint it at London, and recommends that they go on in the Search with all Vigour; and puts them in mind of his former Commands to some of their Number to come up to him. Next Day the Council send a Letter to the King, wherein they remit the State of Things to those he has called for, thank him for his Marks of Affection, promise to go on in his Service, and conclude with their Hopes, that they need not recommend the State of the Church, and such who serve in it, to his Majesty, and declaring that their Security will still be one of their chief Cares.

King's Letter to Council, May 10. with their Answer, May 14.

At the same Time they pass an Act against that excellent Person beforenamed, Mr. Patrick Simpson. ‘ The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that Mr. Patrick Simpson, indulged Minister at Kilmacomb, was cited to compare before them in February last, to answer for Breach of Confinement, and keeping of Conventicles; and whereas he hath not appeared, and has been denounced Rebel, they declare the Kirk of Kilmacomb vacant, and ordain the Solicitor to acquaint the Parishoners that they pay him no more Stipend.’ What was the Occasion of this Severity, I know not. Afterward, as hath been remarked, he had, upon better Information given, some Favour shewn him.

Act against Mr. Patrick Simpson, dated from Kilmacomb.

After the Persons sent for were gone to Court, May 27. the Council acquaint his Majesty, That they are convened that Day, upon a Letter from the Earl of Argyle, desiring some of the Forces to be sent to repress the Rebellions and disorderly Practices of the Lord Maddoald and his Accomplices; that they found it not proper to send any of the standing Forces to Inverlochke, when Conventicles were so numerous, but have ordered the Sheriffs of Dumbartoun and Bute to joyn the said Earl. And, upon Information that several Persons in the Shire of Inverness have joyned the said Rebels, they have issued a Proclamation against them, and have sent to the Earl Twelve hundred Weight of Powder, and Ball proportioned. That same Day also Letters are writ to the Earls of Cathness, and Sheriffs of Inverness, to joyn Argyle in repressing those rebel Papists, and to take with them Forty Days Provision. We shall afterwards hear the Earl is called off this necessary Work, to joyn in suppressing the West-country Army.

Forces refused to the Earl of Argyle, except the rebel Papists, with other Methods taken with them.

That same Day the Council approve the following Report of the Committee for publick Affairs. ‘ That they had granted Warrant to search further in Fife for the Murderers of the Primate, and to bring over Witnesses against Henry Schaw an intercommuned Person lately taken.

Report of the Committee for publick Affairs, May 27.

1679.

Several Ladies cited before the Council, for a Conventicle in Gallashiel.

Mr. Thomas Wilkie and Mr. Francis Irvine sent to the Bais.

taken. The Prisoners taken by Meldrum are dismissed upon Bond, except Neilson and Story, upon Caution given to compear before the Justices of Peace in their Shire; and the Bonds are sent to him and the Quarter-master Dalmahoy, to be put in Execution. Claverhouse having lately surpris'd a Conventicle in the Parish of Gallashiel, where were present the Ladies Torwoodlie, Gallashiel, and Newtown younger, the Laird and Lady Ashiesteil, the Lady Fernylie, and Mrs. Jean Hunter Spouse to Mr. Pringle, and his Daughter, with several other mean Persons; a Citation was ordered against the said Ladies and their Husbands to compear before the Council, and the Laird of Meldrum was ordered to proceed against the rest. Mr. Thomas Wilkie, the Minister taken at that Conventicle, and Mr. Francis Irvine an intercommuned Minister sent in from Dumfries, are remitted to the Council (who order them to the Bais) Mr. James Daes Advocate hath the Time of paying his Fine prorogate till the second Tuesday of June, and is to re-enter Prison that Day, if it be not paid. The Rising in June, and the Consequences of it, put other Work than this in the Managers Hands for some Time. Of this I come now to give some Account.

S E C T. II.

Of the Occasions, and Causes of, and Inlets to the Rising at Bothwel.

The Springs of this Rising.

There can be no exact and full Judgment pass'd upon any Matter of this Nature, especially its Justice or Iniquity, till once it be fully known in its Springs and Rise; therefore I begin any Account I am to give of this Business of Bothwel, with some Enquiry into these. What I have said before, as to the Gathering which ended at Pentland, may very much be referred to here. There was no Preconcert, nor any formed Design laid down; but the oppressed People gradually fell into this Rising, by a Chain of Things making it some way necessary to them: Indeed it ought not to be entirely lodged upon any one of these following Particulars, but upon the Whole of them; and, no doubt, several other Things helped it on, which have escaped my Observation.

Oppression in civil Concerns.

I may well begin with the heavy Oppression of the Lieges in their civil Concerns, some Hints whereof may be gathered from the preceeding Part of this History, but it is a very small Part of it can be now represented. Every one who had the least Shew of Seriousness was grievously harass'd in as far as they could be reached, and plain Spulies were committed upon all who would not concur actively with the Soldiers in their oppressive Methods. These Things sow'd the Spirits of not a few; and if, as Solomon tells us, Oppression makes a wise Man mad, we need not wonder at any Heights run to at this Time, but rather be surpris'd that Things were not much further carried.

Rigorous exacting of the Cess, with the firing upon unarmed People at Conventicles.

We have already had some View of the barbarous Invasion upon the West Country by the Highland Host, and the succeeding Severities in exacting the Cess last Year and this. The Meetings for hearing the Gospel, in Houses and the Fields, were violently attacked, and frequently the Soldiers did discharge their loaded Pieces among poor unarmed Country People; some, we have heard, were killed, and many were wounded.

Havock made by Parties of Soldiers and the Garisons.

The dreadful Havock made in all the Corners of the West and South of Scotland, by the Parties of Soldiers marching up and down, and the Garisons, is what cannot be exprest. When the Soldiers got Notice of the Houses of any of the Fugitives or intercommuned Persons, there they exercised their greatest Fury, yea, upon the Houses of such as were the Relations of the former, and of all who kept not the Church regularly. And it was odd to observe how few such they miss'd in their Traversings of the Country; they had generally their Information from the Episcopal Incumbent in every Parish whither they came.

Multitudes robbed and spoiled.

At such Houses the Soldiers used to stay, not only living at Discretion, and eating up as much as they saw good, killing Sheep and other Cattle for their own Use, and giving their Horses a great deal more than was needful, but also carried away every Thing portable which made for them; and either kept it, or when their Luggage turned cumbersome, they would make Money of it at the next Place they came to, and even force People to give them Money for what they had robbed others of.

And what the Soldiers could not carry off, they destroy.

Yea, to such a Height came their Rage, as they most maliciously destroyed what they could not eat up. In some Houses they took the thresh'd Corn out of the Sacks, and cast it into the running Waters, and took the Meal, and trod it in the Dung-hill; and in other Places set Fire to the Stacks of Corn and other Victual, and burnt the thresh'd Victual: And many other dreadful Abuses did they commit, of which there was no Room to complain. Many particular Accounts of these Outrages I have seen, and a good Number are before me, too tedious to insert here.

It was no great Wonder then, that not a few, who perhaps had no great Sense of Religion, joyned with such as were forced to be in Arms, and wander up and down for their Principles, and sided with any Party who might procure their Relief in their Property and civil Liberty so dreadfully invaded; especially, when they could have no View of Redress, but in an hostile Way, and by repelling Force with Force.

1679.

All Means of Redress stopped.

Indeed the Quarrel upon which several in this Rising stated themselves, was Self-defence, and the recovering of their civil Liberty, as well as the Freedom of hearing the Gospel preached: And the greatest Part of the West and South were subjected, not only to the arbitrary Government of the Prince, and the more arbitrary Procedure of the Council, but to the cruel and covetous Luit of every private Centinel.

The Country subjected to the Army.

Invasions, generally in an evil Time, are made both upon Religion and Liberty: These ordinarily stand and fall together; and when Measures are well laid and concerted, it is certainly the most tenable and justifiable Quarrel for rising in Arms, which is stated upon Property and Right, and where civil Liberty is defended and maintained with an Eye to its Influence upon, and Subserviency to Religion.

Civil Liberties may be defended as subservient to Religion.

Several Things have been already noticed concerning the strict Pursuit of the Field-meetings in the West and South, by the Garisons formerly mentioned; and as it was a Branch of this which gave the immediate Occasion to the Rising, so the long and growing Tract of those Severities prepared Matters for it.

Self defence in hearing the Gospel, the immediate Incent to this Rising.

Some of the Ministers and People who used to have such Meetings with very little Observation and Noise, and but in small Numbers, found it needful, because of the Insults of the Soldiers, to keep more closely together, and narrow themselves into one Meeting, sometimes in one Place, sometimes in another, where they best might with Safety. I have already observed, that such as were concerned in this ambulatory sort of Meeting, were of the warmer Sort, who had Freedom to go some Lengths, wherein the most Part by far of Presbyterians could not follow them; and some of these afterwards went far greater Lengths than at this Time were set up for.

Several Meetings for hearing the Gospel formerly separate, and with little Observation were now obliged to join in one.

To this Meeting a good many brought Arms for defending themselves, and the Ministers who preached to them, against the Garisons and Parties of Soldiers; and they were armed a great deal better than any other I hear of. The Soldiers hearing of the Numbers in Arms, endeavoured by all Means to catch People, at least in their coming, and going. Their Hazard this way from the Garisons, and rambling Parties of the Soldiers, whose Orders were to apprehend, assault, yea, to kill, if any Defence were made, brought them at length to this, that the most Part of the constant Attenders upon these Meetings, save the Country People in every Neighbourhood, who came merely to hear, were armed. By this the Soldiers were a little frightened, and did not so much trouble them as formerly, and somewhat scared from firing among poor naked People, killing and wounding of some, and dragging others to Prison and Banishment. And this way they kept up the Preaching of the Gospel for a good many Weeks, which now to some of them was indeed dearer than their Lives; and the Soldiers, when acquainted with their Numbers, thought good to keep at Distance, and withdraw.

Many who kept this Meeting were armed.

Accounts of this were sent to Edinburgh, and the Numbers of the armed at this Meeting were no way diminished: Yea, many Lies came in to the Council, both by the Clergy and Commanders of the Soldiers. These issued in new and more severe Proclamations, as we have heard, and Orders to the Army. And more Soldiers were brought West, and sent to the Places where the Field-meetings were.

Their Numbers were multiplied, and the Council emit a severe Proclamation and Orders.

This again increased the Numbers of People in Arms at the Meetings: And warm Persons coming in among them, Projects were spoke of A la-volee; and some put upon Courses they at first had no View of, nor Design to come to. They continued together in Parties through the Week; and their Tempers, by Hardships and Conversation being heightened, there was Talking of going some further length than mere Self-defence: But any Thing that way, came never to any Bearing till Drumclog.

Which increased the Ferme among the oppressed People.

We may add the severe and cruel Laws made especially after the Primate's Death, and some before it. The being in Arms at Field-meetings is made Treason by Law, which, as hath been observed, was much the same to many, as if the Hearing of the Gospel preached by outed Presbyterian Ministers had been made Treason, since the Case of not a few was such, as without Arms they could not be present at Field-meetings: And I do not question this drove many a great deal further than at first they projected.

All is heightened by the severe Proclamations after the Primate's Death.

Travelling with Arms, or, as the Soldiers execute the Act, the Having of Arms at all without the Council's Licence, which none of the persecuted People could ever look for, was punishable at Pleasure; and the Soldiers Pleasure came in room of the Council's, and was extravagant enough.

Terrible Powers were granted by the Council to the Commissioners, Sheriffs, and their Deputies, as we have seen, and a good many poor and rakish Gentlemen, were clothed with these Powers at the Request of the Bishops. And to crown all, the Officers of the Army were warranted, not only to apprehend, but wound and kill such as they found with Arms at Field-

And the terrible Powers given to the Commissioners, Sheriff deputies and Army.

1679.

From all this many are brought under extraordinary Hardships:

And forced, in waiting on the Gospel, to bring Arms, and continue in this Posture.

No Concert 'twixt them and the discontented Party in England.

Remarks upon the Caveat for the Whigs.

Further Evidence, there was no Concert with England.

* Foundation.

Breaches among Presbyterians at this Time.

Field-conventicles, or any coming or going to them, if they made Resistance: And the Parties who ranged up and down, were not wanting in executing these Powers granted them.

All these laid together, may discover what extraordinary Hardships and Difficulties great Multitudes were brought under. They found such Sweetness in the Gospel purely and clearly preached to them, that they looked on it as the greatest Blessing, and what was most necessary to them; and it was but a few who had Access to it from the Handful of Presbyterian Ministers who were indulged.

They were most averse to take up Arms, until they were forced to it, and that merely in their own Defence. For a long Time, tho' they had Arms with them, yet they made no Use of them, and never desired any Occasion of using them: And being made guilty of Treason for this, they were obliged to continue in this Way, which the Fury of their Persecutors had forced them unto. And thus, by one Step after another, they were necessitate to this Rising I am now to give the Account of.

That the Party who gathered at Bothwell were in Concert with the discontented and Country Party in England at this Time, I cannot believe, since I find no Proofs of it. The English Writers upon the one Side, do assert it, without giving any Thing, that I have seen, which looks like a solid Reason: And when I consider all Circumstances, it appears to me a Thing that could not well be.

The virulent Writer of the Caveat against the Whigs, alleges there was a close Correspondence 'twixt Shaftsbury and the Scots Rebels, as he calls them; and talks of Forty Copies of his Speech in March this Year, sent down by the first Post to Scotland. We have already found good Cause not to receive Matters of Fact upon the Credit of this Author's Assertion. I see no Reason to doubt, but this is a Story of his own making, and of a Piece with many other Untruths in these Pamphlets, writ at a Juncture wherein somewhat of this sort was necessary to the helping forward the Designs of a Popish and persecuting Party, against the Constitution and Religion of these Kingdoms, upon the Back of the almost fatal Turn of Affairs towards the Close of Queen Anne's Reign.

When this Rising was begun, and some Thousands got together in Arms, we shall find, that in order to moderate the Warmth of some there, and to enlarge the Bottom upon which that Appearance was to be stated, Motions were made from Edinburgh, that the Declaration they emitted might be such as those in England, who appeared for the Liberties of their Country, might be the better brought in to espouse, if need were: But this plainly enough says, that this Rising did not flow from any Correspondence with the Earl of Shaftsbury; and indeed the narrow * Lay upon which the first Gatherers together set up, makes this Matter beyond Debate; and when this Proposal was made from Edinburgh, we shall find these People would not go into it.

Further, to me it appears almost incredible, that a Handful of poor insignificant Country People, hearing and following some Field-preachers, with no other View, than to have the Benefit of the Gospel, and preserve it in the Land, should enter into a Concert with the English Peers. I am morally sure, that their Ministers had no such Correspondence. How far some few Gentlemen, and others with them, who had civil Liberty in their View in their Rising, and by this Motive encouraged others to rise, might take Heart from the Appearances in England against arbitrary and oppressive Measures there carrying on, I shall not determine; but I can learn nothing of any direct or indirect Concert or Correspondence with England, nor perceive any Indications of it. I am well assured from some yet alive, who preached in the Fields at this Time, that they never heard any Thing of this Nature.

Yea, to me it appears very probable, that if Matters had been concerted with that Party in England, this Business would have been more regularly and prudently managed and carried on. When the Country People were got together, and the Accounts had reached London, I doubt not but Shaftsbury and others there, might wish the People at Bothwell well, and use their Interest to have the Duke of Monmouth's Instructions as favourable as might be, since they knew that Party were really struggling for Liberty, as they themselves professed to do.

This is all that offers to me upon this Matter; but the Author of the Caveat for the Whigs will have every Thing that displeases him, to come, from an imaginary Concert betwixt the Republicans in England, as he names all who made any Stand against arbitrary Measures there, and the Presbyterians in Scotland, and the Dutch.

Perhaps, a Way for the Beginnings, at least of this Gathering, might likewise in some Measure be paved by the Heats about the Indulgence and Cess, coming to a greater Height this Year than formerly. We have already heard, that this Flame was now rising and spreading. Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Donald Cargil, and some young Preachers, Mr. Richard Cameron, and others in some of the Field-meetings, were openly preaching against hearing the indulged Ministers, and speaking some very harsh Things of them: And Robert Hamilton, with some others who were with them in Arms, did very much widen this Breach. And yet we shall find, that altho' Mr. John Welsh, Mr. David Hume, Mr. Semple, and others who likewise preached preached in the Fields, were very averſe from this Courſe, as tending to divide and break Presbyterians among themſelves, and ſo to ruine them; yet they, and many of their Followers, joyned with them who roſe at this Time, and endeavoured to have the Differences removed, tho' with little Succeſs.

1679.

And, in the laſt Room, it may not be altogether improbable, that John Balfour, and ſome others concerned in the Murder of Biſhop Sharp, might help on the Warmth upon that Side to which they joyned, and endeavour to bring Matters to ſuch an Iſſue, as to ſave themſelves by a formed Riſing; tho', as I ſaid above, their Acceſſion to that Fact was not generally known at Bothwel; and the People concerned in that Riſing did never approve of that Attempt: And whatever Reproach was caſt upon them by Balfour, and ſome others being of their Number, yet it hath no Foundation at all.

John Balfour and other Actors in the Primate's Death, joyned the warmer Side.

Whatever be in this, no doubt it was this Party headed by Mr. Hamilton, who, as they violently pushed forward the Country People to a Riſing, ſo by their Indiſcretion and Want of Conduct, evidently ruined the Weſt Country Army, and effectually hindred the fair Proſpect there once was, that they might have been a Mean of delivering the Church and Nation from the Burdens they were under; and the Upſhot of all was, Diviſions came in, joynt Meaſures were not taken. A great many left them when they ſaw whither Matters were going, and far more never joyned them; and ſuch as continued together, could never do any Thing of Conſequence: And when they came to be attacked, the High-flyers withdrew firſt, and left the poor Country Men to the Mercy of the King's Army.

And the violent Party by their want of Conduct and Diviſions, ruined all.

Theſe Things were the Occaſions of this Riſing; and from them 'tis evident it was no premeditated or concerted Thing in its firſt Beginnings, but gradually one Thing fell in upon the Neck of another, till the People were brought together in Arms; and when once together, no doubt they might have done far more than they did, had they improven their firſt Succeſſes, and kept joynt among themſelves: Which brings me forward to give ſome Account of the Beginning and Progreſs of this Riſing, and the unhappy Differences which fell in among them, which I ſhall run through as quickly as I can, that I may come to the Action it ſelf, and the Sufferings following upon it, which is my proper Task.

S E C T. III.

Of the Declaration at Rutherglen, May 29. and the firſt Rencontres, and ſmaller Skirmiſhes at Drumclog and Glaſgow in the Beginning of June.

THIS Riſing in the Weſt of Scotland, like many other conſiderable Turns, had but very ſmall Beginnings: And it is ſcarce to be thought that the Perſons concerned in them had any Proſpect that what they did, and particularly their Attempt at Rutherglen, May 29. would have been followed with what ſucceeded.

This Gathering from ſmall Beginnings.

Hitherto the Perſons concerned in that united and contracted Meeting before ſpoken of, had contented themſelves with coming to Sermons preached in the Fields by the Miniſters and Preachers who went their Lengths, and defending themſelves when attacked: But their Numbers increaſing as well as their Warmth, againſt ſuch as differed from them, Mr. Hamilton, and ſome others in the Company, moved, That ſomewhat further ſhould be done by them as a Teſtimony againſt the Iniquity of the Times. The Reader will have the beſt View of what they came to, from one of their own Papers juſt now before me, as follows.

The Riſe of the Appearance at Rutherglen.

"After ſerious Conſideration and Prayer, they (ſpeaking of theſe concerned in the above mentioned Meeting) reſolved to continue in hearing the Goſpel, and reckoned they would plainly quit their Duty, if upon the account of Danger they gave up this Privilege; and conſidering the Smalneſs of their Number, the Strength of their perſecuting Adverſaries, together with their own manifold Infirmities and Failings, they feared, that, if the Lord in his Providence ſhould permit them to be diſperſed, or to fall before their Enemies, their Cauſe would likewiſe fall; therefore they judged it their Duty to publiſh to the World their Teſtimony to the Truth and Cauſe which they owned, and againſt the Sins and Defections of the Times."

Mr. Hamilton and others, their Reſolution to publiſh their Teſtimony.

Theſe who were violently againſt the Indulgence, entred into this Reſolution towards the End of May, and Mr. Hamilton was very active in preſſing it, and pushing forward a publick Appearance, as the Way to form and ſtrengthen their Party, and prevail with others to come and joyn them when they ſet up openly againſt the Evils of the Time.

Their Motives.

In

1679.

Persons pitched upon to publish their Declaration.

In Prosecution of this Resolution, some were pitched upon, the said Robert Hamilton, Brother to the Laird of Prestoun, Mr. Thomas Douglas, one of the Ministers who preached to them, with about eighty armed Men, to go to some publick Place, and burn the Acts and Papers which shall just now be named, and publish their Declaration.

It needs scarce be again here noticed, That neither this Resolution, nor the underwritten Declaration were formed in any Concert with the Ministers or People who kept Field-meetings in other Places, far less with any Concurrence of the Body of Presbyterians through the Nation; and consequently the Good or Evil in the Matter or Manner of these is chargeable only upon the few who were engaged.

Upon the 29 of May at Rutherglen.

The 29 of May was by them found to be the most convenient Day for making this Appearance, being the anniversary Day so much abused, and against which, among other Things, they were to testify. I am informed the City of Glasgow was the Place where at first they resolved to have published their Paper; but hearing the King's Forces were many of them come down from Lanerk, and lying there, they altered their Resolution, and went to Rutherglen a small royal Burgh Two Miles from Glasgow.

Their Declaration and Testimony.

Accordingly they came there in the Afternoon, and, extinguished the Bonfires with which the Day was solemnized, and at the Market-cross, burnt the Papers just now to be mentioned in their Testimony, and read publicly, and then affixed upon the Cross a Copy of the following Declaration.

The Declaration and Testimony of some of the true Presbyterian Party in Scotland, published at Rutherglen, May 29. 1679.

‘AS the Lord hath been pleased to keep and preserve his Interest in this Land, by the Testimony of faithful Witnesses from the Beginning, so some in our Days have not been wanting, who, upon the greatest of Hazards, have added their Testimony to the Testimony of those who have gone before them, and who have suffered Imprisonments, Finings, Forfeitures, Banishment, Torture and Death from an evil and perfidious Adversary to the Church and Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ in the Land.’

‘Now we being pursued by the same Adversary for our Lives, while owning the Interest of Christ, according to his Word, and the national and solemn League and Covenants, judge it our Duty (tho’ unworthy, yet hoping we are true Members of the Church of Scotland) to add our Testimony to those of the Worthies who have gone before us, in witnessing against all Things that have been done publicly in Prejudice of his Interest, from the Beginning of the Work of Reformation, especially from the Year 1648. downward to the Year 1660. But more particularly those since, as’

- ‘1. Against the Act rescissory, for overturning the whole covenanted Reformation.’
- ‘2. Against the Acts for erecting and establishing of abjured Prelacy.’
- ‘3. Against that Declaration imposed upon, and subscribed by all Persons in publick Trust, where the Covenants are renounced and condemned.’
- ‘4. Against the Act and Declaration published at Glasgow, for ousting of the faithful Ministers who could not comply with Prelacy, whereby 300 and upwards of them were illegally ejected.’

- ‘5. Against that presumptuous Act for imposing an holy anniversary Day, as they call it, to be kept yearly upon the 29 of May, as a Day of rejoicing and thanksgiving for the King's Birth and Restoration; whereby the Appointers have intruded upon the Lord's Pre-rogative, and the Observers have given the Glory to the Creature that is due to our Lord Redeemer, and rejoiced over the setting up an usurping Power to the destroying the Interest of Christ in the Land.’

- ‘6. Against the explicatory Act 1669. and the sacrilegious Supremacy enacted and established thereby.’

‘Lastly. Against the Acts of Council, their Warrants and Instructions for Indulgence, and all other their sinful and unlawful Acts, made and executed by them, for promoting their usurped Supremacy.’

‘And, for Confirmation of this our Testimony, we do this Day, being the 29 of May 1679. publicly at the Cross of Rutherglen, most justly burn the abovementioned Acts, to evidence our Dislike and Testimony against the same, as they have unjustly, perfidiously, and presumptuously burned our sacred Covenants.’

‘And, we hope, none will take Exception against our not subscribing this our Testimony, being so solemnly published; since we are always ready to do in this as shall be judged necessary, by Consent of the rest of our suffering Brethren in Scotland.’

Several Copies want the Article about the Indulgence.

I have seen a good many Copies of this Paper in Writ, and they generally agree with that which is printed by the Society People, in their informatory Vindication, Edit. 2. p. 171. and want the Clause about the Indulgence. But this, and some other Copies I have seen, I have Reason Reason to believe, is the extended Copy published at Rutherglen. Whether this Draught agrees with what was resolved on by the Publishers Constituents, I cannot determine. Altho' probably the Bulk of that Meeting, where it was agreed upon, were heartily against the Indulgence, yet I question if they all came the length of burning the Acts thereunto, and am ready to suspect, that the Warmth of some imposed upon the Simplicity of Mr. Thomas Douglas, and this Alteration or Addition was made when the Paper was extended for Publication.

1679.

The Ground of my Jealousy is a Copy I have before me, which agrees with the most I have seen, and with that in Print, and so needs not be insert in the Appendix, bearing this Title, Double of a Paper resolved upon to have been read at the Cross of Glasgow, May 29. 1679. wants this Clause, and yet, by that Inscription, it seems to have contained what was at first resolved upon: The most Part, as I have said, want it, and that Copy, published by that Set of People, in Print likewise. If this Conjecture hold, it is a new Proof of Mr. Hamilton, and others engaged, their Zeal to form their publick Appearances very soon against other Presbyterians, and the Indulged in particular.

Be this as it will, in their after Debates this was cast up, and this Testimony was urged against joyning with such who could not acknowledge the Evil of the Indulgence, and it was likewise, some time after this, alledged to import a denying of the King's Authority: But the Framers of it plainly say, as we shall afterwards hear, That this was only waved, and not determined or denied; Matters among them were not yet come this Length.

From this short Account of the Matter of Fact, as it passed at Rutherglen, the gross Ignorance of our Affairs in Scotland, to call it no worse, in the Author of the Caveat fr the Whigs, Part I. p. 61. will be plain. That Writer tells us, That at Ragland they proclaimed the Covenant; which is just of a Piece with his senseless Story, p. 65. That the Presbyterians, at their armed Field-conventicles, used to take the Covenant openly, to the Number of Seven or Eight thousand in a Body; which he alleges to have been the Cause of the Government's dealing severely with them. The English Writers have many a Time surpris'd me with their palpable Mistakes in Matter of Fact, when they meddle with our Scots Affairs: But in the Accounts of this Period, I own, Allowances must be made them, as being imposed upon by Sir George Mackenzie's Vindication of the Reigns of King Charles and King James, and the little idle Stories vented by some of our Scots Episcopal Clergy, since the Revolution retired into England, who have made up a great many Untruths, to blacken this National Church, and to gratify their own fretted Spirits, as well as the Inclinations of some of the High-flyers in England. Indeed Presbyterians may in part blame themselves, who have not given our Neighbours and the World a fair and just Account of this Period.

Remark upon the Account of this in the Caveat for the Whigs.

Springs of the Mistakes in English Writers when they handle our Scots Affairs at this Period.

But I leave this Appearance at Rutherglen, and come forward to what followed upon it. Mr. Hamilton and his Party retired from Rutherglen towards Evandale and Newmills, after the Publication of their Paper; whereabout Mr. Thomas Douglas was to preach next Lord's Day. The publishing of this Declaration, and the extinguishing the Bonfires made a mighty Noise, both at Glasgow and Edinburgh. The Thing was magnified, and the Officers of the King's Forces at Glasgow were in a terrible Fret.

This Declaration makes a great Noise.

Mr. Graham of Claverhouse, whom we shall frequently meet with in this Period, afterwards created Viscount of Dundee. was now a Captain of one of the new levied Troops, and had been, beyond his Companions, active in oppressing the Country, and bearing down of Conventicles. This Gentleman had large Powers granted him, and marched upon Saturday May 31. in quest of these who had made the Appearance at Rutherglen.

Claverhouse goes in pursuit of Mr. Hamilton, and his Party.

He had his own Troop, two others, and some Foot given him, to go on this Expedition. These Men, especially his own Troop, were rude profane Wretches. One Instance shall suffice out of many. One of them, James Blair, who had been Chan'ellor to the Assize who gave their Verdict against the four Men executed at Glasgow, for being at Pentland, came out to Rutherglen the Day after Mr. Hamilton had been there; whether for Information, or what End I know not: He raged up and down the Streets like one possessed, threatening and abusing the Inhabitants, and asking where these Eighty Men were who flock'd out the Fires Yesternight, swearing bloodily he would run his Sword through their Soul if he had them, with many other senseless and execrable Expressions. This poor Man was killed next Day save one at Drumclog.

The Rudeness of the Soldiers with him.

Claverhouse's Commission and Powers were very great, tho' I cannot say but they were agreeable to the Acts of Council formerly mentioned; and had he not been stopped, was abundantly ready to have executed them in all Points: He had Liberty to kill and destroy all he found in Arms, at any Field-meeting, to deal with them as Traitors, and to discover, seize, and, upon Resistance, to kill all who had any Share in the Appearance at Rutherglen.

His Commission and Powers.

Accordingly upon the Saturday Afternoon, he came up in a Surprise upon the Town of Hamiltoun, where he got Notice of Mr. John King and some others, who were come to that Place, or near by it. Whether Mr. King was to go to the Meeting at Loredn-hill, or to preach himself near by Hamiltoun, I know not; the last is most probable, for I don't find him among Geese to Hamiltoun and Loredn Mr. John King.

1679.

And some of thems.

among these who ordinarily were with Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Thomas Douglas and others of their Sentiments.

Claverhouse seized Mr. John King Preacher, in Hamiltoun, or, as some Papers say, in a House a little South-east from the Town, and about Fourteen more Country Men, mostly Strangers, either come with Mr. King, or going to the Meeting to Morrow. There was some Pretence to seize Mr. King, being a vagrant Preacher, and, I think, inter-communed; but there was no Law for seizing the rest, they not being in Arms, or any Thing to be laid to their Charge.

Design laid to rescue them.

When this was known, some who escaped, and the People near by, began to entertain Thoughts of rescuing Mr. King; and some of them went toward Glasgow, acquainting their Friends by the Way, and hearing of the Meeting towards Lowdonhill, went thither, expecting Assistance from thence.

Claverhouse, June 1. marches with the Prisoners to disperse the Conventicle near Lowdon-hill.

Mean while Claverhouse was likewise advertised of that Conventicle designed next Day, and resolved to go and disperse them, and come from thence to Glasgow, with his Prisoners. I am told he was dissuaded, by some of his Friends, from going thither, and assured there would be a good many resolute Men in Arms there, yet trusting to his own Troop, and some others of Horse and Dragoons he had with him, he would go.

Prisoners mal-treated in the Way.

Accordingly upon the Sabbath Morning, June 1. he marched very early from Hamiltoun to Stratheven Town, about Five Miles South, and carried his Prisoners with him, which was happy for them. They were bound Two and Two of them together, and his Men drove them before them like so many Sheep. When they came to Stratheven, they had distinct Accounts that Mr. Thomas Douglas was to preach that Day near Lowdonhill, Three or Four Miles westward from Stratheven; and thither Claverhouse resolves to march straight with his Party and Prisoners.

All who had Arms at the Meeting go and meet Claverhouse;

Publick Worship was begun by Mr. Douglas, when the Accounts came to them that Claverhouse and his Men were coming upon them, and had Mr. King and others their Friends Prisoners. Upon this, finding Evil was determined against them, all who had Arms drew out from the rest of the Meeting, and resolved to go and meet the Soldiers, and prevent their dissolving the Meeting; and, if possible, relieve Mr. King and the other Prisoners.

And come up with him at Drumclog;

They got together about 40 Horse, and 150, or 200 Foot, very ill provided with Ammunition, and untrain'd, but hearty and abundantly brisk for Action, and came up with Claverhouse and his Party in a Muir, near a Place called Drumclog, from whence this Rencounter hath its Name.

And defeat
him.

This little Army of raw undisciplined Country Men, who had no Experience in the Business of fighting, neither had they Officers of Skill to lead them, very bravely stood Claverhouse's first Fire, and returned it with much Gallantry; and after a short, but very close and warm Engagement, the Soldiers gave Way, were intirely defeat, and the Prisoners rescued. Claverhouse and his Men fled and were pursued a Mile or two.

Number of the killed on both Sides.

In the Engagement and Pursuit, there were about Twenty, some say Forty of the Soldiers killed, and Claverhouse himself was in great Hazard, had his Horse shot under him, and very narrowly escaped. Several of the other Officers were wounded, and some of the Soldiers taken Prisoners, whom having disarmed, they dismissed without any further Injury, having no Prison-house to put them in. All this was done with very inconsiderable Loss on the Country Mens Side. Some Accounts before me say, only one Man, John Mortoun, was killed; others say, Two or Three, and some few wounded. Some of them died in a few Days, as Thomas Weir, and William Daniel, who was concerned in the Bishop's Death.

The Success at Drumclog by some ascribed to Mr. Hamilton, by others to William Clelland.

Mr. Hamilton in this Action discovered abundance of Bravery and Valour, and from this Day's Success, he reckoned himself intitled to command afterwards wherever he was, tho' he had no Experience in military Affairs; and some reckoned him of a passionate and positive Temper. I find some Papers blame him for one of the Soldier's being killed after Quarters given; but how far this is true, I cannot determine; and they add, that after this, his Conduct, Counsel, and Courage evidently failed him. Other Accounts before me give the Honour of this Success to William Clelland, afterwards Lieutenant Colonel Clelland, well known for his Piety and Bravery, at, and since the Revolution, and say, he made the Country People, upon the Soldiers presenting their Pieces, and firing, fall flat to the Ground, so that they quite escaped their Shot.

After this, Victors, they return to the Meeting.

However this Matter stood, Claverhouse and his Men were totally routed; and it was the Opinion of not a few, that if the Country Men had pushed their Success, followed their Chuse, and gone straight to Glasgow that Day, they might easily with such as would have joyned them by the Road, upon the Notice of their Success, have dislodged the Soldiers there, and very soon made a great Appearance; but they did not so, and in a few Hours returned to the Meeting. (Some Accounts before me say, they went straight to Hamiltoun.) Thus the Forces at Glasgow had the Alarm, and were prepared to receive them to Morrow, as shall be noticed in its Place.

Where it is resolved to continue together in Arms.

When they returned, and had consulted some time among themselves, what to do in their present Circumstances, Mr. Hamilton and his Party came to a Resolution to continue and abide abide together in Arms. The Grounds they went upon were many. When Things were at this Pass, it appeared absolutely necessary they should stick together; they could not separate without evident Hazard; they knew well their Persecutors Rage would be sharpened by this Rule; and if when they were merely passive, and made no Resistance, they and others used to be sought for at their Dwelling-houses, in their Wandrings taken, tortured, and murdered, or at least banished; what might they not now expect? As soon as ever they separate, the Soldiers would be upon them one by one, and destroy them. Upon these Reasons they resolved to abide together in this Extremity, till they saw what Turn Things would take. This was the Beginning of the Rising which ended at Bothwell.

It is not worth while to refute the senseless Blunders of the Writer of the Caveat for the Whigs, upon this Skirmish at Drumclog. Every Line almost contains a Mistake. He talks, "That the Country Men upon June 1. rendezvoused upon Lowdonhill, to the Number of fourteen or fifteen hundred Men, well armed, the Foot commanded by one Weir, and the Horse by Balfour and Hachstoun, Murderers of the Primate, with Hamilton and Patron." I fancy he would be at Paton of Meadowhead, but he was not come up till some Days after Drumclog. I need not expose the Lies in every Word of this; 'tis just made up to expose the Country People, and extenuate Claverhouse's shameful Defeat.

Mr. Hamilton and these with him, after their Success marched that Night to Hamiltoun with an Eye to the City of Glasgow. Claverhouse, when after his narrow Escape got to that City, sufficiently alarmed my Lord Ross, and the rest of the Officers of the King's Army there, and, to be sure, did not lessen Mr. Hamilton's Numbers. By this Means the Soldiers there were upon their Guard, and had formed Barricadoes and some Kind of Shelter for themselves at the Cross and other Places in that open and large City, before the Country People could reach it.

Upon Munday June 2. Mr. Hamilton and his Party marched from Hamiltoun to Glasgow; the Success they had the Day before, the Numbers joyned to them in their March to Hamiltoun, and 'twixt Hamiltoun and Glasgow, where the Country had been alarmed with Mr. King's being taken, and encouraged by Claverhouse's Flight, had elevated them too much. They would scarce have attempted to dislodge the regular Troops, had they duly considered their Number, the Skill of their Officers, my Lord Ross, Major White, Claverhouse and others, and the Care they would take to put themselves in the best Posture of Defence the Place would allow; and they had not been idle, but formed themselves in the Centre of the Town, and covered themselves at the Cross with Crosses laid over with Deils and other Things at Hand, the best way they might; behind these they stood and received the Shot of the Country Men, without any Hazard almost.

About Ten of the Clock the Country Men came to Glasgow, and divided themselves into two Bodies. The one, under Command of Mr. Hamilton, came up the Street called the Gallowgate; and here their Leader did not shew that Gallantry he had the Day before discovered, and some question if he looked the Soldiers in the Face, and say he stepped into a House at the Gallowgate Bridge till his Men retired; the other Party came in at the Head of the Town, by the Wynd-head and College.

The Country Men shewed abundance of Courage, but were under mighty Disadvantages; their Horses were of no Use to them at all; they were perfectly open to the Fire from the Cloises and Houses, as well as that of the Soldiers who lay behind the Rails and Barricadoes covered from their Fire; yet so brisk were the Country Men in their Attack, that, I am told, several of the Soldiers gave Way, and some of their Officers saw good to retire behind the Tolbooth stair. And 'tis not improbable if the Country Men had had Officers to direct and lead them, they might have chased the Soldiers out of their Nest.

But after Six or Eight of them were killed in the Attack, among whom I find Walter Paterson a choice and pious Youth in Canmethan Parish, and Two or Three wounded, who were afterwards taken, the Country Men retired in Order, finding the Attempt too warm for them, and drew up in Two Bodies a little from the Gallowgate Port, expecting the regular Forces would venture out of their Barricadoes, and give them fair Play in the open Fields: But the Soldiers liked their Entrenchment very well, and were not fond to follow them, and content to ly still with whole Skins. I am told indeed a few were sent out to view the Country People's Army, but, as soon as they discovered a Party sent to meet them, they retired.

After they had waited some Time in the open Fields without any Appearance of a Visit from the Soldiers, Mr. Hamilton and those with him marched back again to Hamiltoun, where they formed a Kind of Camp; the People not being unfriendly, and the Duke and Dutcheſs at London, they took the Liberty to put their Horses into their Parks. This Discomfiture very much disheartned the raw and unexperienced Soldiers. It was indeed a rash Attempt, and if they were left in the Attack by their Leader, it could not be but discouraging; but the Numbers from all Quarters who flocked to them, soon made them forget this Disappointment.

1679.

Their Reasons for this.

Remarks upon the Account of this in the Caveat for the Whigs.Mr. Hamilton and his Party come to Hamiltoun that Night, and Claverhouse escaped to Glasgow and alarmed the Soldiers there.Munday June 2. Mr. Hamilton and these who joyned him attack Glasgow.Particulars of the Attack at Glasgow.After some killed and wounded, the Country Men retire out of Glasgow.And go to Hamiltoun.

1679.

Great Inhumanity used by Soldiers to the dead Bodies in the Street of Glasgow.

Their Burial hindered for some Days.

When they are fairly marched off, the King's Forces came out of their Barricadœ. Great was the Inhumanity of the Soldiers to the dead Bodies left in the Streets. I find some Papers asserting that Claverhouse and some of the Officers gave Orders that none should bury them, but that the Butchers Dogs should be suffered to eat them. I can scarce prevail with my self to think there were any such Orders given; but it is certain that the seven dead Bodies lay upon the Street from Eleven of the Clock till Night came on, and the common Soldiers would not permit them to be carried into Houses, yea, actually hindred by Force People who were going about this Act of Humanity: Yea, which further discovers their naughty Barbarity, when in the Evening they were taken into Houses, and dressed up for their Burial, the Soldiers came in and turned the Bodies out of their dead Clothes, and went off with the Linens.

And when a Kind of Connivance was given to bury them, none durst appear to do this last Office but Women; yea, when these were carrying them up the Street to their Burial-place, such was the unparalleled Rudeness of the Soldiers, that they attacked the Women, cut the Mort-cloths with their Swords, and forced away the Bier-trees from them. Upon this the Women turned off some of their own Plaids, folded them by their Length, and put them under the Coffins, and went on with them, till the merciless Soldiers, after they had scattered those who were not carrying, came and took the Plaids from them, and would not suffer them to carry the Coffins to their Graves, so they were set in the Alms-house near the High-church, and I think continued there till Mr. Welsh and some of their Friends in a few Days came and buried them, as shall be noticed in its own Room.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Procedure of the Council, and Motions of the King's Forces until the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth's coming down, June 18. 1679.

Contents of this Section.

Council's Affairs June 3.

Proclamation against the Rebels. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 15.

Remarks upon it.

I Shall in this Section essay a Narrative of the Procedure of the Managers and Council at Edinburgh, upon this Rising, now begun in the West, from the Registers, and take Notice of the Orders they send to the Army, and their Motions in prosecution of these as far as the Hunts in the Books of Council lead me.

Very early June 3. the Council meet by Advertisement from the Committee for publick Affairs, who had received a Letter from Claverhouse to the Major General, giving an Account of the Opposition he had met with at Drumclog, and another from my Lord Ross acquainting them with the Attack made upon Glasgow. Immediately they form and publish the Proclamation against the Rebels in Arms in the West, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 15.

The first Accounts of Matters of this Nature are not readily the best, and 'tis the lame Poit brings the surest News: Accordingly we shall find, in running through this Paper, Mistakes in Matter of Fact. We have done so in former Papers of this Nature, and ere long we will meet with more of them. I shall make but a few Remarks on it.

The Foundation of all that follows, is what hath been considered, the Laws declaring it Treason for any Subjects to rise in Arms without the King's Authority. 'Tis added, that the People now up in Arms had tasted of the King's Bounty and Clemency, which the Reader may judge of by the preceeding History. If Harassings, Huntings, Fugitating, Intercommuning, and daily Searchings and Perils be the Bounty and Clemency of this Period, they tasted abundantly of them. The Cloke of Religion is made the ordinary Pretext of Rebellion, which does not at all hold as to Presbyterians, how far soever it may be true of Papists: The religious Rights and Reformation of Scotland was indeed made a Part of our legal Constitution, and a good many of the publick Appearances pointed at here, and called Rebellion, were for both.

It is not worth while to consider the Honour the Council do to the little Burgh of Rutherglen, in making it the Head Burgh of the Shire, for the sake of a little Aggravation of the Rising there. But, that the Persons who came there, proclaimed the Covenant, is what is not Matter of Fact. We have seen what they proclaimed, and indeed it differs very much from our Covenants. That they seized upon the Persons of divers of the King's Subjects, plundered and robbed them of their Horses, Arms, and other Goods, is likewise a Misinformation, unless they understand it of what they did to the Soldiers, whom they took in their Flight: Neither did they commit any Outrages against the King's loyal Subjects.

After this Narrative, the Reader will judge with what Ground that Insurrection is declared to be an open, manifest, and horrid Rebellion, and that all the Authors, Actors, and Adherents are to be pursued as professed Traitors. After this Declaration, which does not appear to me me any great Encouragement to lay down their Arms, all are charged to desist from their Rebellion, lay down their Arms, and render their Persons to the Earl of Linlithgow, or any other Officer or Magistrate in Twenty four Hours : With Certification, they shall be proceeded against as desperate and incorrigible Traitors.

For my Share, the Tenor of this Paper looks as if designed to make the Country desperate. They are declared professed Traitors, invited to come in, without any Promise of Pardon, in Twenty four Hours, and after that, they are to be treated as desperate Traitors, and incapable of Mercy. What could this mean, but to put them to the greatest Heights?

All are discharged to harbour, or supply them, or correspond with them, without Warrant of the Earl of Linlithgow, and required to joyn with the Army, and rise in Arms, under Pain of Treason to the Refusers. Masters of Families, Heritors and Landlords are required to be careful lest any of their Children, Servants, or Tenants joyn the Rebels: Certifying them, if found negligent, they shall be looked on as disaffected Persons. This Clause was improved after Bothwell, with a witness, by the Soldiers and others.

Unto this Proclamation, when the News of Multitudes joyning Mr. Hamilton, and the People now in Arms came East, the Council added another with relation to the Militia, dated June 5. which is likewise App. N<sup>o</sup>. 16. It is founded upon Act 2. Sess. 1. 2 Parl. Char. II. and Act 1. Sess. 3. All the Outriggers of the Militia, and Officers thereof, are ordered to come out, and keep their Diets of Rendezvous, and to joyn and act with the standing Forces, when required by the Privy Council or Commander in Chief, the Earl of Linlithgow, under the Certification of being fined toties quoties for ilk Day's Absence, as the Act specifies, and being looked upon as Favourers and Compilers with the Rebels, and pursued and punished accordingly. The Fines are very severe, and doubled in Time of War ; and became Matter of much Trouble to not a few, after this Business was over. I have no Accounts of the Militia's doing any great Things when the Time of Action came; however, this, with what follows, discovers both the Fear of our Counsellors, and their Care to provide against the Country People now together.

Their Care continues : And that I may give all the Proclamations at this Time together; June 7. all the Heritors and Freeholders are called to attend the King's Host, by the Proclamation I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 17. The Narrative of this Proclamation shews it was formed when the regular Forces, coming back towards Glasgow, thought good to return ; since it represents, that the Insurrection in the western Shires is now grown to an open Rebellion. Upon this the Council, tho' they might have required all 'twixt Sixty and Sixteen to rise, yet at this Time, they only call out the Regiments of the Foot Militia in the Shires mentioned in the Proclamation, and require the Heritors and Freeholders who are fencible Men, with so many of their Servants and Followers as they can bring out upon Horse, to repair to the Places specified, and supersede the Horse Militia. The whole western Shires are omitted, and those named are, Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Peebles, Haddingtoun, Stirling, Clackmannan, Berwick, Roxburgh, and Selkirk, Fife, Perth, Forfar, Kincardin, Marisbal's Part of Aberdeen, Banff, and Errol's Part of Aberdeen, Ross, Elgin, Forres, Nairn. All benorth Forth are to march, immediately after their Rendezvous, to Stirling-bridge ; and all besouth Forth to the Links of Leith. Full Power is granted to them to seize all disaffected Persons ; and, in case of Resistance, to use them as Enemies, within their respective Bounds, especially such as shall be suspected to be going out of the Shire, to joyn the Rebels. Heritors who come not out with their best Horses and Arms, and all their Servants and Followers they can bring on Horseback, shall be liable to the Pains and Penalties provided by Acts of Parliament, against such who do not attend the King's Host, or desert the same.

This Proclamation was Matter of very grievous Fining to a great many Gentlemen and others, who, from different Reasons, could not attend the King's Host, as we shall afterwards have Occasion to remark in its own Place. I shall only observe further, that all or most Part of the Officers named for that Host were the most violent Persecutors of Presbyterians ; and there were not a few among them Favourers of Popery, and some professed Papists. This was plainly contrary to Law, and their own late Proclamation this very Year, and flowed from the Strength of the Duke of York's Party in Council.

These Proclamations, especially this last, of June 7. were very burdensom to the Country; and at this Juncture there was a Paper writ by a very able Hand, intituled, A Letter of Advice writ by a Gentleman to his Friend, on the Occasion of his going out to wait upon the Army, conform to the Proclamation, June 7. 1679. The Author of which takes Notice " of another " Proclamation for Volunteers, which I have not seen, whereby he says, all the Papists in the " Kingdom are armed, and called out to the Fields ; and reckons that, and this anent Heritors " to be among the greatest Grievances. He complains heavily, that after so large a Taxation, " for maintaining a standing Army, Gentlemen should be obliged to come out themselves : " And notices, That East Lothian, Kincardin, and Marisbal's Part of Aberdeen, were under " Popish Commanders named by the Council, contrary to Law, and their own late Proclamation. And that those Officers had the Power of naming inferior Officers."

1679:

Proclamation
about the Milita, June 5.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 16.

Proclamation 1
for attending the King's Host, June 7.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 17.

This Proclamation Matter of grievous Fining alterwards.

Letter of Advice to a Friend giving Obedience to this Proclamation.

1679.

"He takes Notice, That the Presbyterians were forced from their Meetings in Houses (permitted in England and Ireland) to the Fields, and then hunted, apprehended, imprisoned, tortured, blocked up in Prison; and some of them lay there many Years who never had been at a Field-meeting; and when thus forced to the Hills, they were given out as designing a Rebellion, and then pursued by armed Men as Traitors; many of them apprehended, some wounded, some killed, and Multitudes put in close Prisons, others tormented and sold as Slaves; and Women most barbarously used, stripped naked, their Clothes taken away, and left in that Condition in the open Fields."

"And when their patient Bearing of all had the more exasperated their Persecutors, the Highland Host was sent among them, whose Cruelties and horrid Abuses were too villainous and shameful to be named by any Christian, or a Man who must own himself a Country-man of such who committed them, or of those by whom they were authorized."

"He further observes, That an Act of Favour by the King to his Presbyterian Subjects, was suppressed by the Bishops, and instead of that a Proclamation emitted, declaring it Treason to have Arms at Field-meetings: And after all they had met with, he falls in with the Earl of Shaftsbury's Remark, that it was a greater Wonder they had born so long, than that now they were in Arms for their own Defence. And then asks his Friend some very home Questions as to his joining with the King's Host, tho' there be a Proclamation for it, contrary to Law and the King's Coronation Oath, as well as opposite to the King's own declared Intentions of Clemency."

"He represents, That the King of France never imposed Officers upon his Nobility and Gentry, and exposes the Council's making very mean Persons, never before Soldiers, Cornets of Troops, wherein the Earl of Lothian, Earl of Dalhousie, Viscount of Oxenford, Lords Torphichen, Balmerinock, &c. ride Troopers, and where the Duke of Buccleugh can, according to the Proclamation, pretend no higher than the right Hand of the first Rank."

The Matter is summed up in short. "The Bishops have helped the Duke of Lawderdale, and therefore the whole Nobility and Gentry in the Kingdom must serve their Interests, when he is the King's Minion: And he lays it down as a Rule, that he is the best Friend to his King, that is, the best Friend to his Country, and Laws and Liberties thereof; and shews, that as the Prelates of England had of late cast the Balance in Parliament against the Exclusion of a Papist, and in behalf of the impeached Lords; so in Scotland, since their being set up, they had been the great Promoters of arbitrary Power and Oppression: And Presbytery must of Necessity, and in its very Nature, be the greatest Bulwark against Popery, the total Extirpation of which is the great Thing every honest Man should be set upon."

These Heads and several others are very handsomely enlarged upon, and this Letter being pretty long, and never published that I know of, and writ, as I have Ground to think, by a masterly Hand, I believe it will be acceptable to the Reader to find it in the Appendix, N<sup>o</sup>. 18.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 18.

Orders to the Militia in different Shires.

They send Orders to the Militia, Companies of Horse and Foot, to meet at the Times underwritten. These in Haddingtoun, Berwick, Lintithgow, Peebles, and Stirling, Munday next the 9 instant. Those of Fife upon the 10. Angus upon the 11. That all have Ten Days Provision with them; and the Militia Troop of Edinburgh to Morrow on the Links of Leith, and the Foot on the 5 instant.

Council's Letter to Lawderdale, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 19.

Mistakes in it as to Facts.

At their Afternoon's Sederunt, they send a Letter to Lawderdale, together with Claverhouse, and my Lord Ross their Letters, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 19. that the Reader may have the Accounts sent in by the Army, and observe the plain Mistakes in Matter of Fact, that through Haste and Misinformation the Council run into. They say, the Rutherglen Declaration traiterously asserts the King to be an Usurper. This is a Consequence of their own framing, from an Expression in the Declaration, which to me appears to relate not to the King's Right and Claim to the Government, but the Exercise of an usurped Power in setting up anniversary Days, and destroying the Interests of the Church. But they wire-draw Expressions to expose the People now in Arms, whereas we shall see, that the Bulk of these gathered at this Time, were far from denying the King's Authority. It is yet a greater Mistake, when they say, that Mr. John King and Three others were seized by Claverhouse in Stratheven, whereas they were taken at Hamiltoun. Besides, their Numbers were very far from Fifteen or Sixteen Hundred, as the Council represents them. I much doubt if there were yet the third Part of these in Arms. One needs not be surprized at the gross Blunders the English Historians fall into, when Narratives from the Council contain so many Misrepresentations.

Their Care about the Town and Castle of Edinburgh.

That same Day they ordain the Regiment of Edinburgh to rendezvouze to Morrow, and order the Magistrates there to take and grant Receipts for all the Cannon they can meet with in Cellars, or elsewhere in Leith, for the Security of the Town and the King's Service: And that some of the Bailies attend at Leith, and examine all Persons passing the Ferry at Tides-times,

times, and imprison such as cannot give Account of themselves. Further, the Laird of Lundin, Governor of the Castle, is appointed to call for Smiths, Wrights, and others his Majesty's Servants, to work in the Castle as he sees necessary; and they grant him Warrant to take all Manner of Provisions necessary for the Castle, where he can find them, and give Receipts, upon which the Lords of the Treasury are to pay the Owners at the ordinary Prices.

1679.

June 4. The Council give Orders, that after the Muster is over this Day, one Company of the Militia keep Guard in the Canongate Tolbooth, and another in the Abbey, and that the whole Regiment be ready to draw together upon the Tuck of Drum; and that the Magistrates of Edinburgh make Trial what Powder is lately sent out of Town, and to whom, and secure all the Powder in Town, and place it in the Castle.

The Forces at Glasgow leave it, and retire eastward.

To return to the Proceedings of the Army after the Attempt upon Glasgow, my Lord Ross, and the rest of the Officers of the King's Forces there, finding the Gathering of the Country People growing, and expecting every Day considerable Numbers to be added to them, and not reckoning themselves able to stand out a second Attack, found it advisable to retire eastward.

Accordingly, June 3. they marched Bag and Baggage to Kilsyth, carrying some of the wounded Country Men, who fell into their Hands, with them in Carts: Next Day, when near Falkirk, they received the Council's Orders to stop, till the Earl of Linlithgow's Regiment, and other Forces from Stirling and other Places, joyned them, and then to march back all in a Body to the West Country.

The Motions of the Forces will best appear from the Letters which I meet with in the Council Registers from and to the Earl of Linlithgow. June 5. the Earl writes to the Chancellor, "That he intended to have marched with the Forces to Stirling that Morning, but being informed, that the Rebels are marched to Glasgow, upon my Lord Ross's Removal thence, he found it proper to order him with his whole Party to joyn him at the Bridge of Bonny to Morrow Morning; upon this Consideration, that if they had gone to Stirling, the Rebels might have marched straight to Edinburgh before he could have reached them." He adds, "They are said to be very strong, and Rogues flocking to them from all Hands." The Council in theirs to him, thank him for his Care; acquaint him the Companies from Dumfries are come to Lintoun, and shall, as soon as they arrive, be sent up to him, with such of the Militia as can be spared. They desire him to send them Accounts every Day.

Motions of the Forces June 5.

June 6. The Earl acquaints the Chancellor, "That he had joyned my Lord Ross and the Forces with him at Larber-muir, where they had Information from Glasgow, that the Rebels were about Bothwell-bridge and Hamiltoun, where they did exercise Yesterday all Day; that Two Troops of Horse from Galloway, Newmills, and Galsoun, and a Company of Foot with Colours and Drums had joyned them; that, when come to the Holly-bush, he received Intelligence from the Magistrates of Glasgow, that the Rebels continued where they were, and were in Number about Seven Thousand. Since he hears, they are to march to Lowdonhill; and the Country are still gathering to them. That he can come to no Resolution till he get further Intelligence; and is just now sending Two Soldiers in Disguise to go to them, and looking after some Country People who may be trusted to send among them, to bring him Intelligence." The Council in their Answer acquaint the Earl, that they have sent up to him some more Forces, that, instead of the Militia, they have ordered the Heritors to come out on Horseback; and conclude with their Assurance of his Vigilance and Care.

June 6.

That Night about Eight of the Clock the Council meet upon another Letter from the Major General, dated Kirkintulloch One of the Clock, bearing, "That Yesterday they marched to Kilsyth, whence they came this Day hither, where certain Advice came of the Rebels Strength, about 8000 Foot and Horse, if not more. He adds, And being apprehensive of the dangerous Consequences which may follow to his Majesty's Service, if we should engage mad Zealors, with such unequal Numbers, the whole Officers, upon Deliberation, are of Opinion that it is not safe to advance nearer the Enemy, and conceive it best to retire to Stirling, to refresh our wearied Men, and expect such as the Council shall see needful to order up to us, that we may be able to make head against the Rebels." He gives this as the Opinion of all the Officers, and moves that his Majesty be acquainted, and besought to send down Forces from England; but submits all to the Council; and promises, if they order them, to march, either to Edinburgh or against the Rebels, be their Numbers what they will. The Council in their Return approve of their retiring, and recommend it to them to come in to Edinburgh, and send an Express to Stirling, that the Governor look well to the Safety of that Place.

At the same Time they send an Express to Lawderdale, with the Letter from the Earl of Linlithgow, and one from themselves, bearing what is above; and further, "That they had called together the Foot Militia in Roxburgh, Selkirk, Kincardin, Aberdeen, Bamff, Ross, Elgin, Forres, and Nairn; and in place of the Militia Horse, by a Proclamation (already noticed) they had ordered all the Heritors in the several Shires, with their Servants and

Letter to Lawderdale, desiring Forces from England.

1679.

June 7. the Army are cantoned about Edinburgh, where they continue till the 16.

Procedure of the Council, June 5.

June 6.

June 7. Letter to the Earl of Argyle.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 20.

June 8.

Act for administering an Oath to the Militia.

June 9.

June 10.

June 11.

June 12.

Letter from Lawderdale, June 9. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 21. Council's Answer. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 22. Letter from Lawderdale, June 11. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 23. Council's Answer.

“ Followers, whom they are able to bring out on Horseback, to rendezvouze. They add, But after all we dare not conclude his Majesty may trust to this as a sufficient Force to quench this violent Flame, and therefore desire Forces from England and Ireland.”
 June 7. The Earl of Linlithgow writes to the Chancellor, “ That, according to the Council's Orders, he is on his March to Linlithgow, desires Directions where to quarter his Men, and tells him Stirling is in a good Condition. ” The Council in their Return, refer the Quartering of the Soldiers about Edinburgh to himself, and desire he may leave some Parties of Horse to the Westward of Edinburgh, and be careful to get Intelligence, and that he, and all the Counsellors with him may be present at the Meeting of Council to Morrow at Six after Noon. Obedience to this was given; the Army continued about Edinburgh, till the 16. when they began to march Westward against the People at Bothwell, as we shall afterwards hear.

I need not take up much more Room with the Procedure of the Council at this Juncture: We have seen their most material Steps. I shall only notice that June 5. after the publishing the Proclamation about raising the Militia, they order the Militia Regiment at Midlothian, to quarter at Leith; that the Militia in the northern Shires rendezvouze on the 17. and write to the Earls Marischal, Errol and Kintore, to come to Edinburgh with all Speed. Upon the 6. they write to the Earl of Queensberry, to call together the haill Gentlemen, Heritors, and Freeholders in the Shire of Dumfries, with as many Servants and Followers as they can bring out on Horse with Arms, and march straight to Edinburgh. The like Appointment is given to the Earl of Nithsdale, for Wigtoun and Kirkcudbright. And June 7. they require the Earl of Argyle to come with his Friends, and joyn the King's Army. I have insert their Letter App. N<sup>o</sup>. 20. And another of the same Nature is writ to the Earl of Cathness, desiring him to be at Stirling by the 14 instant. June 8. all the Militia Regiments on the South of Forth are appointed to rendezvouze at Leith as soon as possible, and those benorth it, at Stirling.

That same Day they appoint an Oath to be administered to the Militia by the following Act. “ The Lords of Council, considering how necessary it is to secure the Town of Edinburgh from all Attempts of the Rebels, do ordain the Magistrates of Edinburgh, to draw out to Morrow the Militia Regiment, and Train-bands, and cause the haill Officers enrol the Soldiers under their Command; and ordain the Provost, as Colonel, to administer to the Officers and Soldiers the following Oath, That they shall be true and faithful to the King, defend his Authority, and maintain the same against this Insurrection and Rebellion, and all others, if any shall happen, with the Hazard of their Lives and Fortunes. And if any shall refuse this Oath, he be presently disarmed, secured, and Notice given to the Council.” This is one of the plainest Oaths imposed in this Reign.

June 9. The Council require the Earl of Mar to secure the Passages of the Water of Forth, and seize all Persons who pass the Water with Horses or Arms, not having Passes. That same Diet they write to Major Main, who with a Troop of Horse and Five of Dragoons, was at Anwick, and ready to act against the Rebels, desiring him to march to Kelso, and seize Frank Pringle of Rowiston, Bailie of Kelso, John Brown, and James Handiside; and from thence to go to Jedburgh, and thence to Selkirk, where he should meet with a Party of his Majesty's Forces with further Orders. All Boats are ordered to be secured at Queensferry and Blackness. And Half a Crown is appointed to be given to every Foot Soldier, besides his Pay, for their present Necessity.

June 10. Upon Information that some Rebels infest the Shire of Fife, the Council send over a Troop of Horse, and some Dragoons under the Command of the Laird of Meldrum; the Chancellor is likewise desired to repair thither. The Parishes about Edinburgh are ordered to bring Ammunition for the King's Army. Some Hackney Coach Horses are to draw the Artillery and Sixty Bolls of Meal; and Forty Horses, to carry the Meal for the Use of the Army, are to be provided.

The Master of Ross acquaints the Council, by a Letter read June 11. That Yesterday, near Selkirk, he met with a Party of Rebels of about 150. and defeated them, killed near 60. and took 10 near Galla Water. Next Day the Lord Elphinstoun acquaints the Council, he had taken 33 Rebels Prisoners, who were coming from Fife, and the like Number near Perth. This Day they order the Earl of Mar to gather as many Highland Foot as may be, and bring them to Stirling-bridge. In the Afternoon a flying Packet comes to the Council from the Duke of Lawderdale with Letters, wherein the King approves what they had done, and promises to send them Assistance. I have insert the Letter, dated June 9. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 21. June 13. the Council make a Return to his Grace, and give a short Narrative of what had passed, which is added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 22.

June 15. they receive another Letter from the Duke, dated June 11. acquainting them of the Supplies coming to them, and that the Duke of Monmouth was appointed General, which follows App. N<sup>o</sup>. 23. That same Day they return an Answer, wherein they propose General

General Dalziel may be made Lieutenant General under the Duke of Monmouth, and give some Account of the present State of Things. 'Tis added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 24.

1679.

App. N. 24.

Thus, from the Registers, I have given as short an Account as I could of the great Diligence of the Council at this Juncture, and of the Motions of the Army, and have been the larger here, that we have yet no tolerable Accounts of these Matters. I do not enter upon the Springs of the King's sending down his own natural Son the Duke of Buccleugh to be General. The English Historians, who may be better depended upon when giving what passed at London than in Scots Affairs, tell us, That the Marquis of Halifax, Lord Essex, and Sunderland, continued in close Friendship, and, with Sir William Temple, had for some Time the first directing of Affairs in their Hands. When Shaftsbury had got the Management of the House of Commons in his Hand, the Lord Sunderland moved that he should be brought in to the Council and the Direction of Affairs: This Sir William Temple opposed; but the other Three prevailed, and he was some Time before this brought in, kept close with the Duke of Monmouth, in Opposition to the Duke of York; and when these Two were like to engross the King to themselves, the other Four kept the more unite, and got the Parliament dissolved, and, to satisfy the Clamour in England against the Duke of Lauderdale, and smooth Matters against a new Parliament met, endeavoured the Duke's Removal, or at least the Admission of some other Scots Peers to their Affairs.

State of Affairs at this Time in England.

Thus Matters stood, when it came to be considered what was proper to be done to bear down the Rising in Scotland; and in this Matter there was no small Difference among them. The King was for suppressing it immediately, by Forces from England joining with the Scots Army, and the Duke of Monmouth to command them; Shaftsbury was for suppressing it by his Friends in Scotland, whom he would have brought into the Management, in Lauderdale's room, jointly with Monmouth. Essex agreed with the King as to the Suppression, but wished it might be done only by the Scots, and was against the Duke of Monmouth's having the Command: However, all at length came in to the Duke's being sent down, and so he came, as we shall hear, with Instructions not altogether unfavourable to the oppressed People of Scotland, and he seems not to have been very acceptable to many of our Managers at Edinburgh.

Different Sentiments in the English Council, as to the Duke of Monmouth's coming to Scotland.

I shall end this Section with observing, that, about this Time, the Lord Macdonald, a professed and violent Papist, who, as we have seen, with his Clan, Friends and Followers, for some Time had been up in Arms, and making Ravages upon the Earl of Argyle's Lands, sent in to Edinburgh a Petition to the Council, my Copy of which wants a Date, but I take it have been toward the Middle of June.

The Lord Macdonald, a Papist, makes an Order to the Council.

It was much suspected that this Army of professed Papists, now up in a Body, tho' they pretended Self-defence against the Earl of Argyle, and lived pretty much by the Depredation of his Lands, were in a close Correspondence with, if not under Pension to the Duke of York, and in Concert with those concerned in the Popish Plot in England, and were to have been employed, with too many others his Friends in Scotland, as Occasion served, to support the Popish Successor, in case some Designs against the King had succeeded; or, in the Event of the Bill of Exclusion's taking Effect, they might have been of use to overaw Scotland into an Opposition to it.

The secret Design of this Body of Papists now in Arms.

Although our Laws very expressly provide against all Papists in Arms, and, by the Proclamation abovenamed, they were really guilty of Treason, yet the Council are pleased to receive a Petition from the Commander of this Popish Party, which, being short, I insert here.

Their Petition to the Council.

The humble Petition of the Lord Macdonald, and the Gentlemen of the Name of Maclean, convened to defend themselves against the Oppression and Malice of the Earl of Argyle.

May it please your Lordships,

Being necessitate, by the Oppression of the Earl of Argyle, to defend our selves and Kinsmen from being for ever ruined and enslaved to him; and, for that end, being convened, and being informed of a rebellious Crew in the West, in Arms against his Majesty's Authority, whose Addresses we have rejected; we most humbly, according to our Duty and Loyalty, petition to be authorized by the Commander in chief, to assist to avenge the King of his Enemies, and that the Earl of Argyle may in the mean Time be commanded to desist; which he hath ever done, when his Majesty had any Thing to do: And your Petitioners shall give their wonted Testimony of their Loyalty and Duty, and give a contrary Proof to the false Character the Earl of Argyle hath given of us, who shall ever pray, &c.

1679.
Remarks upon
it.

It is rejected in Council, tho' with some Struggle.

The Infination in the Petition, that the Rebels, as they call them, in the West had made Addreses to that Popish Army of barbarous Highland Papists, is so gross a Slander, that it needs no Refutation. They were the firmeft in their Opposition to Popery; their Opposition to Prelacy was under the Views they had of its being a Remain of Popery, and contrary to our Reformation Rights. The first Rifers were so strict, as they made Difficulties to joyn with the Presbyterians who had embraced the Benefit of the Indulgence, and all along they gave sufficient Documents of their abhorring the least Motion this way.

Consequently we must necessarily look upon this Clause of the Petition, either as put in at Edinburgh by some Body, to cast a Slur upon the Presbyterians, or as an Artifice of the Papists to recommend themselves, who stick not to advance their Cause by the grossest Lies and Dissimulation.

When the Council read this Petition, there was a considerable Number appeared for indemnifying these Popish Clans, and employing them against the West Country Army: But this was so flatly in the Face of their own Laws, and so open a Siding with Popery, that it was got crushed, tho' with some Difficulty. How low a Pass was the Reformation Interest in Scotland at, when such a Proposal was made, and almost carried at the Council Board! I return now to the West Country Army.

S E C T. V.

Of the State, Declarations and Divisions of the West Country Army, from their leaving Glasgow till the March of the Army under the Duke of Buccleugh.

The Motions of the West Country Army until their Defeat.

WE left the West Country People at Hamiltoun, after they found their Design upon Glasgow impracticable. All the Account I can give of their Motions, till they came to Hamiltoun-muir, before the Engagement, is in the following Memorandum, which I find among some other Papers relating to this Period, which, for ought I know, is Matter of Fact.

It is informed the Rebels were at Drumclog the first of June being Sunday, upon Munday at the Infal upon Glasgow, and at Night they came to Hamiltoun, from thence they went to Strathaven, and from that came to Kilbride Parish, where they staid until Sunday, when they came to Rutherglen, whence upon Munday they came into Glasgow, upon Tuesday to Towcorse-park, Wednesday to Hamiltoun, Friday to Bradisholm-park, Saturday, Sunday, Munday, Tuesday, they were at Monkland-kirk and Schawhead-muir, then to Hamiltoun till the Defeat.

Considerable Numbers joyn them from all Quarters.

The Reports of this Body of Men their continuing together in Arms after their Success at Drumclog, joyned with the Accounts of the Soldiers retiring from Glasgow eastward, being spread up and down the Country, a good many came and joyned them from all Quarters. Their Discouragement, for their Repulse at Glasgow, was alleviated by John Paton in Medowhead, called Captain Paton, his joyning them at Hamiltoun or Strathaven, with a Body of Horse from Finwick, Newmills and Galsoun; and considerable Numbers joyned them that Week. It was a Wonder to see the Arms a good many of the Country Men had in so good Case after the West Country had been so oft plundered of Arms.

Places from whence they mostly came.

A good many came to Mr. Hamilton, and the People with him (of whom, without the Ceremony of a Choice, he took the Command) from Galloway and Nithsdale; and indeed some of the best provided Men at Bothwell were from the South, from Carrick, Kyle, Cunningham, Renfrew, Lanerk, the Lothians, and Stirling-shire, and among them some very good Gentlemen. None of the Nobility did joyn in this Rising.

Many of those Strangers to the Rutherglen
Declaration.

These Gentlemen, and the commoner Sort knew nothing of Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Douglas's Declaration at Rutherglen; neither were they at all privy to any Thing of their Scheme if they had any. They reckoned them a Body of People appearing for the Presbyterian Interest, and in hazardous Circumstances at present, whom the King's Army would swallow up unless Assistance were given them; and therefore resolved to hazard themselves in their Defence, not knowing what Providence had to bring forth from these small Beginnings.

They were much in want of Arms Ammunition and Officers.

Indeed abundance of Men came in to the Camp, when about Glasgow and Hamiltoun, during the Time they staid in the Fields; but then many of them had but very sorry Arms, and they were yet more straitned for Ammunition, and had no Way to supply themselves in this, except with a very small Quantity they found at Glasgow; and it was a great Loss to them that they almost altogether wanted Officers any way trained to War.

But the greatest Loss was, their Want of Order and Harmony among themselves; neither had they any Person in whom they heartily centred, nor could they agree either upon the Grounds of their Appearance, or the Time and other Circumstances of it: They split upon Subjects that seemed much out of their Road, when their All was at Stake; the Heats and Breaches upon these Heads will presently come in.

Their Camp, when in Commillar Fleming's Park, in Kilbride Parish, and about Glasgow, Schawhead and Hamiltoun, was but ill regulated; and no wonder, when there were but a few among them who had ever been almost in any Camp; and any Officers they had, wanted Authority over the Soldiers; but People came, and went off from the Camp just as they pleased, and as the Carriage of the leading Men pleased or displeased them; and the Captains and other Officers whom they chose, had nothing of that Power which is absolutely necessary to the modelling an Army.

No exact Account can be given of their Numbers, for they were very far from being any way stated; a good many would have been with them to Day, and gone away to Morrow. When most numerous, they are by some Papers said to be Five thousand; but I question it ever they exceeded four Thousand; and even these decreased exceedingly before the Engagement, if I may term it so, at Bothwell, as we shall afterwards hear.

When the Soldiers were retired from Glasgow, Mr. John Welsh, and a considerable Number of Country Men from Carrick with him, came to that City, where they met with no Opposition, but much Kindness and Friendship from many good People there, and in the Country about it. Nothing considerable was undertaken by them, only they caused the Heads and Hands of those who were executed in that Place, for being at Pentland, to be taken down and buried; the same Office they did to those who were killed in the Attempt upon Glasgow, June 2. with one or two who died of their Wounds since.

A Party was also sent westward to Kilmarnock, Irvine and Ayr, who took down the Heads and Hands set up in those Places, and interred them. No doubt these little Detachments used their Interest whither they went, to get People to join their main Army; and considerable Numbers came every Day.

In order to increase their Numbers, and to state the Grounds upon which they took up Arms and continued in them, the most considerable Persons among them, Gentlemen, and others, as well as some Ministers who preached to them, had many Meetings; the principal Thing they had before them, was the drawing up a Declaration to be published to the World.

It was upon this Head they first began to divide and break among themselves. Their first Rising was what they were forced unto, and involuntary, as hath been observed; and the Declaration at Rutherglen, when considered, was unsatisfying to a great many now come up, who nevertheless were willing to join with these who drew it, and venture their Lives and Fortunes to get Grievances redressed, and Matters in Church and State set right, in the most regular and orderly way Circumstances would permit.

Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Donald Cargill and some others, upon the one Side, would have the Indulgence witnessed against, and some other Things done: Upon the other Hand, the Laird of Kaitloch, Mr. John Welsh, Mr. David Hume, and some others, were not for going those Lengths; but inclined to set up upon as large a Bottom as they could with a safe Conscience, and were of Opinion nothing should be taken into their Declaration which might exclude any Presbyterians from joining in the common Cause.

I find Mr. Hamilton and those of that Side blamed in some Papers writ at this Time, as maintaining some Principles in their Nature antimonarchical, as to the State, and tending to Separation in the Church, with what Truth I cannot positively say. It is my Province to set down Matters of Fact as I find them; and therefore I shall essay to give as short a Deduction of the Debates and Differences 'twixt those two Parties, as I can, from the Papers come to my Hands, and I leave the Reader to judge on the Whole.

At the Beginning of the Gathering, that Week in which the Attempt was made upon Glasgow, when they came to deliberate upon a Declaration to be emitted, most Part by far, in the Meeting for Confutation, were of Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Douglas's Sentiments, Mr. Welsh and a few others excepted; so that it was carried almost without a Struggle, that the Indulgence should be testified against in the Declaration agreed to. All that Mr. Welsh and those of his Sentiments could do, was to get the Passage relative thereunto kept in general Terms. The Paper at this Time before them is but short, and follows.

"We who are here providentially convened in our own Defence, for preventing and removing the Mistakes and Misapprehensions of all, especially of those whom we wish to be, and hope are Friends, do declare our present Purposes and Endeavours to be only in Vindication and Defence of the true Reformed Religion in its Profession and Doctrine, as we stand obliged thereunto by our national and solemn League and Covenants, and that solemn Acknowledgment of Sins, and Engagement to Duties, made and taken in the Year 1648. declaring against Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and all Things depending thereupon."

1679.

And without Harmony and one in whom they could confide. Their Camp not well regulated.

Their Numbers uncertain, and were never much above four thousand.

Mr. Welsh and a Party with him come to Glasgow, and bury the Heads of the 5. Officers at Pentland, and some others.

The like done at Kilmarnock, Irvine and Ayr.

Many Meetings among them to state the Grounds of their Appearance, and draw a Declaration. Upon those their Breaches begin.

The two different Sides stated.

A View of their Debates.

At first Mr. Hamilton's Party outvoted the other, and declare against the Indulgence.

Draught of the first Declaration.

1679.

Observe upon it.

Declaration made for the West Country by the Author of the Caveat for the Whigs.

The moderate Party to make, and find Fault with the last Clause of the above-named Declaration.

And desire it to be taken out, with their Reasons.

Answers upon the other Side.

Who move a Day of Fasting, and an Enumeration of Defections.

A Committee named to form a Draught of it.

This Declaration was concerted and agreed to, and, as some Papers say, published in the Army. Perhaps it might have been agreeable to the Interest of both Sides now together in Arms, to have for a while satisfied themselves with this general Draught, until some Way had been fallen on to bring them nearer other in their Sentiments upon the controverted Heads; but this would not do.

I imagine some broken Story about this Declaration, or some Commentary some Body hath made on the Words of it, hath given Occasion to the idle Story the Author of the Caveat for the Whigs, hath Part I. p. 51. "The Rebels, when they had possessed themselves of Glasgow, issued forth their Proclamation, commanding the Magistrates to turn out all the Arch-bishops, Bishops, and Curates, their Bairns and Servants, and all Families and Persons concerned in the King's Army, within 48 Hours, under the highest Pains." This Proclamation is so ill made for the Whigs, I am of Opinion it will not do them any Hurt, and no reasonable Person will believe it.

After some few Days, when some more Gentlemen and intercommuned Ministers joyned themselves to the Gathering, they being of moderate Principles, and for the softest Methods of Procedure, began to enquire a little into the Declaration, and found Fault with the last Clause of it, as unseasonable and inexpedient. The Persons, whom I shall afterwards term the moderate Party, did every Day increase, and had no small Debates in the Meetings now kept with Mr. Hamilton and his Party, whom I shall call the first Party. Some who came in afterwards joyned them; but they were mostly made up of such who had been in the first Rising.

This first Party had chosen the strictest and seemingly most zealous Side, and continued a good many of them for a while in these Sentiments because they conversed only upon the one Side. When they had a more extensive Conversation, several came to have other Views of Matters; and upon the other Hand, others who came up, joyned them for some Time, and they continued pretty numerous. Heavy and long Oppression had embittered their Spirits, and the positive and unguarded Expressions of some Ministers upon this Side, contributed not a little unto this.

The moderate Party desired the Clause, All Things depending thereupon, might be taken out, as plainly enough pointing at the Indulgence, at a Season when it was most unfit that Presbyterians should bite and devour one another. They urged, the Indulgence was a Point in its Nature disputable, and not yet declared sinful by any General Assembly, or other competent Judge; adding, That a Declaration in this Matter would certainly break them who were gathered, among themselves, and hinder a considerable Body of People, who had Clearness about the Indulgence, or at least could not make it a Ground of Separation, from joyning them.

The other Side urged, That the Point controverted was only declared against in a general Clause, and that it was their Opinion it was a Defection; that Erastianism was as directly abjured by this Church as Prelacy, and the Indulgence was a Fruit of Erastianism. Thus their Debates landed upon the Merits of the Clause, and turned both long, warm and endless, and a sensible Colours fell in among them, and the Alteration of the first Declaration was dropt for some Days, until it came in another Shape in a little Time.

At another Meeting the first Party moved, That, considering they might have the Enemy shortly to grapple with, a Day for Fasting, Prayer and Supplication might be kept, for mourning over publick Sins and Defections, deprecating GOD's Wrath upon that account, and wrestling for the divine Protection and Blessing upon their present Endeavours; and pressed a particular Condescension might be drawn up in Writ of publick Defections.

I shall not say this was a Fasting for Strife, and not a Loosing of the Bands of Wickedness; but in Fact it did turn in the Event to foster and heighten their Dilention and Differences. The moderate Party expressed their Fears of the Tendency of such a Proposal in their present Circumstances, and reasoned for some Time against the condescending upon any Sins in publick Causes, but what they could all agree in. They were over-ruled, and Four Ministers and Four Gentlemen were appointed to bring in a Draught, which will best discover the View of the Proposers, and I insert it here.

Enumeration of publick Defections, June, 1679.

- Enumeration of Defections.
- AS to those before the Restoration, we refer to the Causes of God's Wrath. Since the Year 1660. we reckon,
1. The universal Rejoycings, Bonfires and Riotings, that were almost every where throughout the Land, at the King's Return, and yearly since; the many publick Abuses then committed, and frequent profaning of the Lord's Name.
  2. The establishing of, and complying with abjured Prelacy.

3. The

3. The neglecting of publick Testimonies and Protestations against the erecting of that tyrannical abjured Hierarchy, and against the defacing of the Lord's glorious Work, and overturning the right Government of his House.
4. The great and publick Sin of many, in taking unlawful Bonds, called Bonds of Peace, &c. which are contrary to our solema Oaths and Covenants.
5. The paying of unlawful Cess and Taxations, imposed and levied for keeping up the sacrilegious Supremacy, and for maintaining Soldiers to suppress the Gospel.
6. The complying with abjured Erastianism; Ministers appearing at the Court of usurping Rulers, and their accepting from them Warrants and Instructions (founded upon that sacrilegious Supremacy) to admit them to, and regulate them in the Exercise of their Ministry; their leading blindfold alongst with them many of the Godly in that abjured Course; their Indulgence becoming a publick Sin and Snare, both to themselves and many others.

1679.

However well this Enumeration is drawn to answer the Views of the one Side, 'tis evident that such as were upon the other Side could never go into it. I am told, Mr. Weyb was not with them when the Draught was appointed; but he and Mr. Hume very much opposed it, and posed the Urgers of it, how they would take it, if he and those of his Sentiments should urge a Fast, because some Ministers and Preachers separated from Presbyterians, and divided them, and preached against the Indulgence, before its Unlawfulness was determined by any Judicatory. In short, he pressed the forenamed Arguments against this, and gave his Opinion that it would make great Numbers desert them, and hinder many Gentlemen and others from joyning with them. All the Reply given, was positive Assertions that these Things were sinful, and ought to be publicly mourned for.

which could not be gone in to by the moderate Side.

These who were against this Enumeration and the Fast, because they perceived it would not be kept as such a solemn Work ought to be, could not yield in this Matter, and so there was no Fast kept.

And no Fast was kept.

Thus their Divisions increased, and the necessary Work which might and should have been gone into, was by their Debates first delayed, and then entirely marred. And Enemies had it to observe and remark, that Ministers preached and prayed against one another. And Mr. Cargil, they say, publicly protested, that they behoved to part one from another, because a good many of them would not go into a Day of Humiliation.

Thus their Divisions increased.

When this Project failed, I am told, Mr. Hamilton took upon him to send Orders to Mr. Wells, Mr. Hume, Mr. Rae, and others of the more moderate Party, to preach against the Indulgence, otherwise he and a good many of the Officers would not hear them. It is said, Mr. Rae sent a very home and close Answer to him, and desired the Messenger to tell Mr. Hamilton and the rest, That he had been wrestling against Erastianism in the Magistracy for many Years; and he would never truckle to the worst Kind of Erastianism in the common People; that he would receive no Instructions from him nor any of them as to the Subject and Matter of his Sermons; and wished he might mind what belonged to him, and not go beyond his Sphere and Station.

Mr. John Rae's Answer to Mr. Hamilton, when pressed to preach against the Indulgence.

Another, and I may say, the principal Point upon which they divided, was concerning the stating the Cause whereupon they took up and continued in Arms. The clearing of this will take up a little Room; but I give it the more largely, as what will be, upon the Matter, a Vindication of the Body of Presbyterians in Scotland, from many Aspersions cast upon them with relation to this Rising I am giving the History of. It will likewise further let us into the Difference 'twixt the Two Parties at this Time, in the West Country Army.

Their Differences as to the stating the Cause of their Appearance in Arms.

When a Declaration, or the State of the Cause upon which they now appeared in Arms, came to be considered in their Meeting of Officers, now called the Council of War, the first Party would hear of no other State of their Quarrel, but upon the Foot of the Declaration at Rutherglen, and the other a little after that before mentioned. They were not unwilling to have them amplified and enlarged, but remained peremptory to have the same Materials continued.

The first Party will have it stated upon the Rutherglen Declaration.

The moderate Party proposed another Draught, which contained an Acknowledgment of the King's Authority, in the Terms of the third Article of the Solemn League and Covenant, as we shall find just now in the Draught it self, and desired their Rising in Arms might be stated upon that Foot.

The other Side propose to own the King's Authority.

This was most vehemently opposed by the first Party; who urged, that as they had not mentioned the King and his Interest, and had waved any positive Declaration against him, so they might be excused, and not urged to declare positively for him. They pressed, that all Mention of the King might be left out of any Paper should be agreed upon, since they could not in Conscience positively own him, because he was now in a stated Opposition to the Interests of Christ, and had, upon the Matter, declared War against his People; and all the present Oppression, Cruelty, and Persecution in Scotland, for the Redress whereof they were now appearing, was carried on in his Name. And in short, such a State was inconsistent with the Declarations they had already published; and that the Covenants bound them and the other Side.

Arguments of Mr. Hamilton's Party against mentioning of the King in their Declaration.

1679.

Reasonings on

the whole Land, first to GOD, then to one another ; and then to the King in the Defence of the true Religion : But now they alledged the King had actually overturned the true Religion, set up Prelacy and Eraastianism, ruined the covenanted Work of Reformation, and the Liberties of the Nation, persecuted to the Death the Owners of both, and plainly broke the Conditions of Government sworn at his Coronation, whereupon his Right and their Allegiance were bottomed : That upon the whole it followed, that Subjects Ties to him were loosed, and that the Words of that Article of the Covenant ought not now to be used.

This was Matter of long Debate : It was almost fruitless for the moderate Party to urge, that in the Year 1638. the General Assembly, and the Covenanters owned the King's Authority in the plainest and most forcible Manner, though he had declared War against them : That tho' the Breach of many of the Articles the King had engaged to, was too evident, yet no habile and competent Judges had declared so much ; and they questioned much how far this could be found competent for them : That this Method of throwing off the King's Authority, would directly preclude all Redress of Grievances, and getting Things that are wrong, righted ; and evil Counsellors removed, who had been the Authors and Springs of all these Evils, and advised the King to them : That their not owning plainly the King's Authority, would undoubtedly break the Design of their gathering together, and effectually hinder Multitudes, who were willing to joyn them, from coming to them.

In short, tho' in Reasoning they endeavoured to answer every Particular advanced by the other Side, yet it was to little Purpose. They were very fixed to their Sentiments. I find by the Papers whence I draw this Account, that it was urged by the first Party ; that since the other Side would have in the third Article of the Covenant, that the Fourth might likewise be inserted : That was soon found to be a mere Shift, and not much insisted upon, and so dropt.

A Declaration carried by the moderate Party.

After many Debates in several Meetings, the Draught of a Declaration, which I shall presently point to, was agreed to in one of their Meetings. I find indeed Complaints in the Papers of such who favoured the first Party, that by reason of the Absence of many of the Officers from the Council of War, and a sudden Alarm given to the Army, the Meeting, where this Paper was voted, was thin, the Thing concluded in a Hurry, and some Promises given by such as urged it, that some Words should be amended before it was published, which were not fulfilled : And from this, some Papers, particularly one written by Rathillet, says, That upon June 13. Mr. Welsh and Mr. Hume published the Declaration at Glasgow, against Faith and Promise.

Published at Glasgow, June
23. and spread.

What Truth is in these Assertions of the one Side, I do not know, having seen nothing written by the moderate Party taking any Notice of them. I am apt to believe many Gentlemen were come up by this Time, who brought the Two Parties to a greater Balance than they had been in before : And it may be, upon the occasional Absence of one or two of the first Party, the other became supernumerary. However this be, upon its being voted, Mr. Welsh and Mr. David Hume did carry in the Copy to Glasgow, and caused publish it at the Cross ; and afterward printed it, and spread it up and down the Country. I have inserted the printed Copy of it, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 25.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 25.

It is very probable, had not new Divisions and the Engagement itself prevented, this Declaration would have brought in great Numbers to the West Country Army. Perhaps the Differences among them anent the Fast might fall in after this in Order of Time, tho' I have given them before it : For the Papers I have before me have very few of them any Dates ; and the great Heats anent the Choice of their Officers certainly fell in after this.

Observed upon
it.

I shall make few Reflexions on this Declaration. This was a Time when Things could not be got done as many wished to have had them. We have seen with what a Struggle this Paper was got through ; and when it was voted and published, Mr. Hamilton and some others complained of it, and would scarce own it as the Deed of the Meeting ; and we shall find some who died afterwards, put upon bearing Testimony against this as a Defection. However, as yet it was not directly disowned, but highly complained of, by such who were for other Methods.

Upon the Whole, it appears to me to have been fully satisfying to neither Side and their Sentiments, far less the Opinion of the Body of Presbyterians through the Land. It was what the moderate Party with Difficulty got through. Some Things were put into it, if possible, to cement both Parties : But that would not do, the Breach rather run higher.

Another Declaration, in which he Bod' of Presbyterians in Scotland, would have joined ;

But leaving this, I come to lay before the Reader another Draught of a Declaration, which, I can say, was the general Sentiments of Presbyterians throughout the Nation, was approved by the moderate Party at Bothwell, and would have been heartily gone into by them, had they not been cramped, and brought to quit it by the Importunity of the other Side, and a Willingness, if possible, to agree with them in some Draught. I have Ground to think however, that they took in as much of it as they had any Prospect the other Side would come in to.

That

That the Reader may understand the Genuineness and Conveyance of this Paper, which, for what I know, hath been hitherto in the Hands of but very few, it may be proper I give the History of its coming to my Hands. The reverend Mr. Robert Wylie, Minister of the Gospel at Hamiltoun since the Revolution, lately entred into the Joy of his Lord, was pleased to give me the original Copy, which continued in his Hands, being Clerk to the Meeting from which it came. The shining Piety, fine Taste, excellent Sense, and singular Accomplishments of this truly great and good Man, in every Branch of valuable Knowledge and Learning, forbid me to enter upon his Character, as what I am not able to give; and he is so well, and so long known in this Church, that it were needless for me to offer at it. I only take this Opportunity to own publicly the Encouragement and Helps I had from himself, while alive, and from his Papers, by the obliging Favour of his Relict, since his Death, in compiling this History. Within a few Weeks of his Death, when not able to write himself, February 1715. he sent me this Account of this Paper, which I give here.

1679.

Communicate to the Author by the late reverend Mr. Wylie, Clerk to the Meeting, who formed it. Hint at his Character.

As soon as the Reports of the Rising in the West came to Edinburgh, a good many Presbyterians, Gentlemen and others, used to meet there every Night almost. Those Persons wanted not their Fears that Mr. Hamilton and others might expose that honest and sincere Appearance of the Country People, by running to Extremities; and therefore offered their Advice to some among them, as knowing the Posture of publick Affairs, and Circumstances of Things; and frequent Messages and Informations were sent to the West, several of which were not very kindly entertained.

However, the Paper I am just now to insert was read in one of these Meetings, and, after Consideration, was agreed unto. All the Ministers in Town, and particularly Mr. Robert Fleming, afterward Minister at Rotterdam, at this Time Prisoner in the Tolbooth, applauded it much. The View they had in it, was to state the West Country Appearance, upon such Reasons and Grounds as would bear some Weight; and upon such a Foot as the Party in England, who were appearing for civil Liberty, might countenance them, and if Grievances there could in no other Manner be redressed, might in due Time side with them. In short, the View they had was to enlarge the Bottom upon which they went, so as their Quarrel might appear just and fair to all the Reformed Churches, as well as agreeable to the real Principles of our Reformation from Popery, our Presbyterian Establishment, and, above all, to Scripture and Truth.

The Views of the Framers of this Paper.

The Difficulty was, how to get it conveyed to the West Country Army. At length Mr. William Dunlop, then in my Lord Cochran's Family, was pitched upon, and he undertook it. By the naming him, many of my Readers will know, that afterwards he was the reverend and worthy Principal of the College of Glasgow, since the Revolution, whose singular Piety, great Prudence, publick Spirit, universal Knowledge, general Usefulness, and excellent Temper, was so well known, that his Death now a good many Years ago, was as much lamented as perhaps any one Man's in this Church. With some Difficulty Mr. Wylie conveyed a Copy of the Paper, at one of the Rounds of the South Side of the Town-wall, to Mr. Dunlop; and I have some Reason to think these Two formed the first Draught of this Paper. Mr. Dunlop took the Occasion of my Lord Cochran's Horses and Livery-men their going West, and came with the Paper unobserved to the Camp. He was very acceptable to Mr. Wells, who was much pleased with the Paper, and shewed it to Mr. Hamilton, who was a little sour upon it. However a Council of War was called, Mr. Dunlop was not admitted to speak with them, but the Paper was rejected very positively, yet Mr. Wells made use of it in the Draught abovementioned.

It was sent West by Mr. William Dunlop afterwards Principal of the College of Glasgow. Hint at his Character.

The Copy of this Paper sent from Edinburgh, I set down here from the Original now in my Hands.

The Declaration.

The Declaration of the oppressed Protestants now in Arms in Scotland.

‘ Since it hath pleased the Lord in his holy and wise Providence, to call together us the oppressed People of the Western, Southern and other Shires of Scotland; we judge it a Duty incumbent upon us, to give the World a short but faithful Account of the Causes and Motives of this our Appearance; which, tho’ it hath been, as to its immediately antecedent Occasion, altogether accidental, and, upon our Part, merely defensive, and involuntary, yet we now finding our selves providentially stated in another Capacity, do, with reference thereto, declare,

‘ That whereas we have long and patiently groined under the intolerable Yoke of Oppression and Persecution upon our Bodies, Consciences, Liberties, and Estates, by the Violence, Rapin, Robberies, Finings, Confinings, Imprisonments, Banishments, Denunciations, Intercommunings, Torturings, putting to Death, and all Manner of Outrages that have been exercised upon us, through a Tract of several Years bypast, particularly in the Year 1678.

1679.

1678. by sending against us an armed Host of barbarous Savages upon free Quarter, contrary to all Law and Humanity, for enforcing of a most unnatural Bond, wholly illegal in itself, and imprestable by us; all which are too many and grievous to be enumerated, and too recent to be forgotten by any.

For maintaining and carrying on of which unjust and horrid Designs, there have been several Taxes and Impositions laid upon this Land, as formerly, so of late, by a Meeting of packt, prelimited and overawed Members in the Convention of Estates, July 1678. intrusted, as to a great Part of it, in the Hands of avowed Papists, or Favourers of them, by whom sundry Invasions have been made upon us, and the most exorbitant Abuses, and incredible Insolencies committed against us.

Whilst we, mean while, have demeaned our selves most peaceably, dutifully and loyally, even to the Conviction of our Adversaries themselves, who were never able to charge us with any other Crime than that of serving God according to his Word and our Conscience, nick-named by them, Sedition and Rebellion.

All which, as we have more than sufficient Reason to believe, hath proceeded from the pernicious Influence of some prime Ministers of State for Scotland, from the implacable Cruelty and Malice of the Prelates in Scotland, and from the Agency of their subordinate and ungodly Instruments; by whom his Majesty's Favours to his distressed Subjects, the Results of his own Royal Bounty and native Clemency, have been either totally withheld or miserably curtailed, and maim'd; and all Administrations in Church and State, contrary to Equity and our known Laws, have been dispensed for many Years bygone in a most arbitrary and tyrannical Manner.

And whereas we have long, but without Effect, expected a Redress of these our sad and unsufferable Grievances, all Applications for Remedy being by Act of Parliament declared unlawful; and those worthy Patriots, who have undertaken to make a Representation of the lamentable state of this Kingdom, having, through the finitrous Policies of their Adversaries, been baffled and disappointed in their Attempts for Relief.

And it being now more than ever apparent to us, that there is a formed and universal Plot carried on, for Subversion of the Protestant Religion, and for subjecting these Lands under the antichristian Bondage of Popery, as by secret undermining and murderous Practices in England, so by the open Introduction of Slavery and tyrannical Government in Scotland. It being likewise further evident to every one who doth not wilfully shut his Eyes, that many of the present Scottish Privy Council do signally contribute to the promoting of the same, as in manifold Instances might be made appear, so particularly in this, that not only hitherto have they countenanced and tolerated known Maies, and Massing-priests and Jesuits to be kept, and to converse in and about Edinburgh, and through the Nation; but also, that the Lord Macdonald, a professed Papist, with a modelled Army, mostly, if not altogether, consisting of Papists, hath remained in Arms within the Kingdom for a considerable Time, without any effectual Controul from them: But on the contrary, so far are they from a vigorous suppressing of Popery, that it doth still receive remarkable Encouragement from them, in that not only by their late Proclamation of the 7th Instant, the Conduct of the Gentry in several Shires is committed to declared Papists, and Persons popishly affected; but also it hath been lately proposed and agitated at the Council-board, and narrowly misfed of passing there, that the said Lord Macdonald, with his Popish Army, should be indemnified for all that is passed, and invited down upon the Western Shires; whereby it is unquestionably clear, that they are more inclinable to reconcile with, embrace and cherish the most bloody and obstinate Papists, than to listen to Cries of oppressed Protestants.

All which abovementioned Particulars, here huddled up for Brevity in transient Hints, with many other our sharp and cutting Grievances, we intend speedily, God willing, in a more ample Narrative to exhibit to the World.

And now all our Hopes of Redress, and Prevention by calm and gentle Methods, and the ordinary Course of Justice, not only from our Rulers at home, but from our Neighbours abroad, being utterly cut off through the Prorogation of the English Parliament, from which, under GOD, we expected that a speedy and effectual Check should be given to these growing Evils and eminent Dangers, whereby the Contrivers, Assisters, and Abettors of the foresaid hellish Plot, are protected from that Punishment which their Crimes deserve, the imperial Crown, if the King should decease, or be violently made away by his treacherous Enemies, which GOD avert, to be devolved upon a professed Popish Successor, an eminent Promoter of the said Plot, and the deplorable Calamities and Miseries of this Land, so far from being terminated, that they are daily increasing to a more prodigious and insupportable Height, through the constant working of that diabolical Popish Plot, as well in this as the neighbouring Nation, as is now beyond all rational Contradiction manifest.

Therefore we, finding our selves under an unavoidable Necessity of having Recourse to Arms, do, in Presence of almighty GOD the Searcher of Hearts, declare, That as nothing short of the utmost Extremity hath driven us to it, so the Reasons of our continuing in Arms are candidly and sincerely none other than these. 1. The defending and securing the the true Protestant Religion and Presbyterian Government, the great Bulwark against Popery, founded upon the Word of GOD, and established by the Laws of this Land, to both which the King, Nobles and People are solemnly sworn and engaged. 2dly. The Preservation of his Majesty's Royal Person from the insidious Projects of his Popish Adversaries. 3dly. The Deliverance of his said Majesty from the malicious Influence of the foresaid wicked Counsellors, and of this Kingdom from the ruining Effects of their wicked Counsels. 4thly. The diverting of the Succession from falling in the Person of a notorious Popish Plotter, which we mean and intend, with all due Respect to Authority, and Deference to the Royal Line.'

'In the Prosecution of which commendable and Christian Ends, as we hope for the Countenance and Help of almighty GOD, the Patron and Protector of the Oppressed, and Vindicator of his own Truth, so we do expect the Aid and Concurrence of all honest and true Protestants, to a suit the Justice of our righteous Cause.'

'Protesting always, That, upon the obtaining of our foresaid just and reasonable Desires, we are most ready to lay down Arms, and behave our selves with all submissive Obedience towards lawful Authority.'

This Paper speaks for itself, and I need say nothing upon it. Had the West Country Appearance been stated upon this Foot, 'tis probable their Numbers and Success had been greater. This Declaration contains a succinct Account of the present Circumstances of this Church and Nation, and the real Sentiments of the most judicious, knowing, and the greatest Part of the suffering Presbyterians.

Upon this Bottom this Rising at Bothwell may be defended in the same Manner, and almost from the same Reasonings advanced in the former Book with relation to that at Pentland: Yea, if Circumstances, and the present State of Things at this Juncture, be narrowly viewed, with the Hazard Britain and the whole Reformed Churches were in from Popery, we shall find this Rising to be much upon the same Reasons and Foot with the Revolution 1688. and the Abdication of the Popish Plotter, in the Paper complained of; and all the unanswerable Arguments, so well advanced for vindicating of that happy Turn of Affairs, will support this Rising at Bothwell.

Upon this Bottom, this Rising in the West may be vindicated from the Arguments advanced as to that at Pentland and was on the same Foot with the Revolution 1688.

Indeed the West Country People wanted the Concurrence of Persons of Rank and Quality, and had none of the Nobility openly joining with him; and therefore Allowances must be made as to some Circumstances, and the Manner of their appearing: And probably, if Persons of Interest in the Country, and better Management, had directly joined with them, the Balance would have entirely been cast upon the moderate Side, and the unhappy and ill-timed Heats among them would certainly have been prevented, and a Stop put to several other Mismanagements which attended this Attempt for national and religious Liberty.

However, even those Steps most liable to Exception cannot be charged upon Presbyterians through the Nation, neither altogether upon the Generality of those who were in the Army, as is plain from what is above narrated. The moderate Party did Things the best way the Circumstances they were in at present allowed, and it was a great deal easier censuring them, than acting in their Circumstances at this Time.

Other Differences and Heats fell in among the West Country Army, some little Time before the Engagement, concerning the Choice of their Officers, and the offering an Address to the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth when he came West: But I shall leave the Accounts of these to the following Section, where I am to consider what immediately went before the Engagement, and the Defeat itself at Bothwell-bridge.

S E C T. VI.

Of the Arrival of the Duke of Monmouth, and March of his Army, the continuing Divisions, and Supplication of the West Country Army, with an Account of their Engagement and Defeat at Bothwell-bridge.

WE have already heard, that, upon the Accounts from Scotland of the Rising in the West Country, the King, by the Advice of his English Council, named his natural Son, James Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth to command his Army in Scotland, and gave him Instructions not altogether unfavourable to Presbyterians, of which I have not seen a Copy.

The Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth General.

1679.

Arrives at Edinburgh, June 18.

Notice of the Duke's favourable Dispositions sent to the West Country Army.

State of the Army under the Earl of Linlithgow, from Two Letters, June 17 and 18.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 26.King's Letter, June 16.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 27.

Council's Answer,

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 28.

Favour shewn to the Prisoners not concerned in the Rising.

Duke in the Camp, June 19.

He makes repeated Complaints of Want of Provisions, and the Council's Negligence.

Duke's Motions slow. Pains taken for an Application to him from the Army at Bothwell.

Abstract of the Advice sent them as to this Application.

The Duke made all Dispatch, and parted from London the 15 of June, and was in Edinburgh the 18. where I find him that Day admitted Privy Counsellor. His Instructions are read in Council, and he intimates his Resolution to go to the Army to Morrow early. When at Edinburgh, it was soon known he was willing to hear Grievances, if presented to him: It seems Care had been taken at London to give him favourable Impressions of Presbyterian Ministers, and we shall afterwards find them applying to him.

Notice was immediately sent to the West Country Army of the General's good Inclinations, that they might accordingly concert Matters; but Mr. Hamilton and his Party shewed a great Aversion to any Applications to the Duke; and some Papers insinuate, that the People who had been accessory to the Murder of the Archbishop, did what in them lay to mar any Motions this way. The moderate Party were entirely for presenting their Grievances, and accommodating upon good Terms, and with great Difficulty, as we shall hear, carried it, when, I may say, it was too late.

We left the Earl of Linlithgow and his Army about Edinburgh, and June 17. I find the Earl in his Ligger at Kirkhill-park, belonging to the Lord Cardross, whose Lories were very great at this Time by the Soldiers. From thence he writes Two Letters to the Council, June 17 and 18. which contain the best Account of his Army I have seen, and they are inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 26. The Council make a Return to them, signifying that Provisions were come up to him, and the Duke of Buccleugh was to be with them that Day, and desire him to take up fit Quarters for his Army at Blackburn, and there to wait the Duke's Orders. That same Day they send a Letter to Lawderdale, acquainting him with the General's Arrival, and thank the King for sending him (which they do in very soft Terms) and conclude with giving the Substantance of the Major-general's Letters just now insert. And June 20. the Council receive a Letter from the King, approving what they had done, and requiring them to go on against the Rebels, dated June 16. which stands App. N<sup>o</sup>. 27. To this they return an Answer, which, because it contains some further Hints of the State of Things, I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 28.

Let me only remark, that in the midst of other Affairs, June 19. after the General had been in Council, they remit it to the Lord Abbotshall, and Sir George Kinnaird, to call for a List of the Prisoners in the Canongate and other Prisons, and examine their Case, and liberate such as are not concerned in the Rebellion, as they find Cause.

That Day the Duke goes to the Army, and marches slowly westward toward Hamilton; next Day he complains, in a Letter to the Council, of Want of Provision in the Camp at Muirhead, which hinders them to march. Upon which the Laird of Lundin is, June 21. sent Express from the Council, to represent their Diligence in this Matter. Before Lundin comes up, the Council have another Express from the General, acquainting them, 'That the Bread is come up, but so much short, that it will not serve them one Day; and therefore (with some Sharpness) he urgeth them to send what they promised, and give Orders that their Stores be daily sent up to them, as they would not infinitely prejudice his Majesty's Service.' This produceth another Letter to his Grace from the Council, with Nineteen Cart-load of Provisions, promising to send the Meal to Morrow, and laying the Blame upon the Bakers. But some were of Opinion, the General was not very acceptable to a good many at Edinburgh, and this Slackness in the coming up of Provisions was not wholly chargeable on the Bakers. I shall only further notice from the Registers, that, June 22. Dalziel's Commission comes down by a flying Pacquet, which the Council immediately forward with a Letter to the Duke, leaving it to his Grace's Consideration, if it be not fit to send out a Party of Horse to meet him, at his Coming that Day, in Quality of the King's Lieutenant-general.

This Want of Provisions, and, as some say, the General his waiting for some Application from the West Country Army, made the Duke's Motions westward but slow. Mean while Friends at Edinburgh endeavoured to dispose the People at Bothwell this way, and likewise directed them as to the Manner of their Management in all Events. The Double of a Paper of Advice sent them is before me, and it may not be improper to give an Abstract of it here.

The Person who writes gives it as his Opinion, that all imaginable Affection would be testified to the Duke; and he tells them this may have good Effects, and there is Ground for it. "The Extremity, adds he, of Oppression and Cruelty so long, and by so many various Methods, exercised upon you, only for adhering to a Matter of Conscience, which the Love of GOD and his Word obliged you not to dispense with, for which you have been traduced to the King as Haters of his Person and Laws, would be noticed; and you would vindicate your selves with Expressions of Zeal for your lawful Sovereign and native Country, and shew what you have suffered, and how long before you would any way appear in any Method that would seem opposite to his Authority, which you are perswaded hath been abused by evil Counsellors."

"You would cheerfully, and with Protestations of Fidelity, offer your Lives to his Majesty's Service, with a Reservation of your Religion and Liberty: And you may justly challenge your Enemies who talk so much of their Loyalty, that none of them dare do more, or go further in obedience to lawful Commands, and for the Honour and Safety of your

"So-

1679

"Sovereign, than you are ready to do. You may truly assert, that there are Multitudes through the Nation, who from many different Reasons do not appear as yet with you, who are under the same Burdens, and equally ready with you, upon the securing of Religion and Liberty, to answer his Commands at home or abroad, and make his Majesty a Terror to his Enemies, especially the Papists."

"Those and such like Expressions of your Affection and Zeal will stop the Mouths of your Enemies, therefore it will be your Wisdom and Interest to study to frame your Hearts to such Sincerity and Zeal in this as may evidently discover it self."

"It may be added, you rejoyce that you have one, and such an one, as above all others you desired to lay your Case before, being hitherto dreadfully misrepresented to his Majesty, and, by Acts of Non-addressing and Intercommuning, rendred hopeless of all Help, or Mitigation of your Oppression; all Access by Petition or otherwise being obstructed by Law, and it being a Crime to you or your Friends to essay it."

"Further, he assures them, your Enemies are disheartned many of them, both by Scarcity of Provision, and with the Views of the Unreasonableness of their Quarrel, which at first they thought not upon. And 'tis reasonably supposed these Discoveries will grow among them, and especially the Gentry, among whom are Divisions and Dissatisfaction; and the Militia will probably soon weary either in waiting or following: So that 'tis their Design and great Interest to fight suddenly, if Conditions be not agreed upon; and their Number is formidable, and many of them resolute, and they must not be despised."

"Therefore, adds he, it will be most reasonable for you, damping to your Enemies, and what will prevent Blood, upon your not coming to an Agreement, to keep at Distance, and shun Fighting for a Time, unless you can do it with seen Advantage, by a Surprizal, Ambuscade, or the like. In the mean time, you would not ly too sparse and open, but keep your Body as close as you can; and let your Scouts be many, strong, and at a good Distance; in all which 'tis reported you are defective."

"Have a Care you be not secure upon the Sabbath-day: Your Enemies are waiting an Advantage against you here, and endeavour to catch you unprepared to meet them. It is generally said and expected, that the Duke is to demand the Murderers of the Bishop, therefore, if any such be amongst you, cause them shift for themselves; that the giving of them up, which 'tis like some of you will not incline to be active in, may be evited, and you freed of Reproach upon this Score."

"If you come to a Treaty, you may represent, that there are a good many of your Friends, wise and sober Persons, who, tho' they have not joyned, yet own your Quarrel, and are alike therein concerned with you, whom you must consult, and have their Judgment in what you do: And upon this Score, urge a Cessation of Arms, and a Liberty to them and you to meet together, to advise what Length you may come in obedience to the Duke's Commands. And if their Number be startled at, as supposing this a Shift, you may name a few of these who may be most useful, and generally acceptable."

"An Express came Yesternight to the Duke, they say, with Orders for fighting: What his Resolutions are thereupon is not yet known. His Commission is very ample, and Intrusions large; and he will do therein as he finds meet. If he enter upon a Treaty, it is likely he purposeth not to fight suddenly, tho' you would not be secure. If he enter not upon a Treaty, be upon your Guard. This is in great Haite; the only wise GOD direct and assist you."

P. S. "It will be convenient the Cessation of Arms be only during the Treaty, and the Treaty as short as may be, because they expect great Force from England and Ireland."

I have given the larger Account of this Paper, because it contains some Hints at Matters of Fact I have not elsewhere met with. The Advice was kindly given, and well received by a good many in the Army, but their growing Differences hindred their Harkning to any Thing of this Nature.

Their former Discord anent the State of their Appearance, and their Declaration, did a vast deal of Hurt to the common Cause, and to both Sides. When the Reports of it came abroad, Multitudes who were coming to the Army were discouraged, and great Numbers, when they came to the Camp, and saw how Matters went, very soon left them. And I find both Sides, in their Papers, complaining of this; Mr. Hamilton's Party especially, towards the Close of this Rising, and when the moderate Party overbalanced them, complained that many came to the Camp, and finding that the Cause was not cleanly stated, and the Indulgence not plainly opposed, they left the Army: The other Side complain, I imagine, with as much Reason, that many quit the Camp, and more who wished them well, came not up, by reason of the Heights and Extremities run into by many.

As the Time of the Engagement approached, these Differences run higher. The publishing the abovenamed Declaration, June 13. did very much ruffle those who opposed it; and they were not only broken in their Affections, but the common Soldiers were under no kind of Discipline: Their Confusions increased, and Numbers lessened much, before the King's Army came

The continuing Divisions at Botho 1, near the putting these in Practice.

1679. came up ; and, as hath been hinted, they wanted skilled Officers ; their Arms were out of case ; they had very little Ammunition, their Raising being without any prior Concert ; and were in very melancholy Circumstances.

A Motion made to model the Army, and chuse Officers.

It is unpleasant to me, and, I think, would be tedious to the Reader, to run through all the Differences which fell in among them. Upon their receiving the News of the Duke's being come down, it was moved, that their Army should be modelled, and Officers chosen who had most Knowledge of military Business, and would be most acceptable to the Men ; and it was hoped this would help to introduce some Order and Discipline, and prevent Mens coming and going as they pleased.

A Declaration proposed to be signed by the Officers.

Before this Proposal, some Jealousies had been taken up, that some among them who inclined to Heights, were of Principles, and upon Designs which could not be approved. This Jealousie was strengthened by an Incident which fell in : A Person unknown to them, came into one of their Meetings, with a Paper, as he said, from some Ministers and others, which they earnestly desired all might sign, for the Removal of Jealousies and Surmises. The Tenor of it was, " We the Officers of the Presbyterian Army, do hereby declare, That " we have no Intention or Design to overturn the Government Civil or Ecclesiastick where- " unto we are solemnly sworn by our national and solemn League and Covenants ; and that " 'tis our Judgment and Opinion that all Matters now in Controversy be forborn, and re- " ferred to be determined by their proper Judicatories, viz. a free and unlimited Parlia- " ment, and a lawful General Assembly."

Refused by Mr. Hamilton and that Side.

Whether this was a Contrivance of the moderate Party, to try the other Side, or a Paper sent by some Presbyterians, who had not as yet joyned the Army, I cannot determine ; nei- ther do I know what Part of this Declaration was scrupled at, further than the Answer gi- ven by Mr. Hamilton and that Side bears, which seems to fix upon the last Part, and it was, ' That before signing that Paper offered to them, they behoved to be informed more par- ' ticularly what these Things were, which were to be forborn till determined in a lawful ' Parliament and Assembly.' There was no more of this for a little Space ; and Mr. Hamil- ton's Party in their Papers complain, that their Enemies branded them with anarchical and antimonarchical Principles, because they declined the signing of this Paper.

The Proposal for a common Choice of Of- ficers, with a Declaration, delayed for some Time.

Be this as it will, the former Motion was made by the moderate Party, that Officers should be chosen by common Consent ; and that all of them give it under their Hands, that they had no Design to overturn the Government of the Nation. The first Party alledged, that such a Subscription imported a groundless Innuendo, as if some of them there engaged in such a Plot. As to the Officers, Mr. Hamilton said, they had pitched upon the best they could think upon ; and declared for himself and the rest who joyned with him, that if the Cause were right stated, and a Day of Humiliation gone into for their own Sins, and the Sins of such who joyned with them, so that they could satisfy themselves as to the Righte- ousness of the Quarrel, they would most willingly demit, and would cheerfully ride as Vo- lunteers. Both of the Proposals were dropt for a Time.

When the Ac- counts came of the General's good Disposi- tion, the moderate Party urge an Address.

But when the moderate Party were acquainted with the Duke's Willingness to receive Ap- plication from them, they urged upon the Thursday, or Friday before the Engagement, the drawing an Address to his Grace, and the presenting of their Grievances. The first Party itaved this off as long as they could, some of them being, as we have heard, against declar- ing themselves at present for or against the King's Authority, and some from other Reasons ; yet it was not long this Matter could be delayed now, for the King's Army was marching up to them, and upon Saturday came towards Bothwell-muir.

The King's Army oppress the Country in their March, which was very unskilful.

I shall not remark any Thing here of the Severities and Oppression of the Country through which the King's Army came, tho' I have in my View, considerable Losses of Money and Goods, which the Parishes of Livingstone, Shots and Bothwell sustained. Great Confusion and Outrages are ordinary in those Cases ; neither shall I notice what I find observed as to the uncautious, if not unskilful March of the regular Troops westward, in a Line, if it may be so called, for Two Miles of Way. It was well for them they had as unskilful People to deal with, for if any Body had been among the Country People, knowing the Art of War, the regular Troops might have been attacked and scattered with a very small Number. But I return to the State of the Army now in Hamiltoun-muir.

Officers of the West Country Army meet June 21.

The Officers met upon Saturday June 21. where the moderate Party were supernumerary. by the Accession of a good many Gentlemen of some Note, who joyned them, and could not well be excluded the Meeting, which they named the Council of War.

Their Debates about choosing Officers.

At this Meeting their Debates run higher than ever, even when the Enemy was within their View. Much of what had been formerly upon the Field was now tabled, especially the Manner of addressing and modelling the Army. To begin with the last, 'twas urged, that all Places in the Army be declared vacant, and Officers now harmoniously chosen, that they might be intirely one when the Engagement came. The first Party answered, They were most willing upon the Conditions I just now narrated ; the other Side expressed their Sur- prise that they must be forced to mourn for the Sins of others, upon the Supposition they were Sins, and that their Cause must be stated upon that ; And thus the Debates fell in again upon upon the Indulgence, to that Height, that some of the first Party rose up and protested, that seeing there were severals come in to the Council of War, who were Strangers, and they knew not their Principles, and had never been in any of their Meetings before, that none might be admitted to vote, but such whose Honesty was known, and the Stanchness of their Principles. This was interpreted to be, that none should be admitted but these who declared themselves against the Indulgence; and Mr. Hamilton, who, as one of his own Side acknowledges upon this Occasion, "was often too forward, pretending to exercise a Power which he had not, and that his Carriage at this Time gave just Occasion of Offence to both Sides;" opposed much the consulting with the Ministers there, because, he said, none of the faithful Ministers were present, but only such who owned the Indulgence; adding, That since the Sword was drawn, he thought it Duty to appear against all Sin. It was reported he laid his Hand upon his Sword when he spoke what follows; but Mr. Hackstoun of Rathillet, in his Relation of the Divisions at Bothwell, denies this, but owns he added, I have drawn my Sword, and am equally ready against the indulged Men and Curates.

1679:

And the Indulgence.

So high did the Flame rise at a Time, when Harmony was absolutely necessary. The moderate Side continued to urge to have Leaders chosen who were most capable of that Fruit, whether for or against the Indulgence, whereupon Mr. Hamilton, and a good many with him, left the Meeting, telling them as they went away, "That hitherto they had carried on this Work, and now since they were setting up upon the Foot of the Indulgence, they had no Freedom to venture their Lives in that Cause."

Mr. Hamilton leaves the Meeting.

The Persons who went out with Mr. Hamilton, as far as Rathillet, from whence I take this Account, remembers, were, John Paton, William Carmichael, James Hendrie, Henry Liall, Andrew Turnbull, John Haddoway, William Clelland, Walter Smith, Alexander Ross, James Fowles, David Caldwell, John Lowdon, Bewly, Tweedy, John Hamilton, James Johnstoun, and John Balfour. We are not to think that all these Persons were of the same Character, altho' at present, as People who had reasoned upon one Side, and Party Men use to do, they withdrew. Some of them were very far from inclining to Mr. Hamilton's Measures, and several of them, some say, Mr. Hamilton himself, subscribed the Supplication to the Duke.

And others who joined with him.

Those who remained choosed a new Preses and a Clerk, and fell upon their Business. They were unwilling to nominate Officers, when so many were absent, and only talked a little upon it; and the Persons they spoke of were Major Learmond, John Paton, William Carmichael, William Clelland, Robert Fleming, and others. Nothing was concluded; but they came closely to consider of an Application to the Duke of Buccleugh, that being an Affair could not allow of a Delay; and I find they drew, and unanimously voted a Supplication to his Grace.

Those who stayed talked about some Officers, and formed an Address to the General.

A Copy of a Supplication to the Duke, is just now in mine Eye, but whether it was what was agreed to by this Meeting I cannot say, or only a Draught proposed to them. If this be not their very Draught, there is little Question but it would run in this Strain; and it appears to have been calculate to introduce a second Application. The Reader probably will be desirous to see it, and it runs

The Draught of it.

To the right Noble and Potent Prince, James Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth, General of his Majesty's Forces now in Scotland,

The humble Supplication of the Nonconformists in the West, and other Places of this Kingdom, now in Arms, in their own Name, and in the Name of all the rest of those who adhere to us in the Church and Kingdom of Scotland,

Humbly sheweth,

THAT whereas we the Presbyterians of the Church and Kingdom of Scotland, being, by a long continued Tract of Violence and Oppression upon us, in our Lives, Liberty, Fortune and Conscience, and without all Hope of Remedy, cut off from all Access of Petitioning, and that by an Act of Parliament, and discharged to pour out our just Grievances and Complaints; and our Lives being made so bitter by cruel Bondage, as Death seemed more eligible than Life, the Causes whereof we have partly mentioned in our Declaration; and being, by an unavoidable Necessity, driven unto the Fields in Arms, in our own innocent Self-defence:

And now looking on it as a most favourable Providence, that your Grace is come amongst us at such a Time, of whose princely Clemency, and natural Goodness, and Aversion from shedding of Christian Blood, we have had so favourable a Report: We accept, with all Thankfulness to GOD, of this Opportunity to lay before your Grace our sad Grievances and humble Requests; all which, we know, will be misrepresented to your Grace, by such who have studiously, yet without any just Ground, except in the Matters of our GOD, been the principal Actors of our sad and deplorable Sufferings. ' May it therefore please your Grace to grant Liberty, under safe Conduct, to some of our Number, to address themselves to your Grace, and to lay open our Heart in this Matter, and that some speedy and effectual Redress may be, by your Grace's Favour and Authority, made, to the establishing of the Nation's Peace. In doing whereof, your Grace shall do that which is most acceptable to the Lord, commend your self to the Generality of the People, as a Reliever of the Oppressed, and a seasonable Preventer of all the Miseries and Ruins that threaten this poor Land, yea, and we doubt not shall bring upon you the Blessings of many Thousands, Men, Women and Children, tho' not with us, yet sincere Lovers of us, and Favourers of our righteous Cause. That the good Lord may incline your Grace's Heart to this, is the humble Desire and earnest Request of, '

1679.

May it please your Grace,

Tour, &c.

Supplication not concluded, till Pains was taken upon the Withdrawers. Mean while the King's Army advance to Bothwell Muir.

Mr. David Hume and Kaitloch went up in the Morning June 22. with it.

Their Demands of his Grace.

Who gives them an obliging Answer, but refuses to treat with them till they lay down their Arms, and gives them only Half an Hour for an Answer.

When the Commissioners return, the Officers will agree to nothing, and no Answer is returned.

Whereupon the Attack is made by the Lord Livingstone upon the Bridge, which the Country Men defend till their Ammunition fails.

When they send up to Mr. Hamilton for more, he orders them to quit the Bridge, where their great Strength lay.

After the Meeting had resolved upon a Supplication, Pains was taken to get in the Officers, who had withdrawn, to sign it. This, and some other Things, cost them so much Time, that the Supplication was not sent that Night; and a good many were content to put their Hands to it ere next Day. To Morrow, Sabbath June 22. the Duke and his Army were come to Bothwell Muir, and their advanced Guards to Bothwell Town, within a Quarter of a Mile of the Bridge. The Country Men lay encamped on the South-side of the River of Clyde, in Hamiltoun Muir, and had an advanced Party ready to dispute the Passage at the Bridge over the River, called Bothwell-bridge, if the King's Army should venture to essay it.

Mr. David Hume, and the Laird of Kaitloch, and, some say, Mr. John Welsh, had been named to go to the Duke with the Supplication; and, upon the Sabbath Morning early, they went in Disguise: Yet Claverhouse, having some jealousy of them, watched them upon their Return, and having got some Hint of them, saluted them by their Names.

They had very ready and easy Access to his Grace, and, beside the Supplication, it seems, were instructed to make the following Demands. ' That they might be allowed the free Exercise of Religion, and to attend Gospel Ordinances dispensed by their own faithful Presbyterian Ministers, without Molestation: That a free Parliament, and a free General Assembly, without the Clogs of Oaths and Declarations, should be allowed to meet, for settling Affairs both in Church and State; and that all those who now are, or have been in Arms, should be indemnified. '

The Duke heard their Demands very patiently, and told them, ' That the King had given him no express Instructions concerning these Matters, but assured them, upon his Honour, he would interpose, and use his Interest to the utmost with his Majesty for granting their Desires; and he was very confident he would be able to procure from his Majesty Satisfaction to them, for he reckoned their Desires reasonable and just: But, in the mean Time, he acquainted them, that he would engage to do nothing, nor so much as come in Terms with them, till they laid down their Arms, and betook themselves to his Mercy; and dispatched them back to their Friends, and ordered them to bring him Information, in Half an Hour at farthest, whether they would accept of Quarters upon these Terms; and at the same Time he gave Orders to his Army to advance toward Bothwell-bridge. '

Now the fatal Nature of their Divisions began to appear. When the Commissioners came back, the Officers fell a debating, and would come to no Resolution. Mr. Hamilton, who assumed the general Command, was against all Accommodation, and others did not relish the Proposal of laying down their Arms; in short, they were quite disjoyned and broken, and nothing was agreed upon, nor any Answer returned to the General.

So the Lord Livingstone, upon the Head of the Foot-guards, came up with the Cannon to force the Bridge. A Guard of Two or three hundred Country Men were set to keep the Bridge, consisting of Kippen and Galloway Men. Hackstoun of Rathillet was one of the Commanders of this Guard, and shewed abundance of Bravery, and the Men defended the Bridge with a great deal of Gallantry. Several of the Soldiers were killed, the Country Men stood their Ground near an Hour, making a brisk Resistance, till their Ammunition failed them.

When they found their Powder and Ball falling short, they dispatched up to their General, either to send them down Ammunition, or a fresh Body of Troops well provided. Instead of this he sent back Orders to them, forthwith to quit the Bridge, and retire to the Body of the Army, which at length with very sore Hearts they did, their main Strength lying in keeping that Pass. Thus it was most shamefully parted with by brave Men, for want of necessary Supply: Had they maintained that Pass, which might easily have been done, all had been well; but when it was lost, there was no more Resistance made to the King's Forces. The

The Duke, upon this, ordered the whole Army to pass the Bridge, with Cannon before them, which they planted against the West Country Army, and played a little upon them. Mean while the King's Forces drew up very leisurely behind their Cannon; nor did Mr. Hamilton, as far as I can learn, ever once aim to attack them, or give any Orders for it, when they were coming over, or forming themselves on the South-side of the Bridge.

All my Accounts agree, that the Duke's Cannon playing upon the Horse on the Left of the Country Men, either disordered them, or made them think themselves in Hazard, and essay to shift their Ground. But after this, the Papers giving Account of this Business differ, so that I can make nothing of them. Rathillet, in his Narrative, says, 'When he came up from the Bridge, and the Army was formed and seemed very hearty, upon a sudden the Cry rose from the Troops and the Companies on all Hands, that their Leaders were gone, which adds he, were the Men who were inclined to the Indulgence, either flying or seeking a Parley with the Enemy, tho' all Favour had been refused, unless we would lay down our Arms, and come in their Will.' The Papers on the other Side blame Mr. Hamilton and his Party as discouraging the Men, and doing nothing but clamouring against those who were sent to the Duke, and such as were for an Accommodation; they alledge, Mr. Hamilton, and these who were warmest, were soonest out of the Field.

I have seen many and various Narratives of this Action; the plainest and most probable Account I can give from them, is, That the Duke's Cannon did reach the Horse on the Left of the Country Army; whereupon they wheeled to take up another Ground a little higher, but were never able to make their Horses face the Cannon; and, in the Wheeling, or taking up their Ground, they fell foul upon some of their own Men formed near them, and put them in some Disorder: And those nearest them, seeing this, took it to be a Flight, and the whole Army fell into Confusion, and fled; and one who was present there writes to me, Mr. Hamilton was among the foremost, 'leaving the World to debate whether he acted most like a Traitor, Coward, or Fool.'

I would not set down so severe a Remark upon this Gentleman, were it not that I find almost every Body blame his Conduct at this Time. The bringing up the Party from the Bridge was certainly a mad Step, and they ought to have been supported to the utmost, and not called off. I have this following Passage also well vouched. Captain Thomas Weir of Greenridge, whom, I find, Rathillet represents as an Occasion of disordering some of the Foot, when he saw a Body of the King's Forces get over the Bridge, and but a forming, wheeled about his Troop, and the Galloway Troop, commanded by Captain Macculloch, joyned with him, and was riding down to attack them. Mr. Hamilton came off to him, and said, What mean you, Captain? will you murder those Men? Mr. Weir answered, He hoped there was no Hazard, and that he might give a good Account of all the Horse yet come along the Bridge, especially when but forming. When Mr. Hamilton found the Captain's Troop resolute, he dealt with the Galloway Troop, and represented and magnified the Difficulties, so as they shrunk, and so the Captain was obliged to retire back with them. My Informer is of entire Credit, and had it from Greenridge a few Days after the Engagement, whom he represents as a pious sensible Gentleman.

In short, the Horse and Mr. Hamilton rode off, and left the Foot entirely to the Mercy of the King's Army. The regular Troops perceiving the Country Men in this Pickle, advanced with all Speed upon the Foot, now perfectly naked; they fled all of them, except a Body of about Twelve hundred, who surrendered Prisoners of War, without Stroke of Sword. The Horse got mostly off, and many of the Foot took the Banks and Woods thereabout.

Never was a good Cause and gallant Army, generally speaking, hearty and bold, worse managed; and never will a Cause, tho' never so good, be better managed, when Divisions, Disjoyntings, and Self creep in among the Managers. And indeed, had there been any Skill to manage, I am told, that the regular Troops were extremely open, both in their March, and especially in their Attack; and nothing but the Views of these Divisions, and Unskillfulness, can justify the Duke, and other Officers with him, in attacking an Enemy at such a narrow Bridge, where the Water was not fordable near it, far less in marching his Army through so narrow a Pass, under the Shot of Troops, who were reputed as resolute as his own: But he knew whom he had to deal with.

There cannot be any full Account given of the Slain, because they were just murdered up and down the Fields, wherever the Soldiers met them, without Mercy. It was reckoned there were about Four hundred killed, and Twelve hundred who surrendered Prisoners in the Muir: The Soldiers brought in few or no Prisoners, but cut off all they met with. Some Papers bear, that there were but Two or Three killed at the Bridge, and in the Muir, Bushes and Woods, near by upwards of Three hundred. There were not many of Note killed, that I hear of. Whether it was this Day, or the following, I know not; but, at this Time, that excellent Person, William Gordon of Earlstoun, who was coming up to the Western Port, was killed by the English Dragoons, who behaved but very cowardly at the Bridge. I am informed, that the Predecessors of this ancient Family entertained the Disciples of Wickliff

1679.

The King's Army pass the Bridge, play with their Cannon upon the Country Men, and form themselves without any Opposition. The Cannon put the Horse to flight to them in Disorder.

Accounts of what followed differ according to the different Sides.

The most probable Account of the Country People's Flight.

Mr. Hamilton very much blamed on this Occasion.

The Horse retire, and leave their Foot naked. Twelve Hundred of them, surrendered Prisoners of War.

Remarks on this Defeat.

No perfect Account can be given of the Slain, they were judged to be about 400.

1679.

liff, and had a New Testament in the vulgar Tongue, which they used to read in Meetings in the Woods about Earstoun House. And, as if the Death of so good a Man had not been Expiation enough for this Crime, his Lady had her Joynture seized, her House spoiled, and many Horses and Cattle taken from her. I hear also, that good Man, Mr. James Smith, Brother to Mr. Hugh Smith, of whom before, was barbarously killed near the Nether-town of Hamiltoun. Neither were there many of Note taken Prisoners at the Action.

It is said, the English Dragoons, the Highlanders, and some Volunteers from Perth and Angus-shire, were very bloody, and gave no Quarter. And, had it not been the merciful Temper of the General, and the Influence and Interest used by a considerable Number of Noblemen and Gentlemen this Day waiting upon the Duke, certainly there had been a much greater Slaughter of the Foot.

Cruelty exercised by the Soldiers.

Notwithstanding of the General's Care, no small Severities were committed by the Soldiers: I shall only give a few Instances. When the Body of Foot in Hamiltoun-muir surrendered themselves, they were all of them not only disarmed, but stript almost to their Skin, and made to ly down flat upon the Ground in the Muir, with strict Orders not to stir out of the Posture, and a strong Guard set upon them. One of them turning himself to a more easy Posture, set up his Head a little; and when one of the Soldiers perceived this, he shot him dead in an Instant.

Several unarmed Persons coming to Sermon, were murdered in cold Blood on their high Road.

Several Persons were that same Day killed upon the Road near Hamiltoun, who were unarmed, and coming down to hear Sermon at the Camp, or upon some other Occasion, and knew nothing of the Engagement, or that the King's Forces were come over the River. Thus Two serious Persons in Glasford Parish, James Scouler and Gavin Semple, tho' they had no Arms, were barbarously murdered upon the High-way, and Six belonging to Evandale Parish, John Browning in Kype, Robert Stobo in Strathaven, William Hamiton in Threestanes, Robert Steil in Adstoun-head, William Pate there, and Archibald Dick; these were severally met by the Soldiers: Upon their declaring ingenuously that they were coming down to hear Sermon, the Soldiers shot them as they found them. This Cruelty will make the Reader less wonder at their Severity to Robert Finlay in the Parish of Stonehouse, whom they caught on the Road, and he acknowledging that he was indeed coming to the Army, tho' he wanted Arms, they straightway dispatched him.

The Murder of Arthur Inglis in Cannethan the Day after.

I shall end this melancholy Subject with a well vouched Account I have of Arthur Inglis, a pious, sober, honest Man in the Nether-town of Cannethan: He had not been at Bothwell, but, upon Munday June 23. he was looking after his own Cattle feeding upon a Ley, and had sit down in a fur among his own Corn, and was reading upon the Bible; the Place was Two or three Miles from Bothwell, and the high Road came near it. Some of the Soldiers were coming that Way, and perceiving him reading, concluded he was a Whig; and, when at a little Distance, one of them discharged his Piece at him, but missed him. The good Man, conscious of no Guilt, and probably not knowing the Shot was directed at him, only looked about to the Soldiers, and did not offer to move; they came straight up to him, and, without asking any Questions, clave him in the Head with their Swords, and killed him on the Spot.

By these Hints we may guess what was done by the Soldiers up and down near the Place of Action; and indeed they spared no Body almost they met with.

Loss of the King's Army inconsiderable.

The Loss of the King's Army needs not be computed: It was perfectly inconsiderable; a few were killed at the Bridge; after that there was no Resistance made, except in the Woods, where I hear Two or Three of the Soldiers were killed.

Remarks upon the Narrative of this Action in the Caveat for the Whigs.

Perhaps I have spent too much Paper already in animadverting upon the Author of the Caveat for the Whigs. I shall take my Leave of him, with observing his gross Blunders and Lies in his Representation of this Action at Bothwell. That scandalous Paper is not indeed worth noticing, were it not to expose his Masters who employed so worthless a Tool. He libels the Duke of Monmouth, because he was not in the Interest of the Duke of Tork, and the Popish Faction, alledging it was his Mercy and Forbearance made the West Country Army insist upon Terms; and among other Things, that the Covenants should be renewed. The Duke was civil, and not for shedding of Blood, if it could be prevented; but still he pushed his Point, and would not ~~trough~~ till they laid down their Arms: But the renewing the Covenants was none of the Terms they sought. This Writer talks in his following Sentence like one stupidly ignorant of Scotland, and says, "The Rebels thought to have marched off to Carriok and Galloway, in order to furnish themselves with Arms and Ammunition, which was landed at Borrowstounness, besides what was further expected from Holland." That is, they went West and South to get that which was in the East. And 'tis perfectly a Fiction of his own, to get in the Republican Dutch to the Story, that Arms were landed at Borrowstounness, and more expected from Holland. I may venture to assure this Dabbler in Politicks, that this Plot, as he thinks it, was not so deeply laid, and their Correspondence did not reach so far. He fully asserts, "Old Dalziel honestly resolved to end the Matter." He may depend on it, that old and bloody Man had none of the Honour of that Day. Any thing of this belonged to the Duke of Monmouth, and Dalziel was at Edinburgh. Indeed, upon his receiving ing a Commission, as we have heard, he came west after the Defeat. To compleat the Glory of this Day, he doubles the Number of the Slain, and makes them Eighthundred. The more were slain in the Circumstances above narrated, the less honourable it was for the Murderers. And he alledges, the Rebels 1600 Horse might have been cut off, had not the Duke given Orders not to pursue them, which is just as true as the Number of the Slain. 1679.

Upon these Falshoods, and some others, such as the Insurrection's being within Two Weeks after the Bishop's Murder, he raises his Scheme, that there was a Correspondence with England, and that Shaftsbury and other Patriots there, were to have renewed the Covenants in Scotland. The insisting so long upon these Roveries, deserves an Apology.

The Observes I have made upon the Caveat for the Whigs, will shorten my Remarks upon the Account given by Mr. Archdeacon Eachard, of our Scots Affairs this Year. There is so great an Agreement in the Narratives given by both, that it looks as if the last had copied from the first, both in this Account of the Bishop's Murder, and this Affair of Bothwel. Mr. Eachard's Story of so many Copies of Shaftsbury's Speech coming by Post to Edinburgh, and the pretended Correspondence 'twixt Presbyterians and the Country Party in England, have been already considered. He ought to have brought some Proof for what he adds, "That the Malecontents in Scotland, thus animated from England, began at their Conventicles to display the Banners of Jesus Christ, as they called their Colours." But indeed it can never be proven, and I can assure him, there was never a Pair of Colours at a Field-conventicle in Scotland. And a Writer of Mr. Archdeacon's Reputation, ought not to advance such glaring Untruths as we meet with here. Of this Sort are the Scrapes which follow from the Sermons at Conventicles; and the Lists, dropt with the Primate in the Head of them, of Men to fall by heroic Hands. The only Foundation for this was the Paper posted up in Cwpar, which was not a List of this Nature. His Account of the Archbishop's Murder is mostly taken from the Narrative before insert: But his fixing it upon Shaftsbury's Speech, because this happened to be before it some Weeks, with his making the Commons Address against Lawderdale, a kind of Consequent of it, are Stretches the Archdeacon will be ashamed of when he reflects upon them, and considers the true State of Things above.

Remarks upon
Mr. Eachard's
Accounts of Scots Affairs
this Year.

His Account of the Skirmish at Drumclog, June 1. seems copied from the Caveat or his Authors; and the Blunders of proclaiming the Covenant at Ragland, and their Numbers and Commanders, have been considered, with the foolish Account that follows of the Proclamation at Glasgow against the Bishops and their Bairns. In Scotland the Untruth of these is well enough known; and 'tis Pity Mr. Eachard should lessen his own Character, by publishing such Things again.

In the short Hint he gives of the Defeat at Bothwel, he has the Misfortune not to have one true Article almost. He says, The Duke at Bothwel-bridge fought the Rebels with great Fury, whereas there was on the Matter no proper Engagement. The Soldiers indeed murdered the poor, fleeing and unarmed Country Men with Fury enough, and, adds he, Tho' seventeen thousand in Number, intirely routed them. From what Authority he makes them near six times more than really they were, he can best inform us; even the Caveat falls not in this Blunder, whom he follows in the Numbers of the killed. And I am glad, for the Archdeacon's sake, that he has not copied him in the Account of the Whigs going to Carrick and Galloway, to meet with the Arms come to Borrowstounness. However, in Time to come, I hope Mr. Eachard will look better to his Vouchers in our Scots Affairs.

Thus I have given as distinct an Account as I could of this Rising, which ended at Bothwel. I have essayed impartially to state their Differences as far as the Papers upon both Sides, come to my Hand, would carry me, and narrated Matter of Fact; and the more largely, that these were the Beginnings of the fore Divisions which fell in afterwards among the suffering Party: And because the Misgiving of this Effort and Struggle under Church and National Grievances, may be landed upon them, I wish these Accounts of them may be of use to warn and guard the Church of Scotland in all after Times against Extremities. I come now to the Consequents of this Defeat, which I put in a new Chapter, and with it shall end this Year.

Conclusion of this Chapter.

C H A P. III.

1679.

Of the Consequents of this Rising and Defeat at Bothwel, and other Things this Year, 1679.

The Defeat at Bothwel followed with much Persecution.

The Defence of those Severities from this Rising, its being Rebellion, considered.

Contents of this Chapter.

MUCH of the Persecution and Harassings of Thousands, for Nine Years following, may be reckoned Consequents, and some way the Fruits of this Defeat I have been describing: What I have in View upon this Chapter, is the Severities which followed during this Year, and more immediately those exercised upon the Prisoners.

I know well the Managers defend their Cruelties, by alledging the rebellious Nature of this Rising. The Reader, after what is set down above, must judge for himself. We have seen this Appearance was not reckoned Rebellion when the Nation came to their Senses after the Revolution. Quarters were offered by the Duke of Monmouth, and even Intercession to have their Desires answered; and, I question not, pacifick Measures had been gone into, if the Duke of York and Papists had not prevailed at Court, but they turned Matters soon upon the severe Side, with respect to Presbyterians.

All I have further upon this Year shall be brought in upon this Chapter, where the Harassings of the Country, and Actings of the Government and Army immediately after the Defeat at Bothwel, the Treatment of the Prisoners, the Trial and Execution of severals who had been in that Rising, the Circuit Courts this Year, and Forfeitures which followed, together with the State of Presbyterian Ministers, and others who had not been in the Rising, the third Indulgence, and the Turn of Affairs in the Close of the Year, by the coming down of the Duke of York, will be Subjects for the following Sections.

S E C T. I.

Of the immediate Consequents of the Defeat at Bothwel, the Harassing of the Country, and the Actings of the Government and Soldiers.

Proposal of some Officers of the Army, to burn Glasgow, Hamiltoun, &c.

ONE of the first Consequents I notice of the Defeat at Bothwel, is the Hazard the City of Glasgow, the Town of Hamiltoun, and the Country round the Place of Action were in, had not the good Nature of the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth prevented it. The Officers of the Army who had been at Glasgow, Major White, Claverhouse, and others of their cruel Temper, solicited the General to ruine the West Country, and burn Glasgow, Hamiltoun, and Strathaven, to kill the Prisoners, at least considerable Numbers of them, and to permit the Army to plunder the western Shires, who, they alledged, had countenanced the Rebels.

Rejected by the General:

The General abhorred so unnatural a Proposal, and rejected it with Detestation. However, from it we may remark the sad Pass this poor Kingdom was at, when the Army made such Proposals: And the Reader will easily foresee what their Carriage will be the succeeding Years, when the Power is in their Hands. I find, when they were balked in this, they proposed, that at least the Soldiers should be allowed Three or Four Hours to spoil the disaffected Houses in the City of Glasgow, because of the Favour shewn there by many to the West Country Army: But this was likewise peremptorily refused. Yet 'tis said, that the Town of Glasgow was obliged to quit to the Town of Edinburgh, for the behoof of some particular Persons who were to be gratified, a Debt of Thirty thousand Merks they had upon the Canon-mills, that they might be saved from Plunder at this Time.

Multitudes in Hamiltoun brought to great Trouble for their inevitable Conversation with the West Country Army.

It would be endless almost to enter upon the Ravages and Spulies committed by the King's Forces, upon the adjacent Places, immediately after the Engagement at Bothwel. Many Persons in Hamiltoun were spoiled of all their Household Plenishing, and cited before the Council and Circuit-courts for Converse with the Rebels, and some of them imprisoned and fined in very great Sums, altho' they were not in Arms: And it was perfectly impossible to evite Converse verse with the West Country Army, they lying in and about that Town for several Weeks. Some Gentlemen who got Council Grants of rimes, and the Sheriff-depute made Money by their vexatious Procelles upon these Pretexts for several Years after this. 1679.

Arthur Tacket, a Boy of Eighteen Years of Age in the Town of Hamiltoun, had gone out with his Gun the Day of the Defeat, but soon got into his Mother's House in that Place. This coming afterwards to be known, he was in a little Time seized by the Laird of Raploch, who carried him in Prisoner to Edinburgh; where some Years after, as we shall hear, he was, notwithstanding of the Indemnity, executed for his being at Bothwel.

The King's Forces, when pursuing the scattered Country People in the Places near by, took all the Horses of any Value which they found in the Possession of such who were no ways concerned in Bothwel: And it was their Way, either to carry them with them, or to make the Owners pay very near their Value for them; and when they had done so, they were in Hazard to be plundered by the next Soldiers who came that Way.

Thus in the Parish of Cambuslang the Soldiers took away, in Horses and Money, to the Value of 500 Merks from four Farmers, without the least Reason or Provocation. A large List of Oppressions this way from the Parishoners of Blantyr, Kilbride, Cambuslang, Micklands, Bothwel, and Hamiltoun might be given. I have just in mine Eye an Account of the Losses sustained by the East End of the Parish of the Shots, at the retiring of the Soldiers and Militia after Bothwel, and it runs above 500 lib. Sterl. From which we may infer what a swarming Sum the Total would have been, which was exacted from the Parishes round about, had the Accounts of them been preserved.

The Reader will further observe, that in all the Parishes through the Kingdom, where the Managers or Soldiers got Notice of any who had been at Bothwel, there was a continued Tract of Plundering, Quartering and spolie for Seven or Eight Years, and that not only upon the Families of such who had been, or were said to have been there; but their Relations, Friends and Neighbours, and all who had any Dealing with them; yea, those Cruelties were exercised upon all who did not comply with Prelacy, and abet and assist the Soldiers in their Rapin and Outrages; so that some of the most exact Conformists themselves did not escape, when they were either so generous, as not to turn Informers, or merciful, as not to fall in with every severe Method now proposed.

The Fines and Forfeitures of Persons of Substance and Estates were innumerable, some of the last may come to be noticed in this Chapter, and in the Progress of this Work. 'Tis very true the King emitted an Indemnity, but we shall just now hear how clogged it was; and the Circuits, Judiciary Courts, and Multitudes of Executions which followed for some Years, are sensible Proofs that our Managers in Scotland, who were much influenced by the Clergy, had sufficient Interest to put a Stop to any of the King's Favours this way.

And, as we shall hear in a little Time, most Part of the Gentry of the western Shires, of any Piety and Tenderneis, or who would not go into the Measures of the Time intirely, tho' no way accessory to this Rising, were brought to inexpressible Trouble. They were harried before Circuits, toiled by frequent Appearances before the Council, imprisoned and exorbitantly fined for alledged Harbour, Refet, and Converse with such who had been at Bothwel, or were informed against, as having been there; and there was no Way of escaping, but by taking the self-contradicting Oath of the Test, and the Bond of Regularity, whereby they were tied down to hear the Curates, and delate Presbyterian Ministers who exercised any Part of their Office; all which will appear evidently in the following History.

One Instance at present shall suffice to vouch those Generals. A worthy Gentleman in Limerick Shire, Sir Thomas Stuart of Cultnefs, Son to Sir James Stuart late Provost of Edinburgh, of whom in the preceeding Books, a Person of an eminently holy Life, shining Conversation, and many other excellent Endowments, was obliged, after Bothwel, first to abscond for some Time, and then to retire to Holland, and take upon him a voluntary Banishment till the happy Revolution, Orders being issued out to apprehend him upon a Suspicion, without any legal Proof, that he had supplied some of the Country Men going to Bothwel, with Meat and Drink. It was not so much as pretended that Sir Thomas, or any of his Family and Servants were there: He had indeed refused or declined to put poor People and his Tenants out of their Possessions, for hearing the Gospel in the Fields, or in Houses; and would not be active in persecuting others, who suffered for Conscience sake. Upon these Grounds he was forced to flee his native Country, and lurk among Strangers, to the great Prejudice of his Family and Estate; and, in Absence, when they knew he could not answer their Citation, he was forfeited upon most unjust Grounds, and defrauded of the Incomes of his Estate until King William's happy Accession to the Throne.

After these general Hints, let me notice the Procedure of the Government, the Bond, Proclamations, and Indemnity issued out after the Defeat at Bothwel. Other incidental Matters which fell in June and July this Year, I leave to the last Section, that the Reader may have the Treatment of such as were concerned in this Rising all together.

Arthur Tacket several Years after executed for being with them.

Horses of any Value seized up and down the Country.

Losses of a Part of the Parish of Shots by the Soldiers at this Time 500 lib. Sterl.

A continued Tract of Oppression for many Years followed upon the West and South of pre-texted People's being at this Rising.

With innumerable Fines and Forfeitures.

Gentlemen and Heritors brought to great Trouble.

An Instance in the Case of Sir Thomas Stuart, of Cultnefs.

Procedure of the Government, and General after the Defeat.

From

1679.

Procedure of the Council at ter the Defeat.Their Letter
June 22. to Lawderdale.App. N<sup>o</sup>. 29.Their Letter to him, June 24.

From the Books of Council, I shall here give some Narrative of the Managers Procedure immediately after the Defeat, and bring in here the Actings of Council, during the Remainder of this Year, except what relates to the Prisoners, Circuits, and other Heads which will fall in under the following Sections.

The Laird of Lundin brought the Council the first Acount of the Defeat of the West Country Army, June 22. and that Night they send off a tlying Pacquet to Lawderdale, with an Account of the Action, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 29. At the same Time they write to Colonel Struthers in Northumberland that he secure the Borders, and stop and imprison the Rebels who shall endeavour to escape to England, and order all the Boats of Queenserry, and the South-side of the Firth, to ly on that Side, that none get over to Fife.

June 24. they dispatch another Letter to Lawderdale, wherein they acquaint him, "That they have not yet full Accounts of the Victory, but they hear 800 Rebels are slain, and more than 1100 Prisoners. They assure him of their Care to get all Information possible from the Prisoners, and discover such as skulk and hide themselves. They take notice, That his Majesty hath, by this Victory, an Opportunity to secure the Monarchy, Church, Protestant Religion, and Liberty of his Subjects, against all after Attempts. They promise, for their Part, so to execute the Laws against Rebellion, Faction and Schism, as the King shall direct them, without gratifying the Humours of such as are apt to grow more insolent by his Majesty's Grace and Goodness, and have been encouraged and hardened in an obstinate Opposition to the Church; by his Condescensions and Indulgences. They add, That the General, with the Army, are within Two Miles of Strathaven; that the Prisoners are come to Edinburgh, and ask Directions how to dispose of them; and propose, that after the Ringleaders are punished capitally, the Rabble may be transported to the Plantations, never to return; for which end they desire one of his Majesty's Frigats to be sent down to Leith." That same Day they write Letters to Queensberry and Nithsdale, that they guard the Passes, and endeavour to secure the Rebels, and prevent their going over to Ireland.

Upon the 25 of June, the Council receive a Letter from the General, wherein he acquaints them, "That he had sent Parties beyond Newmills and Douglas, who had informed him the Rebels had passed by those Places in great Haste, and small Parties; that he reckons them now dispersed, and has ordered home the Militia Regiments, and desires them to stop those that are coming up." That Day they order Henry Ker of Graden, to search for Turnbull of Bewly, Turnbull of Standhill, Henry Hall and Mr. Archibald Riddel who were at the Rebellion, or Abettors of it.

Next Day, June 26. in their Forenoon's Sederunt, before the Duke of Buccleugh and Montmouth comes up to them, they publish their Proclamation of this Day's Date, against the Set of Rebels, &c. which I have insert Appendix N<sup>o</sup>. 30. Therein the Reader will see the Names of the Persons of most considerable Note, who were in the West Country Army, and many of them I take to have been Officers, as Robert Hamilton, John Paton, Major Learmond, William, afterward Lieutenant Colonel Clelland, John Balfour, the Lairds of Latgoun, Bar-scoe, John Wilson, afterward executed, Major Koss, Captain Wier, the Lairds of Rathill, Kaitloch, Shingartoun, Bankhead, Montgrenan, Bedlan, Earlstoun, Freugh, Craichtaw, Bewly, Standhill, Greddin, Urats, and Murdoch, the Lord Cathcart's two Sons, Henry Hall and others, and all the Ministers and Preachers they could hear of, with the Persons alledged to be concerned in the Attempt on the Archbishop.

I find the Council owning Mistakes in this Proclamation: They declare July 18. That Robert Stuart of Ravenstoun, and William Stuart of Castle Stuart, Brothers to the Earl of Galloway, have made it evident before them, they were not in the Rebellion; and upon the last of June, they declare that Brice Blair of Finwick is wrongously insert in this Proclamation. But these are not all the Mistakes the Reader will find upon the Perusal of this Proclamation. I do not much enter upon them, since frequently the Misrepresentations of the Penners of publick Papers at this Time have been noticed.

All who had been at Bothwell, are made Traitors, and the Rising a desperate and avowed Rebellion: This will appear hard after what hath been narrated, and, we have seen, their Declaration vindicates them from such hard Epithets. Their Proposals had been some way reckoned reasonable; and, had it not been their own Divisions, 'tis probable a Treaty had been entred to. Now when they are broke, I can see no Use of such hard Words, but to irritate the Remains of them, and put them upon a new Rising. The pretended Reason for publishing this Declaration, is, to keep Subjects from being ensnared and brought to Trouble by them. This may hold as to such whose Names are insert; but this was neither a full List, nor a true List, as we have heard; and the general Clause, Or any others who concurred or joyned in the late Rebellion, makes Subjects as liable to Trouble, as to those not named, as with Relation to such as are named. All such who fail in their Duty in the Premises, are to be punished, as guilty of Rebellion. Here is a broad Foundation laid for pursuing and harassing Multitudes, who afterwards, by People whose Interest it was to have them guilty, were pretended to be accessory to this Rising; and the following Years are a sad Commentary upon

Council's Proclamation against the Rebe of Rebels.
June 26.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 30.Mistakes in this Proclamation acknowledged by the Council.Remarks upon
it.

on this General. The Proclamation ends with a Recommendation to the Archbishops and Bishops, to see that it be published in all Parish Churches. This Method of publishing the Council's Acts of this Nature, is new. The conformable Clergy gave ready Obedience, and they had been ungrate had they done otherwise; but in reading it, one would think they might have had many Challenges, as having been the Occasion of all this Severity, Blood, and Confusion; however the Church and Sabbath seem not altogether so very proper for such Publications.

1679.

In the Afternoon's Sederunt, June 26. I find the General present, when the Council give his Grace their Thanks for his great Pains in suppressing the late Rebellion. Orders are given to the Magistrates of Edinburgh to provide Chirurgeons that may attend the sick and wounded Prisoners, and to appoint Persons to receive Meat and Drink, and see it distributed among them. The like Orders are sent to Lintithgow and Hamiltoun. Next Day the Militia Troops beyond Forth are ordered home, and the Militia Regiment of Edinburgh ordered to guard the Prisoners by Turns.

Care taken of the Prisoners by the General's Orders.

July 4. The Council receive a Letter from the King, dated June 29. wherein he directs them as to the Disposal of the Prisoners, which I have added Appendix N<sup>o</sup>. 31. Therein he refers them to the Duke for his further Pleasure in a Proclamation, which contained a Suspension of the Laws against Conventicles, as we shall see upon the 5 Section. We shall find this Letter obeyed as to the Prisoners in the next Section.

King's Letter, June 29. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 31.

Whether it was by virtue of the Powers granted the Duke at this Time, that he published a Pardon and Indemnity to all Tenants and Subtenants, who had been at Bothwell, providing they submitted themselves against such a Day; or if the General, by virtue of his former Powers, emitted this before, he came into Edinburgh, I know not, not having seen the Date of this Proclamation. But that he did publish it, appears from the Bond offered at this Time, to the Heritors in the West Country, the Tenor whereof was.

The General offers an Indemnity to Tenants who had been at Bothwell.

Whereas the Duke of Buccleugh, General of his Majesty's Forces, has thought fit to issue forth a Proclamation of Pardon and Indemnity to all Tenants and Subtenants that were actually concerned in the Rebellion, and present at the late Fight at Hamiltoun, and shall render themselves, their Horse and Arms, to his Grace, at the King's Standard, or the Magistrate in Chief of the head Burgh of the Shire, where they shall happen to be, within Days after the Publication of the said Proclamation.

Bond required of Heritors as to such who refused this offered Pardon.

These are testifying, that I do, by these Presents, bind and oblige my self, that in case any of my Tenants or Subtenants that were concerned in the Rebellion, and present at the late Fight, shall refuse or delay to accept of this Act of Grace, within the Time limited, I shall use my utmost Endeavour forthwith to apprehend and deliver up to Justice all such Persons; and in case it shall be made to appear that any of the said Persons shall be found to have resided on my Land, at the End of Thirty Days after the Date of the said Proclamation, I shall forfeit and be liable to his Majesty in the Sum of 500 Lib. Scots, for every such Person as shall be found in my Land. Those only excepted to whom the King and Council shall think fit to grant a Pardon. In witness whereof, &c.

For any Thing I can learn, there were but few Tenants came in upon this Proclamation: A good many of the common Sort were made Prisoners, and came not under it; and those who escaped, hid themselves for some Time, and probably had but uncertain Accounts of this Offer, and many were unwilling to venture themselves so soon to the Hands of the Army or Magistrates.

Few Tenants come in on this Indemnity.

Neither do I find the Heritors most concerned, were willing to come in to this Bond. It did involve them in owning the Rising to be Rebellion, and engaged them to turn out all their Tenants who came not in within the Time limited, and brought them under a Fine in case they were after found upon their Lands, and I find no Penalty enforcing this Bond upon them; and therefore, as far as I know, it came to very little. This Proclamation however was of a quite different Strain from that we have seen emitted by the Council, June 26. before the Duke came up to them.

Heritors refuse the Bond.

At this Diet the Council write to the different Sheriffs in the Shires, on the South-side of Tay, to send up exact Lists of the Heritors who did not attend upon the King's Host, or left it without Allowance, that they may be prosecuted according to Law. It took some Time before this Matter was brought to a Bearing; and therefore I shall refer it to the next Year, when Multitudes were brought to Trouble upon this Account. At the same Time the Council, being informed, that Alexander and James Balfours, Tenants in Gilstoun, who were taken in Arms going to Rebellion, have fraudulently disposed their Estates and Means, order the Sheriff of Fife to sequester all they have for the King's Use.

Notice taken of such who attended not the King's Host.

His Grace the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth takes his Leave of the Council, July 6. and they write a Letter of Compliment to Lawderdale, thanking the King for sending him, and acknowledging the great Service he hath done.

Duke of Buccleugh leaves Edinburgh July 6.

The Proclamation of the 26 of June stood in full Force, till it was, if I may say so, a little softened by the Indemnity the King was pleased to grant some time after this. It bears Date at King's Proclamation of Indemnity.

Windsor,

1679. for, July 27. What was the Reason of the delaying the publishing of it to August 14. I shall not determine.

That, as we shall hear, was the Day of the publick Execution of Mrs. King and Kid. It may be reckoned invidious to suppose that Methods were taken to delay it at London for some Weeks, and its Publication, when agreed to there, was deferred so long, that the Soldiers might have the longer Time to harass and spoil the Country. Indeed the Indemnity was so clogged, that it put no great Stop to that when it came.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 32.

'Tis inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 32. and was published with a great deal of Solemnity at Edinburgh, August 14. A Scaffold was erected at the Cross, and the Magistrates came to it in the forenoon in their Robes, and were Witnesses to the Proclamation. In the Afternoon, Mrs. King and Kid were hanged, and their Heads cut off upon another Scaffold. And when that was over, there were publick Rejoycings; the Bells were tolled, and Bonfires put on through the City. That this was timed so, as it might be an Insult upon these two good Men who were put to Death, I shall not say; this was but a poor Revenge. Be this as it will, the publick Rejoycings were a little dashed by a Fire's breaking out in the City that Night, which destroyed a Lodging, and was happily stopped.

Remarks upon it.

When this Indemnity was published, it was no great Matter of Rejoycing to the People concerned in Bothwell. The Draught of it appears abundantly cunning and cautious, and Lawderdale fails not in it to notice his own Victory over Duke Hamilton. The Field-preachers, termed here those who poisoned the Subjects with Principles inconsistent with Duty, Society and Government, are for once put in good Company, and coupled with these worthy Patriots, of whom more hereafter, who were struggling for civil Liberty, and Ease from Oppression and Burdens, under the Name of a numerous Faction. After this Fling of all who appear for Liberty, Civil or Ecclesiastick, the King, by virtue of his Prerogative, 'Pardons all who have been at House or Field-conventicles, who are guilty of irregular Administration of the Sacraments, and other schismatick Disorders, those who have been at Pentland and Bothwell, under the Exceptions contained in the Proclamation. What follows points at Duke Hamilton, and the rest of the Complainers against the arbitrary and oppressive Administrations of Lawderdale and his Brother. 'All Authors of infamous Libels or Pasquils, all such who have misrepresented any of our Judicatories, Servants or Subjects.' What a fine Pass are Matters come to in Scotland, when a good many of the greatest and best of our Nobility, and others, must have an Indemnity given them, and be ranked among the Rebels and Traitors, as the People at Bothwell were esteemed to be, merely for representing Matter of Fact to the King! And if Lawderdale, or others his Creatures, needed an Indemnity for any Thing complained of, they are cast in under the Extent of the King's Grace, as follows: Or advised any Thing contrary to Law, or malversed in any publick Station.

The Exceptions are many and large, and very much darken this Act of Grace. With one Dash, Heritors and Ministers, who were in the Rebellion, or contributed thereto, are scored off. Tenants and the meaner Sort were pardoned before, and, it seems, the King goes no further than the General; yea, such are excepted as came not out to assist the King's Host, that is, who would not actively concur to shed the Blood of these People who were essaying to retrieve their Religion and Liberty: We shall find a great many harassed upon this score. Further, the Condition, upon which the Pardon is suspended, rendred it almost of no Value to such who are not directly excepted, That they enact themselves, before such whom the Council shall nominate, never to carry Arms against the King or his Authority, and never to be at any Field-conventicle. Very few concerned disowned the King's Authority, and the most Part by far had not the least View of resisting the King; yet so general an Expression, excluding Resistance in all Cases to any authorized by the King, was choking to most of them; neither would they bind up themselves from hearing the Gospel in the open Fields.

This goodly Indemnity is closed up with a Command to the Council, and other Judicatories, to punish, with all the Severity Law will allow, not the Keepers of Conventicles, which may be wondered at, but such as murmur against Judicatories, that is, the Actings of Lawderdale and his Brother in Council, or our Officers, or make or disperse Libels or Pasquils, that is, Representations of Grievances, Complaints against Maladministration, and the like, those being the Forerunners of all Rebelions. Thus they endeavour to crush all after Attempts for informing the King, or relieving the Country from Tyranny and Oppression; and the Blame of Bothwell is tacitely, though plainly enough, charged upon Duke Hamilton and his Party.

'Tis scarce worth while to observe, that the Bishops and Clergy are not required to intimate this Indemnity from their Pulpits, as they were to intimate the former Proclamation. One would think, there was as much Reason for the one as for the other, and certainly this seems as agreeable to their Function: But, it may be, this scrimp and scanty Proclamation of Pardon was not so pleasing to them as the former, and their Friends spare them. Any Thing further remarkable in the Council's Procedure, this Year, will fall in upon the following Sections.

When

When we have thus seen the Procedure of the Council and Government, we need be the less surpris'd at the military Execution, Ravagings of the Soldiers, and Procedure of the Army up and down the Country after Bothwell. The Door was cast open to them by the Proclamation June 26. and I can scarce say it was shut by the Indemnity, and they fall frankly to Work, in which they frequently exceed the severe Laws of this Period. Particularly, we shall find Claverhouse raging in the West and South, this and several following Years, and committing many grievous Oppressions. He could never forgive the Baffle he met with at Drumclog, and resolved to be avenged for it; and yet we shall meet with some others more bloody and barbarous than he.

1679.

The Ravages committed by the Soldiers at this Time. ■

Every Body must see, that 'tis now almost impossible to give any tolerable View to the Reader, of the Spulies, Depredations, and Violences committed by the Soldiers, under such Officers as at this Time they had. Multitudes of Instances, once flagrant, are now at this Distance lost; not a few of them were never distinctly known, being committed in such Circumstances as upon the Matter buried them: And it would swell this Section too much, should I even insert all the Instances I have met with, therefore I shall only narrate a few I find well vouched and certain.

A great many Parties of Soldiers were dispersed through all Quarters of the West and South; but I shall almost confine my self here to the Severities committed by Claverhouse, and the Forces under his Command, in the Circuit, shall I call it, which he made a very little after the Engagement at Bothwell.

In a few Days after this Defeat, I find him, and the Soldiers under his Command, harassing the Shire of Air; from that he goes to Galloway, and from thence to Nithsdale and Dumfries. As they perambulate those Places, it was their Care to inform themselves in every Parish who had been at Bothwell, in which the Episcopal Incumbents were very useful to them.

Claverhouse and his Troop go thro' Air Shire, Galloway &c. and inform themselves who were at Bothwell.

And, considering that the Spoil went to their own Pockets, and was never accounted for, we may safely suppose, they were well enough disposed to receive Informations, diligent to have them, and not over nice in taking of them: Thus Multitudes of Persons, who were noways concerned in Bothwell, now and afterwards came to much Loss and Trouble. So miserable a Thing it is, to lay a poor Country open to the covetous and cruel Lusts of a profligate Army!

Upon those Informations, such as they were, without any Probation, and when there was no Body to oppose them, they attacked the Houses of such who, they pretended, had been in the Rising. Few or none of the Persons themselves found it convenient to wait for their Coming, but made the best Shifts they could. Their Families, in their Absence, were fallen upon, and suffered very much, their Relations, yea, every Family near by, where the Soldiers were pleased to alledge the Rebels might be; and every Thing they inclined to have, was taken away, and great Sums extorted for such Things as they carried not with them.

And attack their Houses.

All this was the harder upon the West Country, especially the Shire of Air and adjacent Places, that they had been but last Year sufficiently pillaged by the barbarous Highland Host. The Reader will easily perceive, this will make the Depredations this Year doubly heavy to the Country, and like the ripping up of a Wound, when but lately, and indeed scarce skinned over.

It deserves our Notice further, before I come to Particulars, That, for Two Years after Bothwell, the Soldiers never paid any Thing for their Quarters, but lived at Discretion upon the West and South. This, if calculate, would come to a vast Sum levied from the Country, especially considering the Manner of their living upon the Substance of others: They were sure to take the best Things that were to be had in the Place, and, generally speaking, they destroyed as much to the People upon whom they quartered, as they did eat up, if not more.

For two Years after this the Soldiers were upon free Quarters wherever they came.

Yea, till the Revolution, they never paid any Thing for transient Quarters, that is, when upon their Road, and when not directly allotted for so many Days upon such and such Houses. This fell very fore upon many Places in the West Country: I could instance in the Town of Kilmarnock, where, for some Years after Bothwell, there scarce ever passed a Week, but there were some Companies or Troops lay there, for a Night or two, in their Coming or Going, and that as much upon free Quarter, as they had been in an Enemy's Country. And the little Village of Dalmellington, which is the Key into Galloway and the South from the West Country, suffered this way a great deal more than can be computed.

To come to some particular Instances; when Claverhouse came to the Shire of Air, in his Road southward, there were very few Parishes which lay near his Rout that escaped him and the Parties he sent about. I have Two Instances from the Parish of Bar, well vouched, which shall serve in room of many might be named.

William M'lewey and in Merkland, in that Parish, had been at Bothwell, and was a Prisoner at present in the Gray-friars Church-yard in Edinburgh. His Wife, who yet lives, having Notice of her Husband's Circumstances, went in to Edinburgh, and, by a Gentleman's Interest with some of the Managers, got him liberate by the Council. While they were coming home, Claverhouse and his Troop came to this Man's House, upon Information he had been at Bothwell.

Severities upon William M'lewey, a Prisoner, his Family.

1679.

wel, and perfectly rifled it: They took all the Clothes away, and Two Horses worth Six Pounds sterling. These Gentlemen never regarded whether the People, about whom they had Informations, were dead, or Prisoners: That which they looked after was their Goods and Cattle, and any Thing that made best for them. After William was come home to his empty House, and had plenished it, in a little Time Edmonstoun of Broich, having procured a Gift of the Moveables of the People in that Parish who had been at Bothwel, came and spoiled his House, tho' he had been liberate by the Council, and took away any Thing which remained, with all the Corn and Crop he had. Not long after, when the Test came about, the said William refusing it, his Master, the Laird of Girvan-mains, took from him Nine Cows and Oxen, a Horse, and Twenty five Sheep, with all the Crop and Growing of that Year, and any Thing that was portable of Household-plenishing. Yea, so cruel were they, that he himself being fled from his House, and his Wife hearing of their coming, having removed some small Matter of her Clothes, and other Things in the House, to a little Hut in a Glen, at some Distance from the House, the Party employed getting Notice of it, after they had plundered the House, came back and took it all away.

I purposely call together Things done in several Years to this good Man, that the Reader may have some small View of the Chain of the Troubles and Spulies serious and religious Persons sustained about this Time, tho' indeed they be inexpressible.

Upon James Macjarrow.

The other Person in the same Parish is James Macjarrow. I do not find he was at Bothwel himself, but he was attacked, and forced to pay Thirty Pounds Scots by way of Fine, only because he hired a young Man to be his Servant, who had been at Bothwel, and was taken Prisoner, and liberate by the Council, upon his taking the Bond. This Person is yet alive; and I have this and some other Severities which may come in afterwards, under his own Hand.

Several other Instances might be given from this one Parish. Many poor Families were spoiled, under Pretext of having been at Bothwel. One Man who was not there, had Thirty Pounds forced from him, and another a greater Sum. But, by those Hints, we may some way guess at the Ravages committed upon the neighbouring Parishes; and indeed particular Instances would be endless.

Severities in Galloway.

If we follow Claverhouse into Galloway, we shall find some Things yet worse. He carried in with him some English Dragoons, several Troops of Horse, and some Companies of Foot. The Damages those committed are beyond reckoning. We have heard somewhat of their Method with such as were alledged to be at Bothwel: But I find in Galloway they scarce made any Distinction betwixt those and others. In that Country they seized all the Horses they could find, and either carried them off, or made their Owners pay near their full Price; and spoiled all the Houses in their Way, without putting themselves to the Trouble to ask Questions; and carried away every Thing they pleased.

In the Parish of Carsphairn Claverhouse took abundance of Horses, and such as were of any Use he carried with him. From one Man in Craigengillen were taken Three, worth Eleven Nobles apiece. In the same Parish they took fifty Pounds from a poor widow Woman, because, as they alledged, a Servant which was in her House, had been at Bothwel.

The neighbouring Parish of Balmaclellan was in the like Manner sadly harassed, and many others near by. In one House, one of the ruffian Soldiers forced the Woman before her Husband's Eyes, and then spoiled the House, and carried off what made for them.

In the Parish of Glencairn, the Soldiers under Claverhouse made terrible Havock; beside the ordinary Practices in other Places whithersoever they came, the seizing Horses, pillaging Houses, and the like: Two Passages of their Barbarity I have well vouched, cannot well be passed.

Torture used to make Persons discover what were at Bothwel.

They apprehended a poor harmless Youth at his Work, and pressed him to declare who of his Neighbours were said to be at Bothwel. The young Man either could not, or would not inform them. And when he had stood out their Threatnings, they came to put him to the Torture. Boots and Thumbkins were not at Hand, and the Way they fell on was this. A small Cord was tied about his Head, and both Ends of it were wreathed about the But of one of their Pistols, then they twisted it about the upper Part of his Head with the Pistol so hard, that the Flesh was cut round in to the Skull. The Pain was inexpressible, and his Cries were heard at a great Distance.

* Roof.

They caught a young Herd Boy in the same Parish, and would have him to discover where his Master was, whom they alledged to have been at Bothwel. The Boy very probably could tell them nothing about his Master: However they took him, and fastened Two small Cords to his Thumbs, and by these hung him up to the * Balk of the House. The Torment he endured was very great, yet they got nothing out of him. But the other Youth, last spoken of, died within a little after he came out of their Hands.

A vast Number more of their Cruelties might easily be added in Air-shire, Galloway, Dumfriess, and Nithsdale: But I have only selected one or Two of the different Kinds of their Severities from a good many Instances in my Hands; and there are Instances in other Shires as well as these.

Francis

Francis Park in Croftfoot, in the Parish of Carmonock, in Lanerk-shire, was, some little Time after Bothwel, questioned for lending his Plough to a Neighbour of his, who was by the Soldiers said to have been at Bothwel, to plow one Acre of Land. When he could not deny the Matter of Fact, that he lent his Plough to such a Man, straightway Fourteen Soldiers were quartered upon him for some Days: And they took up an Inventar of all his Goods and Plevnishing. The poor Man was forced to compound, and give the Soldiers Fifty Pounds to save his House from being plundred. George Park in Muir-side, in the same Parish, was forced to pay 200 Merks, for no other Cause, but his harbouring his own Son for a little in his House, after he had been at Bothwel.

1679.

Francis Park haraished for lending his Plough to one who had been at Bothwel.

I shall shut up these particular Instances with one which I have well vouched from Persons yet alive, who were present. Some Time after Bothwel, George Forbes, a Trooper in Captain Stuart's Troop, then lying at Glasgow, came out one Morning with a Party of Soldiers to the Village of Langside, in the Parish of Cathcart, not Two Miles from that City, and by Force broke open the Doors of John Mitchell Tenant there his House, who, they alledged, had been at Bothwel. John was that Morning happily out of the Way, whereupon they seized Anna Park his Wife, a singularly religious and sensible Country Woman, whose Memory is yet savoury in that Place; and pressed her to tell where her Husband was. The good Woman peremptorily refusing, they bound her, and put kindled Matches 'twixt her Fingers, to extort a Discovery from her. Her Torment was great; but her GOD strengthened her, and she endured for some few Hours all they could do, with admirable Patience; and both her Hands were disabled for some Time. When they found they could not prevail, they spoiled the House, and abused every Thing in it. The Milk they could not drink, was poured out on the Ground: The Groats she had for the Sustenance of her Family, they gave to their Horses; and what of them, and the Meal in the Chests, they could not consume, was cast out to the Dung-hill.

Lighted Matches put betwixt a Woman's Fingers, to make her discover where her Husband was.

These Hints may serve to let us in to some Knowledge of the Barbarity of this Period. In short, Multitudes were so haraished and oppressed, that, seeing no Door of Relief, they chused to take upon them a voluntary Banishment, and went off, some with, and others without their Families, to foreign Countries; such was the Rage of the Soldiers, and so lamentable were the Circumstances of the poor Country at this Time.

S E C T. II.

Of the Treatment of the Prisoners taken at and after Bothwel.

HAVING given some Idea of the Hardships put upon the Country in general, 'tis Time to look after the Prisoners taken at Hamiltoun Muir, and some others catched up and down after the Defeat; and it will be proper to put all that is come to my Hand, relative to them, in this Section, tho' it passed in different Months this Year.

About Twelve or Thirteen Hundred were carried in from the Place of Action to Edinburgh, among whom was Mr. John Kid; and Mr. John King was afterwards taken: I leave them both to the next Section. Afterwards about Two Hundred more were brought in to Edinburgh from Stirling; some whereof were apprehended as coming from the North and Fife, to joyn the Army at Bothwel; others of them were taken at and about Glasgow, several of whom had never been in Arms, but had spoken kindly to the wounded Men and Prisoners, and endeavoured to supply their Necessities: And others of them were pickt up here and there by some of the less cruel of the Soldiers.

Numbers of the Prisoners

We have already noticed, That those who surrendered themselves were presently stripped, not only of their Arms, but of their Clothes also, and they were carried in to Edinburgh almost naked. Such who, from Compassion, brought any Refreshment to them by the Way, were for the most part abused and beaten, and the Vessels wherein they brought Provision broken, and the Meat and Drink scattered, spilt, and trode upon. None but Women durst appear in shewing any Compassion towards them: The Men who ventured upon this were caught, and sent Prisoners with them.

Cruelty exercised in their Way to Edinburgh.

At Linlithgow, a good many of them stayed one Night in their Way to Edinburgh, and the above named Inhumanities were remarkably practised there to any who noticed them. In their Journey they were generally tied Two and Two. When they were come to Castorphone, within Two Miles of Edinburgh, great Multitudes came out of the Town to stare and gaze upon them. Both Sides of the Road were lined with People, and some of them were most bitter and malicious in their jesting and reproaching the Prisoners as they went by. Too many 1679.

Council's Order to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, June 24.

They are put into the Grayfriars Church-yard.

Their Hardships there.

ny of that profane Mob followed the Pattern of the old Mockers literally, and said, Where is your God? take him up now, and Mr. Welsh, who said you should win the Day? That good Man had no such Expression, and was under very melancholy Views of the Issue from the Temper of some among them. Thus, for Two Miles, to crown the Hardships they had been and were under, they endured the Reproaches, Mockings, and sharp Tongues of the Proud and those who were at Ease: Their Souls indeed were among fierce Lions, but many of them were perfectly serene and easy under all this.

They came to Edinburgh, June 24. when I find the Council "give Orders to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, to receive the Prisoners taken at the late Fight, from the commanding Officer, and recommend them to their Custody; and that for that end they put them into the inner Grayfriars Church-yard, with convenient Guards to wait upon them, who are to have at least Twenty four Centries in the Night Time, and Eight in the Day Time; of which Centries the Officers shall keep a particular List, that if any of the Prisoners escape, the Centries may assure themselves to cast the Dice, and answer Body for Body for the Fugitives, without any Exception; and the Officers are to answer for the Centries, and the Town of Edinburgh for the Officers. And if any of the Prisoners escape, the Council will require a particular Account, and make them answerable for them." And next Day, the Council order a Bank to be beat through the Town, discharging any of the Inhabitants to come near the Place where the Prisoners are, save such who come with Meat and Drink, which is to be delivered at the Gate, to be distributed equally by Persons appointed for that effect.

When they came in to Edinburgh, they were, agreeably to the Council's Orders, carried to the Grayfriars Church-yard, except some few who were taken to Prison. In that Inclosure they continued near Five Months, for the most part in the open Air; and the Two hundred who came from Stirling, were quartered with them. A good many, as we shall hear, were liberated upon their taking the Bond, and some few now and then were taken up to the Tol-booth.

In this open Prison their Case was lamentable enough: In the Day Time the Soldiers kept Guard in an Angle of the Church-yard; and all Night the Prisoners were made to lie down, without any Accommodation almost, upon the cold Ground, where they stood all Day; and if any of them in the Night Time had raised their Head to ease themselves a little, the cruel Soldiers were sure to shoot at them.

When sleeping in the Night, many of them were robbed of any little Money their Friends sent them; yea, their very Shoes and Clothes were stolen away from such of them who had Beds and Couches brought in to them by well disposed People.

Their Allowance which the Duke of Monmouth caused give them before he left Edinburgh, otherwise, 'tis probable, they had not been favoured with this small Matter, was a Barrel of Ale to be distributed among them all, and a Loaf of coarse Bread to each of them, and that for every Day. The Ale they should have had was, after his Departure, very seldom given them; and this was some way made up by the Water from the common Fountain, which was let in to them by a Conduit. Their Bread by Weight was to be but Four Ounces, which frequently was not given them in full Tale. And this, small as it is, was the only Allowance I can find that ever the Government gave to Prisoners during all the Time of the Persecution I am describing.

Indeed the good People of Edinburgh were not wanting in supplying them both in Meat, Money and other Necessaries; but so ill natured were the Soldiers at the Gate, that sometimes they would not permit the Women (for no Men were suffered to get in to them) to enter, but would have obliged them to stand at the Entry from Morning till Night, without getting Access; so that some of the Prisoners would have been famished, had it not been for the daily Allowance given them, which yet was very inconsiderable.

Great were the Difficulties their Friends met with before they could get in any Food or Rayment to them, and the Guards still exacted somewhat for either Meat or Drink as it came in to them. And to observe it by the by, this was not only their Case, but common to other Prisoners in common Prisons: People were still obliged to gratify the Keepers for any Access they had to visit or minister to their Friends, or even their nearest Relations. And altho' this be not much noticed, yet it was a most heavy Tax upon suffering People, and their Relations, to be thus imposed upon, when, mean while, they were not overstocked with Money.

They were perfectly open to the Weather, and had not the least Shelter from the Rains, Wind, or Cold, for some Months: Indeed towards Winter, a few Weeks before they were brought out of this Place, some Huts made of Deals were set up for them, which was mightily boasted of as a great Favour.

Several other Circumstances might be added, relative to their Difficulties in the Church-yard: The Soldiers, except some few, who were better natured, were extremely rude to them, beating and maltreating them upon the most frivolous Occasions. The People who got in to them from the Town, pitying their Circumstances, pressed them hard to take the Bond,

Bond, and when they did comply, the merciless Soldiers mocked and reproached them, and violently upbraided them with deserting the Cause they had owned at Bothwell, and seemed to delight in making them uneasy. 1679.

And which was yet worse, the Russians were most rude and indiscreet to the Women, Relations of the Prisoners, yea, sometimes offered to abuse them, and when the Prisoners resisted and hindered them, the Soldiers were sure to get them hardly used as mutinying, and resisting them. In the Night Time, when the Soldiers came among the Prisoners, and stole away their Clothes, and the Prisoners happened to awake, and endeavoured to hold what was their own, to Morrow they were complained of, and hardly dealt with. Many other Hardships were they under, too long here to be narrated.

After the Prisoners were thus lodged in the Grayfriars Church-yard, the Council met several Times while the Duke of Monmouth was in the City, and then moderate Measures were pursued. After several Meetings, it was agreed upon, that a Bond should be offered to all the Prisoners in the Church-yard, upon the signing of which they were to be set at Liberty. Yet I find it noticed, that a good many of them had not the Offer of it at first, the Managers resolving that some Hundreds of them should be sent to the Plantations, as they gave out, to satisfy the King in this Matter. But I have Reason to think the King would have been very easy in this; and the Reserve was rather to satisfy themselves, and the cruel Disposition of too many of the Clergy. We have seen that Transportation was first proposed by the Council.

What I meet with in the Council Register as to this Bond, is, July 4. before the Duke went off: "The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in obedience to his Majesty's Letter, of the Date June 29. (inserted before App. N<sup>o</sup>. 31.) ordain such of the Prisoners as were taken in the Rebellion, (except the Ministers, Heritors and Ringleaders, who are to be prosecuted by the Justices and others, to be sent to the Plantations, to the Number of Three or four hundred, conform to the List brought in by the Committee, and to be approved by the Council) to be set at Liberty upon their enacting themselves, not to take Arms against his Majesty or his Authority; and appoint the Clerks of Council to see the said Prisoners enact themselves, and to intimate to them, that if they, or any of them shall hereafter be in Arms at Field-conventicles, the Persons so taken shall forfeit the Benefit of his Majesty's Indemnity, and thereupon to dismiss them; and appoint one of the Bailies of Edinburgh to attend."

Bond offered to them.

Council's Act about the Bond July 4.

Thus this Matter stood as it was first ordered. This Bond was extended and put in Form: And I have seen two Copies of a Bond pressed after Bothwell; the one hath a plain Relation to the Indemnity, and I suppose was what was made use of up and down the Country; and the other I take to be that which was offered to the Prisoners. It may not be unfit to insert them both here being but short. The first runs thus.

Two Shapes of it, one for the Country, and another for the Prisoners.

"I being satisfied with his Majesty's Act of Indemnity, dated the 27 of July last, and enacting my self to the Effect underwritten; therefore I bind, oblige, and enact my self, that I shall not hereafter take up Arms against his Majesty, or his Authority. As witness my Hand, &c."

The other Bond, which, I suppose, was offered to the Prisoners at Edinburgh, was to the same Purpose; but a little adapted to their Circumstances, and follows.

"I being apprehended for being at the late Rebellion; and whereas the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in pursuance of his Majesty's Command, have ordained me to be set at Liberty, I enacting my self to the Effect underwritten: Therefore I bind, oblige, and enact my self in the Books of the Privy Council, that hereafter I shall not take up Arms, without or against his Majesty, or his Authority. As witness my Hand, &c."

The exact Numbers of such who took this Bond, and of those who refused it, I cannot pretend to give; 'tis certain the most Part by far fell in with it: And I find it said, that many of these who signed the Bond did it under the Thoughts, that their Rising was not against his Majesty's Authority, and consequently that it did not bind them up from any such Appearance, when Occasion offered again. I find about Four hundred continued in the Church-yard, as Refusers, tho', as hath been hinted, many of them had not the Bond in their Offer at first. The rest, it seems, either subscribed the Bond, or were silent when Notars signed it for them, which was reckoned enough where they could not write; and so they were dismissed.

About 400 continued in the Church-yard, as Refusers, tho' many of them had not the Bond in their Offer at first.

Remarks upon
them.

But then as to the Persons thus liberate by the Council's Order, we must not think their Sufferings were at an End; some Instances to the contrary have been already given. The most Part of them were toll'd and haras'd upon their Return to their Houses, for no other Reason than their being at Bothwel, as likewise their Friends and Relations upon their account; yea, their Neighbours, and such as dealt with them, were distress'd for Converse and Communing with them. They had no Pass given them; and tho' the Council had done with them, the Army had not; and those made little or no Distinction 'twixt such as had been taken, and were liberate, and those who had not been taken.

And it deserves our Remark further, That both the Prisoners now dismissed, and many others who had escaped from Bothwell, after the first Brush was over this Year, returned to their Houses and Possessions, and, there being no Sentence against them, they resorted openly to Kirk and Market, Fairs, and other publick Places; yea, some of them were put into publick Employments, as Procurators, Fiscals, and Sheriff-clerks in Courts. This could not but make the most prudent and cautious satisfied, that either they were not at Bothwell, or, if they were, the Government was fully reconciled to them. Yet, in the Year 1682. and afterwards, when the Matter of Refet and Converse was pushed as criminal, not only with intercommuned Persons and Fugitives, but such as were held and repute to have been in the Rebellion, tho' no Sentence had ever past upon them, Multitudes were brought to Trouble, and every Body was open to it; and some, as we may hear, were condemned precisely upon Refet and Converse.

Of these four hundred who remained in this Inclosure, it was reckoned about a Hundred got out, some one way, some another, without any direct Compliance. Divers had Interest made for them by their Friends among the Counsellors. Some, by climbing over the Walls of the Church-yard with the Hazard of their Lives, and others by changing their Clothes in the Night-time, and, especially after their Huts were put up, got out in Womens Clothes. A great deal of Ruin was taken upon such who remained, by those at Edinburgh, who

A great deal of Pains was taken upon such who remained, by those at Edinburgh, who were of Opinion the Bond might be subscribed without Sin; but very little Ground was gained. They began now to be inured to their Hardships, and, by their mutual Conversation, they strengthened and heightened one another's Scruples anent the Bond, and their Spirits became more and more sowed by the Severities they were under; and many turned peremptory against all Terms with their Persecutors. The Bond was once and again offered to them, now, I believe, without Exception, when the Offerers were pretty much allured few of them would take it; yea, they had frequent Alarms, every Week, that the Council would put them all to Death. But as their Troubles grew, so did their Firmness and Resolution.

While the Prisoners continue thus at Edinburgh, the Managers send Directions through the West and South to the Persons underwritten, to offer the Bond to such as had been in the Rising, and were not Heritors or Ministers, and a Power to enquire after others. The Persons thus empowered were, the Lord Collingtoun for the Shire of Edinburgh, the Earl of Wintoun for Haddingtoun, the Earl of Linlithgow for Linlithgow, the Marquis of Montrose for Perth, the Earl of Roxburgh for Roxburgh, the Laird of Hayning for Selkirk, the Earl of Carnwath for Lanerk, the Earl of Queensberry for Dumfries, the Earl of Glencairn for Air, the Earl of Wigtoun for Dumbartoun, the Earl of Nithsdale for Kirkcudbright, Sir William Murray of Stenhope for Peebles, Earl of Mar for Stirling, Lord Ross for Renfrew, the Earl of Hume for Berwick. Those Persons, in a Letter from the Council, July 17. have the following Directions and Powers given them. 'That whereas his Majesty, by his Letter June 29. hath ordered, &c. as above, the Council impowers them to call before them such who were in the Rebellion, and are not Heritors, Ministers, or Ringleaders, whether it be those who were not apprehended, or, being apprehended, have escaped, and have not taken the Bond, and to offer it to them, and upon their signing it to dismiss them, certifying them, that if they shall hereafter be in Arms, or at Field-conventicles, they shall forfeit the Benefit of the King's Indemnity; that, in case of Refusal to sign the Bond, their Persons be secured in Prison. Further, they are impowered to inform themselves what Heritors, Ringleaders, and Ministers within their Shire, were in the Rebellion, or did contribute to the sending out of Persons thereunto, and to seize and imprison them, and with all Diligence report their Names to the Council.' When the Indemnity is published, the same Persons generally are impowered to administrate it, in Terms of the Proclamation we have seen.

Many Remarks might be made upon these Persons named by the Council: Most of them were violent Enemies to Presbyterians, and much engaged in the Persecution, and many of them had, or had the Prospect of having, the Gift of the Moveables and Forfeitures in the Places wherein they had Interest; and that would make them not a whit the less careful in their Business, when their Pockets were to be concerned.

There are in this List not a few Papists notwithstanding all the Laws that they be not employed in Places of Trust. The Family of Wintoun, generally speaking, hath been Popish; Nithsdale, I know, was, and Sir William Murray of Stenhope, in several Papers I have seen, is is said to be Popish; he had much of their Spirit, and was most violent in the Persecution.

A Letter from the King, dated July 26. to the Council, bears 'his Detestation of the Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews; and being desirous to vindicate that innocent Blood, and shew his Detestation of the Murder, he commands them to cause process criminally Nine of these who were in the late Rebellion, with this additional Consideration, of having owned these Murderers, who are hereby excepted from any Indemnity, and that, besides the Persons who are to be excepted therein, those Nine being to be executed merely upon that account. They, being convicted, are to be hanged in Chains upon the Place where the horrid Murder was committed.' No Reflections are necessary upon this; it probably was a Proposal sent up from Edinburgh. At the same Time, Lawderdale, in his Letter, signifies to the Council, 'That the King wonders he hath no Account of the Trial of the Prisoners who were eminently Ringleaders, and active in the Rebellion; and that 'tis his express Pleasure that the Justice Court proceed immediately to the Trial of them.' The Council, in answer to both, acquaint the King, 'That the Judiciary hath already sentenced Mrs. King and Kid; and they have appointed a Committee to consider the most proper Methods for proceeding against others who have been Ringleaders in the Rebellion.'

1679.

King's Letter,
July 26. for executing Nine Persons.

A Committee appointed to consider the Case of the Prisoners.

Their Report;
August 6.

The Report of this Committee comes in August 6. and is as follows. 'The King, by his Letter July 26. having ordered Nine of these who were in the late Rebellion to be prosecuted, with this additional Aggravation of having owned the Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, by your Lordships Order, we thought fit to examine the Prisoners in the Grayfriars Church-yard, and to take notice of such as should refuse to call the late Rising in Arms Rebellion, or Killing the Archbishop Murder, or those who refused the Bond not to rise in Arms hereafter; and, amongst those Prisoners, there is a List of Thirty Persons given in here: And whereas there are some other Prisoners in the Tolbooth, of Edinburgh and Canongate, of the same Guilt and Persuasion, and who did not come to the Places in Fife, to vindicate themselves of the Murder, 'tis our Opinion, that the King's Advocate or Depute be appointed to examine all those forenamed, and process Nine of the most guilty of them before the Justices.'

'That a Committee of Council for Secrecy, not exceeding Three or Four, be appointed to give in Lists of such Heritors, Ringleaders, and Preachers, as are not yet in Custody, to General Dalziel, with Warrant to them to give Orders for securing their Persons, till they be brought to Justice.'

'That the Advocate or Depute be appointed to process before the Justices such Heritors, Ministers and Ringleaders, as are in Custody, and not yet processed according to the King's Letter.' They move also, that the Prisoners for Conventicles be liberate; and that William Page fined in a Thousand Pounds, and Robert Blair in Two thousand Merks, for Conventicles, be remitted to the Treasury for Modification. The Council approves of all, and ordains Acts and Orders to be extended according thereunto; and that the Earl of Murray, Bishop of Edinburgh, Lord Collingtoun, Mr. Maitland, and General Dalziel, or any Three of them, be a Committee for that effect.

I find, by a Letter from the King, dated August 15. with the List of Prisoners, and their Examination, which I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup> 33. they are ordered to be processed before the Criminal Court; which was done, as we shall see on the next Section, and a good many executed.

King's Letter,
Aug 15. ordering the Prisoners in the List to be criminally prosecuted.
App. N<sup>o</sup> 33.

This is all the Account I meet with, in the Registers, of the Treatment of the Prisoners. From other Narratives come to my Hand, the Reader may take the following Hints.

In August the Council pitched upon Fifteen of them in the Grayfriars, whom they looked upon as Ringleaders to the rest, and brought them up to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and gave them an Indictment to die. The Day after they were brought up (as Papers before me bear) Mr. Edward Jamison, a very worthy Presbyterian Minister, came in to them, being sent by the Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers at this Time in Edinburgh, I shall afterwards speak of. I find no Evidence that Mr. Jamison was sent by them: However, it is certain, he did reason with the Prisoners at great length, endeavouring to persuade them to subscribe the Bond; he urged the Lawfulness of this Mean to save their Lives, and essayed to make them sensible their Refusal to do this would be a Reflection upon Religion, and the Cause they had appeared for, and likewise a throwing away their Lives, in which their Friends would not be able to vindicate them.

Accounts of the Prisoners from other Papers.

Through this Pains taken, Thirteen of them condescended to subscribe the Bond, and were liberate. Those who did not subscribe, in their Papers, alledge, That some of those who did subscribe came to visit the two Refusers, one of which was John Clyde, afterward executed, and regreted their Signing very much, which strengthened their Hands.

After this, the Counsellors gave it out that they would allow no more of them to subscribe: Mean time the most Part of the Prisoners seemed as little desirous of the Bond, as the Managers were to give it them, until some, by the daily Solicitations of Friends and Wellwishers who visited them, others by their beginning to sag under so much bad Treatment, as we have

About 200 of them sign a Petition for Liberty to take the Bond.

1679.

have heard, near Two hundred signed a Petition to have Liberty to take it. It is said, a Letter writ to the Prisoners by Mr. George Johnstoun, of whom before, had a great deal of Influence upon divers of them: Some Papers bear, that it came from the Meeting of Ministers; but this is not probable, and I see no Proof advanced for it; the Letter is before me, but too long here to be insert.

Robert Garnock, and many others, protest against them.

When this Petition is a signing among the Prisoners, Robert Garnock, and about Two and thirty more, joyned in a verbal Protestation against such who were for supplicating the Council. Robert, whom we shall afterward meet with, in the Name of the rest signified to as many as would hear him, that he protested against what they were doing, and they resolved no longer to joyn with them in Worship, since, as they conceived, they had denied the Cause they had been appearing for, and materially had acknowledged their Rising at Bothwell to be sinful.

He is laid in Irons.

As soon as the Accounts of this came to the Managers, Robert Garnock was immediately carried from the Grayfriars to the Iron-house, and put under great Hardships, yea, it was resolved he should die. Several in the Prisons of Edinburgh and Canongate joyned in this Protestation of his; and the Confusion the Prisoners were in, in the Grayfriars, from the Hazard Robert was represented to be in, whereto they reckoned they had been some kind of Occasion, with some other concurring Things, wrought so upon them, as more than a Hundred refused from the Supplication, and sided with the Dissenters.

Some Counsellors examine the Prisoners, and afterwards 50 of them are brought before the Council,

These Things coming to be known to the Counsellors, some were sent down to take up the Numbers of the SupPLICANTS and Subscribers. The Accounts were but confused which now could be got, and the Council could make nothing of them: Whereupon they came to a Resolution to call them all one by one before them, and examine them; and the Justice-clerk came in to them, before the Diet of the Council in the Afternoon, and told them, in a very threatening Manner, this was the last Offer they were to have; and such as, when before the Council, were willing to subscribe, should have the Favour of Banishment, and those who refused the Bond were to be condemned to die.

Who banish the Whole to Barbadoes.

The Council sat late, and examined about Fifty of them: It so fell out, that not one of the Dissenters were called in before them; and the Council finding none who were examined dissenting from the designed Supplication, and being weary, resolved to put an End to their Trouble about them, and to give them all one Cast, and passed an Act of Banishment upon them all to Barbadoes. The Persons who were processed before the Justiciary, as we shall afterwards hear, were not among this Number, but mostly made up of those who were in the Prisons of Edinburgh and Canongate. This is the most distinct Account I can gather of the Treatment of those Prisoners, from several Papers writ at this Time.

Prisoners are ordered to be delivered to William Paterson, on August 14. the Council write to Lawderdale, 'That the keeping the Prisoners in the Grayfriars Church-yard is chargeable, and will be more inconvenient when the Season turns cold and tempestuous; they propose a Frigate may be sent down to transport them.' In a Letter, dated September 5. the King acquaints them, 'That William Paterson Merchant in Edinburgh had undertaken the Transportation of the Prisoners, and authorizes them to deliver them to him, he giving Security, under a reasonable Penalty, to land and dispose of them in the Plantations, Sea-hazard, Mortality, and Force of Arms excepted.' Upon the reading of this, the Council appoint a Committee to consider the State of the Prisoners, in order to their Transportation. It seems, Mr. Paterson delayed giving Caution for some Time; for, November 8. I find him called before the Council, and interrogate, Why he had not found sufficient Caution. He answers, That he found Difficulty to provide it, and, by reason of the Storms, he could not get Provisions sent aboard, but once upon Tuesday next he undertook to have all done.

Nov. 15. 257 of them are taken out of the Grayfriars Church-yard, Accordingly, I suppose, he did: And, upon the 15 of November, Two hundred and fifty seven of the Prisoners were taken out of the Grayfriars Church-yard, early in the Morning, before any of their Friends knew of it; and, for any Thing I can find, they had no previous Intimation given to themselves: Yea, such was the Cruelty now used, that Thirty of them, who were dangerously ill of a Flux and other Distempers contracted by their hard Usage, were hurried away with the rest, and no Pity shewed them.

And put aboard a Ship at Leith, where great Barbarity was used toward them.

They were carried down under a Guard to Leith, and there put aboard a Ship lying in the Road; they continued Twelve Days in Leith Road before they sailed. The Barbarity exercised upon them in the Ship cannot be expressed. They were stowed under Deck in so little Room, that the most Part of them behaved still to stand, to give Room to such who were sickly, and seemingly a dying: They were pinned so close, they almost never got themselves moved, and were almost stifled for want of Air. Two hundred and fifty seven of them being pent up in the Room which could scarce have contained a Hundred, many of them frequently fainted, being almost suffocated.

The Seamen's Rudeness and Inhumanity to them was singular: When lying in the Road, not only did they hinder their Friends to see them, or minister to their Necessities, but they narrowed them very much in their Bread they ought to have had; and allowed them little or no Drink, though the Master had contracted to give both: To that Pitch were they brought, brought, that divers of them were forced to drink their own Urine, to quench the Extremity of their Thirst. And it may be nauseous to remark, That, when they were about to throw their Excrements over Board, the Seamen were so malicious as to cast them back upon them.

'Tis with much Truth then, that I find one of themselves, James Corsan, a pious serious Person, in some Letter of his dated from Leith Road, complaining to his Wife and friends, That all the Trouble they met with since Bothwell, was not to be compared to one Day in their present Circumstances; that their Uneasiness was beyond Words: Yet he owns, in very pathetic Terms, That the Consolations of GOD overbalanced all, and expresses his Hopes that they are near their Port, and Heaven is opening for them.

I am told, there was Fourteen thousand Merks collected for their Use by honest People at Edinburgh, and put in the Hands of some, to buy Clothes and other Things for them, and somewhat was to be given to each of them, that might relieve their Necessities when in America: But I don't hear it was so well employed for their Behoof as it might have been, and not much of it was ever suffered to come to them by the Master and Seamen; the most Part of them never came to need it.

Upon the 27 of November the Ship sailed from Leith, and met with very great Storms. Upon the 10 of December they found themselves off Orkney, in as dangerous a Sea as perhaps in the World. They came pretty near the Shore, and cast Anchor: The Prisoners, fearing what came to pass, intreated to be set ashore, and sent to what Prison the Master pleased; but that could not be granted. Instead of this, the Captain, who, by the way, I am told, was a Papist, caused chain and lock all the Hatches under which the Prisoners were.

About 10 at Night, the Ship was forced from Anchor by a most violent Tempest, and driven upon a Rock, and broke in the Middle. The Seamen quickly got down the Mast, and, laying it 'twixt the broken ship and the Rock, got ashore; yet so barbarous were they, that, upon the Cries of the poor Men, they would not open the Hatches, tho' 'tis probable, had this been done, most Part would have got ashore. But so far from this was the Popish Master, and his Men, that I have many concurring Informations, some of them from Persons present, that they hindered them from getting up upon the Rock, and struck at them. And yet this Villain and his Men were never called to an Account by the Council, tho' the Matter was notoriously known; and this was as directly Murder, as if their Throats had been cut. However, about Forty, some say Fifty, got hold on Boards of the Ship, and came ashore, and so about 200 were lost, or rather murdered.

I conclude this tragical Story, by remarking from the Proclamation of Indemnity, of the Date July 27. That the King, by his Letter of the 29 of June, orders the Lives of the Prisoners, who refused the Bond, to be secured, when he appoints them to be transported; and, by the Indemnity itself, their Lives are a second Time secured them: Hence I must infer, That, not only by the Law of GOD, the Villains, who were guilty of this Barbarity to these good Men, ought to have been prosecuted, but the Council, as Executors of the King's Laws and Letters, had they shewn the same Regard to the King's Will and Engagements in this Case, as in other pretended Infractions by the Presbyterians, ought to have pursued these People for murdering so many whose Lives the King had ordered to be preserved. But 'tis Time now to come to the Managers own publick Murders, as in some Respects they may be termed, or Executions under Colour of Law.

1679.

A large Collection made for them, but very little ever came to their Hands.

They fell from Leith, Nov. 27. and upon Dec. 10. came to the Coast of Orkney.

Where the Ship was cast away, and the Prisoners were hindered to escape, as all perished save a few.

Remark upon the Council's not prosecuting the Captain for murdering the Prisoners.

S E C T. III.

Of the Trial and Execution of Mrs. John King and Kid, August 14. 1679. and the Trial and Death of the Five who suffered, November 18. at Magusmuir.

I Have reserved the Sufferers unto Death, immediately after Bothwell, unto this Section. The Managers were resolved to make some publick Examples of their Severity; and they pitched upon the Two Ministers, the only Ministers taken; it may be, had there more fallen into their Hands, they would have taken the same Methods with them. I cannot indeed say whether Mr. Kid was ordained; if he was, it seems to have been but a little before Bothwell. With them in a little Time they joyn Five others, under the Pretext of their being concerned in the Primate's Death: But, 'tis certain, they were absolutely free of that Attempt.

The two Ministers taken, pitched upon for Execution, with five others.

1679.

In the after Years several suffer merely upon the Score of Bothwell.

Mr. John King taken after the Engagement.

A remarkable Judgment upon one of the profane Soldiers guarding him into Edinburgh.

Mr. Kid taken at Bothwell, and is brought in to Edinburgh
Tolbooth June 24. and frequently examined.

Put to the Torture July 14.

Mr. King is before the Justi-ciary July 15.
and Mr. Kid
July 17.

They get their Indictment July 22.

Many others indeed were executed in the following Years, for no other Reason, but that they had been at Bothwell, or would not expressly declare that Rising to be Rebellion and unlawful, as shall be afterwards noticed: But those Seven were all who died publicly at this Time; and by the Process it will appear that they are found guilty, rather because some must be made guilty, than for any Thing worthy of Death in them, especially Mrs. King and Kid, with whose Trial I begin.

When Mr. John King was taken Prisoner, I know not. 'Tis plain enough it was some time after the Engagement, since his Name is in the Proclamation June 26. I find him afterward at Glasgow, where he was either taken, or brought thither when taken. A very remarkable Providence fell out that Day he was carried East to Edinburgh, which I should not notice, were I not well informed of it.

Upon the Lord's Day Orders were given to a Party of Soldiers immediately to march East, and carry Mr. John King with them to Edinburgh; and we will find it was their ordinary to march, and especially to transport Prisoners from Place to Place on the Sabbath. My Accounts of them are, that they were English Dragoons: One of them, a profane and profligate Wretch, after they were upon the Street, and on Horseback, ready to ride off with their Prisoner, called for some Ale, and drunk a Health to the Confusion of the Covenants, and another to the Destruction of the People of God, and some more very horrid, and rode off. He met with one of his Comrades at the Stab-green-port, who, knowing nothing of the Matter, asked him where he was going; he answered, To convoy King to Hell, and galloped up to the rest a little before him, whistling and singing. The Judgment of God did not linger as to this Wretch; he was not many Paces forward in the Lochow-path, a little from the Port, till his Horse tumbled, and somewhat or other touching his Piece, which was primed and cock'd, it seems, the Carabine went off, and shot him dead in the Spot. The Party went on, and carried Mr. King to Edinburgh, where we shall find him just now.

Mr. Kid was among the Prisoners taken at Bothwell, and with some few others, from whom Discoveries were expected, imprisoned in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, June 24. There he was frequently examined by some Counsellors. He had been represented as a Jesuit Popish Priest, and what not; but he gave abundant Discoveries of his being a firm Protestant, and good Man. He was narrowly examined as to the Occasion and Beginnings of the Rising, and the Persons concerned in it. The Managers were very willing to find a great Plot in this, and to involve as many as they could, that they might enrich themselves, and a good many who were gaping after new forfeitures. Mr. Kid could tell no more but what is above narrated, that it was begun by Claverhouse his attacking a Field-meeting; and the People who defeat him, found it necessary to keep together in their own Defence, and others joyned them, until Matters came the Height we have heard. And when in his Process, as we shall hear, he was put to Torture, he had no more to say; and indeed there was nothing further in the Matter.

All I meet with concerning him in the Council-registers, is July 14. "Mr. John Kid being this Day called before the Council, and interrogate upon several Heads for the Discovery of the rebellious Correspondence, &c. (It runs thus verbatim in the Register) and by very of the rebellious Correspondence, &c. (It runs thus verbatim in the Register) and by his Answers giving pregnant Presumptions of his Disingenuity, the Council order him to be questioned by Torture; and these same Interrogatories being proposed in Torture, he continued in his Denial." I need not vindicate this good Man from the Charge of Disingenuity; 'tis the common Pretext at this Time for this barbarous way of proceeding. He had ingenuously told all he knew in this Matter before. Some Papers say he was oftner than once in the Boots. He carried under the Torture most christianly and meekly, like a Follower of the blessed Jesus.

By the Justiciary Registers, I find upon July 16. Mr. John King appearing before them, and when examined judicially anent his Accession to the Rebellion, his Confession was put in Writ, and he signed it. The Lords order it to be insert in the Books of Adjournal, to be adduced as Probation against him. I shall give it just now in the Process. He had been examined July 9. before the Council, and repeats his Confession frankly before the Justiciary, that he might escape the Boots, and not die two Deaths. And July 17. the Lords of Justiciary called before them Mr. John Kid Preacher, and having judicially examined him anent his Accession to the Rebellion, his Confession was put in Writ, and ordered to be insert in the Books of Adjournal, and he required to sign it, which he refused to do, and the Lords subscribe it.

The same Day the Lords of Justiciary receive a Letter from the King, to encourage them in their Procedure against the Sufferers, which I shall notice further upon the last Section. Indeed they were abundantly frank, where there was any Shadow of Law to go upon. Mr. King and Mr. Kid upon the 22 of July, receive their Indictment from the Advocate; and upon the 24. they petition the Council, that they may be allowed Advocates to plead for them upon Munday 28. when they were to be tried for their Life; and Mr. David Thoms and Mr. William Monnipeny are allowed them.

At

At the Direction of those Lawyers, a Petition is presented to the Lords of the Justiciary, which containing several Matters of Fact, relative to them, and shewing the hard Measure those two good Men met with, I shall insert it here from the Registers.

1679.

Their Petition
to the Justiciary.

PETITION Mrs. John King and Kid Prisoners,

Humbly sheweth,

That the Petitioners having upon Tuesday last the 22 Instant, late at Night, received a Citation, at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, to appear before the Lords of Justiciary, upon Munday next, to underly the Law, for several Crimes and Points of Treason contained in the Indictment then delivered to them. True it is that the Petitioners have several Grounds of Exculpation, which might tend to the Clearing of their Innocence; as,

1mo. The said Mr. John King, his being in Company with the Rebels did proceed from no rebellious Principle; but being taken Prisoner by Claverhouse, he ordered him to be bound in Cords, and, after that Claverhouse and his Party had retired from Lowdonhill, he was found by the Rebels in that Posture, and detained almost still by them a Prisoner until the Defeat, and not suffered to go from them: So that, in effect, he was always in the Quality of a Prisoner.

2do. During the Time he was with them, he not only refused to preach, but he was so far from encouraging them to Rebellion, that he made it his Work to perswade them to return to their former Loyalty and Obedience, and de facto, perswaded several to go from and desert them.

3tio. Albeit he had sometime a Sword about him, yet he never offered to make use of the same directly or indirectly, or to make any Resistance to Authority; and he only carried a Sword to disguise himself, that he might not be taken for a Preacher; and he did make his Escape before the Engagement. And the said Mr. John Kid,

1mo. Did not only retire from them how soon he heard of his Majesty's Proclamation, but, when some of them came to his House to perswade him to return, he absolutely refused.

2do. He continued at his own House, and always exhorted such of the Rebels as came to him, to lay down their Arms, and supplicate for Pardon.

3tio. At the Desire of them that were most peaceable, he went, in the Simplicity of his Heart, to Hamiltoun, to perswade them to Obedience, and for no other end or account whatsoever.

4to. When Robert Hamilton, and some other of the Ringleaders, became enraged with the Petitioner's peaceable Advice, he came on his Journey homeward, and was pursued by a Party of the Rebels, who threatned to kill him if he would not return, neither had he any Arms, but a short Sword, to disguise himself from being known as a Preacher.

5to. When taken, and since he got Quarters and Assurance of his Life from my Lord General, who was empowered by his Majesty to pardon and remit, and both the Prisoners, with others, had so far prevailed with the most Part of the Rebels, that if his Majesty's Forces had forbore to assault for two Hours longer, they had all, or most Part of them, submitted and yielded.

And as for being present at Field-conventicles, if the Defenders shall purge themselves of the Rebellion, as, no doubt, they will, they are secured for this by his Majesty's late Proclamation. Likens they have several relevant Objections against some of the Inquest: And seeing the Petitioners are able to prove the haill of the Premises by Witnesses above all Exception, in case they had an Exculpation allowed them for that Effect, and which by the Law of the Kingdom, and Custom of the Court, cannot be refused them; and seeing by the said Practice and Laws, no Person can be indicted for capital Crimes, upon less than Fifteen free Days, whereas the Petitioners are indicted upon Five at most; therefore humbly crave,

That the Lords will allow them an Exculpation and Diligence, for summoning of Witnesses for proving the Premises, and several other Defences which they have to eik and alledge; and to allow them a competent Time to execute the same, seeing their Witnesses live at Distance in the West Country; and to pro-rogate and continue the Diet until that Time.

We have no Ground to question the Matters of Fact in this Petition, since so peremptorily they undertake to prove them. The Stile is evidently that of their Lawyers, and when People are under their Management, it must be expected their Petitions will run in their Phrases, as a Patient must follow a Physician's Prescription. This Petition was probably

Observe upon
it.

1679.

presented by their Advocates to the Justiciary. Their dying Speeches and known Sentiments make it evident, they of themselves would never have termed this Rising a Rebellion.

The Lords peremptorily refuse them an Exculpation, but allow Diligence for citing of Witnesses against the appointed Diet, to prove their Objections against the Affiziers contained in the List given them. This was certainly hard Measure; and, if the Reasoning in the Petition hold, contrary to Law, and, I am sure, to Equity, since the Probation of these Facts which they undertake, would have cleared them of the Rebellion libelled. But the Design was formed, that these two innocent Persons should die.

Upon the 28 of July Mr. King and Mr. Kid are brought before the Justiciary. Their Indictment was first read, which I shall give but in Abstract. It bears, "That they had been in the Rebellion, and in Company with Rebels, who in May last burnt the King's Laws; that they had preached at several Field-conventicles, where Persons were in Arms; that they did preach, pray, and exercise to Rebels, and continued with them till their Defeat, and had been taken Prisoners."

The King's Advocate adduced for Probation their Confessions before the Council and Justiciary, which now they adhered to, and they are as follow.

Edinburgh, July 9.

Mr. King's Confession July 9.

Mr. John King confesses that he was in the Rebellion, with Arms. Being interrogate what Gentlemen he saw there, declares, He remembers Earlstoun younger was there. That the Night of the Fight, he declares, he was in a Place near Strathaven, called Peilhill, next Night at Muirkirk; denies he was at Glasgow that Munday, when the King's Forces were assaulted by the Rebels; denies that ever he heard of a Rising before the same was; denies he ever was on any Council with the Rebels at any Time. Says, he thinks the Rebels were never better than Five or Six thousand Men; that he knew not any Person chosen General, but that Robert Hamilton took on him the Command. Declares, that upon the Sunday after he was rescued from Claverhouse, he went westward towards Newmills, and did not joyn with the Rebels till the Wednesday thereafter; that he knew John Balfour of Kinloch and Rathcliet were among them, but not that they were Murderers of the Archbishop. Confesses, he was in the Bishop's Clofs in Glasgow, but not within the House, nor drank there. That when taken, he had two Pistols on him.

JO. KING.

Mr. John Kid's Confessions before the Council and Justiciary, adduced against him, follow.

Edinburgh July 9.

Mr. Kid's Confession before the Council July 9.

Mr. John Kid confesses before the Council, that he preached at Field-conventicles in Stirling-shire, and Clydesdale, but never at any, where there were Men in Arms, except two; one of which was at the Moss, which lies on the west End of Livingstone Parish 'twixt and the Shots in the dead of Winter, but cannot remember the other.

JO. KID.

Edinburgh July 17.

Before the Justiciary Mr. John Kid confesseth he preached at several Field-conventicles, and at some of them there were armed Men, particularly at Monkland, who dismissed after Sermon. That since, he did not preach in any where but in Andrew Thomson's Barn in Monkland. That Twelve Days before the Defeat, he went to the Rebels, and that Night went out of their Camp to a Country Man's House more than a Mile distant, which House is beside the Moderell, but hath forgot its Name, and that of the Man. He stayed there Three Days, and returned to the Camp the second Time, and that same Night went from the Rebels to Robert Marshall's House in Monkland; and Four Days after that, being the Thursday before the Defeat, he again went to the Ligger, and went to quarter in a Gentleman's House, at some more than a Mile's Distance, and came back towards the Camp on Saturday before the Rout; and was with them upon Sunday, when he and some of his Friends came along to hear what was the Effect of the Parley at the Bridge. Declares, he had a Shable with him, which he brought the second Time he came to the Rebels, and got from Robert Thomson, and was about him when taken. Declares, he was taken two or three Miles from the Field where the Rebels were defeat, his Horse having bogged with him. This he declares to be Truth, but refuses to subscribe. Edinburgh July 28. judicially confesseth the Truth of the above Declaration, and abides at the same, and craves Pardon for not subscribing it, and throws himself on the King's Mercy, and the Lords Favour.

JO. KID.

There

There were no Reasonings, nor was there Room for any. With those Confessions the Advocate declared he closed the Probation. The Lords remit the Matter to an Assize, and the Assize unanimously bring them in as guilty by their own Confession of preaching at Field-conventicles, and being in Arms with the Rebels.

The Lords appoint them "to be taken to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, upon Thursday August 14, betwixt Two and Four of the Clock in the Afternoon, and to be hanged on a Gibbet; and when dead, that their Heads and right Arms be cut off, and disposed of as the Council think fit; and that all their Land be forfeited, as being guilty of the treasonable Crimes foresaid; which was pronounced for Doom."

After what hath been narrated, the Severity of this Sentence does fully enough appear. They had no Evidence against them, but their own Confession, which was partly gained by Promises, and extorted by the Boots. The Rebellion they offer to purge themselves from, and have an Exculpation refused to them; and tho' the Law did make preaching at Field-conventicles Death, yet there is no Probation of this against Mr. King, and the King's Proclamation secured them both; and the Indemnity proclaimed a little before their Death pardons that in others.

The Day after their Sentence, I find Mr. Stevenson, Brother to Doctor Stevenson, rides up Post to London, to procure a Remission; and I question not, but the Duke of Monmouth, who, it seems, had pardoned Mr. Kid, if Access had been got to him, would have used his Interest; but the Death of these Two being resolved on at Edinburgh, nothing was got done.

Accordingly upon the 14 of August, after the King's Indemnity had been proclaimed with a great deal of Pomp in the Forenoon, the Sentence was executed upon these two successful Preachers of the Gospel, in all its Points. They died in full Peace, Serenity and Joy, and their Speeches being already more than once published in Nephthali, I do not insert them here. Their Heads were cut off, and their right Hands, and affixed upon the Netherbow-port of Edinburgh, beside that of Mr. James Guthrie, as new Monuments of the Injustice of this Period.

Were it worth while, I could at a great Length refute the silly and groundless Aspersions cast upon these two good Men by that scandalous Paper before mentioned, The Spirit of Popery speaking out of the Mouths of phanatical Protestants, and expose the Weakness and Virulence of that foul-mouthed Author; but I am unwilling to rake into so vile a Heap of Slander and Lies. The Writer pretends to be a Scots Man, and asserts, "The Latin Tongue is as common among the Men in Scotland, as their Mother Tongue; that the Highlanders who came down upon the West Country, were a very civil, generous, and governable People; that the worthy and excellent Persons who suffered after Pentland, were drunk like Beasts with Ale and Brandy, the Day on which they were executed;" which are known, foolish and abominable Untruths, with a vast deal of such senseless Stuff. His Proofs that the Presbyterian Ministers were all Jesuits, and maintained Jesuitical Principles, are such as make me jealous the Author of a Design to recommend Jesuitism. He calls together some Jesuitical Tenets which were never maintained by Presbyterians, and mixes in with them a great many others maintained by no Jesuit that I know of; such as, "Condemning the English Liturgy; that Prelacy is an antichristian Constitution; that 'tis Popery to observe Festivals; that there is a mutual reciprocal Obligation betwixt Kings and Subjects; that Magistrates in Church-matters have only a cumulative, not a privative Power." If this be Jesuitism and Popery, let the Reader judge. In short, this passively obedient Author endeavours to bespatter our Reformation and Reformers, and hath nothing I can see but a Hotchpotch of Lies and Slander gathered up from Papers and Books many a Time answered, such as Lyfismachus, Nicanor, Balkanquell's large Declaration, Presbytery displayed, and Ravillac redivivus; to which he adds a new Legend of most groundless Stories upon Presbyterian Ministers and others, furnished by the Prelatical Clergy in the West about this Time, which are known to be abominable Lies, some of them destroying themselves, and all of them frequently exposed and answered; so that they are neither worth repeating or refuting.

I come now forward to give some Account of the other Five Men who were executed in November at Magus-muir. Thither the Council sent them to die, to declare their Detestation of the Murder of the Primate in that Place: But 'tis merely for Bothwell they were condemned; and there was no Probation of their having any Share in that Attempt; and they to their last declared their Freedom from it. It was a new Instance of the Righteousness of our Managers, to brand them with this, and put them to Death there, as if they had been guilty. I shall likewise give their Trial from the Justiciary Registers. We have already seen the King's Letter, of the Date July 26, ordering this Trial.

Upon the 25 of August, William Richardson in Stonehouse, Thomas Brown Shoemaker in Edinburgh, John Balfour in Gilstoun, Alexander Balfour there, Thomas Williamson in Over Waristoun, Robert McGill in Gallasbiels, Robert Miller in Waterfoot, James Paton in Inverkeithing, Andrew Thomson in Sauchy, are indicted for Treason in joining with the Rebels in 1679.

The Assize bring them in guilty.

Sentence.

Remarks on it.

Interest used for a Remission to them, but in vain.

They are executed, August 14.

Remarks upon the Spirit of Popery speaking out of phanatical Preachers.

Of the five Men executed at Magus-muir.

Nine Persons indicted before the Justiciary, August 26. They are delayed till the last Day of September.

1679.

About Thirty are indicted before the Justiciary, Nov.
10.

June last. The Lords continue them till the last Day of September, and allow them for Advocates Mr. Walter Pringle, Mr. David Thoires, Mr. William Monypeny, Mr. Patrick Hume, Mr. William Mcalm.

I find no more about these Nine in the Justiciary Registers, till November 10. when some of them, with a good many others, are before the Justices. But November 8. "The Council remit to the Advocate to pursue before the Criminal Court the Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, to the Number of Thirty, who have refused the Bond, or such of them as he thinks fit." Accordingly, November 10. I find James Finlay, Thomas Brown, James Wood in Newmills, Andrew Sword Weaver in the Stewartry of Kircudbright, John Waddel in new Monkland, John Clyde in Kilbride, with a great many others, pannelled before the Justiciary. Their Indictment being the ordinary Form used against most Part who suffer, for some Years, I insert from the Registers.

Their Indictment.

"Whereas, by Act 1. Parl. 1. James I. Act 14. Parl. 6. James II. Act 6. Parl. 7. James II. and many other Laws, Perduellion and Rising in Arms are declared treasonable Crimes, and are to be punished with the Pain of Death. Nevertheless it is of Verity, that albeit the King's Majesty, their gracious Sovereign and natural Prince, had, by Indemnities and Remissions, covered and concealed from the Eyes of Strangers, all those Extravagancies, which they and those of their Profession had for a long Series of Years owned openly, to the great Contempt as well as Ruin of his Majesty's Authority, protecting their Persons, as it were, against his own Laws, and preferring their Safety to his own Security: Yet the said Persons, shaking off all Fear of GOD, and Respect, not only to his Majesty's Laws, but to human Society, did enter into a deep Combination to overturn the fundamental Laws both of Church and State, professing openly, that they would have a Parliament of their own Constitution, wherein there should be neither Bishop nor Nobleman. And in order whereunto, upon the 29 of May last, and because that Day was set apart for Thanksgiving to the eternal GOD, in Commemoration of his Majesty's happy Restoration, did burn at the Cross of the royal Burgh of Rutherglen, those Acts whereby his Majesty's Royal Prerogatives were established; and did, by a publick Proclamation, declare his Majesty an Usurper, and that he had robbed Jesus Christ of his Crown, because (forsooth) he would not acknowledge them and their Ministers to be Christ's infallible Vicegerents, and to be Superiors to him in his own Kingdom. And after they had thus entred into open Hostility against his Majesty and their native Country, they, at Loudon-hill, on the first of June thereafter, engaged with his Majesty's Forces under the Command of the Laird of Claverhouse, Captain of one of his Majesty's Troops of Horse, and gave for a Word to their Soldiers, No Quarter. And albeit they got Quarter, they refused it universally to all who fought for his Majesty, hewing to Pieces in the most barbarous Way that ever was known, any whom they could kill. And having joyned with the bloody and barbarous Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, who, as their Eminaries, killed his Grace, and whom they rose in Arms to protect as such, they immediately did convocate the whole Country, to the Number of Ten or Twelve Thousand, and assaulted his Majesty's Burgh of Glasgow, and having entred the same, did rob and spoil his Majesty's good Subjects, did open the Prison Doors, and throw out of the Graves the dead Bodies of such Children as belonged to the orthodox Clergy, commanding, by a most insolent Act of their Supremacy and mock Judicatory, all the orthodox Clergy, to remove themselves, their Wives, and Families from the Western Shires, under Pain of Death. And having threatned with Fire and Sword all such of his Majesty's good Subjects as would not joyn them, and to plunder and ravage their Houses, and rob their Horses and Arms, did, to the Number of Ten or Twelve Thousand, elect and nominate Robert Hamilton their General, because he had burnt his Majesty's Laws and Acts of Parliament, and John Balfour, alias Burglie, David Hackstoun of Rathkillet, and their chief Officers, because they had declared in an open Assembly, (lifting up their Hands) that these were the Hands which murdered the Archbishop of St. Andrews. And did by these Officers condemn and execute these who had served his Majesty, particularly a Butcher in Glasgow. And upon the Day of June last, under the Conduct and Command of these Officers, they marched to the Town of Hamilton, where, upon the Day of the said Month, they refused to lay down their Arms, being specially invited and required thereunto by his Grace the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth, Captain General of his Majesty's Forces, who promised to take them into his special Protection, and to intercede for his Majesty's Mercy and Clemency to them all, which they refused, sending most insolent and rebellious Propositions to his Grace, wherein they required, in expresse Terms, the overturning of the present Government of the Church, and several other Things destructive to his Majesty's Government; and because these were refused, they did, after they were drawn up, and divided in Regiments and Companies, march towards his Majesty's Army, and fire at them: But GOD having, by a remarkable Judgment, defeat them by their own Consciences, his Majesty did, by another unparalleled Instance of his unwearied Goodness, issue out an Act of Indemnity, dated the "Day

“ Day of securing to them their Lives, providing they should oblige themselves, not “ to take up Arms against his Majesty or his Authority: In pursuance of which, they should “ have made Application for getting Benefit of the said Indemnity, by offering to subscribe a “ Bond never to rise in Arms against his Majesty or his Authority, ’twixt and the 18 Day of “ September last. Notwithstanding they failed therein, yet the said Bond was several Times “ tendred to them; and particularly, upon the Day of October last, the same was “ offered to them by the Lord Justice-general, and Mr. Richard Maitland of Gogar, with Cer-“ tification as effeired: And tho’ they contemptuously refused the same, yet it was again of“ fered unto them upon the last Day of October last, and the 3d Day of November instant re“ spective, which they again refused, tho’ in Duty they were tied to the Obligation therein, “ albeit the same had not been offered benignly to them, as the Ransom of their Lives which “ they had justly forfeited. And by declining whereof, and refusing to call the late Rebel“ lion a Rebellion, they discovered fully their traiterous Inclinations to continue in their for“ mer rebellious Principles. Of the which Crimes, the forenamed Persons, and ilk one of “ them, are Actors, and art and part. Which being found by an Assize, they ought to be pu“ nished with Forfeiture of Life, Land and Goods, to the Terror and Example of all o“ thers to commit the like hereafter.”

1679.

This odious and false Representation of Matters of Fact, with a very little Change, as Circumstances required, I find used in the Processes of this Nature in the Justiciary Books, therefore, and because I take these and the like black Aspersions in the publick Papers of this Time, which were never proven, nor designed to be proven, but patched up from the Lies the Army and Clergy brought in to Edinburgh, are the Fund out of which the viperous and Party Writers in Defence of this Time, with lying Additions of their own, make up their Pamphlets and Books, whereby Presbyterians are blackned, and the Cause of Tyranny and arbitrary Government supported. It may not be out of the Road to make a few Reflections upon this Indictment.

These and the like Misrepresentations of Fact the Fund of many Repreaches cast upon Presbye-rians by T<sup>o</sup>ry Writers.

And they fall into Two Sorts as to Matter of Fact, and as to its Relation to the Persons in the Pannel. The candid Representations of Things in the former Part of this History will take off the most Part of the Allegations and Aspersions heaped together here by the Advocate.
 How far it may be ordinary in these Cases to aggravate and calumniate, that at least the Criminal may be hit by somewhat or other, I do not know: But this I am perswaded of, that scarce one of the Facts here charged, in the manner here represented, is true.

Remarks upon
 them.

There was no Combination entred into for overturning fundamental Laws, by the People at Bothwell, or before it, as appears by their own Declaration, and their professed and known Purpose to have the Government, and the Exercise of it, brought from an arbitrary despotick Management, to an Administration according to Law. That they craved a Parliament in its Freedom, is certain; that it might sit without Prelates was their Wish, tho’ not sought; but that it should be without the Nobility, was never in their Thought.

What was done at Rutherglen, was the Act but of a few, and never approved by others, and here misrepresented: And it was never their Opinion, nor that of any Presbyterian,
 That their Ministers were Christ’s infallible Vicegerents, and superior to the King in his Kingdom. These are Innuendo’s equally wicked and groundless.

I never heard of any Word given at Drumclog; neither can I believe it was that named.
 The Alarm was sudden, and the Circumstances such as did not need any Word; and that Quarters were given, is certain enough.

’Tis inconsistent with the Circumstances of Time and Matter of Fact, to add, That the Murderers of the Archbishop were Emiffaries of these People, and that they rose in Arms to protect them. It was unworthy of the Advocate to produce such Self-contradictions before a grave Court, and to add so notour an Untruth, that with Ten or Twelve Thousand they attacked the City of Glasgow: What Allowances must we make to Writers at Distance in our Affairs, when our own People blunder so grossly, and I fear designedly! Every Body knows, that Gathering at its greatest was not half that Number; and when Glasgow was attacked, they were far from so many Hundreds, I had almost said Scores.

The spoiling of Glasgow, opening Prisons to let out any Malefactors, and far more their opening of Graves, are malicious Untruths, and of the same Kidney with the senseless Proclamation, and pretended Judicatory upon the Butcher, which follows. Of the same Sort is their electing Robert Hamilton, and Balfour, and Rathillet, because they had owned themselves Murderers of the P<sup>r</sup>imate. These are all idle and false Stories, as appears abundantly from what is above.

I am ashamed to insist so long upon such Stuff, which I doubt much if the Advocate believed when he put it into the Indictment. The Reasons of any Thing that is true in what follows, have been already given.

As to the Relation those Things bear to the Persons in the Pannel, at least the Five executed, we may notice, That the Archbishop’s Death is not so much as charged upon them; though, from their being executed at Magus-muir, ’tis too generally thought, and printed likewise, that these

1679.

these Persons had a Share in this Fact. Further, 'tis more than probable none of them were concerned in most of the Facts charged, some of them only being at Bothwel, and one without Arms too. Such a Charge as this, had it been Matter of Fact, would have answered Mr. Hamilton, and some few others of them; but it bears no Relation to the poor common Soldiers, such as these Five were, whose Lives the King had spared by his express Letter; and it seems to have been a bloody Freak, to have some People executed in the Place where the Bishop had been killed. And indeed no other Account of it offers to me; for those Five were perfectly in the same Circumstances with the rest of the Prisoners who refused the Bond.

The Indictment sustained, the Assize brings Four of them in guilty.

Their Sentence.

James Wood without Arms at Bothwel, and yet condemned with the rest.

They are executed at Magus-muir, Nov. 18.

However the Indictment is read, and sustained. All the rest, except the Five who were determined to be put to Death, are continued to another Diet, and at length dropt, at least I find no more about them in the Registers. Thomas Brown, John Waddel, Andrew Seward, John Clyde, confess judicially they were taken in Arms: And the Bond is offered to them judicially, which they peremptorily refused, as a condemning of Bothwel Rising, and their own Practice; neither would they acknowledge Bothwel Rising to be a Rebellion. The Assize find them, by their own Confession, guilty of being in Arms at Bothwel; and the Lords Sentence is, "That they be carried to the Muir of Magus, in the Sherifdom of Fife, the Place where his Grace the Archbishop of St. Andrews was murdered, upon the 18 of November instant, and there to be hanged till they be dead, and their Bodies to be hung in Chains until they rot, and all their Lands, Goods and Gear to fall to his Majesty's Use."

James Wood's Case was a little different from the other Four: The Probation against him is some Oaths of Soldiers, That he was taken at Bothwel; and the Assize are so just as to bring him in, as being taken at Bothwel without Arms; and yet the Judges throw him in with the rest, and pass the same Doom upon him. This is another Instance of the illegal and severe Procedure of this Period, to hang a Man, and put him up in Chains, as a Murderer of the Primate, who was only present at the Gathering at Bothwel, without Arms.

Accordingly they were all executed in Magus-muir, upon the Day abovenamed. Their Speeches in Nephthali bear the Date of November 25. whether this be a Mistake in the Printing, or the Council, for some Reasons, prorogate the Day, I know not, 'tis not material. Their joyned Testimony, general and particular, with their Speeches, and dying Words upon the Ladder, are all printed in Nephthali, and I do not swell this Work with them. I have before me some of their Letters to their Friends, full of a Strain of Piety and Seriousness, wherein, as in their printed Papers, they give the Reasons why they could not save their Lives by taking a Bond which they judged unlawful, and declare their being entirely free of the Death of the Primate, with their Hopes of the Pardon of their Sins, and everlasting Happiness, in a very humble and Christian Manner.

Thus I have given as fair and full an Account of such who were put to Death this Year, for their Accession to Bothwel, as I could. It was the Care of the Managers, and a Pleasure to the Clergy, that the only Two Preachers taken should be cut off, and they suffer properly for preaching of the Gospel in the Fields, and are both very full in owning the King's Authority; and the Five Country People are made a Sacrifice, as it were, to the Place of the Primate's Death.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Circuit Courts held, and the Gentlemen who were forfeited, after Bothwel, this Year.

The Appointment of Circuit Courts makes the Persecution more extensive.

THE Council, as we have heard, were not idle in the Prosecution of such who had been at Bothwel; but, to make the Severities upon this score the more extensive, Circuit Courts are established through all the Corners of the Country, where it could be supposed any of these People were. We shall meet with Circuit Courts almost in every succeeding Year of this Reign. Matters were now taking a new Turn at Court: Lawderdale had in Appearance prevailed over those who opposed him. This Juncture was too favourable to be neglected by our Prelates and Managers; and to gratify them, and supply the hungry Dependents of Lawderdale's Party out of the Estates and Goods of such whom they inclined to find guilty, these Circuits were appointed.

Proclamation for them, Aug. 14. App. N<sup>o</sup> 34. Remarks upon it.

The Proclamation, of the Date August 14. will give us the alledged Reasons for these Circuits, and therefore I insert it App. N<sup>o</sup> 34. As it was published the same Day with the Indemaity, so 'tis designed to enforce it; and such as take not the Benefit of it, are to be prosecuted secuted before these Courts: A Proof that our Managers were willing to cramp and narrow the King's Indemnity as much as possible. All who were concerned in the Rising at Pentland 13 Years ago, all who had been at, or accessory to the Rising at Bothwell, and the Murder of the Primate, who are coupled with the Bothwell People, to render them more odious, are to be prosecuted with the utmost Rigour of Law. 1679.

In order to the harassing the West and South of Scotland, the Commissioners of the Justiciary are required to divide themselves into Two Justice-airs, or Circuit Courts, the one to sit at Stirling the 1 of October, at Glasgow the 8. at Air the 15. and at Dumfries the 22. the other is to meet at Cowpar of Fife the 1 of October, at Edinburgh the 8. at Fedburgh the 15. Citations are appointed to be timeously issued out against such as were to compare, containing a particular Description of the Murderers of the Archbishop. I question very much if they were able to give such a Description of them as they promise. All Suppliers, Inter-communers, or Corresponders with the said Rebels and Murderers, are to be prosecuted with all Rigour, as accessory to the Rebellion and Murder: Here is large Room to the Lords of the Circuit to attack Multitudes. They are expressly required to proceed in Absence, which, if it be meant to Forfeiture, was what once in a Day would have been reckoned illegal, and to burn in Effigie the principal Persons concerned.

The Heritors and Masters of the Land where the Rebels live, are impowered to apprehend, and required to present them to the Circuit, and imprison them till then. The Neglect of this was Matter of fore Persecution to many loyal and religious Gentlemen, and others, who had no Mind to be actively concerned in the Severities of this Time; and if they be latent or fugitive, they are required to remove their Wives, Bairns and Servants off their Ground. This was hard with a witness, for the alledged Rebellion of the Head to make the whole Family to suffer, and proved Matter of much fore and heavy Trouble to many poor Families. The Clerks of the Court are ordered timeously to go before, and take up Porteous-rolls of the Designations of the Rebels named in the Proclamation June 26. or that shall be delated upon Oath to have been in the Rebellion, or harboured Rebels, or murdered the Archbishop, or have been at Field-conventicles, or have threatned, robbed, or abused the orthodox Clergy: These are good large Subjects for their Rolls.

All those are to be cited, and Informations taken upon Oath of the Value of their Lands, Moveables, and what Bonds they had; Accounts whereof are to be laid before the Council, September 18. A Reward of Ten thousand Merks is offered to such who bring in any of the Murderers of the Primate, dead or alive, to the Council: And even the Persons expressly excepted in the Indemnity shall be indemnified, and have the Reward, if they can apprehend John Balfour of Kinloch, and David Hackstoun of Rathillet, dead or alive. And, for the greater Solemnity, all Dukes, Marquisses, Archbishops, Earls, Lords Spiritual and Temporal, Barons and Freeholders, are charged to attend, and give Respect and Concurrence, as Law requires, and Assizes and Witnesses are to be got ready.

I should now give a View of their Procedure in those Circuits, but their Minutes and Registers are not preserved, as far as I can find. A great deal of the Severities of this Period, that were committed at these Circuits, are quite buried, tho' indeed a great Branch of the Persecution lay here. Whether they kept Registers, I cannot say; but the Circuit up and down the Country, appointed by the Council, reckoned themselves accountable only to the Council, and there are none of their Proceedings noticed in the Justiciary-books; and if they made any Report to the Council, I don't meet with it in any of their Registers. And I have from other Papers very little of their Procedure this Year: Probably the western Circuit had most Business, since the People concerned in Bothwell were, generally speaking, in that Precinct.

According to the Proclamation, the Clerks came before the Meeting of the Circuits; and they, or Persons deputed by them, went through every Parish in the Precinct of the Court, and took up Informations. The Sheriffs and Justices of the Peace had been at great Pains to prepare Matters for these Clerks and their Assistants, by finding out Persons proper to be Witnesses against such who had been in the Rising in each Parish, and procuring Informations where they dwelt, what Lands, Heritages, Goods and Gear they had; yea, so great was the Pains taken in every Parish, that, in most Places, it was observed, they missed few or none, dead or living, who had been there; and a great many were insert, who had not been there. The Curates, in such Places where they were, laid out themselves to the utmost to get Informations, and were very diligent this way, and helpful to these concerned.

Some Difficulties, arising about the Clerks Procedure, being represented to the Council, I find what follows in the Registers agreed to, August 26. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having it represented, That, by the late Proclamation for Circuits, the Clerks of the Court are appointed to take Information, upon Oath, of the Lands, Sums of Money, and Moveables belonging to those who were in the late Rebellion, and to cause arrest the Rents of their Lands belonging to them, and put their Moveables under Inventar and Bond, in the Hands of their Masters, and, in case their Masters refuse, in the Hand of some other sufficient Person, to be made forthcoming in case they shall be condemned as guilty Distinct Accounts of the Proceedings of the Circuits, not given for want of Records.

The Clerks come close home, and take up Informations.

Council's Act, Aug. 26. about the Clerks securing the Moveables of such who were in the Rising.

1679.

' guilty of the said Rebellion ; and, desiring to know what Course shall be taken, in case the Persons, to whom the Custody and Sequestration of those Goods shall be offered, refuse to take them, the Lords, in the Case foresaid, do order the Sheriff-principal to secure these Goods to be forthcoming, and give Receipts to the Clerk.'

From the Clerks Informations the Porteous rolls were formed.

From these Informations the Porteous-rolls were framed. These Rolls were filled with Persons of all Sorts who had any Substance, without much regard to their being at Bothwell or not. Any envious Neighbour, base Prodigal, or Bankrupt, in or out of the Army, or the ill-natured Clergy, would inform against the most innocent, as, upon some Pretence or other, accessory to the Rising; and that was Ground enough to put him into the Porteous-rolls: And when once in, the covetous Donators obliged them to compound with them for their Moveables, or seized them, even before any Indictment or Sentence. It was but few at that Time who were willing to have their Names brought in open Court, if they could by any means help it; for People, who found themselves falsely informed against, feared, that, if they appeared and pleaded their Innocence, they would likewise be falsely sworn against, by idle fellows who stuck at nothing, and unjustly condemned, or somewhat or other vexatious propounds to them. It would indeed be endless here to give Instances of Malversations and Oppressions, contrary even to their own Law, at this Time; nor is it possible to give Account of the vast Sums of Money paid, by Bribes to Clerks, to prevent being put into the Rolls, or to get themselves dashed out of them, at and before this and the following Circuits.

Methods used in every Parish before the Circuit.

I find, by some Papers relative to this Year, that, generally speaking, the Witnesses were Sixteen in every Landward Parish, and Twenty four in every Parish where there was a Burgh Royal or of Barony. These Witnesses, prepared in every Parish, were cited in before the Clerks and their Assistants, to Glasgow, Air, Wigtoun and Dumfries, under the Pain of Forty Pounds Scots. When the Witnesses came in, they were put to declare who in their Parish had been at Bothwell, or had been Harbourers of any who were there; and all they named were put into the Rolls. I see it remarked at Wigtoun, that those Declarations were not made upon Oath, but were only simple Informations that they had heard so and so; and I jealousy it was so in other Places. And tho' the Proclamation does indeed require Information to be given upon Oath, yet the Nature of the Thing makes it plain, the Witnesses could for most part only declare upon Hearsay; and upon this did the Persecutions run, and great Numbers of Innocents were informed against.

Next, the Clerks with their Assistants formed their Indictments, with the Lists of Two or Three of the Witnesses they depended most upon, and issued Summons to Forty five Assistants. The Reader will easily observe, without my Help, what a vast Trouble and Expence these Circuits were to the Country, already harassed with the Army.

Heads of the Indictment given to the Persons prosecuted.

The Pannels were indicted of being accessory to the Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, or being at Drumclog, resisting the King's Forces, or being at the Rebellion at Bothwell-bridge and Hamiltoun-muir, June 22. or being at Field-conventicles, &c. The Witnesses and Assistants were summoned to compare before the Lords of the Circuit, at the Days and Places respective, named in the Proclamation, under the Penalty of One hundred Pounds Scots, and the Persons indicted, were by their Indictment charged to compare under the Pain of Rebellion, and clear themselves of those Things laid to their Charge, or hear themselves condemned, as Law accords.

At the Days named in the Proclamation, the Justiciars, or Lords of the Circuit, came to the Places respectively mentioned; a mighty Parade was made in meeting them upon the Borders of every Shire, accompanying them to the Place of Meeting, and conveying them after the Court was over to the next Shire, and the Country put to a great deal of Charges this way.

Procedure of the Circuits with such as were not Heritors.

I have very few Accounts of particular Persons processed before these Circuits this Year, but what will come in afterwards, when what was now begun against Gentlemen and others was carried a greater Length. Therefore I shall only in the general take Notice, that at Glasgow, Air, and Dumfries, the Lords had great Numbers before them. Such who compared, not being Heritors, and confessed their being at Bothwell, had the Bond offered to them.

Letter, King to the Council, empowering the Justices to offer the Bond.

I find the Council, September 19. write up to Lawderdale for Liberty to the Justices to offer the Bond; which, by a Letter from the King November 1. is granted, when legal Excuses are advanced for their not appearing formerly when the Bond was in their Offer. In the same Letter his Majesty declares himself satisfied with the Prudence and Moderation the Earl of Argyle has shewn in his Procedure with the Macleans; and that he hath kept himself within the Bounds of his Commission. Such who signed this Bond were liberate, but I do not hear that many took it.

Few Heritors appear.

Those who compared and denied their Indictment, were imprisoned until they found Security to appear at Edinburgh, and answer to the Things laid to their Charge: This some did, and were put to a great deal of Trouble thereby; however at present they were dismissed and allowed to go home. And all who did not compare, were declared Fugitives, and denounced Rebels. Very few Heritors ventured to appear.

The

The absent Heritors were denounced, and a good many of them within a little forfeited. Noblemen, Gentlemen, Soldiers, and such who were most active in the arbitrary Measures of this Time, very soon procured Gifts of the Lands of the Heritors, and most of them possessed them until the Revolution. They or others got a Right to the Moveables of Tenants, and those who had no Heritage; and the Soldiers came and spoiled their Houses, Goods and Gear, and made a terrible Havock, seizing the Goods and Possessions of their Friends and Relations, as being alledged Intromitters with what belonged to the Rebels. Thus during the following Years, there was a general Devastation of all that belonged to any who complied not in every Point with the Course of the Times.

I promised in the next room, to give some Account of the Forfeitures passed upon Persons who had been, or were alledged to have been at this Rising at Bothwell. It was but a few who had this Sentence passed against them that Year; and therefore I shall much delay my Accounts of this to the following Years. The Reason why their Trials in order to Forfeiture were delayed, was not want of Inclination in the Managers to be fingering the Estates; for we see Heritors are directly excepted out of the Indemnity, and were in the Eye of a good many very early; but either they for some Time wanted full Information of Persons concerned in the Rising, or the Court was not fully determined as to the utmost of those severe Courses, till towards the End of this Year, or the Managers could not agree among themselves about the dividing the Spoil.

I shall, ere I end this Work, insert the List of forfeited Persons in this Period, from the Act of Parliament after the Revolution rescinding them. This Year July 18. the Council grant Commission to prosecute a Forfeiture against Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel; and the same Day being informed, that John Cunningham of Bedland, formerly forfeited for Accession to Pentland, was at Bothwell, they order him and his Cautioners to be cited. We shall meet with him afterwards.

I know not a more proper Place to bring in an Abstract of Kinkel's Sufferings than here, when he is seized after Bothwell, from an attested Narrative sent me by his worthy Relations. He underwent a continued Tract of Trouble, almost since the Restoration. When Presbyterian Ministers were forced from their Charges, his House was a Shelter to many of them in their Wandrings. There they preached, and none were excluded who came to hear them. This being almost under the Primate's Eye, it drew down his Indignation upon Kinkel, who was cited to appear at his Courts, but he declined. The Bishop went the length to cause cite him out of Pulpit, in order to Excommunication. The People of St. Andrews, when they heard a Person of Kinkel's Piety and Character, cited out of Pulpit, merely for his conscientious Nonconformity, to evidence their Detestation of such Methods, generally went out of the Church. When the Bishop saw his Excommunication would be despised, he procured him to be intercommuned, which forced him to quit his House, and undergo innumerable Hardships; and in a little Time a Garison was sent to the House of Kinkel, who turned out his Lady and Family, when the Lady Kinkel was very near to be delivered, and scarce could she find a House that would receive her, her Husband being denounced. The Garison continued in the House several Weeks, and destroyed most of the Plenishing, damaged the House, and eat up the Provision in it. Captain Carstairs, of whom before, had particular Orders about Kinkel, and, after frequent Searches for him, one Day attacked him, and killed his Horse under him. All this Time his Family was in great Difficulties. After Bothwell, he was taken, and the Soldiers were very rude to him, bound him with Cords, and carried him to Edinburgh, where he continued in Prison about Eighteen Months. His Family was then obliged to come and live at Edinburgh, where they were at vast Charges, and a great deal of Money was given to keep off what was daily almost threatned upon him in order to draw Money from them. It stood yet more Money to obtain some Favour to him at London. Upon this he was liberate, upon condition that he should appear at the Circuit, or where called, under the Pain of Twenty thousand Merks. He was frequently called upon to extort Money from him, and gave vast Sums to the Advocate and others. Thus, tho' he escaped Forfeiture, his Estate was ruined. At the Liberty he came back to his House of Kinkel, after Thirteen Years Banishment from it, and set up a Meeting-house. This soon brought him to new Trouble; and by the then Primate Ross his Procurement, a Party of Soldiers came and carried him and Mr. Orrock, who preached with him, to Edinburgh, contrary to the King's Declaration of Liberty. In a little Time they were both liberate. Great were the Hardships he underwent in this long Course of Sufferings, too long here to be insert.

There are no other Processes before the Justiciary this Year, of a publick Nature, save one relative to the Primate's Murderers, which is deserted. November 10. " John Brown of Drumfarhan, James Clow in Ballock, John Stevenson in Waterside, indicted for harbouring, " assisting and supplying John Balfour of Kinloch, David Hackstoun of Rathillet, George Bal- " four in Gilstoun, James Russel in Kettle, Robert Dingwall a Tenant in Caddam, Andrew " Guillan Webster in Balmerinloch, Andrew and Alexander Hendersons, Sons to John Hender- " son in Kilbrachmont, and George Fleming, Son to George Fleming in Balbuthie, Murderers " of 1679.

Absent Heritors denounced, and in a little forfeited.

The Forfeitures of Heritors at Bothwell more general in the succeeding Years Reasons of this Delay.

Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel and Cunningham of Bedland to be prosecuted.

An Abstract of Kinkel's Sufferings.

Persons indicted to harbouring the Murderers of the Primate.

1679.

“ of James Archbishop of St. Andrews, upon one of the Days of May last, in manner contained in the Indictment, given at the Justice-ayr lately holden at Stirling in October last. The Lords desert the Diet for several Causes.” Eight other Persons are pannelled upon the same score, and no Probation being offered, they are dismissed.

Moveables of such as were at Bothwell given to Donators who committed great Outrages upon the Country.

Instances in the Parish of Monkland,

And Straitoun.

Few Parishes in the West and South, escape thus.

I shall end this Section with a short Hint at another Method taken at this Time, which was yet more afflictive to the Country, because it was more general. The King and Council gave Gifts of the Moveables of such who had been at Bothwell, to whom they pleased; and in the uplifting of them, these Donators extended their Spulies to all such as they pretended were any way concerned in, connived at, or had harboured and reset those who had been at Bothwell. Under the Notion of uplifting Moveables, fearful and general Ravages were made upon Parishes, and prodigious Sums were exacted generally by military Force.

The Earl of Glencairn had the Gift of the Moveables of the Parish of East Monkland in the Shire of Lanerk; and a Party of Soldiers came there with Powers, as they said, from him, and robbed and spoiled all who were not exactly Conformists to Prelacy, whether they were concerned in Bothwell or not. Great were the Insolencies exercised in that Parish: To that Height came they, that Duke Hamilton interposed, and procured an Order from Council to withdraw those Forces.

Edmonstoun of Broich had the Parish of Straitoun, in the Shire of Air, given him, to uplift the Moveables of such there who were concerned in Bothwell. Through the most Parts of the Parish, the Soldiers in their March southward, as we heard, had perfectly spoiled the Houses of such as they alledged were guilty; yet this new Commission is granted for their Moveables. Thus double, and sometimes oftner, Punishment is inflicted for one Fault. From that one Parish Broich at this Time exacted upwards of Two hundred Pounds Sterling, besides much rare Loss which cannot now be computed.

Few Parishes in the West and South escaped this violent Oppression; and one Person would have had several Parishes in Gift; as the Two just now named, and many others had. And if the Persons who had these Gifts could not narrowly enough look to them by themselves, they ordinarily assigned them to others, who carefully looked after them. In short, the Donators and their Assignies were, generally speaking, the most severe Persons in the Country, and squeezed poor Persons and Families most unaccountably.

Thus I have given as distinct an Account as my Materials allow me, of the Consequents of this Rising at Bothwell. Sorer Troubles are yet before us. But I come to end this Chapter and Year with,

S E C T. V.

Of the State of Presbyterians who had not been concerned in Bothwell, their third Indulgence, the Debates 'twixt Duke Hamilton and Lawderdale, and some other Things this Year.

Hitherto, in giving the History of this remarkable Year, I have all along kept mine Eye entirely almost upon the Business of Bothwell, and passed by some very considerable Matters, which, had it not been to prevent the Breaking of that Story, should have come in above at their proper Dates. These I come now to take in all together in this Section.

State of Presbyterians not directly concerned in Bothwell this Year.

I begin with the State of Presbyterian Ministers and others this Year, not directly concerned in the Rising. Upon the first Chapter we heard of their meeting with no small Trouble about Conventicles in the Beginning of the Year; and how much it was their Endeavour to get the Heights of some concerned in Bothwell Rising, moderated.

Their Encouragement to address the Duke of Monmouth.

When the Duke of Monmouth came down, the Presbyterian Ministers in and about Edinburgh had Notice from London, that he would not refuse an Application from them. This I gather from a Letter just now before me, from a Person of Quality at London, to a Minister at Edinburgh, which I here insert.

London, June 18. 1679.

Letter from a Person of Quality to a Presbyterian Minister at Edinburgh.

Sir,
“ I have given W. a short Hint of my Expectations here. I told the Duke of Monmouth I would write to you, that some of your Perswasion should come and wait upon him, and give him an Account of your peaceable Inclinations. I have Encouragement from him to invite "invite you and some of your Number from all Places to address your selves to him, he will take it kindly; and by it I am confident you will much engage him to be your Friend: Wherefore, let me intreat you, and all your Brethren, not to omit so great an Occasion of Advantage to your Affairs. My Brother will be with him, and he will introduce you to him: Or, if you miss my Brother, the Lord Melvil will be always with him, who is very friendly to your Interest. There shall be nothing left undone here that may advance the Interest of all honest peaceable Men."

Farewel.

1679.

When the Duke returned from the west Country to Edinburgh, he staid but a few Days: And I can give no particular Account of the Application made to him by Presbyterians. Only in the general, I know he was once and again waited upon by some Presbyterian Gentlemen and Ministers, and earnestly dealt with to use his Interest with his Majesty, that a full and unclogged Liberty might be granted to Presbyterians.

Some Ministers and Gentlemen wait on the Duke at Edinburgh.

A Copy of a Petition to him I have before me, which, for any Thing I know, is a Draught of that which was delivered to him at Edinburgh, by several Ministers and others there; and I insert it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 35.

Their Petition to him.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 35.

It appears to me, to be a rude and unfinished Draught, and I do not question but some Expressions in it, which seem to bear hard upon the Rising at Bothwell, would be reformed before it was gone into by the Bulk of Presbyterians in and about Edinburgh, who reckoned, according to their Bible and Principles, bating the Heats and Heights run into, they could justify that Appearance. But having seen no other Draught, I have set this down as containing probably the Materials gone into.

Observe upon it.

I find the Duke received these who waited upon him very graciously, and was most civil and discreet in his Answer, signifying nothing should be wanting which was proper on his Part. And when he went to Court, he carried a Petition with him to the King. All I know about it is from some Passages in an original Letter before me writ by a good Hand to Mr. John Fife, Preacher of the Gospel, now Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, dated July 9. 1679. "This Day my Lord Duke went away. I saw a Petition he had got, and was to carry to London with him: He was pleased to express himself thus a little before his Departure, I think, if any Place get Favour, it should be Scotland; for a gallanter Gentry, and more loving People I never saw: I am hopeful, if you manage well what you have, it will be made larger. I can assure you, continues the Writer, he is a great Favourer and Lover of Scotland, and there is no question but he will employ his Power for it: And if Lawderdale be discouraged, to whom the Duke is no Friend, this will come the sooner." Upon all these Accounts the Writer of the Letter presseth the Prisoners, "to carry very soberly, and wishes the persecuted Party would leave Field-conventicles, at least for a little, till the Duke came down again; and adds, he, GOD willing, would not stay long. And assures them, some in the Council are gaping for Field-conventicles, in order to get Things marred."

The Duke's answer to the petition to the King, and his favour to the petitioners.

The Effects of the Duke's going up, seem to be the short-lived third Indulgence, which had the Proclamation published June 29. when the Duke was here, for a kind of Preface to it, the Consideration of which I of design left to this Place.

Proclamation for suspending the Laws against I. Conventicles. Rite of it. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 36.

This Proclamation, dated at Whitehall June 29. I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 36. It was probably procured by the Duke's Letters, wherein he would readily give his Thoughts upon the Proposals made to him, and the Expedients which offered to him for the settling of the Country; the Result of which seems to be this Proclamation, which, with the Letter we shall just now hear of, was the Foundation of what was called the Third Indulgence.

Reflections upon this Proclamation are much needless after what hath been given upon former publick Papers. The Narrative alledges, that Field-conventicles have exposed People to Jesuits. Doubtless the Papists took hold of all Occasions to make Proselytes, and debauch Peoples Consciences; and failed not clostly to improve the Steps at present taken in Scotland and England for weakening the Protestant Interest. The only Ground I can find for the Cry of Jesuits mixing in with Field-conventicles in Scotland, is some Passages in Doctor Oats's Narrative, printed by Authority at London this Year. Article 1. 'tis narrated, "That Wright, Morgan, and Freeland were sent over to Scotland, to preach under the Notion of Scots Presbyterians." Whether this be true or not, depends upon the Faith of Jesuits, who write this News to Madrid. Article 43. goes further, and says, "The Deponents saw Fathers Moor and Sanders, alias Brown, dispatched to preach among Scots Presbyterians." Article 73. says, "That Letters from the Fathers met at Edinburgh, dated August 10. 1678. bear, that they had Eight thousand Catholics ready to rise when the Business grew hot, and to joyn the disaffected Scots under the Direction of the Scots Jesuits." And, Article 74. bears, "That Twelve Scots Jesuits were sent with Instructions to keep up the Commotions in Scotland, and to carry themselves like nonconformist Ministers among the Presbyterian Scots." This is all I see relative to this Charge in Oats's Narrative, and what does it amount to? but that the Jesuits had this in their View, or pretended to have it: And I shall not doubt but they

Remarks upon it.

Whether any Jesuits preached at Field-conventicles.

Presbyterians at the time when the Duke was here.

1679. they did all in their Power to provoke honest People to Extremities, to serve the Duke of York's Interest, to keep the Highlands under their Power, and ready to appear against the Bill of Exclusion in case of need, and to sow the Tares of antimagistratical Principles. But what is all this to Presbyterians? Are not Jesuits Designs as open and plain in the Church of England by the very same Narrative, and their Success evident? and yet that Church is not charged upon this score. Can one Instance be given of a Jesuit hitherto preaching at Field-conventicles, and getting Presbyterians to hear him? The greatest Enemies of Field-meetings have never been able to produce one Instance, or to give the least Documents of any Correspondence 'twixt the one and the other. Indeed it hath once and again been made evident, That the Jesuit Coutzen's Instructions for ruining Protestants were fallen in with exactly by our Scots Managers of the Duke of York's Faction, and some of our Prelates: But I am bold to say, not one Party of Men in Scotland were more free from the Influence of Jesuits than Scots Presbyterians at this Juncture; and whatever Efforts these Jesuits made, they had no Success. What Hand they might have after this, by their secret Influence, to run some to Heights, I cannot say; but, after my utmost Search, I cannot find the least footsteps of a Correspondence 'twixt such as even cast off the Authority of the King, and came to Heights wherein other Presbyterians would not vindicate them and the Jesuits. This much I thought proper to say here, once for all, upon this Head.

'Tis added in the Proclamation, that Bothwell Rising was founded upon Extravagancies inconsistent with the Protestant Religion and Monarchy. Had they been condemned upon, I should have considered them: But this general Calumny is more than taken off by the former Accounts of their Declarations and Requisitions when in Arms.

Next, the Proclamation comes to statute Death upon all Ministers who preach at Field-conventicles, and such as are in Arms are adjudged to be Traitors. Masters, by an old antiquated Law, are made liable for all that live on their Lands, and the utmost Prosecution of these accedory to the Primate's Death, is appointed.

Then the King, by the Power placed in him by Act 5. Sess. 2. Parl. 2. suspends the Execution of the Laws against House-conventicles on the South-side of Tay. The Parliament does fully impower the King thus to do; and from this 'tis evident this Indulgence was no Exercise of a dispensing Power, but agreeable to the Laws then in being. How far this Act of Parliament is applicable to the Indulgence granted to Presbyterians in the Year 1687. shall be considered. 'Tis most plain in this Case.

Exceptions are made of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Stirling, and some other Places; and Diligences upon Finings, Intercommuning, and such other Sentences, are stopped. Only one Preacher is allowed to one Parish; their Names are to be given to the Privy Council, with Surety for their peaceable Behaviour. This was a Handle to the Council in a few Weeks to render this Liberty precarious. This Indulgence is only during Pleasure; and all Ministers who were at Bothwell, and after this shall be admitted, are excluded from any Benefit by it.

It is plain, this was one of the least clogged Favours which had been granted to Presbyterians since the Restoration: It was much owing to the present Struggle for Liberty in England, and the just Information the Duke of Monmouth gave the King of the good Inclinations and Intentions of the Body of Presbyterians in Scotland to his Person and Government. It was a short breathing Time to Presbyterian Ministers and others, and relieved Multitudes who were fugitive and intercommuned, and upon their Hiding for many Years.

This Proclamation came to Edinburgh, July 4. and that Day, in prosecution of it, 'The Council grant Order to the Magistrates of Edinburgh to set at Liberty the Ministers underwritten, Prisoners for Conventicles, Mrs. John Mosman, Archibald Maclean, James Forthie, William Kyle, Robert Fleming, Francis Irvine, and Thomas Wilkie, they enacting themselves in the Books of Privy Council, for their peaceable Behaviour, and that they shall not preach at Field-conventicles under the Pains contained in his Majesty's Proclamation; and ordain such Ministers as are in the Bass to be sent for, that they may be set at Liberty upon their enacting themselves as aforesaid.'

A Letter is before me, writ by a good Hand upon this Proclamation, too long to be insert: I shall only set down a few Passages from it, which may give some Light to the Circumstances of Presbyterians at this Time. The Writer observes, 'That this Proclamation is so favourable, as ought to oblige all the well affected to accept of it with all Thankfulness, and use it with Temperance and Prudence; and what may be a Foundation for more, if skilfully used. Whereupon the Writer takes Occasion to give his Opinion, to be communicated to some Gentlemen and Ministers in the West. He thinks, that by the Return of the outed Ministers, every one to their own Parishes, the Benefit of this Indulgence will be much lost, and one Part of the Country, and that which needs least, will be supplied, and the far greater Part left destitute. He reckons the Church's present Case to be but a building, and therefore the Ministers are to prefer the general Interest of the Church to the Ties to particular Places: And that Consideration should be had of the Bounds and Shires enjoying Favour, and these ought to be compared with the Presbyterian Ministers yet remaining, and the Ministers so scattered up and down, as all may be watered as much as may be; that thus some

The suspending of the Laws against Conventicles and this Indulgence, no Exercise of dispensing Power, but founded on an Act of Parliament.

July 4. Presbyterian Ministers in Prison, and in the Bass, to be liberated.

Extract from a Letter writ at this Time upon this Proclamation.

some that halt 'twixt Two Opinions may be fixed, and those who are in Hazard of wandering, and going to Extremities, may be preserved. He moves, that one Minister may be fixed so as to answer most conveniently the Exigencies of Three or Four Parishes; and conceives it may be as proper to dispose of Ministers by way of Mission, into Places where 'tis well known they will be welcome, as to wait for Calls: He is earnest to have Ministers set to their Work in all Quarters without Delay. He is against building of Houses to meet in at present, but would have large Barns and Houses taken; and hopes the general Bent of this Part of the Nation will soon make it appear to the Government, that this Liberty ought to be enlarged.

1679.

We shall quickly find there was little Use for these Proposals, for this Liberty was soon cramped. As soon as the Duke of Monmouth had regulated Matters he thought most necessary here, he went for Court, where he was very graciously received by his Father. Upon his Arrival he procured a Letter from the King, yet further enlarging this Favour, which July 14. came down express from London by one of the Duke's Footmen. I here insert it.

CHARLES R.

“Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. Having resolved to make the Favours designed by Our late Proclamation effectual, We hereby declare, that We designed therein, that such as are allowed to preach thereby, are also allowed by the same Proclamation to administer the Sacraments, the one including the other.”
 “As also, that no Fine imposed for any schismatical Disorders, (except Treason) before inferior Judicatories, and not yet transacted or compounded for, shall be uplifted, unless the Parties so fined shall fall back into their old Transgressions, by Rebellion or Field-conventicles; the Suspension mentioned in our Proclamation being a sufficient Discharge only in those Cases.”
 “Ministers also now imprisoned, who were not in this Rebellion, are to be set at Liberty, without any other Engagement, but that they shall live peaceably, and not take up Arms against Us or Our Authority, or find Caution to answer when called by Us or you: And so We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at Windsoor-castle, the 11 of July, 1679.
 “and of Our Reign the 31 Year.”

The King's Letter, July 11. to the Council, enlarging his Favours to Ministers.

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

This Letter, when it came down, was very unsatisfying to our Managers, and, I am told, it was some Time before they would enter upon the Consideration of it; and they then essayed so to lay Measures as the Ends of it might be broken. Yea, so much frightened were the Prelates with the former Proclamation and this Letter, that the Archbishop of Glasgow is dispatched up to Court at this Time: I have no Accounts of what he did; but, no doubt, he fell in heartily with the Duke of Tork's Party, and in a few Weeks there was a Change above, and piece by piece this Favour was curtailed by the Council, and, towards the End of the Year, perfectly removed, as we shall hear.

This Letter displeasing to the Managers. The Archbishop of Glasgow goes up to Court.

Two Days before this Letter came to Edinburgh, the Council, now when they are delivered from the Duke of Monmouth, begin to propose their Difficulties in relation to the Proclamation June 29. In a Letter to Lawderdale, dated July 12. they signify, ‘That there being some Doubt as to the Sense of that Clause in the Proclamation June 29. suspending all Letters of Intercommuning, and all other Executions, if these Words, all other Executions, do import, that all Persons, whether Preachers at Field-conventicles, or other Persons, who being Ringleaders of these rebellious Rendezvous, and have been seized according to former Proclamations, promising Sums of Money to the Apprehenders, and imprisoned, should be set at Liberty, or not. And if such as have been imprisoned till they pay the Fines imposed upon them by Sentence of Council, or other Judges, shall also be enlarged and set at Liberty; and if these Field-preachers, and other Persons qualified as aforesaid, are to be liberate, they crave his Majesty may declare his Pleasure upon what Terms and Conditions they are to be liberate.’

The Council propose some Difficulties as to the Meaning of the Proclamation June 29.

This was a modest way of asking a kind of Repeal of the Proclamation; at least, they would still be Judges whom to liberate, and whom not, and have all the iniquitous Sentences, formerly passed, standing in full Vigour. I observe no Return to this Proposal in the Registers. July 19. they acquaint Lawderdale, That, in obedience to his Majesty's Letter of the 11. they have called the Preachers, Prisoners in Edinburgh (as I understand it, 'tis Preachers for Field-conventicles, for the others were liberate upon the 4.) and offered them a Bond, which Two of them subscribed, and the rest refused; and they have sent for the Prisoners in the Basin, that that they may offer it to them. And, August 14. when, it seems, they despair of Liberty to continue their Severities upon the Ministers, according to the Inclination they shew in their Letter July 12. they order, 'That the Minuters, Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh (viz. such as refused their Bond) be liberate on finding sufficient Caution, under Pain of Ten thousand Merks each, to appear before the Council when called; and that the Lord Collington, Abbotshall, Register, or any one of them, receive Caution, and liberate them.' In a little Time, as we shall hear, a good many of them were called, and brought to new Trouble. August 26. Mr. Andrew Donaldson is liberate from the Prison of Linlithgow, and Mr. Erskine from that of Stirling, upon Caution as above; it seems they had been forgot, and John Henderson in Cleish, in Prison for Conventicles.

Remarks upon this Procedure with Ministers, Prisoners for Field-conventicles.

1679.

Ministers brought from the Bass to Edinburgh, July 19.

According to these Resolutions, the Ministers who had been in the Bass, Mr. Patrick Anderson, Mr. James Frazer of Braes, Mr. Thomas Hog, Mr. John Macgilligen, Mr. John Macdaway, Mr. Robert Ross, Mr. John Law, Mr. William Bell, are brought from the Bass to Edinburgh Tolbooth, where some other Ministers were, particularly the Reverend Mr. Robert Fleming Minister at Cambuslang, and after this to the Scots Congregation at Rotterdam, and several others abovenamed.

They compare before the Council, and relate the Petition, and are remanded to Prison.

That same Day they appear before the Council, and are required to enact themselves in the Council-books to live peaceably, and not to rise in Arms against the King, or any authorized by him. The Ministers knowing the Terms of the King's Letter July 11. did oblige them only to an Alternative, this, or to find Caution to present themselves when called, chused the last Branch, and refused the first, and therefore were remanded to Prison, directly contrary to the King's Letter, except Mr. William Kyle and Mr. Francis Irvine, who signed the first Part, and were liberate.

Hamilton of Airdry, and many others Prisoners liberate.

July 22. Robert Hamilton of Airdry, his Servant, and about Fifteen more Prisoners, are liberate upon the same Terms; and, July 24. about Twenty more Prisoners for Conventicles are liberate; and, July last, John Dalmerino, Andrew Snodgrass in Bridgend of Glasgow, and about Twenty others, were liberate, upon signing an Obligation not to rise in Arms. This is all I meet with as to particular Persons.

The Ministers in a little liberate, upon Caution to compare.

The Case of the rest of the Ministers was debated some Time: The Laird of Lundie, and some others of the Counsellors, affirmed they ought to be liberate on Bond; Sir Anacrew Ramsay, and others on that side, were as peremptory for their signing the Bond not to rise. In some Time they were liberate, upon Bond to appear when called, under Penalty of Five hundred Pounds sterling per piece.

A Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers at Edinburgh, Aug. 8.

Let us now take a View how the Presbyterian Ministers improved this breathing Time; it was almost over, at least Measures falling into for retrenching it, before ever some of them knew of it. Such to whom the Notice first came, being willing that all, as far as might be, should take the same Course, advertised as many of their Brethren as they could, to come in and meet at Edinburgh.

Conclusions and Rules agreed to by them.

Accordingly I find, that, upon the 8 of August, there was a very large Meeting, perhaps more numerous than any that hath been since their Judicatories were discharged by Law; and, after Consultation and Reasoning, they came to agree upon those following Conclusions and Rules.

- 'That all Ministers should, in the first Place, visit their own Congregations where they were formerly settled, and try what Access they can have to preach the Gospel unto them.'
- 'That they associate themselves into Meetings, as their Numbers in particular Bounds, and their Circumstances will best allow, and take care to provide Preaching to the People, in the Bounds of their respective Meetings, who are desirous of it.'
- 'That every Minister shall be a Member of the Meeting within whose Bounds he resides.'
- 'That indulged Ministers, not indulged to the Congregations they were in when laid aside, if their People, or whom they formerly had the Charge, call them, return to them, and quit the Places they are at present in.'
- 'That all who are licensed to preach, be particularly taken obliged unto Subjection to the Meeting which licensed them, and to submit themselves to their Direction.'

Observations on them.

We see how much these Ministers had the Principles of Presbyterian Government at Heart, and the Preservation of the Church from any Hazard from Persons who should afterwards be licensed and ordained; and, had they not been stopt by the new Turn of Affairs at Court, 'tis very probable, this Indulgence would have been so managed, as to have cured our Divisions, tended to a comfortable Change in Scotland, and might have proved of great Use, not only to the Church, but even to the State.

A great Turn at Court by the Duke of York's Accusation, Sept. 2.

But very soon the Popish Party prevailed at Court: Lawderdale once more seemed to prevail over his Accusers, as we shall hear; and by his means, as some say, the Duke of Monmouth, however well received at first, fell under a Cloud, and all the Expectations of doing some

Some more in favours of the suffering Presbyterians fell to the Ground. The Duke of York returned from Holland, and his Influence with the King was presently so great, that all moderate Measures were perfectly crushed; for 'tis almost next to impossible that a Papist should not drive hard in a Protestant Country, and Presbyterians must expect no Favour when Papists manage at Court. In short, this Calm issued in a most severe and long Storm.

Thus I find in the Registers, September 18. a Letter from the King to the Council, acquainting them, That he had recalled his Commission to the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth to be General. This was very acceptable to a good many at Edinburgh. The Account given by the English Historians, of this Turn of Affairs, is in short. When the Duke of Monmouth was at his Height, the King fell sick at Windſor, and had Three Fits of a Fever and Ague towards the End of August. Upon September 2. the Duke of York came to London, to the Surprize of every Body, and rode Post to Windſor. In a few Days Monmouth was disgraced, and an entire Change of Affairs brought about. The secret Spring of this sudden Arrival was this. Effex and Halifax being about the King, and taking him to be in Danger, they thought themselves so too. They reckoned the Duke of Monmouth, under Shaftsbury's Management, who hated them, would be at the Head of Affairs against the Duke of York, and that Sunderland, by his Relation and Friendship with Shaftsbury, would be safe, but had nothing to hope for themselves; therefore, upon the King's first Fit, without ever waiting for what might follow upon a second, they proposed to him the calling over his Brother, which was done with all Secrecy and Speed. The King recovering, it was agreed upon all Hands that the Duke should be received with seeming Surprize. When the Duke returned, Shaftsbury and Monmouth were so enraged, that nothing was left for Effex and Halifax, but to joyn the Duke wholly, and throw the other Two out of the King's Affairs. Accordingly Monmouth was ordered over to Holland, September 24. and Shaftsbury turned out of Council. Sir William Temple, not being entirely theirs, was left out, and resolved to ly aside from publick Affairs. To cover Matters, the Duke of York went over to Flanders, soon to return again, and Effex and Halifax left their Posts in Discontent; and Mr. Hyde, after Earl of Rochester, and Mr. Godolphine, afterwards Earl of Godolphine, came in, joyned Sunderland, and made up the Juncto. This vast Change in England soon brought the third Indulgence to Presbyterians here to be cramped, and then taken away.

The Effects of it appeared the very next Council-day, September 19. A Warrant is granted to General Dalziel, Lieutenant General of His Majesty's Forces, to give Order to seize the Murderers of the Archbishop (this is cast in in common Form, but the great Design was) to apprehend any Ministers or Heritors guilty of the late Rebellion, or others of the Rebels who had not taken the Bond, or any who harboured or resetted them; and to give Orders to the Officers and Soldiers under his Command, to secure them in Prison till they be brought to Justice; with Power also to dissipate Field-conventicles, and to seize the Preachers and others present at them. And the Council indemnify all Slaughter or Mutilation, in case of Resistance. And, September 20. they ordain the Rents of Lands, Sums of Money, and Moveables belonging to the Murderers of the Archbishop, and Heritors engaged in the Rebellion, to be sequestrated and secured, that the same be not imbezilled; and grant Power to the Earls of Murray and Linlithgow, Treasurer-depute, Justice-general, Collington, and General Dalziel, to nominate fit Persons in the several Shires to be Sequestrators. This was a new and very sore Trouble to the Country.

That same Day the Advocate is ordered 'to raise a Process against Mr. George Johnston, or any other Ministers who have been guilty of Field-conventicles since June 29 last, upon the Information given in, or that shall be given, notwithstanding any Allowance given, or that shall be given to them to preach. And, at the same Time, full Power and Authority is granted to Major Robert Johnston, to search for any Conventicles suspect to be kept in the Town of Edinburgh, or Suburbs thereof, and to apprehend and imprison the Ministers and most substantial Hearers; to search for the Murderers of the Archbishop, as also any Ministers or Heritors in the late Rebellion, or others who have not signed the Bond, and imprison them, and to report his Diligence from Time to Time. He and his Assistants are indemnified, as above, and this Commission is to continue till recalled.' Thus, we see, the former Methods are beginning again.

To return to the Indulgence, the Council, September 19. agree upon a Draught of the Licence given to Ministers, who are allowed to preach, by his Majesty's Proclamation June 29. and his Letter July 11. which I insert from the Registers.

" The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having considered the Petition of " representing that they have chosen to preach, and administrate the " Sacraments, in the Parish of conform to his Majesty's Proclamation, June
" 29. and his Letter July 11. and therefore desiring that Caution may be received for the " said conform to the said Proclamation: The Lords grant the Sup-" plicants Desire, who have accordingly found sufficient Caution, acted in the Books of " Privy Council for the said that he shall live peaceably; and in order 1679:

Sept. 18. Duke of Monmouth turned out of his Post. The Springs of this Turn.

New Powers granted to the Army against Conventicles, and such as were at Boscobel.

Ministers have been in the since be prosecuted.

Form of the Licence given to Ministers, who are allowed to preach, by his Majesty's Proclamation June 29. and his Letter July 11.

1679.

“ der thereto, that the said
 “ the said Cautioners shall be called to produce him, under the Penalty of Six thousand “ Merks, in case of Failie.”

shall appear before the Council, when Tenor of the Bond given for the said Ministers.

At the same Time they agree upon, and record the Tenor of the Bond to be given for them, as follows. “ Be it kend to all Men by these Presents, me “ much as, upon a humble Supplication given in to his Majesty’s Privy Council, they have “ ordained Caution to be received for “ and administrate Sacraments in the Parish of “ my self, my Heirs, and Successors, that the said
 “ and in order thereunto, that I the said “ present him before his Majesty’s Privy Council, when I am called so to do ; and in case of “ my Failie in not presenting him, I shall be liable in the Payment of the Sum of Six thou“ sand Merks Scots Money. Consenting, &c. in common Form.”

Remarks upon
 this Bond.

This Bond was reckoned to be framed with a Design to discourage Parishes from giving it, and to be illegal. The Proclamation indeed requires Surety for peaceable Behaviour, but does not require an Obligation to present the Minister’s Person upon demand, under such an exorbitant Sum, as many Parishes, or such in them as were inclinable to give Bond, were not in case to give ; and Care was taken to signifie to Persons concerned, that Presbyterian Ministers would find themselves obliged to do several Things which might be constructed, or soon made unpeaceable Behaviour ; and ’tis plain, many would be unwilling in this Case actually to present their Minister to be persecuted ; and tho’ he should be presented, the Fine might be exacted upon his being found unpeaceable in his Behaviour, by the Tenor of the Bond.

All this would not have discouraged Multitudes of Parishes in the West and South, from calling Presbyterian Ministers, if it had not been by this Time pretty evident both to Ministers and People, that now the Court was changed ; and it was fully resolved, carry as they would, as soon as possible to turn this Indulgence to nothing, or at least so to manacle it, as it should rent Presbyterians more and more ; and so they had no great Heart to make any great Efforts this way. It was not altogether so much for the King’s Honour instantly to rescind this Favour ; but they resolved gradually to clog it, until it should be perfectly ule-less.

Another Meeting of Ministers at Edinburgh towards the End of September.
 Their Scatiments on the Bonds.

Nevertheless Presbyterian Ministers counted it their Duty to meet together and consider what was most fit to be done in this Case ; and so, I think, toward the End of September, a good many of them met together at Edinburgh, mostly to consider how far it was lawful and expedient for Parishes to give in such Bonds as the Council required. Those occasional Meetings, in this persecuted state of the Church, did not assume any determining Power.
 The Matter was reasoned, and the most Part agreed it was lawful and expedient, if Matters turned not worse, to give in Bonds. Some few had some Difficulties about this, but did not insist upon them, since all expected this would be a short-lived Favour. The Sense of the Meeting going abroad, several Parishes came in with their Petitions, and offered their Bond to the Council for the Ministers peaceable Behaviour. Thus Mr. William Row, Mr. James Walkinshaw, Mr. Robert Law, and some others had Bonds given in for them, and preached in their respective Parishes, but for a short while.

The Parishes which gave Bonds, and had Ministers allowed them
 this Year.
Newcastle.

Langtoun.

Elphinstown.

Badnock.

Ceres.

*West-kirk in Eskdale, Owell, La-gie, Dalgety, Prestonhaugh,
 Tarow, Ashkirk, Campsey, Dumferming, Cardrofs.*

Proclamation
 against Conventicles, November 13.
 App. N<sup>o</sup>. 37.

I shall give here what I meet with in the Registers this Year concerning the Parishes who gave Bonds, and had Presbyterian Ministers allowed them. September 19. upon a Petition from Sir James Dundas of Arncliffe, James Eliot of Southside, Alexander Pringle, John Watson, William Turnbull, and other Heritors and Feuars in Newbottle, the Council allow “ Mr. George Johnston to preach in the Terms of the foresaid Act, in regard he hath found “ sufficient Caution in the Books of Council. September 20. upon a Petition of James Cockburn of Langtoun, for himself, and the remanent Heritors and Parishoners of the Parish of “ Langtoun, Mr. Luke Ogle is allowed to preach there, he having given sufficient Caution, as a“ bove, and that he shall not preach or dispense Sacraments save in that Parish. That same Day, “ upon the Petition of Andrew Colquhoun of Carscadden, and Hugh Crawford of Cloberhill, in “ Name of the People of Easter-kilpatrick, Mr. Robert Law is allowed to preach there. And “ Mr. James Walkinshaw, in the Parish of Badernock, and Mr. William Row in the Parish of “ Ceres. And December 18. upon the Petition of the Heritors and Parishoners of the under“ written Parishes, the Ministers named are allowed to preach in them. West-kirk in Eskdale, Mr. James Pringle, Orwell, Mr. Robert Gray, Logie, Mr. Richard Honyson, Dalgety, “ Mr. Andrew Donaldson, Prestonhaugh, Mr. Gilbert Rule, Tarrow, Mr. William Eliot, Ash-kirk, Mr. Robert Cunningham, Campsey, Mr. John Law, Dumfermling, Mr. John Wardlaw, “ Cardrofs, Mr. Neil Gillies.

Upon the 13 of November, the Council publish a new Proclamation against Conventicles, which I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 37. By it all are discharged to preach, or to hear any preach in any Parish who have not given Bond to the Council, under the Pains of being reputed dif-

disaffected to his Majesty's Authority, and Contemners of his Grace and Clemency, and being proceeded against with the utmost Severity. 1679.

The same Day, by another Proclamation, the Council fall foul upon the poor Commons who had been at Bothwell, for not taking the Bond, and give them until the First of January next to take it, providing they come in and satisfy the Lords of Justiciary between and then, of the Reasonableness of their Excuse for delaying to take it hitherto, and after that shut all Doors of Mercy against Refusers. I have annexed it App. No. 38. 'Tis a very ill natured and fiery Paper, unworthy of the Gravity of the King, in whose Name it runs, and makes him scold and speak against those poor Country People, in the Stile of Fishmarket and Billingsgate. They are termed an insolent and vitious Crew, their Preachers are made vain and giddy, and disowned by all the rest of the Protestant Churches; and such as continue to refuse after the Day, are declared Enemies to human Society; and all who harbour and reset them, are to be proceeded against as Enemies to King and Country. Some observe, that the Advocate was now come down, and his Partness runs through this Paper. This is what offers to me as to the State of Presbyterians, and this third and short Indulgence. Some Hints as to Favours done to some particular Presbyterian Gentlemen, and about the Prisoners, will come in ere I end this Section.

Another Matter of Importance this Year, which I have left to this Section, is the Debates 'twixt some of our Noblemen at London, and the Attacks made upon the Administration of the Duke of Lawderdale, with some Consequences of those. I have once and again touched at those, and would incline to have left this intirely to our civil Historians, were there not some Things in the opening of that Debate, which confirm the preceeding Part of this History, and give Light to the State of Presbyterians.

We have already heard somewhat of the Struggle in the Parliament of England for Liberty, and the Protestant Religion, which they took to be in Hazard; and of the strong Current there against the Dukes of York and Lawderdale. The first, by his Pretences to the Succession, brought all valuable to Men and Christians in England, to the utmost Hazard; and the other as not a little subservient to the same Design, by his arbitrary and oppressive Methods in the Scots Administration.

Things ripened against Lawderdale gradually, until the House of Commons upon the 29 of May, presented the following Address to the King. House of Commons Address against Lawderdale, May 29.

WE your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful Subjects, the Commons in this present Parliament assembled, finding your Majesty's Kingdoms involved in imminent Dangers and great Difficulties, by the evil Designs and pernicious Counsels of some who have been, and still are in high Places of Trust and Authority about your Royal Person, who, contrary to the Duty of their Places, by their arbitrary and destructive Counsels, tending to the Subversion of the Rights, Liberties, and Properties of your Subjects, and the Alteration of the Protestant Religion established, have endeavoured to alienate the Hearts of your good Subjects from your Majesty, and your Government, which we by our Duty are bound to preserve. We have just Reason to accuse John Duke of Lawderdale, for a chief Promoter of such Counsels, and more particularly for contriving and endeavouring to raise Jealousies and Misunderstandings between this your Majesty's Kingdom and Scotland, whereby Hostilities might have ensued and arisen between both Nations, if not prevented: Wherefore, we your Majesty's most loyal Subjects, cannot but be sensibly troubled and affected, to see such a Person, notwithstanding of the repeated Addresses of your late Parliament, continued in your Council at this Time, when the Affairs of your Kingdom require none to be set in such Employments, but such as are of known Abilities, Interest, and Esteem in the Nation, without all Suspicion of either mistaking or betraying the true Interest of the Kingdoms, and consequently of advising your Majesty ill. We do therefore beseech your Majesty, for the taking away of the great Jealousies and Dissatisfactions amongst your good Subjects, who are oppressed with great Grief and Sorrow, that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to remove the Duke of Lawderdale from your Majesty's Councils in your Majesty's Kingdoms of England and Scotland, and from all Offices, Employments and Places of Trust, and from your Majesty's Presence for ever.

The King would not be shaken from his Brother's Succession, and kept Lawderdale still about him, and, rather than part with so good Friends, he dismissed his Parliament, and so ended the designed Exclusion and Prosecution of Lawderdale this Session. The King to save the Dukes, dissolved the English Parliament.

Our Nobility in Scotland who were more nearly concerned in the Oppressions of the Duke of Lawderdale and his Party, were waiting a favourable Opportunity to table their Grievances before the King, though in their former Attempt they had not succeeded. Accordingly, this Spring, Duke Hamilton went up again to Court. The Marquis of Athole, and Sir John Cochran, and some others I find there in June, and Sir George Lockhart, and Sir John Cunningham, Two of our most noted Lawyers, came up; and the King's Advocate upon the other Side. Duke Hamilton and others to have Grievances from Lawderdale removed.

1679.

They are put in the King's Hands, and are contained in a Paper termed Particular Matters of Fact.

When Duke Hamilton and the rest got Access to the King, they laid before him their Complaints and Grievances. They were printed at this Time under the Title of Matters of Fact, &c. The printed Copy is a little incorrect; and I have set it right by Two or Three Copies I have of it in Manuscript. This is a Paper of such Importance as deserves a Room in the Body of this History, tho' pretty long: And I insert it here.

Some particular Matters of Fact relating to the Administration of Affairs in Scotland, under the Duke of Lawderdale, humbly offered to your Majesty's Consideration, in obedience to your royal Commands.

Grievances as to the High-land Host.

THE Duke of Lawderdale did grossly misrepresent to your Majesty the Condition of the western Counties, as if they had been in a State of Rebellion, tho' there had been never any Opposition made to your Majesty's Authority, nor any Resistance offered to your Forces, nor to the Execution of the Law. But he purposing to abuse your Majesty, that so he might carry on his finistrous Designs by your Authority, advised your Majesty to raise an Army against your peaceable Subjects; at least, did frame a Letter, which was sent to your Majesty, to be signed by your Royal Hand, to that effect: Which being sent down to the Council, Orders were thereupon given out for raising an Army of Eight or Nine thousand Men; the greatest Part whereof were Highlanders.

And notwithstanding, to avert this Threatning, the Nobility and Gentry of that Country did send to Edinburgh, and for the Security of the Peace, did offer to engage, that whosoever should be sent to put the Laws in Execution, should meet with no Affront; and that they would become Hostages for their Safety: Yet this Army was marched and led into a peaceable Country, and did take free Quarters, according to their Commissions; and in most Places levied great Sums of Money under the Notion of dry Quarters; and did plunder and rob your Subjects, of which no Redress could be obtained, though Complaints were frequently made: All which was exprelly contrary to the Laws of the Kingdom.

In these Quarterings, it was apparent, that Regard was only had to that Duke's private Animosities; for the greatest Part of those Places that were most quartered in, and destroyed, had been guilty of none of the Field-conventicles complained of; and many of the Places that were most guilty, were spared upon private Considerations.

The Subjects were at that Time required to subscribe an exorbitant and illegal Bond, which was impossible to be performed by them, That their Wives, Children and Servants, their Tenants and their Wives, Children and Servants, should live orderly, according to Law, not go to Conventicles, nor entertain vagrant Preachers, with several other Particulars; by which Bond those who signed it, were made liable for every Man's Fault that lived upon their Ground.

Your Majesty's Subjects were charged with Lawborrows, denounced Rebels; and Captions were issued out for seizing their Persons, upon their refusing to sign the foresaid Bond; and the Nobility and Gentry there who had ever been faithful to your Majesty, and had appeared in Arms for suppressing the last Rebellion, were disarmed upon Oath; a Proclamation was also issued forth, forbidding them, under great Penalties, to keep any Horse above Four Pounds Ten Groats Price.

The Nobility and Gentry in the Shire of Air were also indicted at the Instance of your Majesty's Advocate, of very high Crimes and Misdemeanors, whereof some did import Treason. Their Indictments were delivered them in the Evening, to be answered by them next Morning upon Oath: And when they did demand Two or Three Days Time to consider their Indictments, and craved the Benefit of Lawyers to advise with in Matters of so high Concernment, and also excepted against their being put to swear against themselves in Matters that were capital, which was contrary to Law and Justice; all those their Desires were rejected, tho' the like had never been done to the greatest Malefactors in the Kingdom: And it was told them, they must either swear instantly, or they would repute them guilty, and proceed accordingly.

The Noblemen and Gentlemen knowing themselves innocent of all that had been surmised against them, did purge themselves by Oath of all the Particulars that were objected to them, and were thereupon acquitted: And tho' the Committee of Council used the severest way of Enquiry to discover any Sedition or treasonable Designs which were pretended as the Grounds of leading in that Army to those Countries, yet nothing could ever be proved: So false was that Suggestion, concerning the Rebellion then designed, that was offered to your Majesty, and prevailed with you for sending the forementioned Letter.

The Oppression and Quartering still continuing, the Noblemen and Gentlemen of those Countries went to Edinburgh, to represent to your Council the heavy Pressures that they and their People lay under; and were ready to offer to them all that Law and Reason could require of them for securing the Peace. The Council did immediately, upon their Appearance there, set forth a Proclamation, requiring them to depart the Town in Three Days;
upon

upon the highest Pains. And when the Duke of Hamilton did petition to stay Two or Three Days longer upon urgent Affairs, it was refused.
 When some Persons of Quality had declared to the Duke of Lawderdale, that they would go and represent their Condition to your Majesty, if they could not have Justice from your Ministers; for preventing that, a Proclamation was set out, forbidding all the Subjects to depart the Kingdom without Licence, that so your Majesty might not be acquainted with the sad Condition of your Subjects: A Thing without all Precedent and Law, to cut off your Subjects from making Application to your Majesty; nor less contrary to your Majesty's true Interest (who must be always the Refuge of your People) than to the natural Right of the Subject.

1679.

The former Particulars relate to the Invasion of the Rights of great Numbers of your Subjects all at once; what follow, have immediately fallen upon some single Persons, yet are such as your whole People apprehend they may all be upon the slightest Occasions, brought under the like Mischiefs.

The Council hath, upon many Occasions, proceeded to a new kind of Punishment, of declaring Men incapable of all publick Trust; concerning which, your Majesty may remember what Complaints the Duke of Lawderdale made, when during the Earl of Middleton's Administration, he himself was put under an Incapacity by an Act of Parliament. The Words of his Paper against the Earl of Middleton are, Incapacitating was to whip with Scorpions, a Punishment intended to rob Men of their Honour, and to lay a lasting Stain upon them and their Posterity, &c. And if this was so complained of, when done by the high Court of Parliament, your Majesty may easily conclude it cannot be done in any lower Court: But notwithstanding it is become of late Years an ordinary Sentence of Council, when the least Complaints are brought in against any with whom the Duke of Lawderdale or his Brother are offended.

Incapacitating Persons for publick Trust.

Instances of this are.

The declaring of Twelve honest and worthy Citizens of Edinburgh incapable of publick Trust, against whom no Complaint was ever made to this Day, as your Majesty will perceive by another Paper to be offered to you concerning that Affair: The true Cause of it was, That these Men being in the Magistracy, the Duke of Lawderdale and his Brother could not get a vast Bribe from them out of the Town's Money, which was afterward obtained when they were removed.

Instances in 12 Citizens of Edinburgh.

The Provosts of Glasgow, Aberdeen and Jedburgh were put under the same Sentence for signing a Letter to your Majesty, in the Convention of Burrows, with the rest of that Body: Which Letter was advised by him who is now your Majesty's Advocate, as that which had nothing in it which could bring them under any Guilt; and yet these Three were singled out of the whole Number, and incapacitated, beside a high Fine and a long Imprisonment; as your Majesty will more fully perceive by another Paper to be offered to you.

The Provosts of Glasgow, Aberdeen and Jedburgh.

Sir Patrick Hume of Polwarth, being sent by the Shire of Berwick, to complain of some illegal Proceedings, and to obtain a legal Remedy to them, which he did only in the common Form of Law, was also declared incapable of publick Trust, besides many Months Imprisonment.

Sir Patrick Hume of Polwarth.

The Provost of Linlithgow, being complained of, for not furnishing some of your Forces with Baggage-horses, was called before the Council; and, because he said, They were not bound by Law to furnish Horses in such manner, he was immediately declared incapable of publick Trust, and was both fined and imprisoned.

Provost of Linlithgow.

There are also about Fifty in the Town of St. Johnstoun incapacitate, upon a very illegal Pretence; so that it is almost impossible for them to find a sufficient Number of Citizens for the publick Magistracy of that Town.

Fifty Persons in the Town of Perth.

Your Subjects are, sometimes upon slight, and sometimes upon no Ground, imprisoned, and are often kept Prisoners many Months and Years, nothing being objected to them, and are required to enter themselves Prisoners, which is contrary to Law. It was in the former Article expressed, That many of the Persons declared incapable of publick Trust, did also suffer Imprisonment.

Illegal Imprisonments.

And, besides these Instances,

Lieutenant General Drummond, whose eminent Loyalty and great Services are well known to your Majesty, was required to enter himself Prisoner in the Castle of Dumbarton, where he was kept a Year and a half, and was made close Prisoner for Three Months.

L.G. Drummond.

1679.

Lord Cardross.

Sir Patrick Hume.

Warrants to Officers for apprehending
Persons.Capt. Carstairs and Mr. James Kirkcoun's Case.Method of using Prisoners.Unreasonable Fines.Garisons in Gentlemen's Houses.

Months of that Time, and yet nothing was ever objected against him to this Day, to justify that Usage.

My Lord Cardross was, upon his Lady's keeping Two Conventicles in her own House, at which he was not present, fined in 1111 Pounds Sterling (the Print Copy bears 11000 Pounds) and hath been kept now Four Years Prisoner in the Castle of Edinburgh, where he still remains, tho' he has often petitioned,

And Sir Patrick Hume hath been now almost a Year imprisoned a second Time, and nothing is yet laid to his Charge.

Besides these illegal Imprisonments, the Officers of your Majesty's Forces carry frequently Warrants with them, for apprehending of Persons that are under no legal Censure, nor have been so much as cited to appear; which puts many of your Subjects under great Fears, especially upon what was done in Council about Three Years ago.

Captain Carstairs, a Person now well enough known to your Majesty, did intrap one Mr. Kirkcoun, an outed Minister, into a Chamber of Edinburgh, and did violently abuse him, upon design to have extorted some Money from him: The Noise of this coming to Mr. Bailie of Jerviswood, Brother in Law to the said Mr. Kirkcoun, he came to the House, and hearing him cry Murder, Murder, forced open the Chamber-door, where he found the Captain and his Brother in Law grangling. The Captain pretended he had a Warrant against Mr. Kirkcoun, and Mr. Bailie desired him to shew it, and promised that all Obedience should be given it, and that he himself would assist him in executing of it. But the Captain refusing to do it, Mr. Kirkcoun was rescued; which was only the delivering a Man out of the Hands of a Robber, which Nature obliges all Men to do, especially being joyned with so near a Relation. The Captain complained of that to the Council, and my Lord Hailton with others were appointed to examine Witnesses. When it was brought before the Council, the Duke of Hamilton, the Earls of Morton, Dumfries and Kincardin, my Lord Cochran and Sir Archibald Primrose Register, desired that the Report of the Examination might be read; but that, not serving their Ends, was denied; and these Lords delivered their Opinion, That, since Carstairs did not shew any Warrant, nor was clothed with any publick Character, it was no opposing of publick Authority in Mr. Bailie to rescue his Brother in Law. Yet Mr. Bailie was for this fined in Six Thousand Merks, or Three hundred and eighteen Pounds Sterling, and kept long Prisoner; and these Lords were upon that so represented to your Majesty, that, by the Duke of Lauderdale's Procurement, they were turned out of the Council, and out of all Command in the Militia. And it can be made appear, that the Captain at that Time had no Warrant against Mr. Kirkcoun, but procured it after the Violence was committed, and it was antedated to serve the Turn at that Time. This Manner of proceeding hath ever since put your Subjects under sad Apprehensions.

There is one other Particular offered to your Majesty's Consideration, concerning their Way of using Prisoners. There were Fourteen Men taken at a Field-conventicle, who, without being legally convicted of that or any other Crime, were secretly, and in the Night, taken out of Prison, by a Warrant signed by the Earl of Linlithgow, Lords Hailton and Colington, and were delivered to Captain Maitland, who had been Page to the Duke of Lauderdale, but was then a French Officer, and was making his Levies in Scotland, and were carried over to the Service of the French King, in the Year 1676.

The Council hath, upon many Occasions, proceeded to most unreasonable and arbitrary Fines, either for slight Offences, or for Offences, where the Fine is regulated by Law, which they have never considered when the Persons were not acceptable to them. So the Lord Cardross was fined in Twenty thousand Merks, that is, 1111 Pounds Sterling, for his Lady's keeping Two Conventicles in her House, and Christning his Child by an outed Minister, without his Knowledge. The Provost formerly mentioned, Bailie of Jerviswood, with many more, were also fined without any regard of Law.

The Council has at several Times proceeded to the taking of Gentlemen's dwelling-houses from them, and putting Garisons in them, in Time of Peace, contrary to Law. In the Year 1675. it was designed against Twelve of your Majesty's Subjects, and was put in Execution in the House of the Earl of Callendar, Lord Cardross and Lady Lumisdan, and was again attempted in the Year 1678. And Houses belonging to the Laids of Cessnock, Balquhan, and Rowallan, were possessed by Soldiers, and declared to be Garisons: Nor did it rest there, but Orders were sent from the Council-board, requiring the Counties about these Houses to furnish them for the Soldiers Use, and to supply them with many Necessaries, manifestly contrary to Law. It was against this that Sir Patrick Hume came to desire a Remedy; and common Justice being denied him, he used a legal Protestation in the ordinary Form

Form of Law, and was thereupon kept many Months a Prisoner, and declared incapable of all publick Trust, as was formerly mentioned. 1679.

There is another Particular, which, because it is so odious, is unwillingly touched; yet it is necessary to inform your Majesty about it, for thereby it will appear, that the Duke of Lawderdale and his Brother have in a most solemn Manner broken the publick Faith that was given in your Majesty's Name. Breach of publick Faith.

One Mitchel being put in Prison, on great Suspicion of his having attempted to murder the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, and there being no Evidence against him, Warrant was given by the Duke of Lawderdale, then your Majesty's Commissioner, and your Council, to promise him his Life if he would confess, whereupon he did confess: And yet, some Years after, that Person (who indeed did deserve many Deaths, if there had been Evidence against him) was upon that Confession convicted of his Crime; and the Duke of Lawderdale and his Brother being put to it by him, did swear, that they neither gave nor knew of any Assurance of Life given him. And when it was objected, that the Promise was upon Record in the Council-books, the Duke of Lawderdale did in open Court, when he was present only as a Witness, and ought to have been silent, threaten them, if they should proceed to the Examination of that Act of Council, which, as he then said, might infer Perjury in them who had sworn; and so did cut off the Proof of that Defence, which had been admitted by the Court as good in Law, and sufficient to save the Prisoner if proved. This Man was hanged upon the Evidence of that Confession only, tho' the Promise that drew it from him appears upon Record, and can be proved by many Witnesses, and other clear Evidences. And from this your Majesty may judge what Credit can be given to such Men. In Mr. James Mitchell's Case.

We do not at present enlarge upon other Particulars, tho' of great Importance, such as Monopolies, selling Places and Honours, turning Men of known Integrity out of their Employments and Offices, to which they had a just and good Right during their Lives, the Profits of one of the most considerable of these being sequestered for some Time, and applied for the Dutches of Lawderdale's Use; the treating about, and receiving of great Bribes by the Duke and Dutches of Lawderdale, and the Lord Haltoun, and particularly from the Towns of Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Linlithgow, and many others, for procuring from your Majesty Warrants for illegal Impositions within these Towns; the manifest and publick perverting of Justice in the Session, beside the most signal Abuses in the Mint and Copper Coin, that are most grievous to all your Subjects: But the Number of these is so great, and they would require so many Witnesses to be brought hither for proving them, that, we fear, it would too much trouble your Majesty now to examine them all. But your Majesty shall have a full Account of them afterward. Other Particulars, Monopolies, &c.

One Thing is humbly offered to your Majesty, as the Root of those and many other Oppressions, which is, That the Method of governing the Kingdom of Scotland for several Years has been, That the Lord Haltoun and his Adherents frame any Letter that they desire from your Majesty to your Council, and send it to the Duke of Lawderdale, who returns it signed unto them; and this is brought unto the Council: Upon which, if a Debate at any Time arise, concerning the Matter of the Letter, as being against or without Law; and when it is proposed that a Representation of that should be made to your Majesty, then the Lord Haltoun, in his insolent Way, calls to have it put to the Question, as if it were a Crime to have any Warrant debated, or represented to your Majesty, which is procured by the Duke of Lawderdale or himself; and this is echoed by his Party, and by this Means all further debating is stopped. Root of all these Grievances, the Method of Procedure in Council.

There are some other Particulars relating to many of these Heads, that are ready to be offered to your Majesty in other Papers, which are not added here, lest your Majesty should now be troubled with too long a Paper.

This Detail of Matters of Fact, lays open so much of the Iniquity of this Period, that it deserves particularly to be noticed; it certainly contains a material Vindication of the People at Bothwell, who appeared in Defence of Religion and Liberty. The Paper was formed by some of the best Hands in the Kingdom, and keeps close to a bare Narrative without any Reflections. Observations upon it.

Had the Nobility and Gentlemen concerned in this Paper, landed many Things narrated at the Door of the Prelates, as well as Lawderdale's, I conceive the Representation had been fuller, and not the less just. But Sharp, the prime Actor in many of them, was now removed, and this Method would not have answered their Purpose, and, it may be, would in some Measure have marred it. And so all is landed upon the Duke. The Grievances might have been landed upon the Prelates, as well as the Duke.

This one Thing I notice, That as Prelacy in Scotland was one great Source and Occasion of our Pressures and Evils, so there were in England, at this Time, who had the same Views of Prelacy there. And with their Efforts to recover their civil Liberty, were complaining of the evil Influence Prelacy had upon their civil Concerns. It must indeed be owned, Prelacy at this Time grievous in England to some who had a Sense of Liberty.

1679.

Which appears from a Paper, intitued, An Answer out of the West, to a Question out of the North
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 39.

Letter from Lawderdale about the Matters of Fact.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 40.

The King allows a Conference, July 8.
on these Matters of Complaint.

owned, that the Bishops of England, even at this Time, and much more since the Revolution, have been far better Men, Christians, and Countrymen, than the Prelates in Scotland;
yet many of them siding with the Court for a Popish Successor, and, as some remark, cutting the Balance against the Bill of Exclusion, very much diminished their Character; and it was further thought, that their Office, as established, was no small Hindrance to Trade and civil Liberty. And that the Reader may have some View of the Reasons advanced for this, I have insert, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 39. a Paper printed and handed about in England at this Time, intituled, An Answer out of the West to a Question out of the North, which contains the largest Detail of the civil Grievances flowing from the Hierarchy there, which I have seen; and I suppose the Paper is rare. How just they are, I must leave to the Defenders of that Constitution.

This Paper, Particular Matters of Fact, &c. when printed and spread, made a great Noise. And July 11. the Council receive a Letter from Lawderdale about it, bearing, “ That the King is informed of an infamous Libel, writ and dispersed at Edinburgh, printed “ and dispersed at London, and cried in the Streets, reflecting upon the Proceedings of the “ Lords of Council and Session; that the King orders a diligent Enquiry, where, and by “ whom, the Copies are written out, and dispersed at Edinburgh; the Accounts at London “ bearing, That they are written at the Chamber of James Hay Writer, who married a Niece “ of Sir Archibald Primrose.” The Council appoint a Committee to examine into this; and afterwards July 19. they send up the Examinations relative thereunto. Mean while, July 11. they write a Letter to the King, thanking him for his Concern in them, and desiring Justice against such Attempts. The curious Reader will desire to see it; wherefore I have added it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 40.

Before any Answer could come from the Council, the King, after many Delays, at length was brought to allow a Conference in his own Presence upon these Matters of Complaint.
I have upon the former Years taken Notice of what passed in his Majesty's Presence upon this Subject, and I have not much to add; only a Letter writ, as 'tis plain, by one of Law-derdale's Party at this Time, is before me; and tho' the Account be only as to the one Side, yet none other being come to my Hand, I shall here insert it, as containing what passed.

Windfor-castle, July 13.

Sir,

Letter from Lawderdale
Narrative of what passed at this Conference from on upon Lawderdale's Side.

UPON Tuesday last the 8 Instant, the Party Lords, with their two Advocates, Sir George Lockhart, and Sir John Cunningham, which the King did not send for, but had allowed them to come to plead, appeared. On the King's Side was only the Lord Advocate, who undertook the Debate against them all. The Subject Matter of the Debate run upon what was contained in the Libel printed by the Party Lords, which consists of the following Heads: 1. The Carrying in of the Forces and Highlanders the last Year into the West.
2. The taking of free Quarter. 3. The incapacitating Persons from Office within Burghs.
4. The Bond for Masters to be answerable for their Families, Servants and Tenants. 5.
The Lawborrows. 6. The King's Power in imprisoning indicta causa.

The Lord Advocate began to debate thus. He desired to know what Part of that Paper they insisted upon, or what else. The Paper it self, he said, consisted of three Heads.
1. The several Parts of the King's Prerogative therein mentioned, and whether the King or his Council doing these Things, was allowed by the Law of the Kingdom, and whether the King had Power to do so or not. The Second was, If the King's Power by Law was right applied in the Particulars mentioned by the printed Paper. The Third was, Accusations against private Persons, such as the Duke of Lawderdale, and his Brother.

As to the First, there was a long Debate, wherein sometimes the Lawyers spoke, many Times the Duke of Hamilton sometimes the Marquis of Athole, and oft-times Sir John Cochran, and at last the Laird of Macnaughtan, to whom the King was pleased to say, You are indeed a great Lawyer, and a Highland Man.

The King's Advocate proved the King's Prerogative controverted, by the municipal Law of the Kingdom, by printed Statutes, and constant Practiques; and at last the two Lawyers acknowledged, that by Law, the King might do what was done, but did much question the Council's Prudence in the particular Application mentioned in the printed Paper.

To this the Advocate answered, That to question Application, was to question the King, and his Council who acted by his Commission; that no Judicatory was to give an Account of the Application of Law, because the Members were sworn to act according to their Conscience; that they had done so; and to question this, were to overturn the Fundamentals of all Government; for then all Sentences of a Judicatory would be misregarded by the Subjects, and consequently no Delinquents punished; and by this means the Subject would lose Liberty and Property.

‘This

• This Answer brought all the Matters of Fact contained in the Paper, to be debated one by one, which took up several Hours, all which Time the King heard patiently. 1679.
 • As to the Third, viz. Accusations against particular Persons, it was urged, That no Accusation could be brought here without the Kingdom against any particular Man; for by Act of Parliament in King James II's. Time, all Accusations and Pursuits must be made first before the ordinary Judge; and the King himself declared he would hear none such here at the first Instance.
 • The Debate lasted Eight Hours that Day, from Ten to One Forenoon, and from Four to Nine in the Evening. Upon Friday the 11. the King declared his Pleasure, as is contained in his gracious Letter to the Council, sent by this flying Packet.
 • In the End of the Debate, the Duke of Hamilton offered a long Paper, which was an Accusation of the General of the Mint; and Alexander Monro presented his Petition, complaining that he had been turned out of the Clerkship of the Session, and this procured by the Duke of Lawderdale and his Brother. Brimball presented a Paper for the Twelve Persons in the Council of Edinburgh, who had been incapacitate, and craved they might be restored.
 • As to the Accusation of the General of the Mint, the King declared, That all contained in the Paper were, Things already tried, examined, and determined by him and his Council, and therefore rejected it, and said, the General was not concerned therein. As to Monro his Petition, he was informed that he had received Seven thousand Merks of Composition, and thereupon had demitted his Post. As to the last, of the Twelve incapacitate Persons, his Majesty declared he is resolved to enquire into the former Practique by the Registers, and consider what his Predecessors have done in the like Cases; and, as he finds, he will determine; and, if he find Cause, they shall have a legal Trial.
 • Upon Friday Evening the Party made an Application to the King for a further Hearing, being informed what his Majesty had resolved upon the first Hearing, alledging they had many material Things yet to say, but would not tell Particulars.
 • To this his Majesty yielded, and appointed this Day, being July 13. at Four of the Clock Afternoon for the last Hearing, declaring, after that, he would neither hear them by Word nor Writ. Yesterday Sir George Lockhart went to London; some of the Party went after him, but he refused to return to debate, saying, He would debate no more against Persons, that, for any Thing he could see, would thereafter be his Judges. Sir John Cunningham, and the rest of the Party staid here; and when their Hour came, they sent the Earl of Kincardin to tell the King they would insist no more.
 • Whereupon the King hath been pleased to determine graciously as in this Letter to the Council. GOD save the King. I am, &c.

It is not improbable, but the King's Resolutions, contained in the Letters just now to be insert, which came to be known on Friday 11. to the Lords who complained, discouraged them from insisting, and made Sir George Lockhart leave them. Monmouth came out to Windsor on the 10. and, it may be, the second Conference on the 13. took its Rise from him. Duke Hamilton's Party signify in some of their Letters, That by the Reasoning the King was very much convinced of great Mismanagements in Scotland, and seem to be much pleased, that they had got the Liberty to lay these Things before him. They alledge, that his Majesty being so long and much embarked with Lawderdale, he could not presently break with him, but hope Haltoun will be laid aside. And I find one Letter, writ at this Time, says, That upon Saturday Duke Hamilton got Notice, that as soon as the King's Affairs could allow it, the Earl of Middleton and Lord Tarbet were to be made joynt Secretaries in the Duke's room; upon which he declined insisting any further.

Accounts of the Effects of this Conference from Letters upon the other Side

Whatever be in these, the King's revealed Will came down by Express to Council, July 17. in Three Letters, one to the Council, another to the Lords of the Session, and a third to the Judiciary. The first, in a particular Manner was most acceptable to the Managers, and looks like a full Victory by Lawderdale. I here insert it.

King's Letter to Council upon this Conference, July 17

CHARLES R.

• Right trusty, &c. We well remember, That in the Year 1674. We redressed the Grievances even of these who would not in Civility answer Our Letter to Our Parliament, at a Time when We were so much concerned to have a Testimony of the Kindness of that Our ancient Kingdom; and that Our Commissioner offered to redress in Our Name what further would be required, if the Complainers would first acquaint him therewith, which, tho' refused, yet did not hinder Us from satisfying every Thing that We could hear to be murmured against.
 • Notwithstanding of all which, some of Our Nobility and Gentry have continued in a constant Course of misrepresenting Our Judicatories, and thereby lessening and weakning Our Authority, by taking upon them to be Intercessors for Our People, (an Usurpation very factious,

1679.

‘ Serious and dangerous to Our Government, and which We will never endure for the future) but yet to let all Our Subjects know Our Inclinations to Justice, We did condescend for once to hear Advocates upon the Complaints given unto Us, and to allow them a full Security in debating even Points of the greatest Concern to Our Royal Government, which, after We pressed upon the Complainers, they often declined, upon Pretext they had not their Lawyers present : Whereupon We having allowed them Lawyers to come up, all was brought to a full and impartial Debate. Upon which Debates, We do now find, that it is acknowledged, even by their own Advocates, that there was Law for doing such Things as were controverted in some Cases, excepting only whether We can lay aside incapacitate Persons for Magistracy, without a Process ; as to which We are to be further cleared by the Instances whereby that Practick was maintained. And as to the Matters of Fact differed upon, We have now and formerly cleared Our Judgment upon them so fully, that We cannot now in Justice but declare, that We think Our Judicatories and Servants, and especially the Duke of Lawderdale, of whose Fidelity and Services We have had so long Experience, most unjustly used by the Givers in of those Complaints, there being no Council against which those Accusations may not be gleaned up.’

‘ Therefore We do not only acquit Our Judicatories, and every Person among them from all the Matter given in in a Paper to Us, and most injuriously and unwarrantably printed : But We discharge for ever any Person from giving in any of these Complaints in any Process, or Manner whatsoever, and that under all highest Pains.’

‘ And as to the Accusations against particular Persons, We declare We will not hear such Cases before Ourselves in the first Instance, We being fully resolved never to injure so far that Our ancient Kingdom, as to draw hither Processes whereby Our Subjects and Counsellors would be infinitely prejudged.’

‘ Having thus, and by Our late Proclamation, taken all possible Pains to quiet all bypast Distempers, We do, for the future Satisfaction and Security of our People, require, That all Causes be tried before Our respective Judicatories, Our Council being proper Judges as to what relates to Matters of State and the publick Peace, and the Session in Civil, and Our Justice-court in Criminal Cases. And We recommend unto you, if any Differences arise among you in Point of Law, that you take the Opinion of Our Judges therein before you determine.’

‘ We look upon the Injuries done to the Duke of Lawderdale in that Part of the Paper (which makes him Author of all that can be charged upon Our Council) as an high Contempt of that Our Judicatory, tending to deface your Persons and Administration, and his Integrity, he being one of your Number, and living frequently at great Distance from you. And so We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at Windsor-castle the 13 Day of July, 1679. And of Our Reign the 31 Year.’

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE

Remarks on it

Many Observes might be made upon this Letter, but 'tis not worth while to lose Time upon them. The Letter is signed by Lawderdale, and penned by him, no doubt ; and when a Man hath his own Cause in his own Hand, he is a Fool if he make not the best of it may be.

Letter to the Lords of the Session

With this Letter to the Council, another came to the Lords of the Session, which, being but short, is likewise insert here.

CHARLES R.

‘ Right Trusty, &c. All the Complaints raised against you have no other Effect upon Us, than the clearing of Our Judgment and your Innocence, and do convince Us, the Authors only View in those, is to draw into their Hand that Authority, which upon that account only they can be angry to see in yours. Wherefore, under Proofs of their Malice and folly, We, to shew Our Kindness and Esteem for you, could not forbear at this Time to take notice, that in a Paper, most undutifully divulged by some of Our Subjects in Scotland, and printed, there is one Article which charges you in general only, because the Authors know no Particular with which to asperse you, it being undeniable that your Bench is filled with as much Learning and Integrity at least, as in any Age, and much more than your Accusers could supply it with ; and therefore We will own you with that Concern and Steadfastness your Merit deserves, and will be unkind to all your Enemies, by the same Measure as they are injurious to you, whom We consider as Our great Council in Matters of of Law, and upon whose Fidelity We rely, as much as We have just Reason to suspect theirs who injure you. So We bid you heartily farewell. 1679.

LAWDERDALE.

Windsor, July 13.
1679.

It concerned Lawderdale very much to have the Lords of Session for him, and therefore the Compliment of this Letter is given them. And for the same Reason, and that the Criminal Court had been attacked in the Complaint given in by the Lords at London, another Letter is directed to the Justiciary, which is likewise added here, as it stands recorded in their Registers. Remark on it

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. The Punishment of Crimes being of so great Import to Our Service, and tending so much to secure Our peaceable Subjects, and you being, in the Execution of that Employment, at so much Pains, and your Bench being, by its late Constitution, filled by Persons of extraordinary Abilities and Breeding, We have thought fit at this Time to assure you of Our firm Resolution to own you, and that Our Court, in the Administration of Justice to Our People; and that We will punish such as, by injuring you, asperse Our Authority, and poison Our People. And particularly, We thank you for your Proceedings against Mr. James Mitchel, that Enemy of human Society; these who lessen that Crime, or insinuate any Reproach against those interested in that Process, as Judges or Witnesses, being justly chargeable with the Blood which they encourage to spill upon such Occasions. And so We bid you heartily farewell. Letter to the Lords of Justiciary.

LAWDERDALE.

Windsor-castle, July 13.
1679.

Returns were made to all these Letters from the King. That from the Council is before me, dated July 18. They own this the greatest Expression of his Kindness and Concern in his ancient Kingdom and them, they are capable of, and go on in the highest Strain of Acknowledgment, and Profession of Returns. I find these upon Lawderdale's Side took their Leave of his Majesty July 27. and by them he sends the Signification of his Pleasure about the Indemnity, and other important Matters of which we have heard. Thus we see the Issue of the Complaints at London, and that all concerned are vindicated as far as Lawderdale and Letters can do it. When this Business is over, Duke Hamilton, and these who joyned him, left the Court, and was but little in Favour until the Revolution, and we shall hear little more about him. Returns made to those Letters

Tho' Lawderdale stood his Ground, Monmouth was yet in Court; and as this brought some Favours to some of our oppressed Gentlemen, so those raised no small Stir among our Managers. By a Letter from the King, dated July 17. Sir Patrick Hume of Polwarth is liberated. The Letter bears, 'That he had been imprisoned for Reasons known to his Majesty, and tending to secure the publick Peace; and now, the Occasions of Suspicion and publick Jealousy being over, he is ordered to be liberated.' By a Letter of that same Date, Mr. Stuart is restored to his Liberty. And the King's Letter, February 1675. 'ordering him to be seized and imprisoned, is recalled, upon Information of his peaceable Behaviour since. He is indemnified from all that can be laid to his Charge, reponed to the King's Protection; and this Letter is to be recorded, and Extracts allowed him.' We heard before, that Mr. William Veitch was likewise liberated by a Letter of this same Date. And, July 22. the Council are allowed to set my Lord Cardross at Liberty, he paying his Fine. I shall give his Case more fully next Year all together. Favours shewn to some Presbyterian Gentlemen. Sir Patrick Hume lib.erate. Mr Stuart Son to Sir James Stuart. And Mr William Veitch.

These Favours were granted to soften the Clamour that was made upon the Duke of Lawderdale's Conduct, and in part to gratify the other Side; and 'tis probable, had not the Duke of Tork come over, as we heard, more of this Nature had been done. However, they alarmed the Managers at Edinburgh, and, upon the 25 of July, the Earl of Linlithgow and Claverhouse, by the Council's Permission, go to London, and the Chancellor followed in a few Days. The Talk continued as if there would be Changes in the Council, Army, and the Church. Those Favours alarmed the Managers. Leith, Edinburgh, Ch. to Court.

As to the Church, they began to say, That Mr. Leightoun, the Bishop, I suppose, was coming to Edinburgh to reside, clothed with a Commission to superintend the Clergy, and to have Two hundred Pounds Sterling a Year: So I find some private Letters at this Time bear. It was talked, that the Bishop of Edinburgh was to be made Archbishop of Glasgow, and the Bishop of Aberdeen to be translated to Edinburgh; that an Addition was to be made to the Council, Changes talked of.

1679.

App. N<sup>o</sup> 41.Incidental Matters this Year.Queensberry a Privy Counseller.

Indemnity.

Prisoners.

Mr. Robert Sharp.

James Hamilton
a Boy.Sir William Paterson.
E. Linlithgow.Mr James Ry-mer.Mr William Erskine.Proclamation against the Murderers of the Arch-
shop, September 20.
App. N<sup>o</sup> 42.Reception of the Duke of York in November.

Council, Southesk, Kincardin, Haddingtoun, Drummond, and Sir Archibald Primrose; and that the Duke of Monmouth was to be made Captain General of all the King's Forces, with large Powers. A Copy of his Commission for this July 29. I have seen, and insert App. N<sup>o</sup> 41. But I leave these Things to Civil Historians.

I shall now conclude this Section with a few other incidental Matters, which I had not Room for upon the former Sections, and the Procedure of the Council towards the End of this Year. July 12. the Earl of Queensberry is admitted a Privy Counsellor: The Reason given is his Zeal in promoting his Majesty's service, and suppressing the Rebels. This is his first Advancement; we shall afterwards frequently meet with him in this History. August 13. at the frequent Meeting of the Council, we heard of, called this Day, the King's Indemnity is ordered to be published by the Magistrates of Edinburgh in their Formalities, and that Bells be rung, the Castle fire, and Bonfires be put on. A Committee is appointed to consider what is further to be done with the Murderers of the Archbishop, the Case of the Prisoners, and the State of the Highlands. This Committee bring in the Proposal about Circuit Courts, of which Section IV. and move that the Prisoners continue as they are, till the King's Pleasure be had; that the Sheriff of Fife apprehend the Robbers of Mr. Robert Sharp Minister at Muchbart, and endeavour to recover his Goods, and that he may be recommended to the Treasurer; that James Hamilton, a Prentice Boy in Glasgow, Prisoner in the Grayfriars, be liberated; that the Advocate raise a Process of Forfeiture against the landed Persons Murderers of the Archbishop, and against the Lord Macdonald and other Highland Fugitives. September 18. Sir William Paterson is admitted Clerk to the Council. September 19. the Earl of Linlithgow's Commission, as Major General, declared void, not from any Dissatisfaction with him, but because the Forces are few, and a General already appointed; and, September 20. the Bond of Mr. James Rymmer, late Professor of Philosophy in St. Andrews, to stay at Edinburgh, under Pain of 10000 Merks, and answer for harbouring the Murderers of the Archbishop, is ordered to be given up, the Council finding he is not guilty; and yet he is ordered to give another, under the same Pains, to appear before the Justiciary when called. And Mr. William Erskine, Prisoner in Stirling more than Three Years (some Papers before me say, he was in Prison, with a very little Intermission, full Ten Years) is ordered to be liberated.

That same Day a new Proclamation is emitted against the Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, and their Names insert. And at the Close of it, all the Magistrates of Royal Burghs are ordered to take the Declaration against Michaelmas next. I make no Reflexions upon it, but add it with the rest of the publick Papers, App. N<sup>o</sup> 42.

When the Accounts came, that the Duke of York was coming for Scotland, October 16. the Council send Letters to the absent Members to repair to Edinburgh with all Speed, the Council designing to meet his Highness at the Border, and that Noblemen and Gentlemen near by be desired to wait on them on this Occasion. Letters are writ to the Sheriffs of Edinburgh, Haddingtoun, Linlithgow, Berwick, and others, to attend. Mr. Maitland of Dudhop is sent to attend his Royal Highness in England, and to know when he will be waited on.

He came to Berwick upon Friday, November 21. to Lethingtoun upon Saturday, and to the Abbey, Munday, November 24. The Council went out and met him, and he was received into Town with the greatest Solemnity, and sumptuously entertained by the Town of Edinburgh and the Nobility. The Duke retired from the Storm that he found gathering against him from the new Parliament in England; and when that was over, by the Prorogation, the King called up his Brother in February, as we may hear, and he went up to manage all at Court: Several of our Scots Nobility went with him by Sea, and some of them were lost in their Passage homeward.

The Duke's Presence very much strengthened the violent Party in the Council, and the Bishop, in their severe Measures against Presbyterians. And, to be sure, that Party need expect no Mercy from Popery and Papists, and whatever is done under Pretext of Favour to them by that Gang, is still a Snare; and from the Duke's coming, and his being here afterwards, we may in part draw the growing Nature of Presbyterians Sufferings, during the following Years.

Mean while new Orders are given to the Army, and General Dalziel is warranted to order the Officers and Soldiers of the standing Forces to search for, and seize such as are declared Fugitives and Rebels by the Justiciary for the late Rebellion, and that conform to a Roll given him under the Justice-general's Hand, of which we shall hear more afterwards. Yea, by a Letter from the King, dated November 1. General Dalziel is declared Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces, with this Addition, "And that he may be enabled to act with the greater Freedom from Time to Time, in the Discharge of his Duty to us in that important Post, he may go on, without losing of Time in staying for Orders from any other Person in our Absence: Nevertheless, in Emergencies of State, the Council are allowed to give him Directions." This is a large Power indeed. At the same Time the Council go on against Conventicles, and ordain the Magistrates of Linlithgow to suppress a Meeting-house they are informed is setting up there. And November 13. Orders are sent to the Magistrates heightened the Severities upon Presbyterians.Severe Orders to the Army.Unlimited Commission to Dal-ziel.

His Presence

gistrates of Linlithgow, Innerkeithing, and Kirkaldy, to suppress the Meeting-houses set up there. 1679.

When the Duke of York came down, he acted as a Counsellor, without taking the Oaths, by virtue of a Letter from his Majesty, dated November 30. which runs, 'Right Truly, &c. We have thought fit to acquaint you, That our only Brother the Duke of Albany and York, being resolved, with our Allowance, for some time to reside in Scotland, 'tis our Pleasure that he continue to act as a Privy Counsellor, in that our ancient Kingdom, without any Oath, being named in our last Commission 1676. (as he did by our former Commissions) it being the Privilege of the lawful Sons and Brothers of the King, not to be comprehended under any such general Words as these of the 11 Act of our first Parliament, tho' that Act doth comprehend all others except them alone. For which this shall be your Warrant.'

LAWDERDALE.

Upon a Letter from the King, that the Militia be regulated, the Council, December 18. approve of the Report of their Committee. This Report, because much of the Harassing of the Country was from the Officers, and Parties of the Militia, and the Subsidy for supporting them, was very heavy, I have inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 43. That same Day, a Report is approved about the Prisoners, "That Alexander and James Balfours, and James A'iss, in Prison for presumed Accession to the Archbishop's Murder, be further tried. That Robert Garnock Smith in Stirling, is most obstinate and malicious, and will neither enact himself not to take up Arms, nor say the Archbishop's Murder was Murder, but excommunicated such of his Neighbours as did so; and therefore he ly in Prison till further Trial.' We have seen the Ground of this ill-worded Report about this Person above. 'That John Henderson, an old Man, in Prison for Harbour of his Sons, after they had been at the Murder, which he denies, and Henry Schaw in Fife, taken when Inchdurny was killed, be liberate on Bond of a Thousand Merks, to compear when called. That Robert Blaw, now Three Years in Prison for Conventicles, be liberate on Bond of Two thousand Merks. That George Fleming, and Stirk, in Prison for suspected Accession to the Murder, be continued.'

December 23. the Chancellor writes the following Letter to General Dalziel. 'Sir, Besides the Heritors given up in the Porteous Roll, 'tis informed, that there are several other Heritors who were in the Rebellion not given up; and whereas in several Places of the Country that Defect may be supplied, the Council recommends it to you to appoint your Officers to inform themselves of such Heritors, and the Parishes where they dwell or dwelt, and of the Witnesses against them; and as soon as possible send up Accounts to the Advocate, that he may the better be able to insist against them, before the Justices. I am, &c. Rother.' We see the Pains they are at to discover Heritors, and what repeated Endeavours are used this way; and in the following Years we shall find the Managers got their Lands and Estates.

Towards the End of this Year, I find several Presbyterian Ministers in the West met at Paisly; and considering the great Hazard of Religion, and the terrible Advances Popery was making, drew up a Warning against Popery, and a short Vindication of Presbyterian Principles, which they resolved to have published, but would not let it come to the open View, until the rest of their Brethren in other Places should see and approve it. There had been a general Meeting of Ministers appointed at Edinburgh, upon the Day of February next, and the Warning was sent in thither with one of their Number: But the Times growing worse, and some Noise being made by the Managers about that Meeting, it was found convenient to drop the Meeting. This Paper I have not seen, but I hear it was pointedly drawn.

After this till the Revolution, Presbyterian Ministers had few or no Meetings; and I shall have little more to say of them, but that they remained in Retirement, few venturing to preach in the Fields, and some now and then in Houses. And through the following Years I shall have little more to narrate, but a continued Scene of Persecution of Ministers and People, and heavy Oppression of the whole Country. Thus I have given as full an Account of this remarkable Year 1679. as my Materials afforded me.

King's Letter for admitting the Duke of York Council without taking the Oath, November 30.

Report, Dec. 18. about the Militia.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 43. Report about Prisoners.

Letter to G. Dalziel, about Heritors at Paisly, Dec. 23.

A designed Warning against Popery, and Vindication of Presbyterian Principles, formed by a Meeting of Ministers at Paisly.

1680.

C H A P. IV.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1680.

Content of this Chapter.

HIS Year does not afford so much Matter as the last, with respect to publick Commotions and Stirs, but as much, if not more, with relation to what is properly the Design of this Work. The West and South of Scotland continue to be harried with the cruel Soldiers; and in the Entry of the Year the Justiciary fall to work effectually to prosecute Multitudes criminally for the Rising at Bothwell; and not a few were involved in the Prosecution, who were not concerned in the Rising.

The Months of June and July opened a new Scene of Suffering: The taking of a rude and unfinished Paper at Queensferry, and the first Declaration made by a few who distinguished themselves, by their peculiar Sentiments, from the rest of the suffering Presbyterians, produced a severe Proclamation; and the sending of Soldiers westward, to prosecute this, issued in the Scuffle at Airs-moss.

Such who ran to the Heights in the Declaration just now spoken of, shall now, and after this be accounted for by themselves, as having separated from the rest who owned Presbyterian Principles: And I shall essay to give Matter of Fact with relation to them, and the Sufferings they underwent. Several of them suffered unto Blood this Year.

After Airs-moss, and the Executions which followed upon it, Mr. Cargill's singular and unprecedented Excommunication will fall in, and some more publick Deaths for hearing him preach, and owning these Papers he was concerned in.

Those Subjects will afford Matter for several Sections. The Forfeitures and Criminal Trials I am able to give in their proper Places from the Justiciary Books: But several Accounts of Courts held up and down the Country, and the Hardships of particular Persons, I have without Dates, the Papers containing only the Year in general; and sometimes I must gather it from the Circumstances which were in this Year. The Matters of Fact are certain, and any Mistakes as to the Date, will be excused.

S E C T. I.

Of the Persecutions relative to Bothwell Rising, for Non-attendance on the King's Host, and the Forfeitures this Year 1680.

After the Rising at Bothwell, two Kinds of Prosecution follow as to Heritors.

AFTER the large Account of the Rising last Year, it will be proper to begin the History of this with the Procedure of the Managers against such as were alledged to be concerned in it. These were of two Sorts, the Heritors and Gentlemen, who did not come to the Host, and actively concur with the King's Army, and the Heritors and others who were said to be in the West Country Army. I shall give some Account of the rigorous Procedure against both, from the Records.

The Prosecution of such who attended not on the King's Host.

To begin with these who were prosecuted for Non-attendance on the King's Army, it may be observed, that we have several old Laws in Scotland made in the Time of our Feuds, and almost continual Differences among Families and Clans, and when our Kings lived in this Kingdom, which do make the not coming out when called to the King's Host, a great Crime, and ad terrorem severe Punishments are by these Laws knit to it; but I question, if for these Hundred, or hundred and fifty Years, they were put in Execution, till now they are advanced as an Handle against a great many Persons, who from different Reasons came not out against the West Country Army.

Procedure last Year as to this.

Matters were laid last Year for this Prosecution; and, of design, I left them to this Place, and so we must look back a little. After the Rising at Pentland, little or no Stir was made about Heritors Non-attendance upon the Army; but now our Managers resolve upon severer Courses; and when they find that what was to arise from the Estates of such as had been been personally concerned in the Rising, would not answer their Expectations, a more general Oppression of Gentlemen and Heritors is resolved upon. It was presumed, that such who did not heartily joyn the Army, were well affected to Presbyterians, and no Opportunity of bringing such to Trouble was left, especially when it was like to bring in large Sums of Money. Thus I find by the Council-registers, November 6. 'That, at the Desire of the Lords of Justiciary, a Committee is named to meet with them, the Chancellor, Earls of Argyle, Murray, Glencairn, the President, Treasurer-depute, Register, and Advocate, and consider what shall be the Punishment of Absents from the King's Host. November 8. Their Opinion is reported, that the Heritors and Freeholders guilty, should be fined; the most guilty not above Two Years valued Rent, and the least in a fourth Part of their Rent: That those who are fined in the least Degree, be appointed to take the Oath of Allegiance and Declaration, and, if they refuse, that they be fined in the highest Rank.' The Council approve this Report. Thus no small Persecution for Conscience sake, is mixed with this civil Kind of Crime. Those Proposals are transmitted in a Letter to Lawderdale, dated, 1680.

Edinburgh, November 11. 1679.

May it please your Grace,

THE just Abhorrence we have of the last Rebellion, and the too just Fears that the same Principles may occasion the same Distempers, do oblige us to inform his Majesty by your Grace, that if these who went not to assist his Majesty against these Rebels, or deserted the King's Host, be not punished, we cannot promise his Majesty will have any proportional Force against any future Insurrections, since we find, by our great Experience, that these who were at daily Expence and Hazard in that Expedition, are much discouraged, when they see others who stayed at Home, or deserted, suffer nothing; and that such as stayed at Home, from a Principle of Unkindness to his Majesty's Government, do treat the Dutifulness of such as went there, as an officious and unregarded Forwardness: Withal, your Grace may inform his Majesty, that we are resolved to pursue so moderately these Offenders, as may shew that this Punishment should be rather a Warning; these most guilty being not to be fined above Two Years valued Rent, whilst others, who are less guilty, are to be fined at least in a fourth Part of a Year's valued Rent, and which is little more than what they behoved to have spent in the Expedition: Whereas, the Statutes against the Crimes, having left the Punishment to be proportioned according to the several Circumstances that should occur, such Offenders have been punished by Forfeitures, Confiscations, and Banishment. These our Resolutions, tho' taken and formed after much serious Debate, are subjected with all dutiful Respect to his Majesty's Royal Consideration, by Letter, Council to Lawderdale, upon this Head, Nov. 11. 1679.

Your Grace's most humble Servant,

ROTHES Cancel. I. P. D.

The Motions for this heavy Oppression of Multitudes, we see, came from Edinburgh, and were fallen in with at London. Accordingly, I find a Letter from the King upon this Subject, recorded in the Justiciary-registers, of the Date, King's Letter to the Justiciary about Desertion of the Host. Nov. 18.

Whitehall, November 18. 1679.

CHARLES R.

WHEREAS, albeit by express Law, the Deserters from Our Host be punishable by Death, yet We are graciously pleased hereby to allow you to proceed against them in the same Way, and to the same Pains and Punishments as you are resolved to proceed against the guiltiest of such as did not come to Our Host: For doing whereof this shall be your Warrant.

LAWDERDALE.

By the Proclamations issued out during the Rising, the Absents from the Host were to be punished as Deserters of it; but that being Death by some antiquated Laws, and it not being Blood but Money, a good many about Edinburgh were at this Time wanting. This Letter was procured with relation to Deserters, who, I suppose, were not many, in the ordinary Sense of the Word; and this was a Preface to what followed as to the Absents.

That same Day, a Letter is writ to the Council, approving the Proposal in all Points, which they make in theirs of the 11. and so it needs not be insert here. When they are thus warranted to begin their Finings upon this Head, they go roundly to Work, and Letters are writ writ to the Sheriffs in each Shire, that they send in the Books of Valuation, or attested Copies of them to Edinburgh; and the Officers of the Army are appointed to send in Lists of the Heritors in each Shire, who did not attend the King's Host.

King's Letter to the Council about Absents.

1680.

In December and January, Citations are ordered to be given to some Hundreds of Gentlemen, Heritors, and Freeholders, by the Justiciary: It took some Time before the Lists could be made up, and the Witnesses condescended on, and the Managers themselves seem not to be fully agreed, and severals were for moderate Courses, Gentlemen's Excuses being found many of them highly reasonable for not attending Mutters, and coming to the Host. But the violent Party prevailed.

Feb. 23. great Numbers of Gentlemen
stung before the Justiciary, for Absence
from the Host.

Thus, February 23. a great many considerable Gentlemen, Heritors, and Fenars are pannelled before the Justiciary for Absence from the Host, and receive their Indictment. Good Numbers of the ablest Lawyers were employed by the Gentlemen, and their Defences are long, and Pleadings very large upon the Matter in general, and the particular Circumstances of the Pannels. The Advocate gives large Replies, and enforces his Reasonings with the Weight of the Letter from the King to the Council upon this Head, dated November 18. which was noticed just now.

Persons fined.

This Argument from a Resolution in Council, backed with Royal Approbation, no doubt was unanswerable; and so the Lords give Sentence against the Gentlemen. I cannot insert all who were fined now and afterwards; only, for a Tait at this Time, James Young of Kirkcoun is fined in 1870 Pounds Scots, of Pitlochrie in 700 Pounds, Alexander Lurhan of Largo in 1850 Pounds, David Balcanquhal of that ilk in 500 Pounds, Alexander Nairn of Samford in 294 Pounds, George Mencrief of Redie in 300 Pounds, James Weems in Glen-corsoun in 175 Pounds, and Multitudes of others.

More in March.

At other Diets of the Justiciary in February, I find vast Numbers of Gentlemen and Heritors in the Shires of Lathian, the Merse, and other Places, pannelled, and more than a Hundred of them fined in very considerable Sums; and, towards the End of March, the Lords are taken up in the same Work: Sentences are past against as many as in February, if not more, and Discharges are produced of the Payment of former Fines, some of them several Thousand Pounds.

This Matter is remitted from the Justiciary,
and put in the Council's Hands
by a Letter from the King, June 1.

Upon the 26 of July, this Matter of Absence from the King's Host, is taken out of the Hands of the Justiciary, and put in the Hands of the Council. This was a more arbitrary Court, and gave not themselves the Trouble of Lawyers, and legal Defences. That Day, I find the Advocate produced a Letter from the King, of the Date,

Windsor, June 1. 1680.

CHARLES R.

Right Trusty, &c. We are sensible of the small Effects that have followed by the Trial of such who have been absent from Our Host, before the Justiciary; and being informed that Summons are issued out to cite many others through the Shires for that Crime, it is now Our Will and Pleasure, that they be proceeded against, not criminally, but by way of Fining, according to the Degrees of their Guilt, not admitting frivolous Excuses for Absence or Desertion, which We look upon as Preparatives of dangerous Consequence to Our Service. We desire none beneath 12ay be troubled with Trials or Citations, these only excepted who are known to be notoriously disaffected to Our Government in Church and State: For tho' We are at this Time graciously pleased to excuse them from a criminal Process, yet We will not suffer Absents and Deserters to escape without some Punishment by way of Fining, which We desire you to signify to Our Justice-court. So We bid you, &c.

How it came to pass that such a Letter as this, of the Date, June 1. was not intimated, till July 26. I shall not enquire; certainly some Body or other found their Advantage by it. This Letter is intimated and recorded in the criminal Books, and all Processes in Dependence before them are deserted, and in their Room succeed the Processes for Forfeiture of Life after Airs-moss.

Council's Procedure Many fined.

When this Matter comes before the Council, they go closely to work, and their Registers for some Months are mostly taken up with those Processes. Many Hundreds are cited before them, the Diets of some are continued, others are deserted (not without Compositions and Money privately given.) Multitudes are fined in Absence, and some declared fugitive. To enter upon Particulars would swell this Chapter too much. Let me give only a few Instances. "July 13. Dundas of Borthwick is fined in a Year's Rent. August 1. "the Laird of Riddel's Excuses for Absence not sustained, he is fined in two Years Rent, "which is 6000 Pounds Scots; George Douglas of Bonjedburgh fined in 6000 Pounds Scots; " Ker of Cherrytrees in 3000 Merks; James Scot of Thiristane in 2776 Pounds; Francis Scot of Greenhill in 800 Pounds. 'Tis noticed, that they all refused the Declaration, probably otherwise they might have had their Excuses sustained, or been fined vastly down " of

“ of those Sums; and so they are properly Sufferers for their Opinion in point of Pre-“ lacy. August 9. the following Persons in Berwick Shire, are fined for Absence from the “ Host; Patrick Wardlaw in 4000 Pounds Scots, Robert Brown of Blackburn 1200 Pounds, “ Pringle of Greenknow 1500 Pounds, Alexander Hume in St. Bathans 200 Pounds, Samuel “ Spence 400 Pounds, Clappertoun of Wylliecleugh 1000 Merks, George Hume of Bassenden “ 1000 Merks. ” They are all ordained to pay in Six Days. But particular Instances would be endless. Nov. 11. I find the Council appoint, “ That Caption be executed with Con“ currence of Parties of Soldiers, for the Fines of the Absents from the Host; that their “ Estates be gifted in name of his Majesty’s Cash-keeper; that in Time coming, all found “ guilty of Absence shall be kept in Custody till they pay the Fine. ” This obliged many not to compare, and then the Soldiers execute the Sentence pronounced in Absence.

1680.

I come now forward to give an Account of the Forfeitures this Year, palled in great Numbers upon Presbyterian Gentlemen and others, for their alledged being at Bothwell. All almost I can do is to insert their bare Names from the Justiciary Books, wanting Informations as to the Circumstances of most of these Gentlemen. Only it may be noticed in the general, that most of these Forfeitures were palled in Absence, and upon very slight and lame Probation, and Multitudes of them in common Course, as it were like Bills of Suspension before the Ordinary; yet the Time was, when the Justice Court not long ago scrupled upon such like Proceedings.

Account of Forfeitures of Heritors alleged to be at Bothwell this Year.

The Galloway Gentlemen, who they alledged were at Bothwell, were the First Sacrifices.
 Thus I find, February 18. Patrick Macdonald of Freugh is called, having been cited before.
 His Name is in the Proclamation excepting Persons out of the Indemnity, as likewise, that of most of the rest forfeited this Month; and the Managers were well assured they would not compare, and their Citation was really a Jest, after they were thus excepted and marked out for Ruin. In absence they have Witnesses led against them, generally speaking, Soldiers and Spies, who had been hired to traffick up and down the Country. Some de-pone they saw Freugh at Sanquhar a Commander of a Body of Four or Five hundred Men in Arms, as they came to Bothwell. Two Witnesses depone they saw him at Hamiltoun Muir among the Rebels. The Sentence runs, That when taken, he shall be executed and demeaned as a Traitor, and his Heritage, Goods and Gear be forfeited to his Majesty’s Use.

Gentlemen in Galloway
 Macdonald of Freugh.

Upon February 18. Mr. William Fergusson of Kaitloch, Alexander Gordons elder and younger of Earlstoun, James Gordon younger of Craichlaw, William Gordon of Curvennan, Patrick Dunbar of Machrimoir, and Migbie of Larg, are called. It hath been remarked before, that Earlstoun elder was killed about the Time of the Defeat: This good Man is prosecuted after his Death, of which we shall meet with more Instances. The prepared Witnesses depone as to their Accession to the Rebellion, and they all are forfeited, as above, in common Form, except Migbie of Larg, who is continued until the Second Munday of June; the Reason of this I know not.

Fergusson of Kaitloch, Earl-stoun, Craichlaw, Curvennan, Machrimoir, Larg.

Another Process of Forfeiture is commenced in the End of June, and ended July 6. against the following Persons, John Bell of Whiteside, John Gibson of Auchinchyne, son younger of Inglisfoun, Gordon of Dundee, Grier of Dalgoner, Smith of Kilroy, McClellan of Barmagechan, Thomas Bogle of Bogles-hole, Baird younger of Dun- geon-hill, Gordon of Craig, Lennox of Irelandtoun, Gordon of Bar-harrow, John Fullartoun of Auchinhare, David McCulloch Son to Ardwel, William Whitehead of Milt-house, John Welsh of Cornley, Neilson of Corsack, Robert McClellan of Barfob, Samuel McClellan his Brother, Fullartoun of Nether-mill, George McKartney of Llaiket, Gordon of Garrerie, Gordon of Knock-gray, Herron of Little-park, Gordon of Holm, Gordon of Overbar, John Mcnaught of Culquhad, Murdoch, alias Laird Murdoch, and John Binning of Dalvennan.

Whiteside, Auchinchyne, Dundee,
 Dalgoner, Smith
 of Kilroy, Barmagechan, Dundee, Dungeon-hill, Craig, Irelandtoun, Bar-harrow, John Fullartoun, Auchinhare,
 David McCulloch,
 William Whitehead,
 John Welsh, Cornley,
 Neilson, Corsack,
 Robert McClellan,
 Barfob, Samuel McClellan, Nether-mill,
 Black, Garrerie, Knock-gray, Little-
 park, Holm, Overbar, Culquhad, Murdoch,
 Dalvennan.

The Libel and Indictment against these Persons, is in the common Form, murdering the Archbishop, tho’, I dare say, none of them knew any Thing of it, burning the King’s Laws, Accession to the Rebellion last Year, and all of them are absent. Thomas Bogle, and Laird of Dungeon-hill are libelled as the rest, and likewise for attacking Major Johnstoun, which they were intirely free of, and no Probation is adduced. None of the Witnesses almost depone that they saw them in the Rebellion, nor in Arms at Hamiltoun Muir, and I know well feveral of them were not in the Rebellion. Their Depositions run, that they saw them with the Rebels, at Glasgow, Air, Wigtoun, and other Places; and severals depone they had no Arms. Cannon of Mardrogat is Witness against most of the Galloway Gentlemen. None of them were present, and, it seems, the Judges were not very nice as to Probation. The Affize is not particular in the Verdict, but find the Pannels, in the general, guilty of the Crimes libelled. And they are all forfeited, as above.

At most of these Diets of the Justiciary, I find vast Numbers of others, whom I take to be smaller Feuars, upon their Absence declared Fugitives, and it would be endless to set them down; the general Fugitive Roll shall be insert afterwards, when it comes by order to be published. The smaller Heritors, it seems, they had not yet Leisure for; and they were Multitudes of Feuars declared fugitive.

1680.

were left to the Mercy of the Sequestrators, Donators, and the Soldiers who were going up and down the Country. It is Gentlemen of some better Fortunes they begin with, and their Way was very easy, to forfeit in Absence. The Managers had some more Trouble how to divide their Estates, and to whom to make over the Gifts of their Forfeiture, there were so many putting in their Claims, and pleading Merit when so much was a dividing.

Alexander Ross
sentenced to die, but gets a Remission.

July 19. I find another Process intended against one, who either had surrendered, or had been taken. Alexander Ross, Major in the Rebels Army last Year, is indicted in common Form, for being in the Rebellion, and at Conventicles since. I have no other Accounts of this Person, but what is in the Registers. The Advocate adduces his own signed Confession, June 10. bearing, that June 1679. he had been in Arms with the Rebels, and that he disarmed David Cunningham one of the King's Guards, and took his Horse and Arms from him at his own House in Monkland, and that he was at Bothwell. The Lords sentence him to be hanged at the Cross of Edinburgh, September 8. and forfeit his Heritage, Goods and Gear. But, it seems, he was insured of his Life; for I find, August 7. they reprieve him to a long Day, upon his casting himself upon the King's Mercy by a Petition, and declaring his Willingness to take the Oaths and Bond, and intercede for a Remission to him.

Hunter of Col-
quhassen forfeited.

These are all the Forfeitures I have noticed this Year from the Registers; 'tis possible I may have overlooked some. By written Accounts from Galloway, I find, that the Year after Bothwell. Alexander Hunter of Colquhassen in the Parish of Oldluc in Galloway, who had been at Bothwell, was forfeited, and his Estate was given to the Countess of Nithsdale a profest Papist, and she and hers possessed it till the Year 1689.

Hay of Ard- wallen.

Another Heritor near by him, Alexander Hay of Ardwallen, was forfeited for being at Bothwell, and his Lands given to the Popish Family of Nithsdale. And which was yet a greater Severity, Ardwallen's Mother, a pious old Gentlewoman of about Eighty Years of Age, was imprisoned for mere Nonconformity, and not keeping the Church; and no other Crime could be laid to her Charge: Yea, she was for some time kept close Prisoner in Dumfries Tolbooth, to the great Danger of her Life in her extreme old Age. She likewise is forfeited, upon the Matter, of all she had; for her Annuity and Liferent out of the Estate was not reserved, but it was wholly given to the Family of Nithsdale.

Their Estates and those of many others given to Papists.

I find by these same Accounts, that a great many other forfeited Estates of Presbyterian Gentlemen in that Country, were gifted to that Family. It was indeed low, and Roman Catholick, and the Duke of Tork and his Creatures were sure to look after their Friends: But what a poor Pass was the Reformation at in Scotland, when religious and pious Peoples Estates were violently taken from them under Colour of Law, for their refusing to go over their Light, and the Dictates of their Conscience agreeable to Scripture, and given to Papists and bigotted Idolaters! This was one of the Steps among others, now very fast taking for the Reintroduction of Popery, by the Door of this Slavery, and those arbitrary Measures the Subjects were under.

S E C T. II.

Of the more general Procedure of the Council relative to Presbyterians this Year, the Repeal of the Third Indulgence, and other Hardships on them.

HAVING gone through the Prosecutions before the Criminal Court, I come next to give a View of what I meet with in the Council Registers; what concerns particular Sufferers I shall leave to the following Section, and confine my self very much here to what they did that had a more general Influence, and give Things just in the Order they stand in the Registers.

Commission to discover Heritors who were at Both-
well, in the Shires of Air,
Lanerk, Ren-
frew, and Dum- bartoun.

The Council, January 6. 'grant full Power and Commission to the Earl of Glencairn, Lord Ross, General Dalziel, or any fit Persons in the Army, or others they shall think fit to intrust, for the Shires of Air, Lanerk, Renfrew, and Dumbartoun, to use their best and exact Diligence to get exact Lists of the haill Heritors within the said Bounds, who were in the Rebellion, and Witnesses that can prove the same against them, with Proofs that they are Heritors, and to send in Lists to the Council or Advocate, with Power to call before them the Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regalities, or their Deputes, Magistrates of Burghs, Ministers of Parishes, or any Persons whatsoever they shall be informed can make best Discovery of the said Rebels or Witnesses, with Power to examine them upon Oath, or not, as they see Cause; with Power to them, if the Witnesses delated refuse to compare, or comparing to declare, to imprison their Persons, and put them under Caution to compare before the Council under reasonable Penalties.' And all Magistrates, &c. are appointed to concur. The like Commission is granted to the Earl of Queensberry, Sir Robert Dalziel of Glena, and Claverhouse, or any Two of them, and such as they shall appoint, for the Shires of Dumfries and Wigtoun, and the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and Annandale; and the same for the Merse and Teviotdale, to the Lairds of Hayning, Meldrum, and Henry Ker of Gyaden; and March 4. these get the Shires of Berwick and Roxburgh added.

1680.

*Dumfries and Galloway.
Merse and Teviotdale.*

Conventicles
in Monteith.

January 29. upon Information of several Field-conventicles in the Shire of Monteith, the Council grant full Power to the Earl of Monteith to dissipate them, and apprehend and imprison the Preachers till they be brought to a Trial. Except Mrs. Cargill and Cameron, it was very few Presbyterian Ministers preached in the Fields, while the Third Indulgence lasted, and I take it to be them who are now in Monteith.

March 6. the Council write a Letter to Alexander Mackenzie, Sheriff-depute of Ross, to suppress Conventicles in that Shire; the Letter is of a singular Strain and Stile, and therefore I give some Passages from it. After they have taken Notice of the King's Care to suppress Conventicles, and the Favours he has granted to these Places infected with them, they observe that the Shire of Ross is looked upon as untainted, and add, 'Yet some bold and presumptuous Persons, setting aside all Fear of God and Respect to their Sovereign and his Laws, have adventured to intrude themselves in a pretended Ministry, and thereby to debauch weak Men and silly Women, drawing them into those rebellious Methods, particularly one Mr. Denoon and Mr. Hepburn, we cannot expect but you will use all Diligence to apprehend them or others, and dissipate their Meeting with all Severity and Diligence.' So virulent a Stile may let us in to guess how violent their Actings at this Time were. Upon the 12 of March, they write another Letter to the Earl of Murray upon the same Head, and intreat him to use all Diligence to preserve the Northern Shires from this Infection.

Letter to the Sheriff-depute
of Ross, about Conventicles there.

March 12. the Council renew their Appointment of a Committee for publick Affairs; there had been none since March last Year, and nominate the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Marquis of Athole, Earl of Murray, Bishop of Edinburgh, Lord Elphinstoun, Treasurer-depute, Register, Viscount of Tarbet, Lundin, Mr. Maitland, or any Three of them to meet at such Diets as they think fit, and take effectual Courses for suppressing Field-conventicles, and other Disorders, with all the Powers former Committees had; and that they correspond with the General with Power to call the Council. That same Day being informed that Field-conventicles abound, especially betwixt the Shires of Edinburgh, Berwick, and Peebles, they desire the General to have a Squade of Guards ready to suppress them.

Nomination of a Committee
for publick
Affairs.

These Field-conventicles they are so much alarmed with, as far as I can observe from other Papers, were very few, and almost only by Mrs. Cargill and Cameron, in remote Parts where they were obliged to wander; yet they draw forth a very severe Letter from the Council to Lawderdale, April 8. with a Proposal for Justiciary Commissions to be granted, even to single Persons who were to be nominated by themselves. I insert it here from the Registers:

Council Letter
April 8. about Justiciary
Commission to several Persons.

Edinburgh, April 8. 1680.

May it please your Grace;

Notwithstanding of his Majesty's Indemnities and Indulgences granted to the Fanaticks here, they are running out again to Field-conventicles, in several Places of the Kingdom, which his Majesty's Laws construct to be Rendevouzes of Rebellion, and which have been found in Experience since these Acts, to be themselves actual Rebellion, those Armies which rose in the Years 1666 and 1679. being only running and continued Field-conventicles; as also we find that very many of those who were at Bothwell-bridge, have refused to take the Bond for living peaceably, notwithstanding of his Majesty's repeated Offers for securing their Life upon that Condition, and that those who have taken the Bond do actually run to Field-conventicles, and do thereby forfeit the Act of Indemnity, which was granted to them upon so easy a Condition, as the not going to Field-conventicles; and therefore though we be very far from all cruel Designs, yet our Respect to his Majesty's Laws, our Desire to secure the Government, and the Hopes we justly have, that just Severity against some of these Rebels will procure Peace to his Majesty's good Subjects, have prevailed with us to offer our Opinion to his Majesty, that Commissions of Justiciary may be granted for punishing of them, since his Majesty's Justice-court at Edinburgh sits not in Time of Vacance, and when they sit the next Session they will have no Time for such Pursuits, because of Processes already depending before them, against such Heritors and Ministers as were at the Rebellion, and such as were absent from the Host. The Vanity likewise of bearing a Testimony at Edinburgh, and the Numbers of these who keep them up and assist them in those foolish Humours there, do make Processes and Punishment less effectual at Edinburgh than elsewhere. We have therefore sent inclosed the Draught of Two several Commissions, some Articles to the General drawn forth of the Exceptions contained in his Majesty's Act of Indemnity, to be considered by his Majesty; and his Ma-

1680. ' jesty's Resolutions shall be humbly acquiesced in, and obeyed by your Grace's affectionate friends.'

Alexander Glasguensis, Charles Maitland, Douglas, Thomas Murray,
 Murray, George Mackenzie,
 Linlithgow, Thomas Wallace,
 Elphinstoun, James Fowles.
 Ross,

Copy of the Commissions.
 App. N<sup>o</sup>. 44.

Articles for the General anent
 the King's Enemies.

The Copy of the Commission of Justiciary, and Commission for trying of Field-conventicles and other Disorders, stand in the Appendix, N<sup>o</sup>. 44.
 The Letter mentions likewise the Draught of some Articles for the General, extracted from the Exceptions in the Indemnity; these follow in the Registers, and deserve a Room here. They have this remarkable Title.

Articles anent those Persons understood to be the King's Enemies, mentioned, &c.

- THE Persons understood to be the King's Enemies and to be attacked by the King's Forces wherever they can be found, and imprisoned till they be brought to Justice, or to be killed in case of Resistance of the King's Forces, are,
1. All such as are forfeited by the Parliament, or Criminal Court.
  2. All Heritors and Ministers, who have been in the late Rebellion.
  3. All Heritors who have contributed by levying of Men or Money to the late Rebellion.
  4. All others who were in the Rebellion, who have not accepted of the Benefit of the King's Indemnity, by taking the Bond.
  5. All such as have been in the Rebellion, and have taken the Bond, and yet have been at Field-conventicles since the Twenty seventh of July last.
  6. All such as have been in the Rebellion, and have taken the Bond, and yet have done Violence to the orthodox Clergy.
  7. All such as are guilty of Assassinations, especially of the Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews.
  8. All such as shall be found at Field-conventicles in Arms.
  9. All such as are denounced Rebels for being at the Rebellion before the Circuit Court, since the Act of Indemnity.
  10. All Refettors of Rebels, or Persons declared Fugitives for Rebellion, and such as have refet the Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews.
  11. These who being found at Field-conventicles, and refusing to be taken by the King's Forces, and make Resistance.

Council's Letter
 May 6. about Garifons.

Those Proposals and severe Orders need no Commentary; they were cheerfully gone into at London, as we shall hear, if once I had taken Notice of another oppressive Proposal made by the Council, in a Letter to the King, May 6. about Garifons. The Letter it self follows.

Edinburgh, May 6.

May it please your Sacred Majesty,

YOUR Majesty's Forces being for the Security of your Government to march through such Places of the Kingdom as shall be thought fit, it has been proposed to us, that in order to the Defence of the western Shires, during the Absence of your Forces, some Places be garisoned to prevent the surprizing of such as are to be left behind, and to the end that the Motions of such as are to be employed for your Service in those Shires on particular Occasions, may not be known or divulged, as they ordinarily are when any of your Forces are to march out of Towns or open Quarters, the Places fit for such Garifons being Greenlaw, and Balgrogan in Galloway, Newtown near Air, Balquhan in Carrick, the House of Dean near Kilmarnock, these Three being in the Shire of Air, and the Castle of Streven or Evandale in Lanerk Shire: We thought it therefore our Duty to remit the Expedient to your Royal Majesty's Consideration, that your Pleasure may be known, and your Authority interposed, to which we shall give ready Obedience; and since several Lands have fallen in your Majesty's Hands, by the Forfeiture of those who have been in the late Rebellion, we humbly move that your Majesty may give Order, that no Gifts of any of these Forfeitures pass in your Exchequer, and that none of your Seals be appended to any such Gifts, but with exprefs Refervation to your Majesty of the Mansion-houses, Castles, Towers, or Fortalices standing upon the said Lands, to which the Donators shall be only heritable Keepers, and upon exprefs Condition that it shall be lawful to your Majesty jeſty to make Forts or Citadels upon any of the ſaid Lands, according as you and your Royal Succedors ſhall think fit, at any Time hereafter. We are your Maſteſty's moſt humble, 1680.

moſt faithful, and moſt obedient Subjects and Servants, &c.

June 3. the Council receive the King's Answer as to both thoſe Letters, dated May 20. King's Answer May 20. approving all.
which I need not infer, ſince 'tis juſt an Approbation of every Thing propoſed in the very Terms of their Letters. He thanks them for their Care, orders them to fill up the Blanks in the Commissions with fit Perſons, and appoints them to give timely Warning to the Owners of the Houſes where the Garriſons are to be.

The next remarkable Thing that offers, is the Overturning the ſhort-lived Third Indulgence; and when the Managers are going on ſo ſeverely againſt Presbyterians, we can expect Nothing leſs. Theſe Favours were ſtill very diſpleaſing to the Prelates, and I doubt not but earneſt Application was made to the Court to be rid of this. Accordingly, June 10. the Council receive the following Letter from the King.

Windſor-caſtle, May 14.

CHARLES R.

Right Truſty, &c. We greet you well. Foraſmuch as by Our Proclamation of the 29 of June laſt paſt, We did, from our tender Deſire to reclaim ſuch of Our Subjects, as have been misled by Ignorance or blind Zeal, ſuſpend the Execution of all Laws againſt all ſuch as frequent Houſe-conventicles within the Bounds, and upon the Limitations therein expreſſed, ordaining all ſuch as ſhould be licensed to preach by Our Indulgence, to ſtand Surety to you for their peaceable Behaviour; by which unparalleled Clemency and Tenderneſs (after a total Suppreſſion of the late Rebellion) We might reaſonably have expected that their Minds being eaſed, they ſhould have been brought to a meek and quiet Submission to Our Government, and humble Obedience to Our Laws: Yet notwithstanding of all their Inſolencies, Murders and Treafons, and Our gracious Indemnities and Indulgences, ſuch is the Perverſeneſs of that ſchiſmatical and rebellious Generation, that they in Contempt of Our greateſt Condeſcensions and Favours, continue to run out to Field-conventicles in ſeveral Parts of that Our Kingdom, which, as Our Laws have declared, ſo in Experience have they been found to be the Rendezvous of Rebellion; their Inſurrections againſt Us and Our Authority, in the Years 1666 and 1679. have been Nothing elſe, ſave ſo many running and continued Field-conventicles, and, by Force and Violence, to oppoſe the legal Settlement of regular Miniſters, beating, ſtoning, and wounding them in a moſt ſavage and barbarous Manner, and to invade the Pulpits of orthodox Miniſters, preaching and baptizing in avowed Conventicles, in Our capital City of Edinburgh. By all which inſupportable and unneceſſary Provocations, they having notoriously forfeited Our Favour and Indulgence, none could judge it ſeverity, to maintain Our Authority and Laws by ſuch effectual Courſes, as ſhould ruine that unſatiſfiable and ungovernable Tribe and Faction: Yet, being willing to evidence unto all the World, Our earneſt Deſire to reduce them to Quiet and Obedience, by mild and gentle Methods, or to render them utterly inexcusable, We do reſolve for ſome Time to continue that Our Indulgence unto them, during Our Royal Pleaſure, if peradventure We may yet find any good Effects produced thereby upon them; only, for your better diſpenſing and regulating thereof (leſt the Gangrene ſpread too far) We have thought fit to ſend you the incloſed Inſtructions (of the Date of theſe Preſents) to which We expect your ready and exact Compliance. And, as We cannot but approve your Appointing of ſuch nonconform Miniſters, as ſhall be licensed by you, to appear at your Bar to receive their Warrants, ſo We are very well pleaſed with your late Procedure againſt Gilbert Rule (a nonconformiſt Miniſter) whom you have ſent a Priſoner to the Baſt, for his insolent Uſurping a Pulpit in Our City of Edinburgh. And at this Time, as upon all Occaſions, We cannot but expreſs Our firm Reſolution to maintain and inviolably preſerve the ſacred Order of Epiſcopacy, to the Subverſion whereof Nothing tends more, than the Contempt too frequently and injuriouſly thrown upon Our Biſhops: Therefore, We do heartily recommend unto you, as your beſt Service unto Us, your countenancing, and encouraging, and ſupporting of them, in their Perſons, Credit and Authority, the leſſening whereof We do juſtly eſteem a weakning of Our Government. We muſt alſo recommend Our orderly and orthodox Presbyters, to your Care and Protection, and that you particularly require and command all Magiſtrates, in their ſeveral Jurifdictions, to own and aſſiſt them in the Exerciſe of Diſcipline, againſt ſcandalous Offenders, and in all the other Parts of their Function, which We will take as very acceptable Service done unto Us. And ſo We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at Windſor-caſtle the 14 Day of May 1680. and of Our Reign the 32 Year.

By His Maſteſty's Command,

LAWDERDALE

1680.

Instructions regulating the Indulgence.

The Instructions mentioned in this Letter, likewise follow from the Registers.

CHARLES R.

Instructions to Our Privy Council of Our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, for regulating the Indulgence.

1st. You are not to suffer any Nonconformist to preach, who is banished out of any Parish or Corporation in England, nor any who, since the last Indemnity, hath preached at such Meetings, as in Construction of Law are Field-conventicles, or who, since that Time, have preached in Places or Cities which are excepted in Our Proclamation of the 29 June last past. You are not to license any to preach, who cannot verify his Ordination to be antecedent to the said 29 June last past. As you are to suffer none to preach at House-meetings who are not licensed by you, or do not appear at your Bar to receive your Licence, so you must license none to preach in any of the Shires on the North-side of the River Tay, but are strictly to put Our Laws in Execution against all such Delinquents. And further, you are carefully to cause all such Meeting-houses as are or have been erected without your Warrant, for Preachers unlicensed by you to serve therein, to be pulled down.

2<sup>dly</sup>. You are to allow no House-conventicles, nor Meeting-houses to be set up for any nonconform Preacher, at any nearer Distance than of a Mile, to any Parish-church where a regular Incumbent serves; and if any such be erected already within a lesser Distance, as particularly at Newbottle, you are to cause pull them down immediately.

3<sup>dly</sup>. You are to grant Licence to none of the nonconform Preachers, to be settled or exercise any Part of the Ministry, in that Parish whereof he was formerly Minister, lest, upon the Pretence of an indissoluble Relation of that People to their old Minister, they totally abandon their orthodox and orderly Pastor, settled by Law amongst them.

4<sup>thly</sup>. You are to take Care to restrain such nonconform Preachers as you license, from preaching in any other Parish, than in that to which they are indulged, and from baptizing the Children of any save those of the Congregations for which they are licensed. And seeing, by Our Laws, the Jurisdiction of the Church is to be managed by Our Bishops, and those commissioned by them, you are to restrain those Nonconformists from exercising of Church-discipline; and for avoiding of Confusion in the Records of Marriages, We do require you to inhibit and restrain them from marrying any Persons, We being resolved to leave the Discipline and Marryings of People, entirely to the respective regular Ministers, to whose Parishes the Persons concerned do belong; and you are to esteem the Breach of any Part of this fourth Article, an unpeaceable Behaviour, by which their Sureties are to forfeit their Bonds, if they continue after Intimation.

5<sup>thly</sup>. You are to take special Care not to license any nonconform Preacher in any Parish, where the Generality, the chief and intelligent Persons, are regular and orderly, since We do not intend to break or divide orderly Parishes, to gratify a few inconsiderable, ignorant, and factious People.

6<sup>thly</sup>. You are most exemplarily to punish such indulged or nonconform Preachers, as shall be found to keep classical Meetings in pretended Presbyteries or Synods, these being the grand Nurseries of Schism and Sedition, wherein usually they usurp the Power of Discipline, and privately try, license and ordain schismatical Preachers, and keep up ill Correspondences, to the endangering of Our Government.

7<sup>thly</sup>. You are carefully to put in Execution your Acts for removing the Families of irregular outed Ministers, out of the Cities of Edinburgh, St. Andrews, and Glasgow, these being usually the Resorts of disaffected Persons, and the secret Nurseries of Schism and Trouble.

8<sup>thly</sup>. And in regard, by Our Proclamation of the 29 Day of June last past, We have declared Our firm Resolution, not to suffer the chief Seat of Our Government, to be pestered with Irregularities, and therefore would not allow any nonconform Preacher to be licensed to preach in Our City of Edinburgh, nor within Two Miles round about it: And now having found by Experience, that this Distance is not sufficient to preserve that Our City from the Danger of Infection, by reason that the Citizens and others flock out in Multitudes to those irregular Meetings, when they are kept at nearer Distances, whereby the City is still in Hazard to be corrupted in its Religion and Loyalty: We do therefore require you to license none of these nonconform Preachers, to preach in Our said City, nor within Twelve Miles Distance therefrom; and if any such be already licensed by you in any Parish nearer than Twelve Miles to Edinburgh, you are immediately to withdraw your Licence, and to cause shut up the Meeting-house, and to order the Preacher so licensed to preach no more within the Distance aforesaid.

9<sup>thly</sup>. And seeing We are informed, that the regular Ministers in Galloway, and some other western Places, are exposed to great Danger, from the Fury of some blind Zealors among whom they serve, and that even the Necessaries of Life, and the Help of Servants and Mechanicks are denied unto them for their Money, you are, in a most particular Manner to consider their present Case, and to consult their Protection, and the Security of their Persons in the best Manner, and to see that the Sheriffs, Justices, and other Magistrates be careful to have them defended and secured in their Persons and Goods, and the Necessaries for Living furnished and supplied unto them at the usual and ordinary Rates of the Country, to the end they may be effectually relieved, and that Our ancient Kingdom may be vindicated from any just Imputation of so great and barbarous Inhumanity. Given at Our Court at Windsor-castle, the 14 Day of May 1680. and of Our Reign the 32 Year.

1680.

By His Majesty's Command,

LAWDERDALE.

The Reader will easily perceive that these Instructions are a material Repeal of the Indulgence: Many of them are flat Contradictions to the King's Letter, July 11. 1679. and all of them are contrived to clog Presbyterian Ministers and People; and the Council very soon begin to bear hard upon them. That same very Day, they recall Mr. George Johnstoun's Licence at Newbottle, and order one of the Maces to intimate so much to him, and order the Sheriff of Edinburgh to demolish the Meeting-house, and see that no Meeting be kept there next Lord's Day. June 15. the Lord Haltoun reports it was done, and the Timber and Seats were sold at Ten Pounds Sterling, a Hundred Pounds Scots of which he gave to the Poor of the Parish, and the rest to the Persons employed in executing the Orders.

Remarks upon them.

June 17. The Council return an Account of their Diligence, in a Letter to the King, which follows.

Council's Return, June 17.

Edinburgh, June 17. 1680.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

THE Grief arising from the dissolute Looseness of such as abstract themselves from public Ordinances, and the Fears we had of your Majesty's Subjects being seduced and abused by Preachers, whose Principles, as to your Government, we had so just Reason to suspect, are much lessened by the Care we find your Majesty takes of our Condition, and particularly by your Majesty's late Letter, regulating the late Indulgence, which, in its former Latitude, produced such insufferable Disorders; and having appointed a Committee, and considered seriously that Report, upon which they had taken so much Pains, we have approved what was offered by them for effectuating your Majesty's Commands, and have already demolished one of these Meeting-houses, and sent Orders for restraining others: And in all Things which may maintain the present Government of the Church, that great Support of Monarchy, and necessary Fence of our Safety and Quiet, as to all other Things relating to your Royal Government, your Majesty may expect cordial Endeavours of,

May it please your sacred Majesty,

Your Majesty's most faithful, most humble, and most obedient Subjects and Servants,

Alexander St. Andrews,	Ja. Dalrymple,
Athole,	Char. Maitland,
Douglas,	R. Maitland,
Marishal,	Jam. Fowles,
Balcarras,	Geo. Mackenzie,
Cathness,	Wauchop,
Jo. Edinburgen.	Geo. Gordon.
Elphinstoun,

To make good their Professions as to the Church, they, at the same Time, discharge Meeting-houses in most Places where they were allowed, as coming under the above Regulations. The Earl of Wigtoun is ordered to demolish the Meeting-house in Kiltpatrick, as being within a Mile of the Kirk. The same Orders are given to others, as to these in the Parishes of Longtoun, Prestonhaugh, Orwal, Cires; and the Meeting-houses in Newburn, Stentoun, and Kinneuchar, are to be shut up, as not licensed. And, July 24. the Magistrates of Glasgow are ordered, in pursuance of the foresaid Regulations, forthwith to turn all nonconformists

Meeting-houses accordingly suppressed

1680.

Nomination of Council for publick Air fares.New Orders about that at Bothwell, Aug.
10.

formist Preachers out of Town, and suffer none of them to live within a Mile of them. Those Orders brought many worthy Persons to no small Difficulties.

August 4. Another Committee for publick Affairs is nominate, the Archbishop of St. Andrews, the Earl of Linlithgow, Bishop of Edinburgh, President, Colington, Lundin, Niddry, with the Officers of State, or any Three of them, with the former Powers.

The former Endeavours for discovering those concerned in Bothwell, are enforced with new Orders. August 10. Letters are writ to the Sheriffs of Fife, Lanerk, Air, Wigtoun, and Stirling. 'The Council understanding there are divers Persons lurking in your Shire, who were in the Rebellion, and are reset, do require you to enquire thereinto, and appoint Persons in the several Parishes, and do every Thing for that effect, and to send in a List of them, their Resetters, and Witnelles, to the Advocate, betwixt and October.'

At that same Diet they came to the following Resolution. 'The Lords of Council have thought fit, for enquiring into the Disorders of the western Shires, preventing Inconveniences, and to the end it may be known who can prove against the Kebels and their Resetters, and that neither the Guilty may escape, nor the Innocent be brought to Trouble, hereby to grant full Power and Authority to General Dalziel, the Marquis of Montrose, Earls of Mar, Glencairn, Linlithgow, Airly, and Dundonald, Lord Ross, or any Three of them, to cite before them, or apprehend and take the Depositions upon Oath, of all such Persons as they shall think fit to adduce as Witnesses against Persons guilty of Disorders in the western Shires, and to transmit their Opinion to the Council, anent such as may be proving Witnesses; and to send Prisoners to Edinburgh, such as appear to have been in the Rebellion, and are not comprehended in the Indemnity, and their Resetters; and to take Caution of the Witnesses to compear at a certain Day, and to transmit the Names of Heritors and Witnesses to the Council. The General is to convene them, and this Commission is to continue till repealed.' The Reader will observe what vast Pains the Council are at, and how many various and repeated Commissions are granted against those who had been in the Rising.

Indemnity enlarged to March 1587, as to the Commons.Some Procefs-ed after their Diet, was deferred.Garisons appointed, Dec.
16.Mr. Duncan-son indulged to Campbeltoun after Mr. Cameron's Death.

By a Letter from the King, dated September 3. the Council are required to enlarge the Indemnity to the Commons who had been at Bothwell, and allow them to the 1 of March next, to come in and take the Bond, still excepting Heritors, Ministers, Ringleaders, and such as have had Accession to the Murder of the Archbishop, or their Resetters. By the same Letter, the Earl of Hume's Troop of Horse is given to the Master of Ross. October 7. the Council publish a Proclamation, as above, which needs not be insert. That same Day, the Advocate is warranted 'to raise Proceffes of Treason before the Justices, against Heritors, Ministers, or Ringleaders who were in the Rebellion, notwithstanding they have been formerly convened, and the Diet deserted by that Court.' This seems to be very unjust and hard.

December 16. They order a Garison to be placed in the House of Kenmuir, and the Viscount is to be acquainted thereof; 'tis to consist of 30 Horsemen. As many are ordered to the Castle of Dumfries; and another Garison is appointed at the House of Freugh, in the Shire of Wigtoun. At the same Time, upon Information of Mr. John Cameron's Death, who had been indulged at Campbeltoun, Mr. Robert Duncanson, indulged and confined at Kilchrean, is removed, and confined at Campbeltoun. This was, no doubt, by the Procurement of the Earl of Argyle.

This is what I find in the Council-books this Year, relative to Presbyterians in the general. Some of their Procedure with particular Persons falls in,

S E C T. III.

Of the Persecution up and down the Country, from the Donators, by Courts, and otherwise; and the Hardships Noblemen, Gentlemen, Ministers, and others underwent for Nonconformity this Year.

Persecution now turns extensive.

IN the former Sections we have had the Treatment of Presbyterian Gentlemen and others, for their alledged Share in the Rising last Year, with some View of the Council's Procedure. The Persecution began now to extend it self very generally through the West and South; yea, the Body of Presbyterians who were not concerned in Bothwell and many Ministers whose Preaching in the Fields was now pardoned in the Indemnity, and had not been at Bothwell, were attacked upon their Nonconformity this Year; many of them were sore haralled, and some forced to a Kind of voluntary Banishment.

To begin with the more general Accounts; such who did not compear before the Circuits last Year were all declared fugitive, and great Numbers were added to that Roll by the Justice-court at Edinburgh this Year. The Fugitives were to be apprehended where ever they were found, and their Lands, Goods, and Moveables, were all confiscate, and given to such as had been, and would be further active in the Persecution, and they made them over again to Donators.

Claverhouse had the Gift of what belonged to the Fugitives in Nithsdale, and other Places in the South, and he constitute his Brother, and another of his Name his Donators. Accordingly March and April this Year, they came with Parties of Soldiers, and run through every Parish in that Country; and as they fell foul upon all Nonconformists, so in a special Manner, the Houses and Possessions of such as were Fugitives, whether at Bothwell or not, were rifled, or great Sums exacted from their Relations.

Those Donators there, and in other Places, were most severe in prosecuting their Gifts. Generally speaking, they were vicious profane Men, of broken Fortunes, who had nothing, and were still spending, and always craving. None of the Persons, now by Law fugitives, ventured to appear, but wandred in Hardships which cannot be represented, but their families and Means were almost ruined. Transactions were frequently made by their Friends, and a great deal of Money raised that way, and sometimes the Master of the Ground transacted for the fugitive Tenant: In these Cases the Friend or Master received a Discharge from the Donators or their Assignies, for what they paid, and an Assignment to all they had. And as this was in some Places a little Ease to the Fugitives, who had Masters not altogether so cruel and violent, so in most Cases it was a terrible Handle to the more rigid, who fell in with the Severities of this Period, to harass the poor People and their friends; and this is another Branch of the Persecution of this Time, which, tho' very universal, yet scarce any Account can be given of it: And when neither Friends nor Masters made Composition with the Donators and their Agents, it was usual for them, after they had rifled all they could reach, to make Assignations of the Moveables of the Fugitives unto any of their Neighbours, who were malicious, and willing to have a Share in the Spoil, for very small Sums of Money; and this was a Ground good enough in this Time for every Ruffian who pleased to accept, to spoil and vex these poor Families. 'Tis plain particular Accounts of the Spoils and Oppressions committed for many Years under all these Shapes, cannot be given.

But the Reader must further observe, that when these Transactions were made, the Denunciation was not taken off the fugitive Persons, until they themselves came in and owned the Rising at Bothwell to be Rebellion, and engaged not to frequent Field-meetings, and never to bear Arms against the King, or any authorized by him, and even upon this no Restitution was to be expected. Some few indeed here and there did come under these Engagements, but the Donators and Soldiers were not fond of such Submissions, and took many Ways to prevent them; and where they were made, they proved Matter of very little Ease or Satisfaction to the Persons complying: For when ever any alledged to have been at Bothwell, were taken, or any Gentleman came in Absence to be forfeited, none were found so proper to be cited as Witnesses against them, as the People who made their Submission; and if they refused to depone, they were afresh persecuted, as much as ever; and it was upon some of their Depositions mostly that great Numbers were banished, forfeited in Absence, and put to Death, this and the succeeding Years.

Thus all Handles were taken hold of to persecute such who had been in the Rising, with the utmost Violence, and what by one Mean or another few or none of them escaped, and Multitudes were involved with them, and all who had the Name of Presbyterians were attacked as far as possible.

I find likewise the same Gentleman had a Commission from the Council, to uplift the Moveables of all such in the Shire and Stewartry of Galloway, as had been at Bothwell, or were fugitive. His Brother, Cornet Graham, was imployed by him; and by himself or some deputed by him, he went through every Parish there, and prosecuted his Buiness with the utmost Severity.

It was by this Commission granted to Claverhouse and his Assignies, as we have seen, Courts were held this Year by Cornet Graham in the South, and Enquiry was made into all the Branches of Nonconformity, as well as Queries put with relation to Bothwell.

There was a Court held at New Galloway by the Cornet, at which all 'twixt Sixty and Sixteen were charged to appear, under the severest Penalties, and declare upon Oath how many Conventicles they had been at, who preached, and whom they knew present, what Children were baptized, &c. This was unreasonable, illegal, and a heavy Temptation to Perjury. Unreasonable it was to make People declare against themselves, illegal, since our Law, and all Laws of God and Men require Pursuers to have Witnesses; and if upon their Deposition they were to be made free from further Trouble by the Matter's being referred to them, which I very much question, and I know it was not so with many in Matter of Fact, it was a great Temptation to common People to swear themselves free.

1680.
Many declared
Fugitives.

Severities by Donators and Army, upon their Families and Possessions.

Courts held in
Galloway and Persons harassed for Nonconformity
there.

1680.

And at Dumfries.

Probably these Courts were held in the rest of the Parishes in that Country, tho' I have not seen particular Accounts of them; but this same Year I find Mr. Thomas Gordon, Clerk to the Justice-court, and Cornet Graham, keeping a Court at Dumfries. To this all the County about were cited, under the Penalty of a Hundred Merks for Noncompearance; all who came were put to declare upon Oath, what they knew of their Neighbours, which of them had heard Presbyterian Ministers, or conversed with, and reset such who did, and other Questions of this Nature.

Fines for Non-compearance at them, a terrible Burden up in the Country.

Let me remark once for all, that the Fines for Noncompearance at these, and the following Courts in after Years, turned to be as great an Occasion of Trouble and Persecution to the Country, as almost Bothwell itself. Vast Numbers, every Court Day, were decerned to have forfeited their Fine, and these were gifted to the Soldiers, Informers, or some rascally People in every Parish, who were ready to accept of them; and Pointing, and all Manner of Rigour followed to the Ruin of many Families; and yet, in this Road, Providence brought about spiritual Advantage to not a few. By this civil Oppression they were forced to wander, and fell in with religious and pious Persons in their Hidings, and by their Company and Converse, they got much Good to their Souls.

Particular Sufferings.

So much for the more general Harassing of the Country, upon the score of Bothwell, and Nonconformity; I come now to give some particular Steps of their Severities, against Ministers, Gentlemen and others who had not been at Bothwell, mostly for Conventicles, and other Branches of Nonconformity.

Many troubled by Citations who had no Access to Bothwell.

Towards the End of the last Year, many Ministers and Gentlemen were put to trouble for Conventicles, and Accession to the Rebellion, and upon Citation, came to Edinburgh to clear themselves, as to their Innocence: Several were imprisoned, and, I find, in December, Mr. Archibald Riddel, Brother to the Laird of Riddel, and many particular Gentlemen, give in Petitions to the Justiciary, shewing how wrongouly they are imprisoned, and how desirous they are to be tried, for their Accession to the Rebellion: The Diet is deserted against them, and they are liberate.

No Conformists suffered to dwell in Dundee.

This Year the Violence of the Enemies of the Presbyterians began to shew it self, in Places where they acted without Controul. Thus, by some attested Accounts from the Town of Dundee, I find, that from the Year 1680. to the 1687. when the Liberty was granted, no Family was permitted to live in that Town, but such as constantly heard the Episcopal Ministers. And the same Year, William Mitchel, John Davidjon, John Sterrock, Elizabeth White, and several others were forced to leave the Town, merely because they were of Presbyterian Principles. But I shall add some particular Instances from the Registers.

Lennox Prisoner.

February 10. the Council order Claverhouse to bring from the Tolbooth of Dumbar, Lennox, Brother to Barnshogle; the Magistrates of Edinburgh are ordered to receive him. I find no more about him in the Registers.

Lord Cardross's Case.

The Case of the Lord Cardross comes before the Council. February 12. we left him in Prison for Conscience sake, and Nonconformity. He continued much in the Castle of Edinburgh, till last Year in July, when Favours were shewn to Sir Patrick Hume and others, as we heard, my Lord had as much Reason as any, to look for Relief, having been under a Tract of Four Years Hardships. But upon his Application, all he got, was a Letter to the Council, July 22. 1679. bearing, 'That it was his Majesty's Pleasure, that my Lord Cardross, upon paying his Fine. and not otherwise, may be set at Liberty.' Upon this, the Council, July 31. grant Warrant to the Laird of Lundin, Governor of the Castle of Edinburgh, to set the Lord Cardross at Liberty, upon Payment to Sir William Sharp his Majesty's Cash-keeper, of the Sums wherein the said Lord was fined, by Decrees of Privy Council. My Lord accordingly gave Bond, and got out of Prison. However, being outlawed, merely for not paying his Fine, his Lordship's simple and liferent Escheat was fallen into the King's Hands. In a little Time he went up to London; and there, in February, he presented the following Petition to the King, February 5. as the original Copy, before me, bears.

His Petition to the King, Feb. 5.

To the King's most excellent Majesty,

The humble Petition of Henry Lord Cardross,

Sheweth,

THAT the Petitioner being outlawed for not Payment of his Fines, his simple and Liferent Escheat is thereby fallen in your Majesty's Hands; and that now the Earl of Mar, and Sir Charles Erskine of Alva, having given Bond to your Majesty's Cash-keeper for for the said Fines, and the Petitioner discharged and acquitted thereof: The Petitioner therefore is very confident, your Majesty will now grant a Gift of his Escheats fallen in your Hands, for not Payment of his Fines, to the Earl of Mar, which hath no Relation nor Dependence on Mr. Maitland's Gift, granted upon another Horning; and by the Duke of Lauderdale's Opinion to your Majesty, you may grant several Gifts of the same Escheat. And if the Petitioner shall not obtain a Gift of his Escheat from your Majesty, till the Returns from Scotland, then it cannot be expedite before the First of June, in which Time he may suffer great Prejudice in his Affairs by that Delay: And that it is well known what Sufferings the Petitioner's Father and Family have undergone, for their Loyalty to your Majesty and your Royal Father, as may fully appear by the annexed Paper.'

1680.

'May it therefore please your sacred Majesty, to grant a Gift of the Petitioner's simple and Liferent Escheat to the Earl of Mar.'

'And your Majesty's Petitioner (as in Duty bound) shall ever pray, &c.'

With this he presented a Paper, intituled, A short Account of his Sufferings, which, as a new Document of the Ingratitude of this Period, as well as containing his present Case in short, I likewise add here.

His short Account of his Sufferings

A short Account of the Lord Cardross's Sufferings.

IN the Year 1646. the late Lord Cardross was (not to mention the faithful Services done for many Ages past to his Majesty's Royal Ancestors, by the Lords Erskine, and Earls of Mar, from whom the Lord Cardross is descended) one of a few Peers, who dissented from the Delivery up of the late King, to the English Army at Newcastle.'

'He was a Promoter of the Engagement 1648. for which he was fined in about One thousand Pounds Sterling, and debarred the Parliament 1649.'

'He lost by his Engagements for his Uncle Arthur Erskine of Scotsraig, (who lost his Life, and spent his Estate in his Majesty's Service) at least to the Value of Two or Three thousand Pounds Sterling.'

'During the late Trouble, his House of Cardross was seized on, and to the Value, at least of a Thousand Pounds Sterling, taken out of it.'

'When the now King's Army lay at Stirling, his whole Estate about Cardross was wasted, it being so near to the Army, and the only considerable Pass upon the River of Forth thereabout.'

'His House of Cardross, immediately after the English coming to Scotland, was garisoned by them, and continued so for Eight Years, whereby the House and Gardens were all quite destroyed.'

'Sir Lewis Stuart, Grandfather to my Lady Cardross, (for whose hearing of her own Chaplain preach in her own House, my Lord Cardross her Husband was lately fined in considerable Sums of Money) was of untainted Loyalty, and in 1644. was forced to lend to the then Parliament, about Seven hundred Pounds Sterling, for which Lauderdale, amongst others, obliged himself upon the publick Account: This Sum is yet unpaid, and now Interest being accumulate, will extend to about Two thousand and five hundred Pounds Sterling.'

'Upon the Usurper's coming to Scotland, Sir James Stuart, Father to my Lady Cardross, (by whose Entail and Destinations he possessed his Estate, and against which, the King declares, in the Gift of Escheat, to the Duke of Lauderdale's Brother's Son, he will assist him) was fined in a Thousand Pounds Sterling, and his House of Kirkhill garisoned, to his great Prejudice.'

'For all which Losses the Lord Cardross and his Lady's Families have never yet been considered.'

'But on the contrary, through the Misrepresentation of some, the now Lord Cardross was (for his Lady's hearing her own Chaplain preach in her own House) fined in considerable Sums, whereof he hath paid a Thousand Pounds Sterling, besides his about Six Months Attendance at Court, for procuring a Discharge of the Overplus of his Fines, and imprisoned during his Majesty's Pleasure in the Castle of Edinburgh, where he continued Four Years, and at the same Time his House of Cardross (immediately after it was repaired) was garisoned, to his great Hurt and Prejudice.'

'And in June last, the King's Forces in their March to the West, (the Day before the Duke of Buccleugh came to them) went about Two Miles out of their Road, that they might quarter on the Lord Cardross's Estate of Kirkhill, where in one Night they took from and prejudiced him and his Tenants, to the Value at least of Five Hundred Pounds Sterling, albeit there was hardly one Presbyterian on all that Land.'

1680.

‘ And now after all, the Duke of Lawderdale hath procured from his Majesty, a Gift of my Lord Cardross’s Liferent Escheat in favours of his Brother’s Son, which Gift carries the Rents of my Lord’s whole Estate, during his Life.’

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 45.

The Duke of Lawderdale had procured the Gift of his simple and Liferent Escheat for Mr. Maitland his Nephew; and when this Representation of my Lord’s was like to have some Weight, Care was taken to transmit a Copy of it to the Privy Council, that they might interpose and stop the King’s granting this Desire. Accordingly, February 12. they send a Letter to his Majesty upon this Head, which I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 45. where the Reader will observe little of Argument, which indeed the Case would not bear, strong Assertions, and a Reference to their own Sentence as just; with this they send up the Deposition of Witnesses in his Process, which we have already on the Matter seen. This excellent Person waited for some Time at Court, but without Success, and continued in this hard State till the Revolution.

Arth<sup>r</sup> & Dougal sent Prisoner
to Edinburgh.

We heard before, that the Earl of Monteith was ordered by the Council to dissipate the Conventicles at Monteith; and April 18. there comes a Letter from him, acquainting the Council that he had done so, and taken one Arthur Dougal who had been in the Rebellion, with some Papers upon him. The Council write a Letter of Thanks to the Earl, and desire him to send in the Prisoner to Edinburgh. Much about the same Time Robert Short is ordered to be brought in Prisoner, for a violent Attempt on the Person and House of Mr. George Honnyman, Minister at Livingstone, and is remitted to the Committee for publick Affairs. Mr. Honnyman we shall meet with hereafter, he was very uneasy to the People of that Parish, and the great Instrument of persecuting them.

Mr. Gilbert Rule prosecuted before
the Council.

A pretty singular Instance of a Prosecution I find in the Council-register of Acts and Decrees, April 8 this Year, as to Mr. Gilbert Rule, since the Revolution the worthy and learned Principal of the College of Edinburgh, whose Memory is favourable in this Church. He was indulged last Year in Prestonbaugh, and now must be turned out.

For a Conventicle in the old Church of Edinburgh.

This excellent Man is libelled before the Council, ‘ for his keeping Conventicles, and baptizing Children without the Parish of Prestonbaugh, where he is indulged. And that upon the First of April last, he did take upon him to hold and keep a Conventicle, within the old Kirk of Edinburgh, called St. Giles’s, at which he did preach, expound Scripture, pray, and baptize a Child of John Kennedy Apothecary, and another of James Livingstone Merchant in Edinburgh: And Mr. William Livingstone Brother to the said James, and divers other Persons were present at the same; as also Mr. Archibald Cameron Precentor in the High Church, and John Neilson Merchant and Kirk-treasurer of Edinburgh, did so far concur that they were present at the same, and the said John Neilson did give Orders to open the said Kirk.’

He was sent to the Bass.John Kennedy and James Livingstone
fined.

The Council find this proven by the Defender’s Confession, and do suspend him from the Benefit of his Majesty’s Indulgence, and send him to the Bass, till further Orders from the King about him. John Kennedy is fined in a Hundred Pounds Scots, James Livingstone in Two hundred Pounds; the rest are absolved. This odd Passage seems to have been a happy Kind of Presage of Dr. Rule’s after publick Usefulness in that City: This was with the Consent of Mr. Turner, the Episcopal Minister of that Kirk. I know Mr. Kennedy, whose Wife was Mr. Rule’s Niece, was a staunch Presbyterian, singular Christian, and lived to a great Age, and got to Heaven a few Years ago. And I take Mr. Livingstone to be Son to that great Man formerly mentioned, Mr. John Livingstone Minister at Ancrum.

Mr. Rule is liberate under Bond of Five thousand Merks, to depart the Kingdom.

All I have further upon this is, that July 23. a Petition is presented to the Council from Mr. Rule, shewing, ‘ That for baptizing a Child in the old Kirk of Edinburgh, tho’ by Warrant of Mr. Turner Minister of the said Kirk, he was sent to the Prison of Edinburgh, and afterwards to the Bass, and thereby is reduced to a valetudinary Condition, therefore praying the Council may take his Case under Consideration.’ The Council appoint him to be set at Liberty. under Bond of Five thousand Merks, to depart out of the Kingdom within Eight Days.

Further Account of him from Dr.
Calamy’s Abridgment.

This Account from the Registers confirms the Narrative given of Mr. Rule, by the learned and laborious Dr. Calamy, in his Abridgment of Baxter’s Life, Vol. II. P. 517. whose Informer has mistaken the Time of his being in the Bass, which was some more than Three Months, an exorbitant Punishment for baptizing a Child of his own Niece, at the Desire of the Minister of that Parish. In the above named excellent Collection, the Reader will find Mr. Rule’s Sufferings at Alnwick in Northumberland, where he was Minister before the Restoration, after he had been a Regent at Glasgow, and afterwards Sub-principal in the King’s College of Aberdeen. Upon the fatal Bartholomew Day he was ejected from his Charge at Alnwick, and came down to Scotland, where we have seen he was soon brought to Trouble, and forced to remove from his native Country. Mr. Rule went abroad, studied Physick, and took his Degrees: Afterwards he lived some time in Berwick, and was very useful both in preaching, as frequently as he could, and by his great Skill in Physick, and the particular Care he took in making up all his Prescriptions.

Being

Being called to the Scots Side, to visit the Laird of Houndwood's Family in Trouble, and staying all Night, at Family Worthip he expounded the Chapter which was read, none being present but the Family. This came to be Matter of Process against the Gentleman, who was fined in a Hundred Merks.

While the Doctor was at Berwick, the Earl of Hume, who commanded a Troop of Horse in that Neighbourhood, formed a Design to catch him; of which Dr. Calamy gives this Account from one who was present. A Letter was formed from Mr. Ker of Myne-wells, intreating Dr. Rule to come presently to him, with such Medicines as were proper for a violent Cholick, and sent to the Doctor at Berwick by a Servant of the Earl's, in the Habit of a Countryman. The Letter was so pressing, that the Doctor immediately got himself ready: But when mounting his Horse, it pleased the Lord so to touch the Heart of the Messenger with Remorse for this base Treachery, that at that Instant he disclosed the whole Design, and told him his Hazard if he went with him, for the Earl of Hume, according to Concert, was, with a Party of Horse, ready to seize him at the Bound Road, as soon as he entered Scotland, that he himself was the Earl's Servant, who had framed the Letter from Mr. Ker, with a Design to apprehend him. Thus this good Man escaped the Danger by a singular Providence.

After his Delivery from the Bass, where he was in great Hazard of his Life by a Sickness caused by the Sea Air, he left Scotland, and in a little Time had a Call to Dublin, where he preached for some Time, and was very useful.

Towards the End of March, there had been Sermon in a House in the Parish of Pancaitland, where some, it seems, had been without Doors: Complaint is made of this to the Council; and, April 8. they fine James, David and George Sinclairs, and John Baptie in Pancaitland, who were present, as guilty of keeping Field-conventicles, in Terms of the Act of Parliament.

Upon the 6 of May, Mr. James Ker Minister at is libelled before the Council, for a Field-conventicle: Upon the 14 of March last, he preached in the House of Grange in the Shire of Roxburgh; 'tis represented, he had upwards of Five hundred Hearers, and some of them were without Doors. The Council ordain Mr. Ker to enact himself to keep no more Conventicles, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks.

June 4. the Council being informed, that Anna Hamilton, Lady Gilchrist-cleugh, hath reset in her House John Balfour of Kinloch, and other Murderers of the late Archbishop; as also, that James Thomson, Tenant in Tankertoun Parish, is guilty of the said Reset, and was at the Rebellion, give Warrant to the Advocate to process them before the Justiciary. If their Process be in their Registers this Year, I have overlooked it.

There had been last Year a Meeting-house set up in the Town of Innerkeithing in Fife, upon the Indulgence then granted, and this must now be turned down; the Pretext is, that it was not licensed. Some People, at some Times, happened to sit without Doors, and this in Law was constructed as a Field-conventicle. Whereupon a Process is intended before the Council, against the Earl of Tweddale, upon whose Ground the Meeting-house stood; and the Magistrates of Innerkeithing, July 1. Whereas, by the Council's Proclamation, April 8. 1669. Heritors are made liable for the Conventicles kept on their Ground, in the Shires of Renfrew, Air, Lanerk, &c. and they are to be fined in 50 Pounds Ster. toties quoties. And the said Lords, by their Act, April 26. 1676. extend this through the whole Kingdom. Nevertheless, from September 1679. to May 1680. there have been many Conventicles held in the Town-barn belonging to the Earl of Tweddale, in the Town of Innerkeithing, at which Mr. Somerwel, Mr. William Bell, Mr. John Blair Mr. John Anderson, Mr. Archbald, Mr. John Harroway, outed and unlicensed Ministers, have preached, therefore it is craved, that the Earl of Tweddale may be fined in Terms of Law.

The Council alloillie the Earl of Tweddale, because he produceth a Retour, shewing, that the Barn held Burzage of the Town, and the Process is continued against the Magistrates, until July 8. when the Council find them guilty, and fine them in 50 Pounds Sterling, which they actually paid, and afterwards uplifted from the Inhabitants.

At the same Time, the Council being informed, that Mr. William Row had preached in several Places, since September last; that Mr. John Gray had preached, with the Invitation of the People, in the Parish of Orwath, under Prospect of getting a Licence, the Council, July 8. discharge them to preach any more. And Mr. George Hamilton, and Mr. James Rymer, being cited to compear at this Diet, for preaching in several Places in Fife, and not compearing, were appointed to be denounced and put to the Horn.

September 1. the following Report of the Committee for publick Affairs, is approved by the Council. Mr. James Ker is appointed to be liberate, upon Caution to compear when called, and that he keep no Conventicles, on Pain of Ten thousand Merks. Arthur Douglas called, and that he keep no Conventicles, on Pain of Ten thousand Merks. Mr. John Dickson, late Minister his Parish Kirk, under Pain of Five hundred Merks. Mr. John Dickson, late Minister at Rutherglen, being brought in Prisoner by some of the Guards, is under Caution to appear before the Council this Day. Accordingly, the Council order him to be sent to the Tolbooth 1680.

Houndwood fine for an alleged conventicle by Dr. Rule. The Earl of Hume forms a Design to seize him, which is very providentially broken.

He retires to Dublin.

House-conventicle with a few at the Doors, fined as a Field-conventicle.

Mr. James Ker process'd for a Conventicle; May 6.

Lady Gilchrist-cleugh, and James Thomson process'd criminally.

Process against the Earl of Tweddale for an alleged Field-conventicle in a House of his at Innerkeithing.

The Earl is fined for the Magistrates of Innerkeithing fined in 50 Lib. Ster.

Mr. William Row, and Mr. John Gray process'd.

Mr. George Hamilton, and Mr. James Rymer denounced in absence. Mr. James Ker

Arthur Douglas.

Mr. John Dickson sent to the Bass.

1680.

Mr. John Veitch denounced, and afterwards brought to great Hardships.

Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and from thence to the Bast; where I know he was Prisoner for several Years.

Mr. John Veitch is called before the Council, October 5. After Citation he is libelled, that he had preached at Austuther (perhaps it should be W. Struther, where he was Minister) without Licence. He not compearing, is ordered to be denounced, and put to the Horn. We shall afterwards hear, that he was taken and kept close Prisoner at Edinburgh, about a Year's Time, under no small Hardships. He was allowed neither Candle nor Fire the whole Time; his Wife was never allowed to speak to him, but in presence of Two or Three Soldiers. He pressed much to be brought to a Trial, but that could not be allowed. The Reason of this cruel and unchristian Treatment, was, that when the Curate died, at the Invitation of the People he returned and preached to his own People, from whom he had been violently thrust away.

Fergus Grier

The same Day, Fergus Grier in Brigmark petitions the Council, and shews he had now lien Five Months in Prison, and Nothing ever was laid to his Charge, but his Kefet of Two of his Friends, for a Night, who had been at Bethwel. The Council order him to be liberate upon signing the Bond.

William Pantone

That same Day, the Council approve of the Report of the Committee for publick Affairs underwritten; that William Pantone, Prisoner for harbouring Mr. Donald Cargil, be liberate, on Bond of a Thousand Pounds, to answer when called. Six Persons taken at the Bridge of Linlithgow, as coming from a Conventicle, and most obstinate, are imprisoned. Upon a Letter from the Laird of Graden, That he had apprehended Mr. Archibald Riddel Minister, Brother to the Laird of Riddel, Turnbul of Know, and the Laird of Doun, and sent them Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Jedburgh, till he had the Council's Mind, they being Persons, as he was informed, who were in the Rebellion, and Frequenters of Field-conventicles since, they had sent a Letter of Thanks to Graden, with an Order to Meldrum to bring them in Prisoners to Edinburgh, and had recommended Graden to the Lords of the Treasury, for the Reward offered by the Council's Proclamation, for taking Mr. Riddel. December 9. Mr. William Bell, imprisoned for a Conventicle in Edinburgh, refusing to engage to abtain from Conventicles in Time to come, is sent to Blackness; and Mr. Riddel, when examined before the Committee for publick Affairs, disowns all murderous and bloody Principles in Cargil's Covenant, but refuses to engage against Field-conventicles. He is confined to his House and Precincts of it, during Pleasure, he finding Caution to keep his Confinement during that Time, and never to keep Field-conventicles, under the Pain of 10000 Merks. Thus this worthy Minister's Case stands in the Registers.

Mr. Archibald
Riddel, Turnbul of Know, and Graden.

Mr. William
Bell sent to Blackness.

Mr. Riddel's Case from the Records.

Larger Account of Mr.
Riddel, from his own Papers.
Made Prisoner
Sept. this Year.

But it deserves a larger Consideration, and I am able to give a distinct Account of his Treatment before the Committee for publick Affairs, from a Narrative under his own Hand, communicated to me by his worthy Son Dr. Riddel, with which I shall end this Section.

When Mr. Archibald Riddel was returning from Moffat-well, September this Year, and riding in Company with another Person, the Laird of Graden met him, and apprehended them both. Mr. Riddel had his Watch, Sword, and some Money taken from him, tho' Graden was married to his near Relation, and, as we have seen, was sent to Jedburgh Tolbooth, and thence carried into Edinburgh Prison, and kept Prisoner Nine Months there.

Twice examined.

During that Time he was twice examined by a Committee of Council. An Account of what past I shall give from his own Notes, written immediately after his Return to Prison, when what past was fresh in his Memory: All his Answers were extemporary, having no Copy of Questions given him, or Time to think upon Answers. I insert them at the greater Length, that, from them, the Reader may gather the Temper of this Period, and guess at the Methods taken with others, of whom I have not so distinct Accounts.

His first Examination, Oct. 1.

His first Examination was October 1. this Year; and, after Mr. Riddel had acknowledged he was the Person taken by the Laird of Graden, the Earl of Linlithgow asked him the Reason, why he went out of the Way at the Time he was apprehended? Answer. My Neighbour and I travelling on the Way upon the Sabbath, discovered some Gentlemen, whom we supposed to be Philiphaugh going to Church, and not willing to cross his Teeth that Day, a little Wood being near, we turned into it till he should pass; but it being Graden, he followed us, and made us Prisoners. Linlithgow. Have you kept any Field-conventicles since the Indemnity? Ans. Since that Time, my Lord, I never preached out of a House. Linlith. Will you give your Oath upon that? Ans. My Lord, I desire to be forborn as to Oaths, which are tender Things, and not rashly to be meddled with, or upon every Occasion. Linlith. What Ground have we to believe you, if you refuse to give your Oath? Ans. I have declared upon the Word of a Gentleman, which I hope may be taken off my Hand as sufficient; and if your Lordship shall be informed that I have preached out of a House since that Time, spare not my Life; but Swearing I dare not meddle with. Advocate. Mr. Riddel, Your Answer to my Lord Linlithgow was, You have not preached out of a House; but I suppose you are not ignorant, that albeit a Minister preach within a House, yet if there be Hearers without Doors, by the Law that is constructed to be a Field-conventicle: I desire therefore you will positively answer me this Question, Whether or not, when you

Preaching in Houses when People are without Doors,
detended.

preached

preached within a House, was there any hearing you without Doors? Ans. Indeed, my Lord, I can not deny that. Adv. We would not expect any Man of such a peaceable Disposition as Mr. Riddel seems to be, would so far condemn Authority, as not to forbear to act contrary to Law. Ans. My Lord, when there do convene more than the House can contain, and I am called to preach to them, dare I either dismiss the Assembly without Preaching, because the House will not hold them, or refuse to preach to them, until all without Doors remove? Really, my Lord, I durst not do so upon the greatest Hazard. Advocate. It is most unreasonable that every Subject should take upon him to judge and determine, at his Pleasure, of what is lawful and convenient, and not be determined by the Laws of the Land. This is so absurd and ridiculous, that it destroys the End of all Laws, and makes every Man Supreme, and to do what he pleases. Ans. My Lord, it cannot, I suppose, be denied, but that every Subject must be allowed to exercise a Judgment of Discretion, in reference to his own Actions: And as your Lordship judges that it is the Duty of Subjects to know the Laws of the Land, and to practise accordingly, so, since 'tis certain that the GOD of Heaven hath given Laws to all Subjects as well as Rulers, Subjects both may and ought to know these Laws; and if I, knowing both GOD's Laws and the Laws of the Land, find the one contrary to the other, undoubtedly GOD's Laws should have the Preference. Advocate. I think it strange that any should be so absurd as to disturb the Peace of a Land for such a Business, as whether Persons should keep within Doors or not, in Preaching. If we were quarrelling Mr. Riddel, for Preaching simply, it were somewhat; but to condemn and irritate Authority, by Preaching to Persons without Doors, is intolerable. Ans. My Lord, if there were a full and free Liberty for Preaching in Houses, 'tis like, the People, in process of Time, might so accommodate themselves, that there should be no provoking the Magistracy, by any their being without Doors; but now, poor People are so dogged and distressed, that Preaching can hardly be had in Ten Miles of Way; and when I am called to preach, and scarce a House can be had that will contain Thirty or Forty Persons, and all the rest must be without, shall the People who come Ten Miles or more to hear Sermon, be thrust away as they came? Surely, if I be called to preach at all, I may not decline it in any Case. Advocate. I pose Mr. Riddel with this Question, If Presbyterian Government were established, and some Ministers were not free to comply with it, as it was in the Year 1648. and a Law were made, That none without Doors should hear them, would you judge it reasonable, that such Ministers should, in Contempt of Law, do as you do? Ans. Really, my Lord, I cannot see a Reason why Persons hearing without Doors, should be a Provocation more than within Doors; or, if one be at all permitted to preach, that it should offend, when he preaches to Persons without.

Advocate. Will you be content to engage not to preach in the Fields after this? Ans. My Lord, excuse me, for I dare not come under any such Engagement. Adv. This is strange, that Mr. Riddel, who has had so much Respect to Authority, as not to preach in the Fields since the Indemnity, will not, out of the same Respect, be content to engage to carry hereafter, as he declares he has carried heretofore: We are not requiring that he should not preach in Houses, albeit to Persons without Doors, but only that he will not go to the Fields and preach. Ans. My Lord Advocate, I can answer somewhat for the Time past, but not for the Time to come: I have not since the Indemnity judged my self under a Necessity to preach out of a House, but I know not but he who has called me to preach this while bygone in Houses, may before I go out of the World, call me to preach upon Tops of Mountains, yea, upon the Seas; and I dare not come under any Engagements to disobey his Calls. Adv. You can never rightly judge your self called to preach in the Fields, seeing it will be such an open Violation and Contempt of Authority. Ans. My Lord, I think strange you should be so peremptory in this, seeing there be both some Cases at present, wherein such Preaching cannot be offended at, as also I know not what Revolutions may be, so that they who are most dissatisfied may allow it. Adv. What are those Cases now? Ans. Both Conformed and Indulged have preached in the Fields without Offence. Adv. When did the Indulged preach in the Fields? Ans. When their Churches have been ruinous; or, otherwise they could not conveniently preach in the Church, they have done it in the Church-yard or elsewhere. Adv. In such Cases as those, 'tis not constructed to be against Law. Ans. But then, my Lord, what shall I do with my Engagement never to preach in the Fields, to know whether it shall be constructed against Law or not? Your Lordship will not allow me to sense, or put a Construction upon my Engagement my self. Adv. If I were of Mr. Riddel's Principles, and did judge in my Conscience, that the Laws of the Land were contrary to the Laws of GOD, and that I could not conform to them, I would judge it my Duty rather to go out of the Nation, and live elsewhere, than disturb the Peace of the Land, by acting contrary to its Laws. Ans. My Lord, if I do any Thing contrary to the Laws, I am liable to the Punishment due by the Law. Adv. That is not sufficient; a Subject that regards the publick Good of the Land, should, for the Peace and Welfare thereof, either conform to the Law, or go out of the Land. Ans. My Lord, I doubt that Argument would militate against Christ and his Apostles, as much as against us, who

1680

Refusing to engage not to preach at field-conventicles, defended.

1680.

The Apostles
acting contrary to Law.

both preached and acted otherwise against the Laws of the Land; and not only did not judge it their Duty to go out of the Land, but the Apostles, in the contrary, reasoned with the Rulers, Whether it be better to obey GOD or Man, judge ye. Lintith. Will you promise not to preach in the open Fields, with Allowance to preach in Houses, albeit Hearers be without Doors? Ans. My Lord, I am willing rather to undergo what Sufferings your Lordship will be pleased to inflict upon me, rather than come under such an Engagement. The Bishop (of Edinburgh, I suppose) spoke next: 'My Lord Lintithgow, I speak to your Lordship, I will not speak to Mr. Riddel; for 'tis like he will not acknowledge me, or speak to me; 'tis our Duty to have Respect for him, he is a Gentleman, and descended from an ancient and honourable Family: But I desire your Lordship to speak to him, he compares his Case with that of Christ and his Apostles; I suppose he is not ignorant, that the Thing required of the Apostles was, that they should not preach at all, which was a Thing that could not be yielded unto upon any Hazard. It is not denied but Mr. Riddel should preach the Gospel, being a Minister; for a Necessity is laid upon every Minister, and a Wo is unto him, if he preach not the Gospel: But all that is required of him, is but an Engagement not to preach in the Fields, which is far from the Apostles Discharge. Mr. Riddel has been speaking of his Calls, I would fain know of him what he reckons his Call: There are Calls ordinary and extraordinary; if he mean an ordinary Call, that must be determined by Authority and the Laws in being; this he cannot lay Claim unto. If he speaks of an extraordinary Call the Prophets and Apostles had, which they confirmed by Miracles; if he pretend to such a Call, how shall we know if he has it? What Miracles will he work for confirming it? Lintith. What Answer can you give to what is said? Ans. My Lord Lintithgow, for me to answer what has been spoken, will necessitate me to rip up the whole Controversy that is this Day betwixt the Presbyterians and Conformists, in reference to the present Schism that is in the Church of Scotland, which would be a more tedious Discourse than, it may be, your Lordships Patience would allow to hear; but if your Lordships be willing to hear, I shall not decline it. Lintith. Not so, but speak shortly to any Particular you think fit. Ans. My Lord, what was first spoken was in reference to the Difference betwixt the Apostles and my self, and I deny not a Difference as to the Thing commanded: But my alledging the Case of Christ and the Apostles, was in reply to my Lord Advocate's Argument, that we ought either to conform to the Laws, or go out of the Land; that they did not conform to the Laws of the Land, but both preached and acted otherwise contrary to them, and defended themselves with that Argument, That we ought rather to obey God than Man; and truly, I see not why, notwithstanding of the Difference of the Subject Matter of Controversy, it should not be as good an Argument in our Mouths, acting contrary to the Laws, as in theirs, and further than this I designed not to urge it.

His Confession
drawn up by the Clerk, and signed by Mr.
Riddel.

Here Mr. Riddel was stopped, and the Clerk ordered to read what he noted, which he did as follows. 'Mr. Riddel being called before the Lords of the Committee, and inter-rogate, whether or not, since the Indemnity, he had kept any Field-conventicles, answered, that since the Indemnity he had never preached out of a House, but refused to give his Oath upon it. Being further desired to engage not to preach in the Fields hereafter, he did refuse so to do, but said, he would rather undergo any Sufferings that their Lordships would inflict upon him, than come under such an Engagement.' This was read to him, and he appointed to sign it, which he did.

He declines Swearing.

After this my Lord Lintithgow said, 'There is one Thing I forgot to ask, Were you familiarly acquainted with that young Man apprehended with you, before your Acquaintance at Mossat-well? Ans. I was not acquainted with him before that. I have seen him before, and been in his Company, but did not know what he was till our Converse at the Well. Lintith. Will you give your Oath upon it? Ans. I have already desired to be spared as to Oaths, for I dare meddle with no Oaths at all. Advocate. I wonder Mr. Riddel should be so wilful, as to refuse to give Oath upon what he declares so confidently to be Truth. Ans. My Lord, there is more required for justifying an Oath, than that it be true. Advocate. I hope you own Authority, and are not of these wild Principles some are of. Ans. My Lord, I do own Authority, as knowing that the same Lord Jesus who commanded us to fear God, doth also command to honour the King; and as I judge it my Duty to give God what is God's, so to give Cesar what is Cesar's. Bishop. Strange, my Lord Lintithgow, that Mr. Riddel should peremptorily say, that he will swear no Oaths. Unlawful Oaths, I know, are to be refused, but to swear, when required by the Magistrate to confirm Truth, I humbly conceive ought not to be refused. I know none are against all Oaths, but Anabaptists and Quakers, and I hope Mr. Riddel is none of these.'

Mr. Riddel not offering to reply, Lord Lintithgow said, 'What have you to say for clearing in your self? Ans. Your Lordship and I are not upon equal Terms to debate freely Matters of Oaths. Advocate. Very true.' Then the Earl of Lintithgow told Mr. Riddel he might remove, and when he was half way at the Door, the Advocate said, 'Mr. Riddel, I am sorry that such a Person as you should drink in such irrational brutish Principles, and would would desire you for your Good, wishing well to you, and being willing to do all I can for you, to quit them, and be better advised. Ans. My Lord, I have not taken up those Principles hastily and rashly, they have cost me Study and Exercise, and I have sought the Lord anent them, and find them so well grounded, that I hope through Grace I shall not soon quit them. Adv. Go your Way. After this Examination, he was sent back to Prison.

1680.

Mr. Riddel was again called before the Committee, December 8. where Linlithgow was Present; and what passed there follows.

Linlithgow. Sir, the Committee has been considering your Condition, and do very much incline to shew you Favour, and to have you set at Liberty: You see what a Height of Extravagancies some People are risen unto now, that we are concerned to take Notice of Persons. Therefore, we would know of you, whether you approve the Way of these who cast off the Magistrate, or not? Ans. I hope none questions me of being of such Principles. Linlith. However, we desire a Declaration from your own Mouth. Ans. My Lord, I do in all Humility acknowledge the Civil Magistrate; I own the King's Majesty, the Lords of his Council, and this honourable Committee, as such to whom I ow Obedience, and to be subject in the LORD. I cannot deny but I am one of those who are against Conformity in all the Parts of it; but as for the Civil Magistrate, I may confidently say, both for my self, and all true sober Presbyterians in Scotland, that we desire to pay all due Respect and Homage unto him, and to be behind in nothing reasonable, called for at our Hinds. 'Tis true, the Distresses of that Party from the Magistrate, (for sad and lamentable have their Afflictions been these Years bygone) has extorted from them more complaining and resenting of the Ruler's Carriage, than from others who have had more Countenance and Encouragement from Authority; and, it may be, an exceeding of just Bounds and Limits: And from hence hath proceeded this woful Evil of denying and casting at the whole Magistracy and Ministry in Scotland, maintaining the Lawfulness of killing and cutting off the King, Rulers, and all that do adhere to them, combining and covenanting to execute the same, excommunicating of them, and the like, which is such an Evil, as does naturally tend to the overturning all Government, and Subversion of human Society, and does indeed open a Door for every Man to kill, and do whatsoever seemeth good in his own Eyes, and pretend Religion for it; which we desire to lament, if possible, in Tears of Blood, and, we judge, hath a Language in it both to Rulers and People, both to Conformists and Nonconformists; and it were no small Mercy if we could hear the Voice of this Rod, which prognosticks some strange Thing to come; but I know no Encouragement or Obedience that we would willingly or wittingly deny to the Magistrate, except when we are put to that Strait, that we must either incur the Displeasure of our Prince or of our God; endeavouring so to carry, as no Ground of Complaint against us may be found, except it be in the Matters of our God. Justice Clerk. Mr. Riddel speaks of all the true and honest Presbyterians, but how shall we know whom he means by them, since Cargill and his Party call themselves so as well as Mr. Riddel? Ans. My Lord, we would be glad to know what distinguishing Character would be satisfying to you, to distinguish between the one and the other. Justice-clerk. I will name one: The Murderers of the Archbishop are conversing with you, are hid and entertained with you; if you would deliver up these Persons to Punishment, it would say you were not of their Ways. Ans. Does your Lordship think that these Persons converse with me, or such as me? they fear as much at us as any in the Land. Justice-clerk. Now we hear they cast at you, but you have promoted that Interest; for both James Skene said before the Justiciary, (when told that Presbyterian Ministers condemn them and their Way) that albeit they condemned them now, they owned nothing but what once they preached, and named Mr. Riddel for one; and likewise one Harvey, the other Day before us, when I asked her if she heard any Minister preach such Doctrine, told me she had heard both Mr. Wells and Mr. Riddel preach so. Ans. My Lord, I do not think it strange that these Persons say these Things to your Lordships, seeing they have the Confidence to say as much in our own Faces, and to charge grievous Things at their Pleasure upon us: But I hope your Lordships will little regard these Sayings, considering Two Things, First, the great Prejudice they have taken up against us, in so much that they would have us rooted out of the World, and stick not what they say or do for that end. 2dly. Which I take to be the chief Cause, the Liberty they take in drawing Consequences from our Preachings. We preached to them the Doctrine of Repentance, they conclude they cannot be zealous enough against Sin, except they disown, yea, cut off all they judge Sinners, and then reckon that what we preached; but, my Lord, I hope none will say that I ever preached these Doctrines, which I ever judged destructive of the Principles of Nature. Linlith. I think that must be the true Reason. Ans. My Lord, there is no Minister in Scotland that Party will hear or own, but one. To this one of the Lords said, There are certainly more than one, there is Cargill and Douglas. Ans. I have not heard of Mr. Douglas being in the Kingdom of a long Time. One of them replied, He was in it lately. Ans. It is more than I knew of.

His second Examination, Dec. 8.

His Sentiments of the Civil Magistrate.

Of such who deny the King's Authority.

Ministers vindicated from the Ministers such as cast off the King's Authority.

1680.

Linlith. All the Lords incline to shew you Favour, and we would do all that lies in our Power for you, but we must be accountable to the Council for what we do; and therefore we desire you would give us some Ground to go upon for your Liberation. Will you promise not to preach in the Fields, nor take up Arms against the King? Bishop. He will not give such Engagements, you need not ask that. Linlith. But what say you? Ans. Your Lordship remembers the last Time I was before you, I desired to be spared. Linlith. 'Tis true, but we would have somewhat to report to the Council for our Exoneration. Ans. Really, my Lord, I have a very great Aversion at all the Oaths, Bonds and Declarations required of Subjects in those Days. Justice-clerk. There is no Oath required of you, but a just Promise. Ans. My Lord, Promises, Bonds, and Oaths are near a Kin. Linlith. How can you expect Liberty except you will promise not to preach in the Fields? Ans. I do not know, but the same Authority, now offended at preaching, may command me to preach in the Fields after this. Justice-clerk. If that be, he shall be allowed that Limitation in his Promise. Ans. My Lord, there are an Hundred Instances, which I cannot at present condescend upon, wherein a Necessity may be on Ministers to preach in the Fields, which your Lordships, if informed rightly, might allow, so that 'tis hard to come under any such Promise. Linlith. What Confidence can we have to expect your peaceable Carriage, when you will not give such a Promise? Ans. My Lord, I hope all that know me, know me to be of a peaceable Disposition, and if my peaceable Carriage will not answer for me, I shall never desire that my Promise of Peace do it. My Lord, the Fields were never our Choice, we never went to them but as Necessity drove us. Justice-clerk. I would like that Man best that is of a peaceable Temper. Linlith. What do you think of the Bishop's Murder? Ans. If private Persons were allowed to go out of their Station, to kill Men at their Pleasure, no Man could be sure as to his Life. Justice-clerk. Will you but say, that you resolve not to preach in the Fields, as long as Matters continue as they are? Ans. Really, my Lord, I am afraid to say, or do any Thing that has the Appearance of a straiter Hedge about the Exercise of my Ministry, than Jesus Christ has drawn before me. Justice-clerk. Sure, Men are bound to be considerate in their Preaching, and to follow a Rule; you told, I remember, before, you had not preached out of a House since the Indemnity. Ans. My Lord, there is a great Difference betwixt the Forbearance of an Action, when inconvenient, and an Engagement never to do such an Action, not knowing what Necessity there may be for such an Action afterwards.

Mr. Riddell
Nine Months
in Edinburgh Prison, and Three Years and a Half in the Bast.

When he would come under no Engagements, which, in his Opinion, might limit his Ministry, he was remitted to Prison. We have seen the Council's Orders about him, December 9. But he would never fulfil the Condition they impose on him, to find Caution not to keep Conventicles. And therefore, tho' the Managers were convinced of his Moderation and Loyalty, yet he continued about seven Months further in Confinement at Edinburgh. All the Favour shewn him, was the Exchange of that with the Bast, where he continued Three Years and an Half, until he was liberate upon his designed Voyage with Pitlochie, when we shall meet with him again.

Some other Instances of Severities, towards Presbyterians this Year, are before me, but they may come in as fitly upon the last Section, and after I have given some Narrative of Matters of another Nature, which fell in June and July this Year, upon the following Sections.

SECT. IV.

Of the Queens-ferry Paper, the First Declaration at Sanquhar, and their Consequents; with an Account of the Engagement at Airs-moss, July 21. 1680.

Of the Sufferings of such who separated themselves from other Presbyterians.

HAVING given the State and Sufferings of the Body of Presbyterians this Year in the former Sections, I come now to narrate some of the Actings and Sufferings of a few others, who, this Year, did openly separate themselves from the rest of the suffering Presbyterians, Ministers, and others. They were the same Persons, generally speaking, who last Year broke off upon the score of the Indulgence, and were for running Matters to such Heights in the West Country Army, whom I there termed, Mr. Hamilton's Party. After Bothwell, many of them went off the Country, some to Holland, and some elsewhere; and this Year, several of them returned and kept together, tho' but privately, following Mr. Donald Cargill, Mr. Richard Cameron; and I know not but Mr. Thomas Douglas might be sometimes with them. They rejected all the rest of the 1680. set to quash the Tumult, with Power to the Party to seize suspect Persons, make open Doors, &c. an indemanding them in case of Slaughter. June 10. One Margaret Wauchop is brought in Prisoner from Queensberry, for being accessory to Mr. Cargil's escape.

When Mr. Hall was taken, there was found in his Pocket an untitled, Queensberry a rude and imperfect Draught of a Paper, called from the Place where he was taken, Queensberry Paper. It was never owned by Mr. Cargil to be a Paper he or Mr. Hall had finished; and it plainly appears to have been a rude Beginning in Writ, of what had been the Subject of their Conversation. The Author of The Hind let loose, gives an Abstract of it; and it hath been published with a great deal of Triumph, as the deed of the Presbyterians in Scotland, by the Episcopal Party, and Scott's Jacobites at London, with the solemn League and Covenant before it, and Gib's senseless and blasphemous Paper after it, at the End of Sir George Mackenzie's Vindication. I have likewise seen a Copy of it, printed by Order of the Council, this Year, at Edinburgh. There are Three written Copies of it just now before me, said to be writ at the very Time, and one of them bound up with some original Papers which belonged to the Clerk of the Society People, who formed themselves, as we shall hear, a little after this: All these Three agree exactly; and from them I have insert a Copy of this Paper, which made so great a Noise, App. N. 46. There are several Passages here which evidently shew, that this Paper cannot be charged upon the Body of the Presbyterians; and the Publishers fall in a gross Blunder, when they say it was taken on Mr. Cargil, it being taken on Mr. Hall.

It may be further observed, That the Canonians and Society People themselves, did not pretend to vindicate every Expression in this Paper; yea, afterwards, in some of their public Papers, they expressly disown it, in as far as it does any way import any Purpose of assuaging to themselves a magisterial Authority. And it may not be out of the Road to insert here Part of an original Letter, dated Rotterdam, November 22. 1680. writ by Mr. Alexander Shields. He declares himself indeed for disowning the Kings Authority, but tells his Friend, 'I cannot but have Exceptions against some Parts of that Paper, (the Queensberry Covenant) particularly the prescribing a Form of Government, fitted to the judicial Law, which is not the expedient Work of the present Day. I do not love to be censorious, especially where the Scope is to engage to Faithfulness and Zeal; but I cannot assent to the End of the sixth Paragraph, which to me seems too near Separation, declaring that any unfavourable Deportment of Ministers, or their not joining with their Brethren in the public Testimony, is a sufficient Ground of withdrawing from them. This (adds he) is not the Principle or Practice of the Church of Scotland, who have made unlawful Entries, perverse Holdings of their Ministry from another Master than Christ, perverting the right Ways of the LORD, or unfruitful Plasferring, and tampering Silence, warrantable Grounds of separation, (which may indeed score off the Bulk of our Ministry, indulged and not indulged) but never founded it upon personal Misdemeanors and Faults upon a special Occurrence: This hath been Part of the Debates here, and we should guard against Excesses on either Hand. Their Meaning may be good, but I quarrel the Expression, which, in Conventions of this Nature, should be very distinct and clear. All the Account I can further give of the Queensberry Paper, shall be from a Letter I have from a Gentleman yet alive, who had much Occasion to be among the Sufferers at this Time. He tells me, 'The Notion and Practice of denying the Kings Authority, took its Rise from a Paper said to be drawn by Mr. Donald Cargil, by the Advice and with the Knowledge of very few, and for no other End, (as I found constantly and without Contradiction given out) but privately to be sent over to such as were banished, and fled to Holland, to be considered by them, and, according to their Advice, to be laid aside, or used in any future Attempt for Relief. The Messenger Haugh-head lost his Life, when seeking an Opportunity to go over to Holland, and the Paper fell into the Councils Hands, and was added to the Enquiries by them put to Persons brought before them, in which they followed the Measures of the Spanish Inquisition. It was interrogate, If they owned the Kings Authority, or not, and if they owned the Queensberry Paper or not; and this Paper being owned, or rather the Kings Authority not owned by some good and zealous Men, and this stuck to till their Death, it came to be greedily espoused by some, as a necessary Truth, to be suffered for, owned and maintained at all Hazards. The Design certainly of this Paper, was to be the Materials of a Manifesto or Declaration, on of an attempting People against the Government, furnished with some possible Means, at least in their own Apprehension, for Resistance, and was not calculate for a People absolutely subdued: This is plain from the Paper it self, and may be confirmed from Mr. Cargil's last Speech, where, in justifying the Denial of the Kings Authority, he only insists upon the Kings Supremacy over the Church, as it was declared to be an inherent Right, or essential to the Crown. Sure then, it is the greatest Injustice to charge this Paper upon the Whole of Presbyterians, who indeed had no Hand in it, and never approved it: No Body ever subscribed it, and

When Mr. Hall was taken, there was found in his Pocket an untitled, Queensberry a rude and imperfect Draught of a Paper, called from the Place where he was taken, Queensberry Paper. It was never owned by Mr. Cargil to be a Paper he or Mr. Hall had finished; and it plainly appears to have been a rude Beginning in Writ, of what had been the Subject of their Conversation. The Author of The Hind let loose, gives an Abstract of it; and it hath been published with a great deal of Triumph, as the deed of the Presbyterians in Scotland, by the Episcopal Party, and Scott's Jacobites at London, with the solemn League and Covenant before it, and Gib's senseless and blasphemous Paper after it, at the End of Sir George Mackenzie's Vindication. I have likewise seen a Copy of it, printed by Order of the Council, this Year, at Edinburgh. There are Three written Copies of it just now before me, said to be writ at the very Time, and one of them bound up with some original Papers which belonged to the Clerk of the Society People, who formed themselves, as we shall hear, a little after this: All these Three agree exactly; and from them I have insert a Copy of this Paper, which made so great a Noise, App. N. 46. There are several Passages here which evidently shew, that this Paper cannot be charged upon the Body of the Presbyterians; and the Publishers fall in a gross Blunder, when they say it was taken on Mr. Cargil, it being taken on Mr. Hall.

The Society People disown it under the Name of Shields.

Mr. Alexander Shields Letter upon it, Nov. 22.

Further Account of the Letter from a Gentleman yet alive, who had much Occasion to be among the Sufferers at this Time.

Presbyterians mostly blamed for this Paper.

his Year.

He and Mr.
Cargil in Company together
May and June

Discovered and delayed by Episcopal Ministers to the Government of Blackness.

• Chamaecrista

61 of them in a Hou

the, June 3

: 1

1. paronom
 2. 1000 pue
 3. 1000 pue
 4. 1000 pue

ry the Town
e, People.

By Seized by General

nd
he
'

80-411

ITS. The Acco

MS.
-24

-ny.
-u!

1680. am now speaking of, wherein, still maintaining his former Opposition to the Indulged, he very pathetically deals with them as to their present Separation. Some Passages of it deserve a Room here, the Letter it self being pretty long. He tells them.

That now since Mr. John Brown's Death, a great deal of Business lies upon his Hand, so that he cannot write to largely by that Bearer, nor express what is upon his Heart. I join with Sorrow for what he sees in the poor Church of Scotland, and what he foresees; and goes on to give them several Directions as to Religion; and adds, Let me beseech you to carry as not ignorant of the Devices of Satan, that cunning Wrestler, who, since he cannot carry you aside to the left Hand and Snare, will see by all Means if he can bring you to Excels upon the right Hand, which, however they may be painted over at first to make them please, yet in the Issue will prove most dangerous unto, yea, destructive of the whole of the old Cause of the Church of Scotland. Take Heed with all Fear and Watchfulness, that when you seek to stand at the greatest Distance from one Extreme, you run not to another, whereby the Cause and whole Frame of Presbyterians may be more certainly destroyed than by the other. Upon this Head he remarks, that it is the great Thing Satan is driving at, that the poor Remnant may run down one another with Division; that Separation, when not upon clear and just Grounds, is a greater Sin before God, and more wounding to the Heart of Christ than Murder, &c. because it is to dissolve the Union of his Church, and to divide Christian Society; and whosoever pleads for this, he blows that with his Breath, which Christ would quench with his Blood; How will Christ take it at any Man or Woman's Hand, to tear the Commission of any of his Ambassadors, whom he still owns as such; and withdrawing from hearing such is a tearing their Commission. He further warns them, lest when testifying against Faintings in Ministers, they be not drawn insensibly into a Contempt of the Ministry, and then into that Delusion, to think that it is the only Way to testify against what they judge amiss in the Ministry, to cast at his Ministry, and withdraw from him; whosoever adopts this Principle, and practiseth accordingly, hath not the Mind of Christ, for there are other patent and obvious Ways to witness against Evil; nay, this Way of witnessing is such as Christ will witness against, as not the Way. Then he tells them, he is about to vindicate himself and Mr. Brown, that, in the History of the Indulgence, and other Papers, they laid no Foundation for these Excels on the right Hand; and adds likewise, he must publicly witness against the Courses of many who rashly withdraw from Ministers, who are and will be owned as Christ's Ambassadors; and tells them, when he perceived some who came over to Holland, (last Year I suppose) running to these Extremes, it brought him to the very Gates of Death: And says, If the Principle whereby they defend their Practice were owned, it would infer the Dissolution of the visible Church, and all Society; and complains these Persons have withdrawn from Mr. Hogg and him, and broken Two Societies at Rotterdam and Utrecht: Therefore concludes he, My dear Friends, see to your selves in Time, and so much the more, that Persons once engaged in these Excels seldom retreat.

Conclusion to the next testimony against Corruptions.

The aggravated Evil in separating from Ministers.

Part of a Letter from Mr. Robert M'Quarrie to one of them.

This long Citation, if I mistake not, will not be unacceptable to some of my Readers. I am willing to believe this Letter was useful, at the Time when it was writ, to several, tho' it had not that Weight with many that the Writer desired; and the Reasonings of this pious, zealous and learned Minister ought to have Weight with some in this Church at this Day. The Persons who had, as we heard, violently opposed the Indulgence last Year, and were now dividing themselves from all the outed Ministers, after more private following Mr. Cargil and Cameron, came more openly to discover their Sentiments in the Declaration published at Sanguhar, July 22. this Year, and the Affair of the Paper taken upon Haugh-head at Queensferry, was the Occasion of this, and therefore I shall begin with it. This Paper, sometimes called the Queensferry-Paper, sometimes Mr. Cargil's Declaration, hath made such a Noise in the Episcopal Pamphlets, that I must give the Reader a particular Account of it, and how the Managers came by it.

Remarks on it.

The Queensferry Paper the Occasion of their Declaration at Sanguhar.

Account of the Paper taken at Queensferry upon Mr. Hall.

His Character.

Henry Hall of Haugh-head in the Parish of Eckford in Teviotdale, upon whom the unscribed Paper was found, which made all this Noise, was a Friend and Relation of the Earl of Roxburgh. He had been very religiously educated, and early began to shew his Zeal for what he took to be the strictest Side, and, in the Time of the lamentable Differences upon the publick Resolutions, he was a violent Professer, and used to leave his own Parish Minister, and ordinarily heard Mr. John Livingstone at Ancrum, who, as hath been noticed, was of a very healing Spirit, and far from encouraging such Practices.

After the Restoration he was a strict Nonconformist to Prelacy, which brought him under many Hardships, so that he was obliged to leave his Estate, and to retire from the Storm into the North of England, about the Year 1665. In the Year 1666, he was taken when coming towards Pentlands, and with some others imprisoned in Cessford Castle, whence he got out by the Favour of the Earl of Roxburgh. He retired again to Northumberland, and was very much beloved there for his Care, and the Pains he took to get many rude and ignorant the Presbyterian Ministers of this Church, indulged and not indulged, as some way or other involved, as they thought, in the Evils of this Time of Defection.

1680.

From Mr. Richard Cameron a young Man lately ordained, of whom more in this Section, who were named Cameron and Society People.

they had the Name of Cameronians. Next Year, when we shall hear they began to meet in their own names and Society People.

Societies, and had a general Meeting quarterly, or oftner as the Times would allow, they term themselves, The Societies united in Correspondence. And by those Names, wherewith they distinguished themselves from other Presbyterians through this Church, to whom some of the warmer Sort of these People, in some of their Papers, give very harsh Names, I shall now and then speak of them in the following Part of this Work.

Several Considerations engage me to give what Accounts of their Actions and Sufferings, the Papers come to my Hand afford me: In England, and other Places where our Scots State and Society were in this Period.

Every Thing these People did, is very much aggravated and misrepresented. The Prelatis a- and even what they did, is very much aggravated and misrepresented. The Prelatis a- mong our selves help on this Mistake, and are very willing to confound the Two Parties might Sufferers in this Period, tho' they cannot but know, how much the Two Parties might have been differed. And 'tis certain, it fared much worse with the whole of the Nonconformists from Prelacy; for the Lengths these People ran to at some Junctures, and the Prelates, who lay at Catch for a Handle to infligate the Government against Presbyterians, improved what fell out this Year extremely. Since Bishop Sharp's Death they had not yet appeared to virtulently, as that Apostate did, being, it may be, sensible of his pushing Matters too fast and far; but they and their Clergy failed not to improve these Incidents we shall hear of, into Methods more furious and violent. Besides, there were among these People a good many of a moderate and healing Temper, tho' many Times they were overdriven, and many excellent Persons of eminent Piety and Seriousness, whose Zeal brought them to be carried into the Measures of some others, who had not their Piety and Religion; and a great many, by reason of the common Danger, and a wandering Lot, were obliged to be with them, who did neither approve of their Extremities, nor countenance them; and vast Numbers of the more common Sort knew Nothing of their Heights, but were with them, and owned some of their Principles, out of a sincere Regard to the Reformation Rights, and solemn Covenants of this Church, without being capable of knowing the Consequences. In short, all of them, as far as ever I could find, were sincere Protestants, and firm in their Opposition to Popery, as well as Prelacy, and upon that score, came under the greatest Difficulties and Hardships, under the Reign of a Papist; therefore I saw no Reason to pass their Sufferings, tho' in some Things I cannot agree with them, as to the Cause upon which they stated them. And I with the fair and just Accounts I shall endeavour to give of them, might have some Influence, to open the Eyes of those, who pretending to follow them, separate from this Church, when we are under such Circumstances, as, I dare say, the most Part of the highest Fliers at this Time, would have rejoiced to see the Church of Scotland in, and heartily joyned in Communion with her under them, as undoubtedly the most knowing and serious Part of them did at the Revolution.

As a Historian, it is not my Province either to condemn or approve, what they or other Presbyterians did, but to narrate Matter of Fact, as far as my Information carries me; yet besides the common Apology for them and others too, from the Oppression of this Period, I must do them the Justice, as to acquaint the Reader, that he will find their own Defences, which they published by that Party: And tho' I am satisfied, several Things done by them, and declared advance for themselves, in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers which undoubtedly drove many to what now appears to be Extremities, I must do them the Justice, as to acquaint the Reader, that he will find their own Defences, which they published by that Party: And tho' I am satisfied, several Things done by them, and declared advance for themselves, in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers

which undoubtedly drove many to what now appears to be Extremities, I must do them the Justice, as to acquaint the Reader, that he will find their own Defences, which they published by that Party: And tho' I am satisfied, several Things done by them, and declared advance for themselves, in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers

which undoubtedly drove many to what now appears to be Extremities, I must do them the Justice, as to acquaint the Reader, that he will find their own Defences, which they published by that Party: And tho' I am satisfied, several Things done by them, and declared advance for themselves, in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers

which undoubtedly drove many to what now appears to be Extremities, I must do them the Justice, as to acquaint the Reader, that he will find their own Defences, which they published by that Party: And tho' I am satisfied, several Things done by them, and declared advance for themselves, in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers

which undoubtedly drove many to what now appears to be Extremities, I must do them the Justice, as to acquaint the Reader, that he will find their own Defences, which they published by that Party: And tho' I am satisfied, several Things done by them, and declared advance for themselves, in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers

Their own Accounts of their Principles and Practices, as to be found in the Informatory Vindication, the Hind let loose, and other Papers. And yet when I consider the Warmth of some of their Tempers, the almost invincible Ignorance their Circumstances put some of them under, their Converts only with those of their own Party, their Want of Ministers to direct them for some Years, when they refused to hear any Presbyterian Ministers, till they got one who was very much obliged to follow some of their Managers, their Divisions among themselves, and above all, the Rigour and Barbarity with which they and all other Presbyterians, yea, even the more moderate Sort of the Episcopal Way, and every Body almost who had any Seriousness or Concern against Popery, were treated with, I really wonder many went not far greater Lengths.

We have seen the Occasion and Beginning of this Division among suffering Presbyterians, was taken from the Indulgence; and this Year, it was run to a Separation from all the ousted Ministers; the Evil of this was perceived, when it was too late to recover many from it, by the Remains of the banished Ministers in Holland. Accordingly I have before me a Letter from Mr. Mcward written this Year, to some of the People I am and even the Society People never owned it, but in as far as it was agreeable to the Word of GOD, and our Covenants; and Mr. Cargil himself did not defend every Thing in it: So that the Clamour raised upon this by the Prelatits, is every way groundless. It may be I have spent too much Time upon it; but this Paper did very much exasperate the Managers, since it was indeed a disowning of the Government; nevertheless, there was not the least Shadow of charging it upon the whole suffering Party. However, this was the first Appearance against the King's Authority, and I am ready to think that it was upon this foot the Sanquhar Declaration came to be drawn in a few Days. The People who drew it, I know, had a mighty Veneration for Mr. Cargil and Haugh-head, and how far the Substance of the Paper might be communicated to them, I know not: However, their Sentiments must be taken not from it, but their own Declaration, which further imbittered the Managers; and it is high Time next to give some Account of that.

1680.

After Mr. Cargil's narrow Escape at Queensferry, he fled into the South, where several of his Friends were hiding and wandring, Mr. Richard Cameron and some others, whose Names are insert in the Proclamation I shall just now refer unto. They had now broke out from all the rest of the Presbyterian Ministers, and others through the Kingdom, who could not reject the King's Authority, and came to state their Sufferings and Testimony upon that Head, and herein they stand by themselves. After some Meetings for forming their Declaration, they came together in Arms to the small Burgh of Sanquhar, upon the 22 of June, in Number about Twenty Persons, and Michael Cameron read the Declaration at the Cross, and they left a Copy of it affixed there. The Declaration it self I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 47. and, from the Place of its publishing, 'tis ordinarily termed the Sanquhar Declaration.

The Sanquhar Declaration, June 22.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 47.

In this they were not only alone, and had none of all the Presbyterian Ministers in Scotland approving them, as themselves acknowledge and regret; but even afterwards, when a little cooler, they amend and explain several Expressions in this Paper; and the Reader will find their Defences of it, and Explications, in their Informatory Vindication, Head II. P. 63, &c.

The Society People afterwards smoothed some Expressions in it.

Many Papers passed upon this Subject at this Time. Mr. Richard Cameron wrote a short Vindication of this Declaration, which was carefully spread. A very worthy Presbyterian Minister, lately got to the Joy of his Lord, wrote a Letter in the Name of Scots Presbyterians, disclaiming the Queensferry Paper, and this Declaration, and shewed how far the Principles advanced in both were contrary to the Presbyterian Principles of this Reformed Church. Sir James Turner wrote some farcassical and bantering Papers upon this Head, and was taken up by some Body or other, whom he answered in more earnest, and the Debate ran to a very great Length. All those, and other Papers on this Head, I have just now before me, but shall dip no further into this Debate, which lasted some Time.

Papers written upon it are and con.

This Matter of disowning the King's Authority, is that which hath been and still is most ly made use of, to asperse the Whole of the Sufferers of this Period. The Body of Presbyterians are most unjustly loaded with it. Comparatively but a very few ran this length. Mr. Cargil himself, in his Speech before his Execution, qualifies very much his Refusal to own the King's Authority, and precisely insists upon his Supremacy over the Church, as declared to be an inherent Right and essential to the Crown. No doubt this rejecting of the King's Authority, when unhappily broached at this Time, was espoused by several of the haratted and persecuted Sufferers, and some few died, refusing to own Authority; some run this Debate very high, and their Arguments are set down at full length in the Hind let loose; others merely disowned the King, because of the persecuting Course he was put upon by the Prelates and Statesmen, not being able to distinguish here, as they ought to have done.

Observations upon the Charge against the Presbyterians, as denying the King's Authority.

To set this Matter in as fair a Light as I can, it will not be unfit to insert Part of a Letter to me from the abovementioned Gentleman, who was very much among the Sufferers, from the Year 1680. to 1685. upon this Part of their Practice. 'There were (says my Friend) some wild and unaccountable Notions and Practices in this Period, to which no charitable Construction is due, but the Height of Abhorrence: Yet perhaps, upon a due Consideration of Things and Circumstances at this Time, a considerable Measure of Charity is owing to such, who only scrupled to own the Magistrate's Authority, and pray for him in the Terms dictated to them. Tho', I do not say, they are to be justified; yet it may be reckoned an Act of Justice to the Dead, to set their Principles and Practice in a due Light, when they are quite misrepresented, both by such who pretend to be their Admirers and Followers, and by their Enemies: And I must be allowed to know somewhat of them, having been present for several Years among them, when this Matter was tossed and most debated. The Grounds then upon which I observed they went, were these. 1st. The Supremacy over the Church being legally declared and assumed by the King, as essential to, and inherent in his Dignity and Office, therefore the Acknowledgment behoved to be in the Terms of the Establisment, and thereby, as they thought, his Supremacy justified. 2<sup>dly</sup>. The King's Perfidy, Vitioufness, Persecution and Oppression of good Men, according to their Views, made him unworthy of Rule and Government over a reformed People; and albeit the Nation was wanting to their Duty in not depriving him, yet they alledged they could not be Part of a Letter to the Author upon this Subject.

Grounds some went upon in disowning the King's Authority.

1680.

Of their not praying for him.Of their leaving their Blood upon their Enemies.Of their promoting Separation.Council's Letter about the Queens-ferry Pa-pet, and Sanguinar Declaration, June 3.Proclamation
June 30.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 48.
Reflections
upon it.

wanting to theirs in disowning him, and testifying against these. And it was hard, yea, almost impossible to prevail with many of them, to conceive of, or allow any Difference 'twixt the Acknowledgment of the Authority, and the justifying the Abuse of it in unlawful Acts, and the Exercise of it to bad Ends. 3dly. That the Obligation of the Covenants bound them to oppose the Courses of the Time, being directly contrary thereunto, and when they could not forcibly oppose them, by reason of the general Apostacy of many, and Lukewarmness of others; yet they reckoned themselves bound to testify, and bear witness against the Breaches of them, even to the Death: And here it was likewise as hard to make them understand, that the Covenants bound them to no Opposition, but what was agreeable to their Stations, and according to their Ability and Opportunities, yea, to Nothing, but what, as Christians and baptized Persons, they were bound to. As for their refusing to pray for the King, some of them indeed scrupled the Terms GOD save, as a bidding him GOD speed in his Persecution, and as a Term demanded of, and dictated to them for that Purpose; and alledged the Practice of the primitive Christians, not only in refusing to deliver up their Bibles when required, as a Token of renouncing of Christianity, but even any other Book or Piece of Paper, which in other Circumstances they might have lawfully done. I do not remember that ever I conversed with one of the Sufferers, and I talked with most or all who suffered until August 1685, who scrupled to pray for the King in their own Terms, viz. for Repentance and Salvation to his Soul.

And as to their leaving their Blood upon their Enemies in general, or upon particular Persons accessory to their Trouble, I could never understand that they meant more by it, than the fastning a Conviction upon a brutish persecuting Generation, who vainly justified themselves as acting by Law, and inferred, that not they, but the Legislator were answerable if any Injustice was done.

Their practising and promoting Separation, was the most unaccountable Thing I observed in their Way, and evidently came from their Ignorance and narrow Spiritedness, which brought them to think, that no Body could oppose Evil and promote Good, but in their Way, and according to their Scheme. This way Breaches increased, and the little Strength we had was quite broken; all Charity was swallowed up in misconstruing and condemning others: And even such, who went together in Arms for Defence of the Gospel, rather hung than clave together; and some of the more judicious among them, what from the Indifference of some, and the irregular Heats of others, made the Grave at Ains-moss, and other Places, a very sweet Sanctuary, and most welcome.

In short, our Condition for some Time looked desperate; the Ministry was contemned, and the more judicious quite discouraged in their Endeavours to regulate the Zeal of the weaker and more unexperienced Set of People. It will still be found a dangerous Thing for People to be prejudiced at their spiritual Guides, and 'tis very hazardous for Ministers to give either Cause or Occasion for People to stumble at them, and far more to foster Prejudices in them; and I am of Opinion, that few, or no good Men have ever trode that Path, but have very soon found themselves out-run in Singularities, by those to whom they taught them, and have had Returns of the same Jealousy and Distrust, which they indulged as to others. This evidently appeared at this Time I am giving you an Account of.

When the Accounts of this Declaration came to the Council, they write to Lawderdale, June 30. That they had with Horror read the Paper taken on Mr. Cargil and Mr. Hall, and excuse their not giving an Account of it sooner to the King, for several Reasons. They add, While we are searching into this, a more execrable Paper was sent in by the General, published at Sanquhar, after a solemn Procession and singing of Psalms by One and twenty Men, with whom was Cameron. Of both which we send attested Copies. There is a Party of these Villains in Arms, about Seventy Horse, all clothed and mounted, most of them Ruffians and the Scum of the People; in Quest of whom the General has sent several Parties. They send also up the Proclamation they emit this Day, and desire the King's further Directions. By a Letter dated July 5. The King approves of what they have done, expects they will continue their Diligence, and use all lawful Means to bring these Rogues to exemplary Punishment. And to the end, that dutiful and loyal Subjects may be informed, and have a just Abhorrence of such Principles and Practices, the Council are authorized to cause print and publish that Covenant and Declaration, with such other Papers as they think fit to be published on this Occasion.

The Proclamation published June 30: I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 48. Reflections upon it are the less necessary, because this plain disowning the King's Authority was certainly irritating, and a Colour for any Severities that may appear in it against the Persons named, who no doubt had laid their Account with the worst the Government could do against them: Yet it is evident, the first Branch of the Narrative runs on what is not Matter of Fact, viz. that Mr. Cameron, his Brother, and Mr. Douglas had entred into that Covenant taken at Queens-ferry, out of which the Expressions are cited. This is but a Fetch to expose those People more, more, and it is certain that Paper was never finished, far less entered into; 'tis but too ordinary in publick Papers of this Period, to load the whole of a Society with that which any of them does, and others also who are no way concerned. The Method laid down by the Council for discovering these declared Traitors, appears most improper, and needlessly vexatious to the Liges, and, for what I know, was never used in any well ordered Government. The setting a Price upon Traitors Heads, and offering a Reward to such as shall discover them, hath still been reckoned sufficient; but this Method is now unreasonable, to put all Men and Women above the Age of Sixteen Years, in so vast a Bounds as is mentioned in the Proclamation, 20,000 or 30,000 Persons, to their Oaths, if they saw any of them, and to discover any lurking and hiding Persons, under the Pain of being reputed Traitors themselves. Many worthy Persons were at this Time forced to hide and lurk, no way concerned in this Declaration, whom a good many of the Inhabitants of these Places would by no Means inform against, and so did not compare at the Courts appointed. The Heritors are obliged to give their Returns upon Oath, and so new Vexation came to many innocent and religious People, who had no Share in this Declaration.

Thus the Land mourned because of Swearing; and Oaths, unnecessarily multiplied, lost their Design, and the Lord's Name was profaned. Indeed at this Time the Solemnity of an Oath, the great Tie of human Society, and Basis of civil Government, was so weakened, and Peoples Consciences debauched, with so many, and sometimes contradictory Oaths, that Atheism and Irreligion broke in like an overflowing Flood, and all Bounds were loosed: And as if this had been too little, the same Imposition of swearing all Persons, is extended over all the Kingdom, in case the suspected Persons go out of the Places named. Besides all this, Five thousand Merks are offered to any who discover Mr. Richard Cameron, and Three thousand for Mrs. Cargil, Douglas, &c. Perhaps 'tis scarce worth while to add, that Ten thousand Merks are offered for the Discovery of the Murderers of Archbishop Sharp, and but Three thousand for these reputed Murderers of the King. After all, I question if Mr. Thomas Douglas was at Sanguhar. I find no Accounts of any preaching in the Fields after Bothwell, except Mrs. Cargil and Cameron; yea, Mr. Cameron, in one of his Papers before me, complains, that he applied to several Ministers not indulged, to preach with him, but says, None would joyn, the Times being so very hazardous.

1680.

Oaths sadly abused, and unnecessarily multiplied.

Joynly with this Proclamation, the Council take surer Methods than that of Oaths, for reaching such whom they had declared Rebels, and order most Part of the standing Forces to the West and South. I find Seven Troops of Horse, with a Regiment of Foot, in Galloway, and the adjacent Places, under the Earl of Linlithgow, Major Cockburn, Strachan, Claverhouse, and others. They pretended to seek after Mr. Richard Cameron, and his Followers, but under this Colour, all were again oppressed who had been at Bothwell, or had been denounced Fugitives for Noncompearance at Courts. And in short, all Nonconformists to Prelacy were haralled, the whole Country was depopulated, and dreadful Oppressions and Severities committed.

The Army
oppress the Country very much at this Time.

The General now having the Army at his Command, without waiting the Council's Orders, I cannot give their Motions from the Registers as formerly. But June 30. I find the Council recommend to him to order out the Forces in different Parties, to search for and apprehend the Persons named in the Proclamation, and bring in them and their Accomplices dead or alive, and that he call such of the Nobility and Gentry as he shall see fit, with their Dependents, to his Assistance. They also write Letters to the Sheriffs in the West and South, 'That it belongs to their Office to prosecute Rebels and Traitors, till they apprehend them, or drive them out of their Bounds, and for that end to call the Heritors and Freeholders to their Assistance, and they are required so to do as they would shew their Zeal for his Majesty's Service.'

Council's Orders to the Sheriffs to assist them.

Under all this, it was Time for the People who were concerned in Sanguhar Declaration, to look to themselves, and some few got together merely to defend themselves. I find from the Judiciary-registers in the Process against Potter and Stuart, November this Year, which shall be noticed in its own Place, that a little before Airs-moss, and after Sanguhar Declaration, Mr. Richard Cameron, his Brother, the said Potter, Stuart, and about Thirty others, did enter into a mutual League for their mutual Defence, the Original whereof signed by those Persons was produced in that Process, and I shall insert it here as its proper Room.

These concerned in the Sanguhar Declaration enter into a Bond of mutual Defence.

WE Undersubscribers bind and oblige our selves to be faithful to God, and true to one another, and to all others that shall joyn with us in adhering to Rugland Testimony, and disclaiming the Hamiltoun Declaration, chiefly because it takes in the King's Interest, which we are loosed from by reason of his Perfidy, and Covenant breaking, both to the most high God, and the People over whom he was set, upon the Terms of his propagating the main Ends of the Covenants, to wit, the Reformation of Religion, and instead of that, usurping to himself the Royal Prerogatives of Jesus Christ, and incroaching upon the Liberties of the Church, and so stating himself both in Opposition to Jesus Christ the Mediator, and the free Government of his House; as also in disowning and protesting against the Reception of the Duke of York, a profest Papist, and whatever else hath been done in this Land, (given to the Lord) in prejudice of our covenanted, and universally sworn to Reformation. And altho', as the Lord, who searcheth the Heart, knows we be for Government and Governors, both Civil and Ecclesiastick, such as the Word of God and our Covenants allow, yet by this we disown the present Magistrates, who openly and avowedly are doing what in them lies, for destroying utterly our Work of Reformation from Popery, Prelacy, Eraastianism, and other Heresies and Errors; and by this we declare also that we are not any more to own Ministers indulged, and such as drive a sinful Union with them; nor are we to joyn any more in this publick Cause with Ministers or Professors of any Rank, that are guilty of the Defections of this Time, until they give Satisfaction proportioned to the Scandal and Offence they have given.'

Copy of it

1680.

This League and Combination, as the Registers term it, is much of the Temper with Sanguar Declaration, only it seems about Thirty of them subscribed it, and it went no further. One needs not be surpris'd to find them taking all the Precautions they can for their mutual Safety, and yet, it seems, very few joyned in this League and Association, anent which I know no more but what I have set down.

Outrages of the Soldiers in their ranging up and down.

Mean while, great Numbers of Soldiers were quartered upon Country Families, and where they lodged one Night, they eat up as much Provision as they could, and brought in Sheep and Cows and killed them, without paying any Thing; they put their Horses into the Meadows and the standing Corn, and either eat them up, or trode them down; any Horses they saw feeding, or found in Houses, they seized, and made the Owners pay their Worth, or took them with them: All the Houses in their Rout were perfectly spoiled, and one Troop and Company coming upon the Heels of another, any Thing left by the first, was quite consumed by the After-comers. Dreadful were the Ravages they made upon the Sabbath-days throughout all the Country round them. I have seen Sums of almost incredible Losses sustained this way, in the Parishes of Carsphairn, Dalry, Balmaclellan, Corsmichael, and many other Places whither the Soldiers came.

Rencounter at Airs or Airs-moss, July 20.

Rathillet's Narrative of it.
App. No. 49.

Further Accounts.

While the Soldiers are thus ranging up and down, the Rencounter at Airs-moss, in the Parish of Auchinleck in Kyle, falls in July 20. this Year. The Advantage got there by the regular Forces, both encouraged them, and very much discouraged the Sufferers. It is but a very imperfect Account of this I can give, and to supply the Want, I have App. No. 49. subjoyned Hackstoun of Rathillet his Account of it, in a Letter to his Friend July 25.

All I need further notice is, that Mr. Richard Cameron, Rathillet, and the few Persons with them, were very unprovided, and perfectly surpris'd by Earlshall and his Party; the King's Soldiers were trained, well armed, and, generally speaking, Horsemen, and numerous. The Party accidentally with Mr. Richard Cameron, were but Twenty three Horse, and Forty Foot, very ill armed, expecting no such Attack. Earlshall had more than double Horse to these who were with Mr. Cameron, and General Dalziel, and the most Part of the Forces were very near. The Country Men posted themselves upon the Entrance to a Moss, resolving to charge the King's Party briskly when they came up. This the Horsemen did, and broke through the first Line, killing severals; but their Foot not advancing, but only firing, the few Horse were quickly surrounded by their Enemies, neither asking nor giving Quarters. Hackstoun of Rathillet, whose Horse stuck in a Bog, and he being perfectly disabled by Wounds, with some others, were taken. The Foot received little or no Hurt, retiring into the Moss, whither the Soldiers could not follow. The Soldiers owned that the Country Men behaved themselves with the utmost Bravery, and very few of them who engaged, escaped, being overpowered with Numbers, and the King's Horse being in good Tilt.

Mr. *Richard
Cameron* killed.

His Character.

Mr. Richard Cameron was killed upon the Spot, and his Head and Hand cut off by Robert Murray, and carried in to the Council, who ordered them to be set up on the Nether-bow Port in Edinburgh. I need add little as to his Character; he appeared with much Warmth against the Indulgence, and when licensed, mostly by the Interest of Mr. John Welsh, who was very far from approving the Heights he went to, he was the first who preached Separation upon that Score. He went over to Holland before Bothwell, and was indefinitely ordained; and when he came home, none of the Ministers joyned him save Mr. Donald Carnegie. Several Meetings of Ministers used their utmost Endeavours to divert him from preaching Separation, but did not prevail. Henry Hall was with him in most of these Conferences, and very much supported him.

Others killed
at Airs-moss.

James Gray of Carsiston younger, his Character.

His Brother Michael Cameron was likewise killed in this Engagement, as also Captain John Fowler, John Gemble, John Hamilton, Robert Dick, Thomas Watson, and Robert Paterfson in Kirkhill of Camnethan, of whom I have the Character that he was a singularly pious and zealous Youth. James Gray younger of Christoun, Son to James Gray of Christoun in Calder Parish, was likewise killed. I have his Character from a Person of very good Sense, who knew him fully; and he signifies to me, 'That tho' these Men and their Conduct at Airs-moss have been very meanly spoken of, yet he can allure me several of them were worthy Persons;

Persons; and particularly Mr. Gray was a Youth of good Parts, high Courage, and pious from his Infancy: At that Time he was swallowed up of his Zeal for, and Sympathy with the Truths and People of God; and being a sturdy healthy Man, in the Heat of his Youth, he could not be off the Field of Action, where any was; yet he was sorely crushed, and broken with the Divisions of the Time. Mr. Cameron was observed to pray, when under the Views of this Engagement, Lord, take the ripest, and spare the greenest; and this was evidently to be seen in this Youth, he was Drop-ripe for this Change, burdened in Spirit with the Evils and Breaches of this Time, and he most forwardly engaged. The Soldiers owned he was the Person who mauled them most. Several of his Companions there were of his Temper, and the ripest were indeed taken. We want not other Instances of pious Persons, essaying impracticable Things, and perishing in the Attempt, which flowed from Zeal, and was mixed with Self-resignation, and they have been rather esteemed heroick, than mad and irregular.

No doubt others were killed at this Rencontre, but these are all I have any certain Accounts of. There were taken Prisoners David Hackstoun of Rathillet, who was, as we heard, present at the Death of the Archbishop, but would not be concerned any way in it. Likewise, one Manuel in Shots Parish, who died of his Wounds, and harsh Treatment after them, just as he entred Edinburgh Tolbooth; and John Vallange of the Parish of Auchinleck, died of his Wounds the Day after he was brought to Edinburgh, most christianly and cheerfully, as I have it from a Person of Honour who was with him at his Death. Besides these, Archibald Alison in the Parish of Evandale, and John Malcom in the Parish of Dalry, were taken, and, as we shall hear, were executed; and by one of Hackstoun's Letters, I find another in Prison with them for the same Cause, John Pollock, who was put in the Boots, and endured the Torture with much Firmness and Cheerfulness; but I have no more about him. This is all the Account I can give of this Engagement at Airs-moss. The Executions and Persecution upon the Back of it, will make up another Section.

Persons taken Prisoners.

SECT. V.

Of those who were executed after Airs-moss, and other Branches of Persecution which followed it; of the Torwood Excommunication, the Proceedings of the Council on it, and some more Executions in the Close of this Year.

Every Attempt of the oppressed to recover their Liberty, when disappointed, increaseth their Misery; and every Struggle, when it cannot be gone through with; galls, and does but make the Chains more uneasy: So it was after Pentland and Bothwell, and all the Attempts for Self-defence in the persecuted Party.

Thus it was after Airs-moss: Those who were taken were executed as Traitors; Three of them within a very little after that Scuffle, and Two more in the Close of the Year.

Persons executed as Traitors after Airs-moss.

I come now to give some Account of the Government's Procedure against them. David Hackstoun of Rathillet was the most noted of the Prisoners; and, besides what hath been already dropt anent him, I shall only further remark, That he was a good Gentleman in Fife, and once a Comrade and Intimate of the Chancellor's. I am told he was without any Sense of Religion in his younger Days, but getting Good of the Gospel preached in the Fields, and having thereby a real and thorough Change wrought upon him, he left all to follow it, and at last sealed it with his Blood. His Letter, Part of which is already insert in the Appendix, and the rest printed already, Cloud of Witnesses, p. 26. gives some Account of his Trial; and what I now add shall be from the Registers.

Hackstoun of Rathillet's Character.

Upon the Accounts of his being taken, the Council, July 24. give the following Orders about him. 'The Magistrates of Edinburgh are appointed, as soon as the Body of D. Hackstoun of Rathillet is brought to the Water-gate, to receive him, and mount him on a bare-backed Horse, with his Face to the Horse's Tail, and his Feet tied beneath his Belly, and his Hands fligh-tered with Ropes; that the Executioner, with Head covered, and his Coat, lead his Horse up the Street to the Tolbooth, the said Hackstoun being bare-headed; that the Three other Prisoners be conveyed on foot, bare-headed, after him, with their Hands tied to a Goad of Iron: Ordain the said Executioner to carry the Head of Cameron upon a Halbert, from the Water-gate to the Council-house; that no Meat or Drink be given to Hackstoun after he is in Prison, but what is prepared in the Master of the Tolbooth his House, and given by him; that none speak with him, or any Letters be conveyed to him; that the Master of the Tolbooth have a special Care of his Person, as he will be answerable, Life for Life.' One of the Council's Orders, June 24. to the Magistrates of Edinburgh about him.

1680.

the Bailies of Edinburgh, and John Vane Master of the Tolbooth, are called, and those Orders given them. No Reflections are necessary upon these severe Orders. In the Afternoon, he and the other Prisoners were examined before the Council, but the Particulars are not inserted in their Books. July 27. they order the Advocate to pursue a criminal Process against him upon Thursday, and reserve the Appointment of the Time, and Manner of his Execution to themselves.

His Carriage
before the Council.

By other Accounts, I find that upon the 24 of July, he was brought before the Council, and tho' he answered very boldly, and with much Openness, without the least Reserve, yet they threatened him with Torture; which, as it was inhumane and unjust in most Cases, so it was barbarous in his; for his Wounds were many, and his bodily pain and Weakness very great; yet being a Person of extraordinary Courage and Boldness, the Threatning did not at all move him. He declined their Authority, and refused to sign his Declaration; and, if I mistake not, he was the first of the Sufferers of this Period who refused to own the King's Authority.

Council's Act
about the Manner of his execution, the Day before his Trial.

July 29. the Council, the Day before Rathillet's Trial, determine the Manner of his Execution: They well knew his Judges would find him guilty, yet this seems an extraordinary Step. It stands in their Books as follows. 'That his Body be drawn backward on a Hurdle to the Cross of Edinburgh; that there be an high Scaffold erected a little above the Cross, where, in the first Place, his right Hand is to be struck off, and, after some Time, his left Hand: Then he is to be hanged up, and cut down alive, his Bowels to be taken out, and his Heart shewn to the People by the Hangman; then his Heart and his Bowels to be burnt in a Fire prepared for that purpose on the Scaffold: That afterward his Head be cut off, and his Body divided into Four Quarters; his Head to be fixed on the Nether-bow, one of his Quarters, with both his Hands, to be affixed at St. Andrews, another Quarter at Glasgow, a Third at Leith, a Fourth at Burntisland; that none presume to be in Mourning for him, or any Coffin brought; that no Persons be suffered to be on the Scaffold with him, save the Two Bailies, the Executioner and his Servants: That he be allowed to pray to God Almighty, but not to speak to the People: That the Heads of Cameron and John Fowler be affixed on the Nether-bow: That Hackstoun and Cameron's Heads be fixed on higher Poles than the rest.' These Orders, with such as were before given at his coming into Edinburgh, are so spiteful, inhumane, and barbarous, that I wonder how they were fallen upon by the Managers, or what they could design by them.

He is indicted
before the Justiciary, July 30.

In the Books of Justiciary I find his Process, July 30. 'He is indicted, for being at Bothwell-bridge, in the Form above narrated, and for drawing, with Mr. Richard Cameron and Mr. Donald Cargil, Two treasonable Papers, the Fanaticks Covenant taken at Queensferry, and the Sanguhar Declaration; that in July instant, he attacked and fought with a Part of his Majesty's Forces, commanded by the Laird of Earlshall, and thus levied War against the King; and that upon May 3. 1679. he assaulted James Archbishop of St. Andrews, discharged several Shots at him and his Daughter, and when he came forth, and on his Knees begged Mercy, so inhumane and sacrilegious was he, that he pitied not his gray Hairs, nor the Shrieks of his Daughter, but murdered him on the Place; and, in token of his Guilt, did not compear at the Head Town of the Shire, when ordered so to do by the Council's Proclamation, upon the Pain of being counted accessory to that Murder; and that he had declined the Authority of the Justiciary, and of his Majesty.

His Declinature to the Justiciary adduced
for Probation.

It seems he had compeared before the Justiciary, July 28. and declined them; and for Probation, his Declinature is adduced by the Advocate, as follows. 'Edinburgh, July 28. In Presence of the Lords of Justiciary, compeared David Hackstoun of Rathillet, and declares he declined the King's Authority, and the Authority of the Commissioners of Justiciary, as his Judges, and obstinately refuses to sign this Declinature, as being before Persons who are not his Judges: He refuses to answer anent the Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews; and adds, That the Reasons of his Declinature are, because they have usurped a Supremacy over the Church, belonging alone to Jesus Christ, and have established Idolatry, Perjury, and other Iniquity in the Land; and, in prosecuting their Design, and in confirming themselves in their usurped Right, have shed much innocent Blood: Therefore, he, as adhering to Christ his Rights and kingly Office over the Church, declines them who are his open Enemies and Competitors for his Crown and Power, as competent Judges, and refuses to sign his Declinature dictated from his Mouth. Upon which the Advocate takes Instruments, and requires the Lords to sign it in his Presence; and the Advocate further takes Instruments, That the Pannel caused delete the Word refuses to deny, and made it run, refuses to answer as to the Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews. Extracted, &c.

Further Proofs
of the Libel.

For further Probation, Andrew Bruce of Earlshall, and a Soldier, depone as to Airs-moss. William Wallace, Servant to the late Archbishop, depones, He searched the House of Mortoun, and Rathillet's Sister told him, her Brother and Balfour of Kinloch had been there, and at the Murder. Abraham Smith, Servant to the late Archbishop, depones, He saw the Pannel on a light coloured Horse, at some Distance from the Coach, and that he took the same Horse in Mortoun House, and hoped to have taken the Pannel there, who escaped.

Rathillet,

Rathbillet, when in the Pannel, again declined the King's Authority, and adhered to his former Declinature, and charged the Lords, who should condemn him, to answer for his blood; and refused to answer or deny any thing anent the Archbishop's Death: And being questioned, if he made his Escape out of the House of Morroon, when pursued by the Archbishop's Servant, refused to answer; but declared he had made many as remarkable Escapes as that was, within these Two Years.

The Ailize brings him in guilty, and the Lords sentence him to die that Day, at the Cross of Edinburgh, in the Manner we have heard. The Sentence was executed with great Solemnity and Severity, tho' he was a Gentleman of good Descent, excellent Parts, and remarkable Piety, and his Body terribly mangled, and he dying of his Wounds. After his Hands were cut off, which he endured with great Firmness and Patience, he was drawn up to the Top of the Gallows with a Pulley, and, when choked a little, let down alive within the Hangman's Reach, who opened his Breast with a Knife, and pulled out his Heart, which moved upon the Scaffold. Then the Executioner stuck his Knife in it, carried it about the Stage, and shewed it to the Spectators, crying, Here is the Heart of a Traitor. And then the rest of the Sentence was executed, as above. What he left behind him, which he would have spoken at his Death, if permitted, hath been once and again printed, and I swell not this Work with it. This barbarous Procedure did very much discover the malicious Temper of his Persecutors, and imbittered the Spirits of a great many.

Upon the 4 of August, I find the other Two Men, who had been taken at Airs-moss, before the Justiciary, John Malcom of the Parish of Dalry in Galloway, and Archibald Alijon of the Parish of Evandale in Clydsdale. Their Indictment runs in common Form. They confess they were at Bothwel-bridge, and at Airs-moss, and receive their Sentence to be hanged at the Grass-market upon the 11 of August. That Day, or, as other Papers make it, the 13. they were executed, and died in great Assurance and comfortable Hopes of well-being. Their Speeches and Testimonies are lately printed in the Cloud of Witnesses, and so I have passed them here. Thus all were cut off whom they caught at Airs-moss. We shall presently meet with some others dying for being there, who fell into their Hands afterwards.

When thus the Managers had dispatched as many as they could of that inconsiderable Handful, surprized and dissipated at Airs-moss, this did not prevent their going on in harassing and spoiling the Country. Many Parties of the Soldiers had fresh Orders given them to search up and down, and quarter in different Parishes in the West and South, that they might be in Readiness, and at the Catch, when any of the persecuted Party were heard of.

Thus I find Captain Inglis, with his Troop of Dragoons, in August and September, sometimes in one Parish, and sometimes in another, for some Weeks, making the most diligent Search for Persons who had been Hearers of Mr. Cameron, or yet heard Mr. Cargil. And I cannot help observing more than once, because it frequently falls in my way, that upon every new Incident which exasperated the Government, and brought the merciless Soldiers upon the poor Country, they not only look'd after the Persons suspect to be guilty as to what they came to search after, but went as far back as Pentland, yea, I may say, the Restoration; and all Nonconformists, every Body suspected to have been at Pentland, all intercommuned Persons, Conversers with them, every one who was alledged to have been at Bothwel, and all Noncompleers at Courts, yea, the very Families and Relations of such, felt their Fury and Violence.

In the Parish of Carsphairn, I find Inglis with his Men persecuting violently in September. Parties were continually searching, by Night and Day, in that and the neighbouring Parish of Dalry, for such who had been Hearers of Mr. Cameron. The Soldiers were particularly set upon the finding out of John Frazer, and John Clark, Two pious worthy Country Men, who, they alledged, had been very intimate with Mr. Cameron. Frequently the Soldiers misted them very narrowly, and these Two, as well as many others, were trysted with very remarkable and providential Deliverances, from those who were hunting after their Life. Several Instances whereof are before me.

Robert Cannon of Mardrogat, who once had a Profession of Zeal and Seriousness, was singularly useful to the Soldiers, in discovering the Haunts and Hiding-places of the Wanderers. This Man, as we have heard, was at Pentland, but was lately gained by the Managers, and now turned profane and wicked: His Lewdness, Blasphemy, Cursing, Swearing, Cruelty and Dissimulation, were notour in that Country; and, as Apostates generally are, he was very bloody. He got Money at Edinburgh, and undertook to lead the Soldiers to Mr. Richard Cameron. And when the Duke of Tork came down this Winter, he made his Boast, that he had directed Earlshall to him, but for any Thing I can find, without any Ground; for the Rencontre was unforeseen. About this Time Cannon is made Collector of the Cess and Excise in Carsphairn, and the Neighbourhood; and Inglis, Livingstone, and other Commanders of the Parties who ravaged up and down, made their Searches, and did every Thing almost by his Direction.

In their Searches through that Country the Soldiers used to gather, and where they were unwilling to seize all the Men in the several Country Houses and Villages, and bring them together 1680.

Rathbillet adheres to his Declinature.

Sentence executed with Solemnity.

John Malcom and Archibald Alijon sentenced Aug. 4 and hanged Aug. 11.

The Soldiers continue harassing the Country.

Particularly Captain Inglis.

Strict Searches for Mr. Cameron's Followers, particularly John Frazer and John Clark.

Cannon of Mardrogat, now a profane Apostate, very useful to the Soldiers in discovering the Haunts of the Wanderers.

1680.

Courts held in Terms of the last Proclamation.

gether to one Place, then Cannon was sent for, and he knowing many of them, and the Sufferers in those Bounds, they were kept or let go according to the Information he gave about them. And many such Informers there were at this Time, in divers Places up and down.

Courts were held, when these Searches were making for Mr. Cameron's Followers, in the Terms of the Proclamation last spoken of. The most Part of the Heritors were unwilling to obtemper the Proclamation, and the Officers of the Forces took this Work in their Hands, and great Multitudes were put to their Oath in a most arbitrary Manner, and their Inquiries were extended to all the Branches of Nonconformity. The Officers made their Mercat upon Absents, and such as came not. Courts of this Nature were held at new Gal-loway, and other Places this Harvest.

Mr. Donald Car-gil continues preaching in the Fields.

Mean while, Mr. Donald Cargil, the other Minister concerned in Sanquhar Declaration, and now the only remaining Preacher at Field-conventicles, is wandering up and down as he best might, and now and then preaching in Places at greatest Distance from the Soldiers.

At the Tor-wood
he pronounceth
the higher Excommunication
on the King,
Duke of York,
&c.

In September this Year, he had a large Meeting at the Tor-wood in Stirling Shire, where, without any Concert, and to the Surprise of many, he pronounced the Sentence of the highest Excommunication upon many of the most eminent Persecutors of the Lord's People. This Step of his was approved by none that I know of, but his own Followers, who now set up themselves in Distinction from the rest of the Presbyterians in Scotland, and refused to partake in Ordinances dispensed by any Presbyterian Minister, till Mr. James Renwick came home to them from Holland, about Three or Four Years after this.

The Abstract of this unprecedented Excommunication, plainly disagreeable to the Rules of this Church, and our known Presbyterian Principles, the Reader will find in the Hind let loose, Page 138. and the Form of it, in the Cloud of Witnesses, Page 265.

By Papers before me, I find Mr. Cargil lectured, after a Preface wherein he gave some Account of his Design, upon Ezek. xxi. 25, 26, 27. and preached from 1 Cor. v. 13. and then went forward to denounce the highest Sentence upon the King, the Duke of York, the Dukes of Monmouth, Lawderdale, and Rothes, General Dalziel, and the Advocate. And in the Afternoon he preached from Lam. iii. 32. I shall give no Abstract of the Sermons, we may easily guess the Strain they ran upon.

Remarks upon

This Step of Mr. Cargil's hath been Matter of much Reproach and Ludibry to the Enemies of the Church of Scotland, whereas they do but expose themselves in charging it upon other Presbyterians, since every Body knew Mr. Cargil was perfectly alone in this Matter. However, I cannot but remark here, that the Jeerings and Scoffs upon this Step, came very awkwardly from the Mouths and Pens of the Asserters of the Hierarchy and Canons, and Advocates for the Practices of the Church of England.

This Excommunication awkwardly scoffed at by the Asserters of the Hierachy, and some way is supported by the Scots and English
Canons.

Both our Scots Canons 1636. and the English Canons begin with Anathema's against all who do any Thing against the Government by Archbishops and Bishops, &c. by which, not only the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, but even their blessed Martyr King Charles himself, ex post facto, comes in under their solemn Excommunication. And in Ireland and elsewhere, they did actually excommunicate many worthy Ministers, and others eminent for Religion, Learning and Usefulness; to say Nothing of the Slur this casts upon all the reformed Churches. Neither shall I add any Thing upon these Peoples common Prostitutions of that awful and tremendous Sentence, in Cases which relate to the smallest trifling civil Matters, while in the mean Time the lesser Excommunication, the Rail our Lord hath set about the holy Mystery of his Supper, is perfectly neglected, and People every way unfit, forced to participate, as a Test for their Admission to civil Places. I know these scandalous Prostitutions of holy Things, are a Burden to the better Sort in England and Ireland; yet the Reflection upon them, and their own Share in continuing these Abuses, ought, methinks, to silence the high Fliers, and restrain them from their Invectives upon Presbyterians, as to this Matter I am now upon.

These Observes are not made to vindicate Mr. Cargil's Practice, but, if possible, in Time coming, to prevent Railing against this Church upon this score, who are indeed no way concerned in it: And it was pronounced upon Persons of a quite different Character and Practice from such, whom the Persons they admire have anathematized. After all it was observed, that most of the Persons excommunicated at this Time, had somewhat remarkable in their Exit, tho' that may be far better lodged at the Door of their own loose Lives and Practices, than of this Sentence. This Step did further exasperate the Government against the persecuted Party, yea, tho' very groundlessly, against all Presbyterians.

Three others executed for Field-conven-
ticles at the End of this Year.

Toward the End of this Year there are others executed for Field-conventicles, and being at Airs-moss. After the Duke of York came down in October, the Persecution turned yet more severe. I shall only hint at the Processes of Mr. Skene, Archibald Stuart, and John Potter, and leave several other Things might be brought in here, to the last Section.

Mr.

Mr. James Skene, Brother to the Laird of Skene in Aberdeen Shire, was seized in November. He was but lately brought over to follow the Gospel preached by Presbyterian Ministers; and coming South not many Weeks ago, fell in with some of Mr. Cargil's Followers, and upon hearing him was much taken, and for some little Time he haunted his Sermons, but was no way concerned in Bothwel, Airs-moss, or Tor-wood Excommunication, these all being before he came South. He was soon informed against, and taken up as a Hearer of Mr. Cargil. When brought before the Council, he could only be staged for hearing Mr. Cargil, which he owned, as likewise his Opinion anent the Lawfulness of the Riling at Bothwel and Airs-moss, and did not disapprove of the Sanquhar and Queens-ferry Papers. Upon which he was remitted to the Justiciary to be tried for his Life, tho' except in Point of Opinion, he was accessory to none of these.

1680.

Mr. James Skene Brother to the Laird of Skene taken in November, and remitted to the Justiciary.

His Examination, Letters, and Testimony are lately published in the Cloud of Witnesses: And some of his Ways of expressing of himself, as to those Heads he was but lately acquainted with, in his fervent Zeal, are so liable to Exception, that the Collectors of that Book find it proper to caution their Readers with some marginal Notes, for clearing the Sense in which they would have them taken.

Account of him in the Cloud of Witnesses

I am very unwilling to say any Thing that may seem harsh upon the Expressions of any of these, who, from a sincere Regard to the Truth, suffered in this Period; no doubt some of them were liable to Mistakes in some Things; for my Share, I cannot but lothe the Severity, Craft, and Cunning of the Persecutors, which drove them to such a Length in those Matters, which I yet cannot see how to vindicate. Certainly there is a remarkable Difference 'twixt the Testimonies of those who died after Pentland, and, generally speaking, till this Year, and these which now come upon the Field; and sometimes I wonder to find some zealous and serious Persons, after this, in their Papers adhering to the Testimonies given at Pentland, and yet now running to a Strain far different from these. No doubt Matters were considerably changed to the worse in Fourteen Years Time, but as far as I can yet see, the Principles now advanced, would have led the Owners of them some further than these who went before saw proper to go, had they suffered in their Time.

The Testimonies of some now, differ much from the former Sufferers.

As to such who drew these Testimonies, I am apt to think, they were so straitned in Prisons and Irons, and hindred from a full pondering of what they left behind them, by the deep Impressions they were under of the Wickedness of the present Courses, that they have not adverted to the considerable Difference 'twixt the former Testimonies and theirs. Others of the Sufferers, who were not indeed in Case to draw Papers themselves, and, I am informed, had their Testimonies writ for them by some of the warmest of their Way, and approved the Draught when read to them, are yet less to be considered here. I am apprehensive the common Enemies to, and Slanders of these Sufferers will notice this, as likewise their waving of several Things before the Council and Justiciary, in which they came to be very positive when going into Eternity, now when they are at such Length published in the Cloud of Witnesses; otherwise I should have been altogether silent upon this Head.

Observes upon them.

And therefore upon this Occasion, once for all, I take the Liberty to notice, that the Party who published them, and the Collectors of the Cloud of Witnesses, have not duly considered the Consequences of propaling such a Collection of Letters, Answers, and Testimonies, in such an Age as this is, and what Advantages their Adversaries, and the common Enemies of Religion may make of several Expressions in them now made publick; and however they may please themselves with the Thoughts, that their own Party is strengthened, by picking out, and exposing to the World the Papers in that Book, and passing not a few of a more moderate Strain, yet I am obliged to add, that I fear in the Issue it be no great Service to the Interests of Religion, and the Kingdom of Christ. I know Defences and Explications may be given of unguarded Expressions, which may give the greatest Handle to such who seek it; but I doubt if even these will fully take off what may be objected against them.

And their being published in the Cloud of Witnesses

It is certain, and they know it better than I, that Mr. Renwick himself, and others when they came to more calm and solid Views of Matters in their after Papers, smoothed several Expressions in the Declarations and Testimonies of this Day, and gave the Sense, wherein they approved, and adhered to them in far more moderate Expressions; and one would have expected, that when it did appear that such unguarded Ways of speaking, were known to be Matter of Reproach and Upcast to Enemies, as well as Sorrow and Offence to Friends, such a Collection wholly upon the one Side, would not have been printed and published; yea, I am of Opinion, the exposing them as they have done, will be of no Service to themselves, considered as a Party. They have indeed the Assurance, Pref. p. 21. to score off the noble Earl of Argyle, and other Worthies, from the Number of Sufferers for Presbyterian Government, allowing them to be Martyrs for the Protestant Religion, because their Testimonies (as they conceive) were not concerted according to the true State of the Quarrel: But I am perswaded, this Innuendo will never lessen the fixed and glorious Character of those excellent Persons; however, it may give some People who wish none of us well, Occasion to say, that the State of the Quarrel they are so fond of, must be somewhat different from the Protestant Religion.

Remarks upon the Choice made of the Testimonies published in that Collection, and Collectors their omitting those who came not up then Length, and then I inuendo upon the Earl of Argyle, and others.

1680.

The rest of the Sufferers in this Church, who adhered to the sound and real Presbyterian and Reformation Principles of this Church, must not (according to them) come in for a Share in this State of the Quarrel; and I am of Opinion, they would not have been fond of stating their Sufferings as some in this Collection have done. I shall only wish that Papists and Prelatists may have no Ground from what is gathered together here, to bespatter the Protestant Religion, and Presbyterians in the general. I have made this Reflection, not as a Tach upon the Persons who suffered in the Period before me, for I am sensible much may be said in their Defence, at least for alleviating what Heights they went to, which, in the mean Time, will not lessen the Indiscretion of publishing all they have writ and said; but merely to prevent, if possible, the ill Consequences which may follow to Religion in general, and to take away any Occasion some may hence take of charging this Church with what is now published, as the Sentiments of Presbyterians.

Mr. Skene before the Council, Nov. 13. with their Procedure with him.

But to return to Mr. Skene, I shall first give what Hints I meet with in the Council-records about him and his Fellow-sufferers, and then the State of their Process from the Justiciary-books. November 13. the Council meet extraordinarily, upon Notice that some Prisoners are sent in by the General; and James Skene, Archibald Stuart, and John Spreul are before them, and examined. Their Answers are not recorded, but said to be in scriptis. At this Time, I find few of the Examinations of Persons before them are recorded in the Registers, and so I can give the less Account of them, save in Cases when produced by the Advocate before the Criminal Court, as Proofs of their Indictment. We shall afterwards meet with Mr. Spreul, and one Robert Hamilton, proceeded with him, and I delay giving any Account of them till it come in next Year. At the same Time, Harvey, a Woman in Borrowstounness is before the Council, and refuses to answer. They are all remitted to the Justices, that they may call them before them in a fenced Court, and take their judicial Confession; and their Confession before the Council is ordered to be sent to the Clerk of the Justiciary. That same Day, post meridiem, a Communion is granted to the Earl of Linlithgow, Perth, Lord Ross, Treasurer-depute, Advocate, Justice-clerk, and the General, to meet on Munday, and call before them James Skene, and the other Prisoners, and if they find them disingenuous, as to the Discovery of the Harbourers of Mr. Donald Cargil, that they examine them by Torture, and report. November 15. They report they had examined Archibald Stuart by Torture, prout in scriptis. The Council ordain him further to be examined, if John Spreul was in Company with him, and Cargil, on Thursday last, and the Advocate is ordered to form a Dittay against James Skene, upon his Confession: And November 18. Warrant is granted to Advocates to plead for Mr. Skene and the other Prisoners, and the Magistrates of Edinburgh are permitted to allow them free Prison and Converse.

He is before the Justiciary Nov. 22. and sentenced.

Mr. Skene is before the Justiciary November 22. where he is indicted, 'That he treasonably owned the Rebels at Bothwell and Ayr-moss, and ratified the same before his Royal Highness and Council, as well as the Proclamations at Rutherglen and Sanquhar, and owned the wicked and treasonable Excommunication at Torwood.' For Probation was adduced his own signed Confession, which he now adhered to before the Court. They sentence him to be hanged at the Cross, upon the 24. and his Head to be afterward cut off, but the Council dispense with this and some other Circumstances of his Sentence, and allow him to be buried.

He is reprieved till Dec. 1. when he was executed. His Letter upon this to Mr. Smith.

Upon his Petition to the Council, he obtained a Reprieve for Eight Days, that he might consider what he said. It was said, that a Person who was very warm, and had great Weight with him, charged him to stand to his Confession before the Council, and not retract, and urged peculiar Arguments, otherwise he might have been brought to some Condescensions. What was in this I know not, but I find him expressing himself upon this Head, in an original Letter to Mr. Walter Smith, in my Hands, to this Purpose. 'As for my Simplicity in yielding to carnal Relations to the wounding my Heart, I leave you to my Testimony. My suffering shall, I hope, be my Joy; my Remission would be easily had, but I will not accept, since I have done no Wrong. He hath remitted and pardoned all my Backslidings, and refreshed my Soul many Times this Day, November 30. 1680.' He was hanged with other Two I shall just now speak of, December 1. merely for his professed Opinion, without any Act charged upon him.

Remark on some Passages of Mr. Skene's Papers now published.

In his Papers left behind him, and, as hath been noticed, now published, Mr. Skene charges Mr. John Carlyle with calling him a Jesuit. Mr. Carlyle, as shall be noticed in the next Section, came to some Trouble about this Time, and disowned Mr. Skene's Tenets, and owned the King's Authority. In Charity I shall believe, that Mr. Skene was informed, that the reverend Mr. Carlyle had said so; but the same Charity, and Mr. Carlyle's known Tenderness and Temper, forbids me to believe he said so. Some ignorant Person hath informed Mr. Skene of this, and thereupon he leaves his Blood upon Mr. Carlyle, as well as the Duke of York, and other Persecutors. Mr. Skene likewise notices, that the Council offered him a Delivery, delivery, if he would submit to the Duke and Council's Mercy; what the Import of this was do not know, but in the ordinary Sense of the Words, it needs some Explication to make the refusing of it tenable. I know well, by subdalous Proposals, and captious Questions, great Endeavours were used to shake the Sufferers; and their Difficulties were great who came before Courts at this Time. And I am very far from peremptory judging this Gentleman or others, not fully knowing their Circumstances, but I must blame the propaling those Things to the World, without obviating the bad Improvement Adversaries may make of them. This, and several other Things I have noticed, make me with the Consequences of publishing private Letters, and other unripe Papers, had been more pondred before it had been ventured on.

November 24. I find John Potter Farmer in Uphall in West-lothian, and Archibald Stuart of Borrowstounness, staged before the Judiciary. The last was at Airst-moss, but the first had not been in Arms, and they had nothing to lay to his Charge but hearing Mr. Cargil, and his Opinion in owning the Sanquhar Declaration. They are indicted for rathabiting and approving of Bothwell Kissing, and the other Rebellion carried on by Mr. Cameron and David Hackstoun of Rathillet, for being at Airst-moss, at Torwood; and that they and their Accomplices, to the Number of Thirty, among whom were Mr. Richard Cameron and Mr. Thomas Douglas, at a Muir near Galloway, did in Summer last enter most treasonably into a Bond, League, and Combination among themselves, not only without Warrant, but contrary to Law, wherein they took off their Allegiance to his Majesty, and treated of Matters of Church and State treasonably, their Subscription to which they had judicially owned.

The Tenor of this Bond is set down Page 139. The Probation was, their own Confession of several of the Articles libelled before the Council. Archibald Stuart had been put to the Torture by Order of Council, and a Confession of his being at Airst-moss was extorted, and he likewise discovered a great many of Mr. Cargil's Haunts, and Places of hiding. Their Sentence is to be hanged at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, December 1. and accordingly Mr. Skene, and these Two were executed. The Testimonies left behind them the Reader will find in the Cloud of Witnesses.

Thus this Year ended with Blood, and we shall find the following Year beginning with shedding more Blood on these same Accounts. I come now to end this Section, with the further Procedure of the Managers against Mr. Cargil and his Followers, at this Time. We have already heard of Mr. Cargil's Excommunication, which could not but irritate the Government: We shall also afterwards hear, that they were galled with some Books and Pamphlets, lately imported from Holland; and the Apprehensions of Attacks designed upon some of their Persons, heightened all. Accordingly, November 13. Powers are granted to Linlithgow, Bishop of Edinburgh, and others, to search for Mr. Cargil, and seize such who have resort or conversed with him. It seems, they were informed he was in Edinburgh. Next Day, Robert Hamilton, Son to the Chamberlain of Kinneil, is taken up as having been at the Conventicles of Torwood and Largo-law.

November 22. the Council publish a very severe Proclamation against fanatical Conspirators, &c. which stands App. N<sup>o</sup>. 50. This Proclamation is artfully enough drawn, and contains a Deduction of Things speciously set together, to load the Sufferers as guilty of very evil Things. The large Deduction of Matters of Fact pointed at in it, already given in this History, will take off any Impressions that the Narrative may leave, and so I need say the less upon this Paper.

It needs no Refutation, when the Penner of the Proclamation brings the King in as careful to preserve the Protestant Religion in its Purity. Care is taken in what follows, to confound these concerned in Pentland and Bothwell, with the Persons who made the Attempt on the Prince, and published the Sanquhar Declaration, and excommunicated the King. I hope, by this Time, the Reader will be able to distinguish them. The short-lived Indulgence after Bothwell, is brought in to aggravate the Charge: But neither were any of the People, now alleged to be in a Conspiracy, comprehended under it; neither did it ever come to any Effect, being soon cramped and marred; otherwise, 'tis probable, many of the Evils in the following Years might have been prevented: And this Branch comes ill from the Party who marred the King's Favour. 'Tis Pedantry not to be answered, to add, That Pentland and Bothwell were so many running Field-conventicles. The Charge that follows is as ill grounded as the Narrative, That these People had entred into a Plot and Conspiracy to kill the King, his Brother, the Bishops, and I know not how many more. Nephthali, Jus populi, the apologetical Narration, give not the least Colour to the Doctrine of Assassinations. The Queensberry Paper does not either, as far as I have observed, countenance them, neither was it the Deed of any Society. The Sanquhar Declaration indeed disowns the King as such, and so does the other Bond spoken of above; but neither of them, as far as I have observed, do countenance Murder and Assassination, nor even the Excommunication of Torwood: But I leave these Papers to be vindicated by such who approve them; the Consequence fixed on them by the Proclamation I have not yet seen. The Paper, called in the Proclamation, the treasonable Bond and Combination, hath been already considered. I do not find, by any Pa-1680.

John Potter and Archibald Stuart before the Judiciary, Nov. 24. and executed with Mr. Skene, Dec. 1.

Further Procedure this Year against Mr. Cargil and his Followers.

Proclamation against Conspirators, Nov. 22. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 50. Remarks upon it.

1680.

pers in the Process, that Mr. Skene, Stuart, and Potter assert, it was their Duty to kill the King and his Brother; and, till I see that proven, I must take this Assertion only as a supposed Consequence, from their denying the King's Authority, the Justice of which I am yet to learn. Upon these Reasons, they declare these People Traitors, appoint all to treat them as such, and promise 5000 Merks to any who shall apprehend Mr. Cargil, 3000 Merks for Mr. Douglas, and 1000 Merks for any of the rest. And this Proclamation, to wound all Presbyterians, and these People in particular, is ordered to be read in all Parish Churches of the Kingdom. Upon the Whole, if any of these People did own the Lawfulness of killing the King, or his Brother, &c. no Body can, or will, I hope, offer to vindicate them.

However, the Noise of this alledged Plot and Conspiracy was of Use to the Managers, and they made it a Pretext to palliate their Severities against them and many others, whom they could never find concerned in any of these Papers.

Council's Letter, No. 22. to the King. App. No. 51.

Remarks on it.

That same Day, the Council write a Letter to the King, and send it with a Copy of the Proclamation. I have added it App. No. 51. It seems to be calculate to vindicate their own Severities against the People whose Lives they were taking, and to stir him to new Severities against all the Sufferers. The Remarks made upon the last Proclamation are applicable to this Letter, and I don't repeat them. I only add, That they here lay the whole Stress of the alledged Design of Assassination upon it. Stuart's Confession, which being in the Extremity of Torture, and not relative to any Design formed, but a Declaration merely of his own Opinion, that it was lawful to kill Persecutors, cannot reasonably be charged upon Mr. Cargil and his Party, who absolutely disclaimed any Design or Principle of Assassination.

George Piper in Aberdeen, before the Council for Conventicles, &c. and some others.

Little further offers from the Registers. In December, George Piper in Aberdeen, Prisoner for Correspondence with Mr. Skene and Mr. Cargil, is liberate, under Bond of 10000 Merks, to compare when called. He is soon called before the Committee for publick Affairs, who report to the Council, December 9. That he denies Converse with Mr. Cargil, disowns all bloody Principles, confesses Conventicles in his House, and refuses to refrain from them. They ordain him to be fined for Bygones. At the same Time, the Advocate is ordered to process George Johnston, James Stuart, George White, and William Dick, Prisoners for the Rebellion, and being at Torwood Conventicle. Christian Spence, Sarah Spence, and Janet Smith, having been Two Months in Prison for the last named Conventicle, being poor and ignorant, are ordered to be liberate; with Certification, if they be found at Conventicles again, they shall be scourged. We shall, next Year, find Mr. Cargil himself taken, and put to Death, and many brought to Trouble for hearing him.

S E C T. VI.

Of some Proceedings in Council; the Trial of my Lord Bargeny, and other incidental Matters which fell out this Year.

HAVING, in the former Sections, kept pretty much to the Series of the various Persecutions the suffering Party in Scotland underwent this Year, I come now to glean up some other Things which did not so easily come in with what is above, and yet serve to give Light to the History of this Year.

The Episcopal Clergy in Scotland generally against introducing the English Worship here, yet some for it.

There had been Essays among a few of the Clergy, to have the more pompous and splendid Worship of the Church of England introduced into Scotland, as had been projected, and brought a good Length by the Laudian Faction, in the 1636, and 1637. But, for any thing I can learn, most Part, by far, of our Episcopal Clergy, did not relish this foreign Worship; besides that, we were absolute Strangers to it since the Reformation from Popery, the Distinction and Independency of the Two Churches, was found most agreeable to the Temper of the Nation, already very much under English Influence, since the Union of the Crowns. The few who were for this Novelty, struck in with some Noblemen and others, who were under the Direction of the High-fliers, in Ceremonies and Forms in England, and resolved to make an Experiment of setting up that Service more privately, by Authority of Council: Accordingly, I find an Act of Council past to this purpose, which follows from the Registers.

Edinburgh, February 12. 1680.

1680.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered a Representation made to them by some of their own Number, That divers Persons of Quality, and others of this Kingdom, were very desirous to have the Allowance of the Use of the solemn Form of Divine Worship, after the laudable and decent Custom and Order of the Church of England, in their private Families, do hereby allow of the same, and give Assurance to them of the Council's Countenance and Protection therein.'

Act of Council allowing it in Families, Feb. 12.

I cannot find that this Allowance tempted many to fall in with this Novelty in Scotland; Matters were not come to the Pass with the Episcopal Clergy here, that they were at, when this same Game was plaid some few Years ago: They had not a Popish Pretender to bring in under the Shadow of this Worship; they were not depending for their Subsistence upon the High-fliers in England; and therefore, tho' this Project was favoured by several who were the great Supports of the arbitrary and oppressive Methods used in Scotland and England, as it hath been still ordinary for Persons of arbitrary Principles, contrary to the Liberty of the Subject, to set up highly for Forms and uninstituted Worship; yea, tho' the Duke of York, and the Popish Party were fond to have the publick Worship of Scotland brought some Steps nearer their Liturgy and Missale yet it did very little take in Scotland. I only remark further, That when our Scots Council are paving the Way for introducing the English Liturgy and Forms, I find, by some Letters before me, that the gallant Patriots of the English House of Commons, who were making so noble a Stand against Popery, by the Bill of Exclusion, were beginning to speak of removing the Liturgy and Ceremonies, at least of bringing in a Bill to reform them, and put a Stop to the violent urging and pressing of them.

Different Temper of the former Episcopal Clergy, from that of some of them at present with the Reasons.

English Patriots, at the same Time, for removing or reforming their Liturgy.

February 17. the Duke of York went back to London. I find, January 31. he acquaints the Council, 'That he was suddenly called to Court by the King; that it was with great Trouble he was to part with them, having met with so much Civility and Kindness here; that he would acquaint the King, that he had in Scotland a loyal Nobility and Gentry, and a Council, and other Judicatories, filled with loyal Persons; that he would still be ready to serve them. He recommended to them the Peace of the Kingdom, and wished the Council would make a just Representation of him since his coming among them, and let him know what he should represent to his Brother concerning the Rebels, and Absents from, and Deserters of the King's Host: Of the which Affairs, the Advocate being present, did fully lay the State before his Royal Highness. After which, the Chancellor represented the Happiness of this Kingdom, in his Presence, and how much they were obliged to his Advice and Conduct, and that they were ready to venture their Lives and Fortunes to do him Service; and they would represent to his Majesty, the Advantage they had by his Royal Highness's Presence, tho' they could never do it sufficiently.' February 15. the Duke takes his Leave of the Council: Compliments are renewed as above; and the Council grant a Protection to the Highland Clans, and agree to a very large Commission for the Peace of the Highlands, and the Copy of a Bond to be signed by the Clans, which the Duke takes with him for the King's Approbation.

What past 'twixt the Duke of York and Council, when he returns to England.

The Council, in answer to the Duke's Desire, write a very singular Letter to the King, which is so much out of the common Road, in its fulsome Compliments, that I insert it here, as one Instance of that abject slavish Spirit the Oppression of others, in their Consciences and Liberties, hath brought some unto.

Council's Letter, Feb. 17. to the King, about the Duke of York.

May it please your Majesty,

THE Remembrance of having been under the Protection of your Royal Family, above Two thousand Years, of having been preserved, by their Valour, from the Slavery to which others were so often reduced, and of having received from their Bounty the Lands which we possess, hath been very much refreshed and renewed by having your Royal Brother among us, in whom we have seen that Moderation of Spirit, and Equality of Justice, that is remarkable in your sacred Race, and hath raised in us a just Abhorrence of these seditious Persons, and pernicious Principles, which would lead us back to those dreadful Confusions which grew up by Degrees, from tumultuary Petitions for Reformation and Parliaments, to a Rebellion that in the last Age destroyed both, and which must do so still, since all who think that Subjects should direct their King, design nothing, in effect, but to be Kings themselves: The Convictions of all which, did prevail so far with all Degrees of Persons, and with Persons of all Perswasions here, that it has been easily observed, our Nobility and Gentry of both Sexes, attended their Royal Highnesses with much Joy and Affiduity, expressing, in all their Confluences, great Respect and Satisfaction, that even 1680.

ven the most malicious abstained from all Manner of rebellious Risings, and undutiful Speeches: No Breach of the Peace, no Libel, no Pasquil, having been ever discovered during his Abode here; so that this too short Time has been the most peaceable and serene Part of our Life, and the happiest Days we ever saw, except your Majesty's miraculous Restoration. And now, that your Majesty has thought fit to have him near your own Person, we hope the great Success he has had, in understanding both Men and Business among us, by his easy Access and constant Application, which will enable him to understand our Affairs and Interests, with which we trust him, and much more than we can this, or any other Papers we can send you. His Countenance hath much encouraged the orthodox Clergy, without being grievous to such other Protestants as differ from them: He hath quieted our Highland Eruptions, without encouraging any Opposition to Law, of which he told us he would always be most exactly careful, as being the common Tie, as well as Security, between King and People; and he hath, both by his Example and Discourse, recommended so to us Loyalty to your Majesty, as our own national Interest, and Moderation one to other, as the only Mean to fortify and unite us against the undermining Designs of such as would infallibly make us Slaves, as they did formerly, that we hope these Impressions shall not wear out while we live, who have been so happy as to know him at this Time; and for which Happiness we can make your Majesty no other Return, save to assure you, That with our Hearts, our Lives and Fortunes, we will maintain your sacred Majesty, and your Royal Successors, in the ordinary Degrees of Succession, according to their unalterable Right of Blood, which you and they only derive from God Almighty, whom you represent, and to wish that his Royal Highness may meet every where that Satisfaction and Tranquillity he has occasioned, and that Kindness and Affection which his Merit has raised in,

Edin. Feb, 17.
1680.

May it please your Majesty,

Your most loyal, most dutiful, and most faithful Subjects and Servants,

Rother Lord Chancellor,
St. Andrews,
Athole,
Privy Seal,
Douglas,
Argyle,
Marishal,
Murray,
Linlithgow,
Wigtoun,

Perth,
Queensberry,
Airly,
Dundonald,
Cathness,
Lord Bishop of Edinburgh,
President,
Treasurer-depute,
Register,

Advocate,
Justice-clerk,
Lord Collingtoun,
John Drummond of Lundie,
L. Justice-general,
Sir And. Ramsay,
Sir John Wauchop,
Sir Geo. Kinnaird,
Sir Geo. Gordon.

With this Letter to the King the Council send another to Lawderdale, signifying that, What is in the King's Letter, is the common Sentiments of all who had the Happiness to know his Royal Highness, and is so deeply fixed, that publick Judicatories, and private Families are expressing more Kindness for his Person, and Grief for his leaving them, than can be transmitted in Paper; and all are so just, as to bind themselves by Resolutions and Promises to serve him in his just Interests with all their Hearts, and are convinced he will have no Designs that are not such. They told the Duke, that by assuring the King of their Adherence to his Royal Interests, and his Royal Brother his just Rights, a new Obligation will be put on them.

Remarks upon it.

No Reflections shall be made upon these Letters. The Duke came down to Scotland, as a Shelter; and as he had a Party before sanguine enough in his Interests, so he strengthened and increased them, and it was native they should send Recommendations of him, which were not so far regarded in England, as to have any Effect to prevent a Second Attempt for a Bill of Exclusion this Year.

The Duke of York's Party persecute Presbyterians, and enrich themselves by their Spoils.

This Party of the Duke's carried all before them for many Years, and very much advanced a Popish Interest, by running Matters to the greatest Heights against sincere and zealous Protestants, and helped forward the Sufferings of the Church of Scotland I am relating, very much; and they found their Account, in running the Laws to the utmost Rigour against all within their Reach. We have heard prodigious Sums were exacted in the Beginning of the Year by the Justice-court, for Absence from the Host. And Feb. 23. Sir William Purves is made Collector of the Fines of the criminal Court.

And bear hard upon such as are not on their Side.

Most Part of these who had formerly been of the Duke of Lawderdale's Party, came in, and with him, during the little Time he stood, were hearty Servants to the Duke of Tork, and endeavoured to run down all they thought not so favourable to the Two Dukes. We

We have formerly met with some Processes of this Nature, and I shall here insert 1680.
Two more, which made some Noise this Year, against the Lord Bargeny, and John Niven.

All the Account I can give of the Trouble of John Lord Bargeny, in the Shire of Air, is from the Registers. He was suspected to favour the Cause of Liberty, and to be of the other Side from the Duke of Lawderdale; and last Year after Bothwell, some Surmises were raised of his favouring the People concerned in that Rising, whereupon he was made Prisoner in Blackness. In the Council Registers, December 4. last Year, just after the Duke of York's coming down, I find a Report from a Committee, who had been appointed to examine him in Blackness, that they had taken his Declaration, which is read, but not recorded. That Day the Governor of Blackness is allowed to permit Persons to speak with him in his own hearing, and to give him Pen, Ink and Paper, providing he see whatever he writes. At the same Time the Advocate produceth a Letter from the King, ordering him to proceed against the Lord Bargeny, as having incited Persons to rise in the late Rebellion. No more is about him in the Registers, till January 14. this Year, when their Act about him runs, 'Anent the Petition of John Lord Bargeny, that he hath been now Two Months close Prisoner in Blackness, occasioned by the Suggestions and malicious Informations of his Enemies, and he being conscious of his Innocence of any Disloyalty that can be laid to his Charge, and that in his Heart he did never harbour, far less did he ever practise any Evil against his Majesty or Government, craving that he may either be liberate, or presently put to a Trial; and that in the mean Time, or since his Imprisonment, there may be no Process, or Decrees of Session moved in, or given out to his Prejudice, his Adversaries at this Time being ready to take Advantage. The Council ordain the said Lord to be brought in to the Castle of Edinburgh, when ever the Advocate hath prepared his Indictment.

My Lord Bargeny's Process before the Council last Year.

This Matter is still put off till the End of March, when I find him before the Justiciary. The Managers had a Mind to have had his Estate, but their Probation failed them, and the Crimes in his Libel must be reckoned of the Advocate's framing. I shall give as short an Account of his Process, from the criminal Books, as I can.

His Process before the Justiciary, March 24.

February 24. John Lord Bargeny is indicted, 'That in the Year 1674, or 1675. he with great Oaths and Execrations did curse some of the chief Nobility in the Kingdom, because they would not make themselves the Head of the Fanatics, and swore they would never signify any Thing, because they lost that Opportunity. And because his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale, had, by his extraordinary Care, Prudence and Loyalty, defeated the Designs which he and the said Fanatics were managing, for disturbing the Government of the Church and State, he did, in the Year 1677, or 1678. publicly regret that the English, or Fanatics, did not kill, or assassinate the said Duke of Lawderdale, and did hound out others to assassinate him. That in the Year 1675, or 1676. he did endeavour to perswade George Martin Notar in Dally, That the Fanatics would never get their Business done while the Duke of Lawderdale was alive; and that an Hundred Men would do more by assaulting him in his own House at Lethingtoun, than all they could do beside. Likeas Mr. John Welsh, a factious Trumpet of Sedition and Treason, having made a Trade of convoking the Subjects in Field-meetings, the said Lord did correspond with him; and having direct a Letter to him, while he and his Complices were contriving another Rebellion, he did send the said Letter to Sauchill by his own Servant in May or June last; which being read at the said Convocation, as being come from him, did encourage that Rebellion. That he corresponded with Cunningham of Bedlan, desiring him to repair to the Westland Army, and perswaded all Gentlemen and others to joyn them, since he and Persons of far greater Quality would joyn; that he gave no Notice of his Tenants who had been at the Rebellion, but did entertain no tour Rebels in his House; that he did publicly maintain the Principles of Nephtali, Jus populi, Lex Rex, declaring that Scotland would never be well, till it wanted Episcopacy, and the present Government of the Church was destroyed, as unfit for the Nation. And in October or November last, did openly disclaim against the sacred Order and Function of Episcopacy, swearing he would never be in Peace till the Curates were rooted out, and that they were all but Knaves and Rogues. Wherethrough he is guilty of treasonable Crimes, and is either Art or Part thereof, and ought to be punished with Forfeiture of Life, &c.' in common Form.

His Indictment.

My Lord Bargeny's Advocates debated very long upon Formalities and Points of Law, which I shall not resume: After the Advocate had given his Replies, the Lords of Justiciary find, 'That the Advocate wants some of his material Witnesses, tho' he hath used all Diligence possible to adduce them.' And in regard the Pannel hath neglected to give a Double of his Letters of Exculpation, they continue the Process until the Second Munday of June.

The Process continued till June.

June 14. The Advocate compears and offers an additional Libel, 'That in May or June last Year, the Lord Bargeny hearing of the Murder of his Grace the late Archbishop of

When an additional Libel is offered and the Diet is deferred simpliciter.

1680.

of St. Andrews, said, It was happy, for he was a great Enemy to the Cause of God, and his People, the Kirk of Christ, or some such Words. And that some, by his Order, offered Arms to People going to Bothwell-bridge. Mr. William Hamilton Advocate for the Panel, mean while producech an Act of Council, of the Date June 3. 1680. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, in obedience to his Majesty's Commands, by a Letter, May 11 last, give order to the Governor of the Castle of Edinburgh, to set the Lord Bargeny at Liberty, in regard he hath found Caution to appear before the Council when called, in order to his Trial for the Crimes he is indicted of before the Lords of the Justiciary, under the Penalty of 50,000 Merks. William Paton. And upon this the Lords desert the Diet simpliciter.

King's Letter
for his Liberation.

The King's Letter, upon which this Process is stopped, bears, 'That he had received a Petition from the Lord Bargeny, representing his Father's Loyalty and Sufferings, asserting his Innocence of the Crimes he is indicted for, and attesting God thereupon, and his Majesty being unwilling, he, or any Subject should receive Prejudice by long Imprisonment, until there appear evident Proofs of their Guilt, requires him to be liberate, under sufficient Caution to appear in order to Trial, if hereafter sufficient Proofs of his Guilt be found. And that this Letter be communicated to the Justice-court and Advocate.

Another Party
Process against
John Niven
Skipper, for Words spoken
against the
Duke of Tork.

Another Party Process is intended against the Master of a Ship in July, for Treason shall I call it? against the Duke of Tork. July 15. John Niven Skipper, is indicted for saying at Burntisland, 'That the Duke of Tork had been upon a Plot for taking away his Majesty's Life, and had contrived with the King of France to invade England with an Army, and had come to Scotland to make a Party and Faction, and to introduce Popery.' The Probation is pretty full, and the Assize bring him in guilty of Leasing-making against his Royal Highness the Duke of Tork. The Lords delay the Sentence until August.

Sentences after Directions
from London.

Most Part of the Sentences were now pronounced according to the Commands of the Council, and Letters from the Court, and, it seems, it was found necessary to write to London, before they gave Sentence in this Matter, tho' our Statute Books and Laws were at Edinburgh. Accordingly August 4. the Lords pronounce for Doom, 'That John Niven, Captain of the Ship called the Fortune of London, found guilty by an Assize of Leasing-making against James Duke of Albany and Tork, shall be taken to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, upon the 18 instant, and hanged.' But August 6. a Letter from his Majesty to the Council is produced, authorizing them, so soon as the Sentence of Death is pronounced against John Niven, for most false and slanderous Words against his Highness James Duke of Albany and Tork, they cause the Sentence to be suspended, and that he continue in Prison, till his Majesty's further Pleasure be known. The King's Letter is recorded in the Justiciary Registers; and the Reason the King gives, is, The Interposing of his dearest Brother with him, and he adds, that the Crime is of so high a Nature, that no other Consideration would have prevailed with him, to relieve him from that exemplary Punishment.

In March, the Council interpose, by a Letter to Lawderdale, for William Paterson, who, we heard, engaged to transport the Prisoners taken after Bothwell, that his Loss by the Shipwrack may be made up, and send up a long Representation of his Losses, amounting to Fifteen hundred Pounds Sterling. What was done for his Help, I know not; but if the Council had shewed the Half of the Zeal they discover for Prelacy, against Murder, the Master they employed would have been prosecuted.

Mr. Maitland
Justice-clerk,
Earl of Roths
made Duke,
Queensberry
Justice-general,
Balcarras and
Roxburgh made Counsellors,
and Lord Lorn.

Upon the Duke of Tork's Return to his Brother, some Changes were designed in Scotland. March 8. the Chancellor acquaints the Council that he is called up to Court, by a Letter from the King: And April 18. Mr. Maitland's Commission is read in Council, to be Justice-clerk. June 3. the Earl of Balcarras is admitted a Counsellor. July 6. the Earl of Roths's Patent to be a Duke, is read in Council, and the Earl of Queensberry's Commission to be Justice-general, in Tarbet's Room. The Earl's Zeal against the Sufferers in that Station, fully satisfied the Prelates and Papists. That same Day the Earl of Roxburgh is received a Privy Counsellor; and the Lord Lorn, for his eminent Parts and Abilities, is made a Counsellor, October 5.

Manse of Bishops of Dunkeld and
Glasgow meliorated.

Council's Act
against such as refuse to work to the Clergy
in Galloway.

June 22. The Council grant Warrant to Andrew Bishop of Dunkeld, to uplift Two hundred Pounds Sterling out of the vacant Stipends of his Diocese, for repairing the Dwelling-house, for him and his Successors, belonging to that See: And October 5. Three hundred Pounds Sterling is allowed to Arthur Archbishop of Glasgow, for repairing the Manse belonging to that See. About the same Time, the Council considering the Insolencies committed against the orthodox Clergy in Galloway, in defrauding them in their Stipends, and indirect Methods taken to force them to leave that Shire, by Tradesmen and others their refusing to work for them, ordain the Sheriff to give Sentences against such, and, upon Complaint upon such as refuse to work to them, that he fine them, and call for Soldiers to execute his Sentences, and that this Act be intimated at the head Court of the Shire. This Kind of Process obliging Tradesmen to work, was a little singular.

Soldiers

Another singular Method for Support of the Episcopal Clergy, falls in August 10. The Council write to the Bailie of Regality in Kirkcaldoun the following Letter. Sir, the Council being informed, how much the Exercise of Church Discipline is slackned, through want of the Concurrence of Heritors, the Council require you to convene the Justices of Peace in that Parish, the Barons and their Bailies, and require them to assist the Minister in the Exercise of Church-discipline, against scandalous Offenders, and in all the Parts of his Function, as they will be answerable.

In September and October, I find in the Registers, several Letters about the new Model of Militia, which I shall give but Hints of. September 3. the Council acquaint Lawderdale, that most of the Shires are come into the new Model of Militia; but move that in the West, the Foot may be changed to Horse. A Letter comes from the King, dated September 15. rejecting this Proposal, and ordering them to continue Foot in the West, and requiring them presently to settle them in the western Shires, and prosecute, according to Law, all Persons of whatsoever Quality, who come not into his Regulations, in so important a Matter. October 7. in a Letter to the King, the Council alledge, that the western Shires, in Law cannot be obliged to turn the Horse into Foot, and beg his Majesty may consider this: And write another Letter to Lawderdale, earnestly to deal with the King, to allow them to call only for Horse in the western Shires. What occasioned the Council to insist so much on this, I know not, if it was not that Horse were of more Use to pursue the Sufferers than Foot.

In the End of October, the Duke of Tork came down again to Scotland, which wanted not its own Share in the now growing Persecution. The English Parliament were now to sit, and their Design for a Second Bill of Exclusion was known, and it was necessary he should retire a little. The King gives this another Turn in his Letter to the Council, dated October 23. acquainting them he was to send down his Brother, for the better Dispatch of Affairs among them; and the Chancellor acquainting them, that he was to land at Kirkaldy, and to beat Lesly till the Abbey was ready, they order all the Counsellors on this Side of Aberdeen, to wait on him, and as soon as he lands, that there be publick Demonstrations of Joy.

Accordingly, the Duke and Dutches arrived at Kirkaldy Road, upon the 25 of October, and went thence to Lesly House, where they were regaled until Friday the 29. when they arrived at Leith, and came to the Abbey of Holy-rood-house. Upon Saturday the Bishop of Edinburgh, and the Clergy in Town waited upon him, and expressed the general Satisfaction of the orthodox Clergy at his Arrival. It was well they assumed to themselves the Title of orthodox, to distinguish themselves from others, and their Orthodoxy was as great as to Politicks, and the now pleasing Heads of hereditary, lineal, and indefeasible Succession to the Crown, and passive Obedience, yea, much greater than in Doctrinals, in Opposition to the Church of Rome. Certainly there was no great Protestant Orthodoxy in cajoling a profest Popish Claimant to the Crown of Three Protestant Kingdoms, retiring from the Resentments of the English Protestant Parliament; but the orthodox Clergy in Scotland must now be Abettors of Popery: And I cannot much doubt their Compliment to the Duke was real, since from former Experience they gathered, that his Presence here would help forward the Sufferings of Presbyterians. The same orthodox Clergy, by their Bishops, complimented him upon the Birth of his spurious Impostor, the Pretender to the Crown of these Realms, in the Year 1688. as shall be noticed, and the same Episcopal Clergy, and their irregular Successors, are almost to a Man attached to the Popish Pretender, to this very Day.

But the most fulsom Flattery appeared in the Letter sent up from the Council to the King, of the Date November 2. signed by Twenty seven Counsellors, and among them Three or Four Protestant Bishops; and the rest, had they been Counsellors, and in Town, probably would have had their Hands at it. Enough of this Stuff is already in the Body of the History, and so I have annexed this App. N<sup>o</sup>. 52.

It is scarce worth while to make any Observes upon it. The Reader will perceive they begin with a Libel against those Principles, which they saw formerly ruined Scotland, they mean the Liberty of the Subject, and Presbyterian Government. Next, upon the Matter they declare the Danger of the Kingdoms at present; it is not from Popery, which the English Parliament was smelling out, but these Principles. Then they thank the King for leaving all the Scots Revenue in their Hands, and taking nothing of it for himself, and in this 'tis probable they were in earnest. Next, they assure his Majesty they will stand by a Papist as his Successor in the Throne, when the true Protestants in England were endeavouring to prevent his coming to it. The following Part, which contains their Thanks to the King, for his Endeavours to secure his Brother's Succession, is so choking to any that has a Regard to the Reformation, that I must refer the Reader to the Paper it self. Hereditary Right, and lineal Descent, they term the great Fundamental; whether the Unreasonableness or Pedantry of the Phrase be greatest, I do not determine. They promise themselves much from the Duke's Example. It was now indeed upwards of an Hundred Years, since we had the idolatrous Mass openly set up in Scotland; and this was an Example not a little prevalent upon many 1680.

Heritors in Kirkcaldoun required to assist the Minister in Discipline.

Orders about the Militia in the western Shires.

Duke of Tork
comes down to Scotland,
Oct. 25.

Observe on the orthodox Clergy's Carriage to the Duke.

The Council
to the King
the 2<sup>d</sup> Nov.
1688.
App. N<sup>o</sup>.

Remarks
on it.

1680.

A pretended Plot against the Duke's Life.

many to turn Popish. They conclude with Assurances, the Duke's Stay here would have happy Effects for carrying on the King's Service; and this was too true, if by the King's Service was meant the Plot for bringing in Popery and Slavery at this Time, in considerable Forwardness among some at the Courts of France and England.

To help forward the Persecution at this Time, a Plot against the Duke's Life is forged by his own Friends; and this was a good Handle to cast an Odium upon the Sufferers, and sharpen the Persecution; and, no doubt, the Popish Priests, who came down with the Duke, were not sorry to see Protestants worrying those of their own Denomination. I find some of the Persons named in the former Section, who were executed in December, charging their Death upon the Duke, and speaking of this Plot they were reproached with, and declaring they never knew or heard the least Hint about it, until they were interrogate thereupon before the Council; and I see not the least Ground to doubt of their Sincerity.

The Principles advanced in the Queensferry Paper, Sanquhar Declaration, and the Torwood Excommunication, are the only Colour the Enemies of these People had to charge them with any Design of this Nature: But every Body must see, that even those will never bear the Weight of a Consequence of this Nature, as hath been observed; and had there been any more than bare Suspicion rising from these Declarations, which the whole Body of Presbyterians disallowed, we should have had them told with the most aggravating Circumstances.

Earl of Murray
sole Secretary, upon Lawderdale's Demission.

November 2. The Earl of Murray's Commission, to be sole Secretary of State, is read in Council; it bears that the Duke of Lawderdale had demitted that Office in his Majesty's Hums. Thus, after Twenty Years Possession of that Office, and Management of Scots Affairs, he is turned out.

Process, Philip-haugh and some Gentlemen of Teviotdale, against the Laird of Meldrum.

In November this Year, there was a Process before the Council, betwixt the Laird of Meldrum, and some Gentlemen in the Forest and Teviotdale. Meldrum had raised terrible Sums in that Country, for one Conventicle in the House of Grange, where there was but one Person without Doors. He owned he had got Ten thousand Merks of Fine, and, by a moderate Computation, it was reckoned he had uplifted in Fines from the Shire of Teviotdale, 100,000 Pounds.

Account of it from the Registers.

All I find about this in the Registers, is November 11. Upon a Petition from Philiphaugh Sheriff of Selkirk, his Depute, and some Gentlemen and Tenants, complaining of many Oppressions and wrongous Imprisonments, committed by the Laird of Meldrum, the Committee for publick Affairs cited the said Meldrum to appear before the Council this Day, and had ordered the Depute and Gentlemen to be set at Liberty, and appear this Day. I shall only give some further Hints of this from some Letters before me, writ at this Time.

From other
Papers.

Philiphaugh and other Gentlemen presented to the Council, a Libel against Meldrum, and he appeared with a Counter-libel, and the great Debate was, which of the Two Libels should be first admitted to Probation. The Gentlemen were pressed to give their Oaths, as to what they knew anent Conventicles in their Bounds, and Nonconformity; and upon their Refusal were imprisoned some Days; at length they were liberate on Bonds of a Thousand Merks each, to compare when called. I find Philiphaugh proved his Libel against Meldrum, to the Conviction of all, and answered what Meldrum charged him with: And when Meldrum offered to give in some new Queries, he was willing to admit them, providing he should be allowed to begin with new Queries to him, and proposed he might be interrogate whether Meldrum was Papist or Protestant, when he was last at Mafs, who were present with him, when he had conversed last with Rebels, and what Compositions he had made with them. The Matter was dropt, and Philiphaugh came off with very great Reputation.

Council's Procedure Nov. 11.
against prohibited Books.

That same Day, 'It is referred to the Committee for publick Affairs, to consider what Books imported shall be condemned by Authority; and the Clerks of Council are ordered' 'to fight the Shop of John Calderwood Stationer, and secure such prohibited Books as shall be found therein.' Mean while, a Ship of Borrowstounness, which, as was alledged, had prohibited Books aboard, and had been arrested, is liberate upon the Owners finding Caution to the Council, as to the Time to come. That Day the Committee for publick Affairs report, 'That upon Notice of seditious Books imported from Holland and elsewhere, by the Stationers of Edinburgh, particularly, Neptali, Jus regni apud Scotos in English, Jus populi vindicatum, Reformed Bishop, Calderwood's History, they had called John Calderwood before them, and upon his confessing he had some of them, they had ordered him to Prison, and shut up his Shop; that they had writ to the Magistrates of Aberdeen to seize any of these seditious Books in their Town. And further, that they had ordained in Time to come, that Stationers, as soon as they receive home their Lists, shall shew them to, and have the Approbation of one of the Officers of State, or the Bishop of Edinburgh, with Certification, their Books shall be seized, and themselves fined if they fail.' 'The first Three of the Books are prohibited by former Acts of Council; but for the Reformed Bishop, Jus populi, and that valuable History of Mr. Calderwood, it was very hard to blame any Body for them till they were prohibited, which they were not. The Council approve the Committee's Report.

Some

Some Letters from Mrs. Simpson, in her Hand, and Papers found about Mr. Skene, brought some Trouble to the reverend Mr. John Carstairs, William Johnstoun and Joseph Brody, Merchants in Edinburgh. The Managers were very hot upon the Pursuit of Mr. Skene, and all Mr. Cargil's Followers; and every Body they spoke of, tho' no way concerned in their Courses, were brought to a great deal of Trouble. About the 20 of November, Mr. Carstairs was brought before a Committee of Council, where Argyle presided. He owned the King's Authority, and that of his Courts; with a great deal of Seriousness he disclaimed the Follies and Principles Mr. Skene and some others now advanced, and said, He could not express his abominating their Extremities with Vehemency enough. He protested against John Bishop of Edinburgh his sitting in a Civil Judicatory, or any of his Character; he acknowledged the King to be the Fountain of Honour, but denied the Bishop was capable of it. He declared he loved his Majesty's Person, and honoured him, and daily prayed for him. He and the other Two were set at Liberty, and Mr. Carstairs came off with a great deal of Respect and Applause, even of Adversaries; only Bishop Paterson was extremely fretted, and promised him a Return, if ever it lay in his Power, for protesting against his being a Counsellor, refusing him his Titles, and terming him only Mr. Paterson.

About this Time the Second Effort of the English Nation against a Popish Successor, by the Bill for excluding the Duke of York, was crused in the House of Peers. My Lord Russell, with the Lord Mayor of London, and Cavendish on either Hand, and about Two hundred of the House of Commons at his Back, present the Bill November 16. The Question for a first Reading was carried by Two Votes. The King was in the House, and after a long and warm Debate for some Hours, managed by the Earl of Shaftsbury upon the one Side, and Halifax on the other, the Question being put for a Second Reading, it carried in the Negative, Sixty three to Thirty one. They protested, and entred their Reasons in the Journals of the House. The Bishops of Chester, Exeter, and London, were for the Bill, and all the rest against it. After the Bill was thrown out, the Protesters proposed, that the King should be moved to divorce the Queen, but that Debate was adjourned. The Commons addressed against Halifax, that he might be removed from the King's Service. They had a Bill before them for removing the penal Laws, in as far as they related to Protestant Dissenters, and began to move some Things against the Bishops, and their pressing Ceremonies and Conformity. But all these came to nothing, and I leave them to the English Historians, and only remark, that when the News of the rejecting of the Exclusion Bill came to Edinburgh, the Chancellor offered to cause set on Bonfires, and ring Bells, and order publick Rejoycings there: But the Duke of York declined this, and told him there was no Hastie in this Matter, for he expected an Impeachment; but his Fears were soon over.

All I have further to remark from the Registers this Year, is, that November 18. the Council receive a Letter from the King, thanking them for their kind Reception of his Brother, and their Letter of the 2. he assures them they could not have done him more acceptable Service. That same Day Mr. Patrick Menzies is admitted one of the Clerks of Council, in Room of Mr. Gibson, who demitted: And December 23. they write to the Earl of Murray Secretary, to procure a Remission to William Gordon of Culvenan, who had been in the Rebellion. If I mistake not, he had resigned some of his Lands in favour of some of the Managers, It is Time now to go forward to the next Year.

1680.

Mr. John Carstairs is brought before the Committee of Council, Nov. 20. and owns the King's Authority, &c. declares as to Mr. Skene's Principles, and protests against the Bishop of Edinburgh, his sitting in a civil Court.

Second Bill of Exclusion thrown out by the House of Peers in England.

When the Accounts of this come to Edinburgh, the Duke of York will not permit publick Rejoycings.

King's Letter in answer to the Council's Nov. 2.

Mr. Patrick Menzies Clerk of Council. Remission to Gordon of Culvenan.

CHAP V.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1681.

THE Persecution goes on most violently this Year, and near Twenty are executed at Edinburgh, and some more designed to the same Fate, but Providence prevented. Besides, innumerable Multitudes; who went not their Lengths, had their Lives made a Burden to them in all Parts of the Country, by vexatious Courts, cruel Soldiers, and suborned and busy Informers, of which I am to give but a cursory Account, because it falls much in with what is narrated upon the preceeding Years; the Methods are the same, the Rage equal and growing, the Particulars are innumerable, and this Work is swelling much upon my Hand.

Persecution this Year more violent.

Indeed

1681.

Occasions of this.

Indeed the enraged Managers reckoned they had just Ground, and a good Footing from the Sanquhar Declaration, to make War upon that Party who had declared a Kind of War against them; yea, they extended their Severities to every Body who would not go along with the present Courses, and most calumniously loaded the whole suffering Party with the Principles of those People, tho', as hath been noticed, it was but a very few who defended that Paper, and last Year they had cut off a great Number of them.

The Bishops failed not to take hold of this Opportunity, to put great Hardships upon all who had the Name of Presbyterians; and the Duke of Tork's Presence in the Beginning of this Year, and at the Parliament, with the Papists about him, helped all on.

Contents of this Chapter.

From those Fountains flowed Forfeitures of great Numbers of Gentlemen who were reckoned to favour Presbytery, and now and then severe Proclamations against Conventicles, tho', excepting Mr. Cargil, who but seldom appeared in publick, there was not one who preached at Field-meetings, neither were there many Sermons in Houses; yea, some Presbyterian Ministers, now deprived of all other Opportunities, did, at some Times, even communicate with the Episcopal Clergy, as I hear, Mr. Bates, and some others in England, used to do, to manifest their holding Communion with them, in those Things which they held in common with other Protestant Churches.

Nevertheless, Presbyterian Ministers and Gentlemen were most violently harassed, and put to very great Hardships. The Parliament meet, and in August make new and severe Laws, and impose the iniquous and self-contradictory Test, which became new Occasion of severe and universal Persecution, through the West and South of Scotland.

This Test, when offered to be explained by that excellent Person the noble Earl of Argyle, was the Occasion of his Trial, and the Sentence of Death past upon him, the Execution of which he happily escaped for some Time. It was this Summer, that the mad and blasphemous Opinions of Gib and his deluded Followers, came to take Air; and, towards the End of the Year, the Followers of Mr. Cameron and Mr. Cargil, after they were taken from them, set up their Societies. Those, and some other Incidents this Year, will afford Matter for the following Sections.

S E C T. I.

Of the Procedure of the Council, their Proclamations, and the more general Harassing of the Country, this Year, by Courts, Soldiers, and Informers.

Great Oppression this Year, up and down the Country.

AT Edinburgh, the Managers this Year, as we shall find, are busy in cutting off the Owners and Followers of Mr. Cargil and Cameron, as they fall into their Hands, without any Pity almost to Age or Sex; but, up and down the Country, Multitudes of other Presbyterians, whom they could not pretend denied the King's Authority, or maintained any Things out of the Road, were vexed and persecuted; and the less Occasion they had given for such Severity, the more unaccountable the Government's Way with them was.

General Procedure of the Council.

That we may have the better View of this Oppression through the Country, and the Sufferings of particular Persons to be narrated in the following Sections, I shall here give the more general Procedure of the Council this Year, from the Registers.

Meldrum's Commission renewed, and new Instructions given him.

January 20. the Council renew all the former Commissions given to the Laird of Meldrum, notwithstanding any Stop formerly put thereunto. Last Year, I find the General complaining to the Council, that this Gentleman, under Pretext of Commissions from them, did not attend his Post in the Army, and upon this his Commissions are retracted. In November last, we have seen, he was libelled by Philiphaugh and others. These Representations against the oppressive Procedure of the Under-agents in the Persecution, generally speaking, had no other Effect but the enlarging their Powers; so it was in this Case. And, February 24. Meldrum gets additional Powers and Instructions. I doubt not but they were sent to such in the rest of the Shires, who had formerly Council-commissions given them, and therefore I insert them here.

Additional Instructions to the Laird of Meldrum, in Execution of the Commission 1681.
given him before, anent disorderly and irregular Persons.

‘ You are to proceed, according to former Instructions, as a Justice of Peace in Berwick, Roxburgh, and Selkirk Shires, for suppressing and punishing of Disorders; but forbear apprehending intercommuned Persons mentioned in the Third Instruction, discharged by his Majesty’s Indemnity, except for Delinquencies since the said Act.’
 ‘ Three of the Justices are to be a Quorum. If Sheriffs, by Collusion, shall clear any guilty Persons, acquaint the Council, but you are not to fine them again.’
 ‘ You are impowered to apprehend those who were in the Rebellion, and have not taken the Bond, and give the Council Accounts what Heritors have or do reset Rebels on their Ground.’

By virtue of those, and the former Commissions, most Places in the West and South were oppressed in the Beginning of this Year, and many troublefom Searches made.

I have before me a very large and circumstantiate Account of the Severities committed by Thomas Kennoway, one of the King’s Guards, afterwards, as we shall hear, killed at Swine-abbay, upon the Parish of Livingstone in West-lothian, of which it may not be improper here to give an Abbreviate. Upon the 19 of March, Kennoway came to the Parish of Livingstone, with a Party of Soldiers, with Orders, as he pretended, to apprehend all who had been at Bothwell, tho’ it was much doubted if he had such Orders. After he had used all his Interest to get Information of suspected Persons, upon Saturday late, he sent out Two Parties with Lists of Persons whom they should that Night apprehend, and went himself with a Third Party. He and the Soldiers with him came first to a House a Mile West from the Kirk of Livingstone, where was a young Man, Kennoway was told, had been concerned some way in Bothwell. The House was beset, and, being near a Moss, Kennoway himself rode ’twixt the House and the Moss, that none might escape; his Men went in, and searched the House for the Man and his Arms: The Man who lived there was very aged, and had Two Sons, the one was not in Kennoway’s List; and after the Party had searched all the House for Arms, and broke open all Chests and Presses, and found none, they brought the old Man to Kennoway, who raged, and called him old Devil, and swore he should hang him upon one End of a Tow, and his Son upon the other, and ordered his Men to bring out all the Men in the House, and carry them to the next House they were to attack.

When they had carried them a good Way, Kennoway suffered the old Man and one of his Sons to go Home, and kept the other Prisoner. Providence ordered it so, that the young Man informed against was the Person they let go, not having exact Knowledge of him, it being dark. With their Prisoner they came to another Country Town, a good Distance from the first House, where Kennoway alighted, and made the Prisoner cast off his Coat in a cold stormy Night, and cover his Horse with it, till the poor Man was scarce able to stand for Cold. In that Place, the Man they were searching for escaped out at a Window in his Shirt, and, without any other Clothes, ran near a Mile before he durst venture to take a House. Mean while, Kennoway carried away his Father Prisoner in his room. They made a third Attempt that Night on another Place, still carrying their Prisoners with them, but missed their Prey.

After they had thus spent the Night, early in the Sabbath Morning they came to the Swine-abbay, a publick House, put their Prisoners in a Room, and when they had Lights, and saw the young Man, Kennoway swore bloodily, He feared he had brought the wrong Man; and the Prisoner peremptorily denying he had been at Bothwell, Two of the Soldiers were immediately dispatched to bring, as Kennoway termed him, the old Dog and his other Son, to the Swine-abbay. By this Time the Son had shifted for himself, and the Father, through the Fright and Maltreatment, was fallen very ill, so that he could neither ride nor walk. The Troopers brought some Women to witness the old Man was sick, and the Prisoner was not the Person in the List, which sufficiently chagrined Kennoway. However, that Morning before the Sun rose, he and the Party with him drank Eight Pints of Wine and Brandy, and he swore the Prisoners should pay it. But the poor Man, Brother to him who escaped, when dismissed, fell into a Fever through the harsh Treatment he met with, and after that into another, and a Third, and in a little Time died.

The other Parties brought in but one young Man Prisoner, who was soon dismissed. Kennoway sat all the Sabbath drinking, and on Munday held a Court, and brought in many of the Country People, putting them to their Oath upon Reset and Converse, and fined the old Man above spoken of in Eight Dollars, forced an Heritor in West-calder to give him a Bond of 500 Merks before he would part with him, and committed many other Insolencies. We shall meet with him in the following Years. This Instance may give us some View of the State of the poor Country at this Time; and indeed innumerable such Instances might be given.

1681.

In the Southern Shires.

The Southern Shires were at this Time sadly oppress'd with Courts. The Method now taken, was to send out the Soldiers through a Parish, there to act as they pleased; they took up Informations, examined whom they would, and harried and spoiled Families and Persons without Controul. Then their Officers, clothed with these Commissions, appointed Courts at such and such Places, where they pretended to act a little more agreeably to Justice and Equity, but evidently counteracted both, and squared themselves just as they had Notices given them by the Informations taken up by their Parties, and got by Explication and Violence.

Cornet Graham's Oppres-
sions in Galloway.

Thus I find Cornet Graham holding a Court, in the Beginning of the Year, at Dalry in Galloway, and, I suppose, in most of the Parishes round. All Men and Women, above Sixteen Years of Age, were cited to appear, and such who came, were put to declare upon Oath, and sometimes under very odd and strange Imprecations, which I shall not narrate, whether they had ever been at Field-meetings, or countenanced such who haunted them, or were married, or had Children baptized with such who preached at them. I say Nothing of the Unaccountableness or Unreasonableness of this Procedure, that when Probation failed, the Persecutors made the poor Country People turn Self-accusers, or run the Hazard, it may be, of Perjury. And when the Interrogatories as to themselves were over, they were next examined upon Oath, and under repeated frightful Imprecations, as to what they knew of any of their Neighbours, or any in the Parish, if they had heard, baptized, or married with Ministers who preached in the Fields, or had refect, or conversed with any who had done so. How hard a Matter was it to keep clean Garments in so perilous a Time as this!

Grierson of Lagg at Dumfries and Kirkcudbright.

About the same Time, Courts of the same Nature were held at Dumfries by that bloody Man, Grierson of Lagg, and Persons deputed by him; where People were brought in from all Quarters, and made to depone, as to themselves and their Neighbours, as above. Another Court was held at Kirkcudbright by the same Gentleman, and Thomas Lidderdale of St. Mary's-isle, who proceed and fined many Persons, for Crimes of which they found Methods to make them guilty. Great Numbers of Country People round about were cited in as Witnesses, and obliged Week after Week to attend their Diets, to the great Expence of the poor People, Loss of their Time, and Hurt to their Business and Labour.

Proclamation
April 8. against Field-conven-
ticles.
App. No. 53.
Remarks on it.

Perhaps some of these Courts might be held upon the Back of the Proclamation emitted by the Council, April 8. this Year, against Field-conventicles, which I have insert App. No. 53. Reflections upon such Papers, after we have met with so many of them, are almost needless. The Thread of this History leads me to notice, that at present there was almost no preaching in the Fields, only Mr. Cargil preached sometimes, and, generally speaking, but to a few, and in more remote Corners, so that, really there was no Occasion for this new Proclamation, unless it was to give a Colour (tho' indeed it does not seem to look back) and Pretext to persecuting Heritors and Sheriffs, to go back to what had been before the Date of this. The Narrative bears, that the unwary Commons, by Field-conventicles, had been bred up in Giddleness and murdering Principles. This is a groundless Reflection upon the Commons in Scotland at this Time, among whom, 'tis certain, these murdering Principles, as they are termed (owned by some few, whom Oppression forced to Heights) did not at all spread. Had the Penner of this Paper said, 'That the Insolence and Barbarity of the Soldiers, the oppressive and bloody Laws, with the Execution of them, and the Spite and Violence of the Clergy, did, drive the unwary Commons to Extremities,' it had been more agreeable to Truth and Fact. Next, the King is made to restore the just Rights of Heritors and Masters over their Tenants and Servants. What Rights they have over them to Servitude and civil Claims by their Tacks, I am not here to debate; but I know no Right they have, or could have, to impose upon their Consciences, and prescribe to them in religious Matters, or persecute them upon their differing from them, unless we suppose the King hath parcelled out to Heritors, his ecclesiastick Supremacy, and they, as well as the Bishops, are Sharers in that. Sad had the Case of the Commons at this Time been, had they taken their Rules and Pattern in Morals and Religion, from the most Part of their Masters, who bare down Conventicles. What Right is by this Proclamation restored to Masters, I know not, but sure, by former and present Bonds and Proclamations, the Rights of Heritors were sadly invaded, when they were forced to become Surety to the Government, for their Tenants and their Servants, in every Imposition made to please the Prelates. The Hands of Masters here indeed are strengthened in Persecution, and they are involved as Actors in all the Severities of the Time, by their being required (and under a swinging Fine) to acquaint the Sheriff within Three Days after a Field-conventicle; upon which Information he is to convene the whole Heritors of the Parish, and they are to make Trial who were at the Conventicle, and take Oaths thereanent; what they find is to be laid before the Sheriff, and he to fine as Law accords, and to have the Fines. Thus the Heritors, tho' the best Noblemen of the Kingdom, must be Underworkers to the Sheriff, ye, ault him in Poinding and Seizures, upon the Hazard of being equally culpable with the Delin-delinquents. If this be the restoring Heritors to their Rights, the Reader may judge. Accounts of Diligence in this are to be laid before the Council in July and December, and all is but Prejudice to other Persecutions. 1681.

Delin-

May 4. The Council being informed, that Chapmen who travel up and down the Country, are the Persons who debauch and abuse the People, and convene them to Field-conventicles, resolve, That there shall be a Clause in the next Proclamation that is published, discharging them to travel without Passes under the Sheriff's Hands, that they are orderly Persons. At the same Time, they ordain that Schoolmasters, in Parishes where indulged Ministers are, who have not Licence from the Bishop, be removed by the Sheriff or Magistrate; and the Town Major of Edinburgh is warranted to apprehend such who teach Schools in Edinburgh, or the Suburbs thereof, without Licence, and abuse and corrupt the Youth in their Principles. Chapmen are to have Passes. Schoolmasters in Parishes where indulged Ministers are, to have Licence from the Bishop.

That same Day, upon Information that John Gray, with some other Rebels, had invaded the House of Mr. George Gillespy, Minister of Tarboitoun, and wounded him and his Brother in Law, the Council give Orders to summon the Parish to answer in Terms of Law, and send their Thanks to the Laird of Craigie for his Care in that Matter, and add him to the Jurists of the Peace in that Shire. Parish of Tarboitoun prosecuted for an insult on the Curate.

June 9. New Orders are given for Garisons in several Houses in the West Country; and Letters are writ, one to the Earl of Lowdon, to prepare the House of the Sorn; another to the Duke of Hamilton, as to the Castle of Strathaven; and a Third to the Earl of Kilmarnock, as to the House of Dean. I have formerly noticed, that those Garisons were the Instruments of many Severities. Garisons in the Sorn, Strathaven, and Dean.

The Council issue out a Proclamation for a Fast, June 16. The Causes of it are a little singular, the blasphemous and sanguinary Opinions of many who have left the Communion of the Church, the threatned Famine, and the approaching Session of Parliament, as they stand at length in the Proclamation it self, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 54. Proclamation for a Fast June 16. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 54.

June 21. Warrant is given to the Earl of Queensberry, Sheriff-principal of Dumfries, and his Deputes, to call before them several Merchants in Dumfries, and others in the Shire, for Conventicles, examine Witnesses and report: Mean while the Processes against them before the Council, are continued. Persons in Dumfries troubled for Conventicles.

It being represented to the Council, that many Persons in Kirkcudbright, Wigtoun, and Dumfries, who were in the late Rebellion, continue in their Houses, and intromit with their Estates, the Sheriffs and other Magistrates are ordained to seize and present them to Justice, and at the same Time to secure their Rents and Lands for his Majesty's Use: 'Tis likewise recommended to them to secure the Country from Field-conventicles, and punish such as are guilty, with Certification, that if they fail, the Council will send in Forces. New Orders against such as were at Bothwell.

In a little Time, those Orders are more generally extended to the Shires of Lanerk, Air, and Galloway, in a Proclamation, which because I have not seen in Print, and it contains a good many of such as were forfeited last Year and this, I have given it here from the Registers. Proclamation against them, October 8.

CHARLES, &c. Greeting. Forasmuch as the Persons underwritten, are by Decree of the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, forfeited in their Lives, Lands and Goods, for their treasonable Rising in Arms in the late Rebellion at Bothwell-bridge, viz. David White Smith in Lanerk, Gideon Weir Gunsmith there, David Gibson there, John Wilson Writer there, Mr. Thomas Pillans there, James Lawrie Writer there, Archibald Simpson there, Thomas Lauchlan there, William Fergusson there, John Semple Mason there, Thomas Inglis there, Alexander Anderson there, John Pumphray there, John Jack in Neruplair, William Padzean Mason in Lanerk, Robert Lockhart of Birkhill, James Weir of Johnshill, John Steil in Overwaterhead, John Haddow in Douglas, James White there, William Falconer in Hamiltoun, Arthur Tacket there, Gavin Wotherpoon of Heathrie-know, John Eastoun Portioner of Quarryneen, Robert Goodwine Maltman in Glasgow, James Cunningham Merchant there, Isaac Blackwel Son to Thomas Blackwel there, William Riddel Feuar in Rutherglen, Robert Fleming of Auchinfir, John Hamilton Feuar in Rogertoun, Thomas Craig Feuar in Jacktoun, John Miller Feuar of Longcalderwood, John Wilson of Highfleet, Robert Steven Feuar of Newland, John Steil of Windhill, John Cochran of Craigie, James Dykes Portioner of Halburn, John Cardus Feuar in Jacktoun, Thomas Paton at Old-kirk of Camethan, John Whytlaw of Bothwell-shiel, John Paterson there, John White of Newk, Thomas Lin of Blairachin, John Weddale of Chisdale, John Clyde in Kilbride, all in Lanerk Shire; Gilbert M'lewrath of Dumchory, Thomas Macjarrow of Bar, John Macjarrow of Penjurrow, Henry Macjarrow of Athalbany, George M'chir of Benman, Henry M'lewrath of Auchinshour, John Alexander of Dumchory, M'unken Son to M'unken in Hilkertoun, Alan Bowry Son to Bowry of Drumley, James Wood in Air, Patrick M'dougal of Freugh, Mr. William and Alexander Gordons of Earlstoun, Mr. William Fergusson of Kaitloch, Dunbar younger of Machirmoir, John Bell of Whiteside, John Gibson of Auchincher, Gibson younger of 1681.

of Inglistoun, of Kilroch,
of Irelandtoun,

Gordon of Dendeuch,
McLellan of Larmagechan,

Grier of Dalgonar,
Gordon of Craigie,

Smith
Lennox
David M.

culloch Son to Ardwell, William Whitehead of Milnhouse, John Fowbertoun of Auchinchrie, John Welsh of Cornley, Neilson of Corsack, Robert McLellan of Barscob, Samuel McLellan his Brother, Lirtoun of Nethermill, George Mackartney of Blacket,
Gordon of Knockgray, Herron of Little-park,
Gordon of Overbar, John Mcnaught of Culgnad,

Gordon of Garrery,
Gordon of Holm,

Murdoch, alias Laird Murdoch,

Andrew Sword in Galloway, John Malcolm in Dalry, in Galloway. Which Persons (as we are informed) do notwithstanding live and reside at or near their dwelling Places, and, by themselves, or others, to their Use and Behoof, do uplift, possess, and enjoy their Lands, Rents and Goods, as if they were Our free and peaceable Subjects, in high and proud Contempt of Us, Our Authority and Laws: We therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do hereby give and grant full Power, Authority and Commission to the Sheriff-principal of the Shires of Lanerk, Air, Dumfries, Steward of the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Sir Andrew Agnew of Lochnae, Sheriff-principal of Wigtoun, and their Deputies, to pursue, take, apprehend, imprison, and present to Justice the foresaid Rebels and Traitors, wherever they can be found in any Part of their Shire or Jurisdiction; and, in case of Resistance or hostile Opposition, to pursue them to the Death by Force of Arms, or drive them forth of the Bounds of their Shires and Jurisdictions; and, if Need be, are to call to their Assistance such Numbers of Our good Subjects, as they shall find necessary for their Assistance, who are hereby ordained to concur with, fortify and assist Our Commissioners foresaid in this Our Service, as they will be answerable at their utmost Peril. And if, in prosecution of the said Rebels and Traitors, any of them shall be mutilate or slain by any of Our said Commissioners assisting them, We declare that they shall never be pursued or called in question therefore, but that the same shall be reputed and esteemed good and acceptable Service to Us. Given under Our Signet, at Holy-rood-house, the 8 Day of October, 1681. and of Our Reign the 33 Year.

Subscribed ut in Sederunt.

New Orders
about Garisons.

It seems, the former Orders about Garisons had not the Effect expected; and therefore, October 6. the Council appoint the abovenamed Houses, with the Castle of Dumfries, and House of Freugh, instantly to be made patent to receive Garisons; and the Commissioners for Supply are ordered to furnish them Provisions at the ordinary Rates.

Severity against
No. comor-mills tempted some to turn Informers.

Thus I have noticed what offers in the Proceedings of the Council, this Year. This Severity against all Nonconformists, yea, all who were unwilling to be active in the Measures of the Times against them, gave great Occasion, and no small Temptation to many to turn Informers against serious and religious Persons. The People who had once professed to be Presbyterians, and had now apostatized, certainly had the greatest Opportunities to gratify the Managers, and too many such there were: But not a few others likewise lived upon this base and malicious Trade of informing against Presbyterians.

An Instance

One Instance of this I have from a Person of Honour, well vouched, and so I insert it here, instead of many others that might be given. Whether it was at this Time precisely, or some Time afterward, I am not positive, my Information wanting a particular Date; but the Fact is certain, and I find this scandalous Method was much countenanced by People in Power at this Time.

In Greenshiels,

There was an idle dissolute Fellow, a Weaver to his Trade, named Greenshiels, in the Shire of Renfrew, who, finding Informers were much caressed, went in to Edinburgh, and found Means to get Access to some of the Managers, Members of the Privy Council: To them he represents, he could be very useful in discovering and apprehending outed Ministers, Gentlemen, and others who entertained and heard them. Such a Proposal being very welcome, Orders were given to the commanding Officer of the Forces at Glasgow, to furnish Greenshiels with such a Number of Men as he required, with Power to him to give Orders to them.

Against the Laird of Dou-
chal.

Accordingly, he comes with a Party of about Twenty Soldiers, to the House of Douchal, in the Parish of Kilmacomb, one Night about Midnight. The excellent and worthy Gentleman before named, and whom we shall afterwards meet with, was at Home, and desired to know what their Business was, and what Orders they had to disturb him and his Family, and attack his House at such an unreasonable Time. The Soldier of the best Fashion declared to the Laird, that indeed he knew nothing of the Matter, and that he was to receive his Orders from Mr. Greenshiels who was with them; and the Man added, Sir, Should he just now order me to shoot you dead in the Spot, I durst not be answerable to disobey.

Greenshiels then told Douchal, he had Orders to search his House, and accordingly the Doors were opened, and they made a very narrow Search through all the Rooms of the House.

House for Field-preachers, vagrant Ministers, forfeited Persons; and when none were found, he would needs lodge with his whole Party in the House. The Gentleman had nothing left but passive Obedience; and so for several Days they quartered upon the House. After a Day or Two's Stay, Greenshiels offered to retire, if they would give them a Sum of Money. Douchal being conscious of no Fault, peremptorily refused to give any thing. Whereupon they continued until they eat up most of the Family-provision; and then they rifled the House, took away the Silver Spoons and the Knives, and went off.

In Justice I must add, that the Government were afterwards so much ashamed of this Step, that they ordered Greenshiels to be apprehended, and Douchal's Silver Spoons being found on him, he was ordered to be whipt. What Punishment then did such deserve, who countenanced and employed such a Villain, or committed such unlimited Powers to him? I blush to set down such Practices, which look rather like a Turkish or French Government, than an Administration which had any Pretext to Law or Justice.

1681.

Greenshiels afterwards discovered and punished.

S E C T. II.

Of the Proceedings of the Justiciary this Year, against many Heritors, for alledged being at Bothwel, and their Process against John Spreul, with the Pleadings before them, upon Torture, and other Points.

I Come now to lay before the Reader, the Procedure of the Criminal Court during this Year, and begin with the more general Processes of Forfeiture, wherein the Justiciary make very short Work. In March, the Heritors of Lanerk Shire are before them, and in April many from Air Shire; 'tis but a short Hint at both that I need to give.

Processes against Heritors alledged to have been in the Rising.

Upon the 18 and 21 of March, I find, by the Registers, great Numbers of Heritors in the Shire of Lanerk are present, and called: I may class them in Two Branches; some of them make a Resignation of their Lands, and are dismissed: and others of them stand their Trial, and are forfeited, many of them in Absence. Of the first Sort, John Williamson, Son to Joseph Williamson Heritor in Holl, John Spreul younger, Writer in Glasgow, James Walker younger of Hacketburn, William Tweddale late Bailie of Lanerk, Hugh Weir Merchant there, being pannelled, they have an Offer made to them of the King's Indemnity, and accept of it, and renounce and resign in favours of the King, Commissioners of the Treasury, and their Donators, all Lands and Heritages fallen to them, or which they had a Right to, before his Majesty's Act of Grace, and as to them the Lords desert the Diet in perpetuum. This was a Kind of Composition by voluntary parting with that Part of their Heritage, which they had a Right to in their own Person, and then at the Death of their Parents they came in to the rest of the Lands. Thus somewhat at least was preserved, but it was but few got this Favour.

In Lanerk Shire.

The far greater Number, who were, as the former, cited to this Diet, and indicted in common Form, as guilty of the Rebellion at Bothwel, met with harder Measures, as David White Smith in Lanerk, and other Forty six belonging to Lanerk Shire, whose Names are inserted in the Proclamation, of the Date October 8. just now inserted p. 159. These had Probation led against them in Absence, and all that is proven against most of them is Converse with Rebels, when they were going up and down that Shire, and lying in Camp there, in which the whole Shire was necessarily at that Time involved; and they are all forfeited in common Form, and ordered to be executed as Traitors, when they shall be apprehended.

A few others are brought off by the Verdict of the Assize, as not having their Indictment proven against them: Indeed the Probation against them who are forfeited is abundantly lame; but, it seems, the Advocate would have all, who did not resign their Lands, to be concluded under the same Condemnation, and threatened the People on the Assize, with a Process of Error; and I find August 3. a Process of Error raised against those who had been up on the Assize in March last, and had liberate some of the Heritors of the Shire of Lanerk, notoriously known to have been at Bothwel-bridge. There are in the Records very long and learned Debates, by the Lawyers, in Defence of the Assizers. The Matter is very intricate, and turns upon quiskous Points. At length, all the Assizers except Three, come off one way or other. Some of them decline their Defences, and come in the King's Mercy; the Advocate deserts the Diet against others. The Three whom he insists against, are Alexander Gray

Process of Error raised against the Assizers who brought off some of the Heritors of Lanerk Shire.

1681.

Gray and James Bailie, Merchants in Edinburgh, and James Gray of Waristoun. The Court decern them to have amitted all their Chattels, and other Moveables, to his Majesty's Use, and to ly in Prison a Year's Time. This was done in terrorem, and to fright all others, who should be afterward on the Assizes of persecuted People, heartily to fall in with the Measures of the Managers.

Process against Heritors in the Shire.

Upon the 5 of April, these who were alledged to have been concerned in Bothwell Rising in the Shire of Air, were indicted in common Form; a great many are delayed, and some have their Diet deserted. At this Time there are only Gilbert M'lewarith of Dummochie, Thomas Macjarrow of Bar, John Macjarrow of Penjarrow, Henry Macjarrow of Anthalbanic, George M'lur of Bennam, Hugh M'lewarith of Auchinshour, John Alexander of Drummochrian, M'michan Son to M'michan of Killentrian, Alan Bowy Son to Bowy of Drumbog. The last was at Hamiltoun-muir, but the Witnesses depone he wanted Arms. The Depositions against the rest, generally speaking, bear, that they were seen with the Rebels, when going up and down the Country, and very few of them are seen at Hamiltoun-muir. They are all forfeited, and when taken, to be executed as Traitors in common Form.

Remarks on some of these Forfeitures.

Some Papers before me say, there was no Proof against John Alexander of Drummochrian his being at Bothwell. The Earl of Glencairn had the Gift of his Estate, and made it over to John M'levain of Grimmat, who possessed the same till the End of the Year 1693. notwithstanding the Act 1690. rescinding Forfeitures. Some other of the forfeited Estates were possessed by the Donators, for some Years after the Revolution; so long did the Effects of these iniquitous Acts continue. George M'lur of Bennam, in the Parish of Lar, his Lands were about Three hundred Merks a Year, and his Moveables a Thousand Pounds; both were possessed by Edmonstoun of Broich: He himself was afterwards apprehended, continued in Prison about a Year, and died abroad. Hugh M'lewarith of Auchinshour was likewise taken, and by Money to the Advocate, and Composition with the Donators for his Lands and Moveables, and for procuring a Remission, expended, as appears by an Account before me under his Hand, about Seven thousand Merks, and yet his Lands were but about Two hundred Merks yearly Rent.

The same Day the Court desert the Diet against Robert Fullartoun of Bennels, Robert Nisbet of Greenholm, Kennedy younger of Glenour, and James Aird younger of Milltoun, who compeared upon the Pannel, and offered to abide a Trial. I may notice it generally in both these Processes, that Sentence passes only against Absents, and when Heritors appear and abide their Trial, few of them are found guilty. Indeed it was very easy finding People guilty, when not present to answer for themselves, which was the Case of the most Part.

Sufferings of James Aird of Milltoun.

I have before me a well vouched Account of the Sufferings of James Aird of Milltoun, lately got to Heaven. This worthy Man's Character needs scarce be given, he was so well known in the West of Scotland, for his eminent Piety, and unwearied employing himself for the Good of Souls; and the Loss sustained by his Death is truly very great. His Father, John Aird, was a Merchant in Glasgow since the Revolution, and he lived much at and near Kilmarnock, in this Period I am upon; they were both fined once and again, for not hearing the Episcopal Ministers. While Mr. Aird younger was at Kilmarnock, Mr. Carnegie Curate there, upon a Sabbath-day, which was very stormy, and the Church very thin, at the Close of the Afternoon's Sermon, having caused lock the Kirk Doors, called over the Names of the Parishoners, at least the Heads of Families, and whoever did not answer to their Names were marked absent, and his Name given up, and fined. In the Year 1678. Twenty four Soldiers were quartered upon him for Twenty Days, and after they removed, Twelve more for Fourteen Days. When before the Justiciary, Fifty five Witnesses were sworn as to his being at Bothwell, but nothing being proven, his Diet before the Justiciary was deserted, and he liberate. However, he was forced to agree with the Laird of Broich, who, upon the account of alledged Refet and Converse, got a Gift of his Moveables, and to give him a Thousand Merks, and his Charges before the Justiciary were upwards of Three hundred Merks; and yet, in a few Weeks after he was liberate, Parties were sent to his House in quest of him. He was for Forty two Nights forced to ly in the open Fields, and for several Years obliged to abscond, and put from looking after his Affairs. Many Times Parties came to his House, and rifled it of every Thing they could carry away. After all this Trouble this excellent Christian had Thirty Years of the Enjoyment of pure Gospel Ordinances, since the Revolution; and he used to say, One of the Gospel Days, and refreshing Communion we have since had, was more than a Reward for all the small Sufferings (as he was pleased to term them) he had endured.

Particular Forfeitures of Standhill and
Bewly, Jan. 31.

Having thus gone through the more general Forfeitures this Year, let me observe, that upon the last of January, Thomas Turnbull of Standhill, and Walter Turnbull of Bewly are forfeited in Absence in common Form, by the Justice Court; the Probation of their being in Arms at Bothwell, is pretty plain. Several other Heritors in the Merse and Berwick Shire are cited to this Diet, and some compeared, and some not; but Probation fails against them, and so I need say no more about them.

1681.

I find upon the 16 of February, the Process of Forfeiture against Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel, which since July 1679. hath been still in Dependance, is deserted before the Council. And upon the last of February, Kinkel appears before the Justiciary, and produces an Act of Council bearing, 'That considering, Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel hath been long before the Justiciary, and the Advocate is not ready to institt, the Council order him to be liberate, he giving Bond to appear when called. Accordingly the Justice Court desert the Diet upon Kinkel's giving Bond and Caution to compear under Penalty of Ten Thousand Merks. The great Cause of this good Man's getting off thus, was, by former Oppression, Fines and Hardships, his Lands were brought so low, that they were scarce worth a Donator's while to seek after.

Kinkel's Process deserted.

I shall end this Section with an Account of the Process against John Spreul, Apothecary in Glasgow, who was before the Justiciary June this Year, and give it at some length, both because it was after Torture, and made no little Noise; and I have distinct and attested Accounts of it, and he continued more than Six Years a close Prisoner after Torture. This Gentleman is yet alive after all his fore Sufferings, and I know his Modesty will not allow me to give that Character of him which he deserves, and therefore I shall only relate his Sufferings as they stand in the publick Records, intermixing some other Hints which I have well vouched.

Process against John Spreul Apothecary in Glasgow.

Mr. Spreul's Troubles began very soon after Pentland. His Father, John Spreul Merchant in Paisly, was fined by Middleton, altho' he had suffered for his refusing the Tender; he paid the one Half of his Fine, and being prosecuted for the other, or rather his refusing the Declaration, he was forced, with many other worthy Persons, to abscond. When General Dalziel came, as we have heard, to Kilmarnock 1667. a Party of Soldiers were sent to Paisly, and took Mr. Spreul, whose Sufferings I am now relating, Prisoner, merely because he would not discover where his Father was. At that Time, after many terrible Threatnings of being shot to Death, roasted at a Fire, and the like, and some short Confinement, he was dismissed.

His Troubles 1667.

In the Year 1677. he was, with Aikenhead and many other Gentlemen, cited before a Court in Glasgow, of which some Account has been already given. Finding that Severity was designed against all that compeared, Mr. Spreul absented, and was with several other worthy Persons denounced and intercommuned, tho' nothing was laid to their Charge but mere Nonconformity.

1677.

This obliged him to quit his House and Shop, and go abroad, sometimes to Holland, France and Ireland, and merchandise. He was in Ireland with his Uncle Mr. James Alexander in May 1679. and came over to Scotland after the Scuffle at Drumclog in June, and went to his House at Crawfords-dyke, where understanding the Conduct of the West Country Army, he had no Freedom to joyn them, tho' his own Brother James Spreul, and two Cousins, John Spreul Writer, and John Spreul Merchant in Glasgow, were with them in Arms. His Business obliged him to be with some in that Army, but he never joyned them.

Did not joyn in the Rising at Bothwell.

After the Defeat at Bothwell he absconded again, however his Wife and Family was turned out of his House and Shop, and all the Moveables secured. Within a little he retired to Holland, and stayed there some time, where hearing of the continued Persecution in Scotland, and growing Divisions among the Sufferers, he came home 1680. with a Design to bring his Wife and Family to Rotterdam.

Goes over to Holland, and when returned

When lurking at Edinburgh, November 12. a severe Search was made for Mr. Cargil and his Followers, and Mr. Spreul was apprehended by Major Johnstoun when in his Bed, and his Goods he had brought from Holland seized by the Party, tho' none of them were prohibited. He was carried first to the General, and then to the Guard at the Abbey, where Mr. Skene and Archibald Stuart were Prisoners; with whom he was carried up to the Tolbooth next Day about Nine of the Clock when the Council was convened.

November 1680. he is apprehended at Edinburgh.

By the Council Registers we have seen he was examined November 13. but his Answers are not insert, and therefore I shall give the Substance of what passed as far as Mr. Spreul could remember. He was interrogate, Were you at the Killing of the Archbishop? Ans. I was in Ireland at that Time. Quest. Was it a Murder? Ans. I know not, but by Hearsay, that he is dead, and cannot judge other Mens Actions upon Hearsay. I am no Judge, but in my discrete Judgment I would not have done it, and cannot approve it. He was again urged; but do you not think it was Murder? Ans. Excuse me from going any further, I scruple to condemn what I cannot approve, seeing there may be a righteous Judgment of God, where there is a sinful Hand of Man, and I may admire and adore the one when I tremble at the other. Quest. Were you at Drumclog? Ans. I was at Dublin then. Quest. Did you know nothing of the Rebels rising in Arms when in Design? Ans. No; the first Time I heard of it was in coming from Dublin to Belfast in my Way home, where I heard that Claverhouse was resisted by the Country People at Drumclog. Quest. Was not that Rebellion? Ans. I think not; for I own the Freedom of Preaching the Gospel, and I hear, what they did was only in Self-defence. Quest. Were you at Bothwell with the Rebels? Ans. After my Return from Ireland I was at Hamiltoun seeking in Money, and clearing Counts with my Customers, so I went through Part of the West Country Army, and spoke with some there, since the King's High-way was as free to me as to other Men; but I neither joyned them as Commander, Trooper, nor Soldier. Quest. Was that Rising Rebellion? Ans. I will not call it Rebellion, I think it was a providential Necessity put on them for their own Safety, after Drumclog. This Confession of his he was urged to subscribe, but absolutely refused it. By the Registers, I find, 'Mr. Spreul before the Council, November 15. confesseth he was in Company with Mr. Cargil in Edinburgh, but will not discover in what House, and adds, That there was nothing 'twixt them but Salutations.

His Examination before the Council Nov. 13. 1680.

1681.

Council's Act,
Nov 15. for his Torture.

Mr. Spreul having come from Ireland in the Time of Bothwell, and being just now come from Holland, and owning he had been in Company with Mr. Cargil, the Managers were of Opinion, that he could give them more Information; and now being got into the inhumane Way of putting People to the Torture, and A. Stuart being examined this way, November 15. that same Day the Council pass the following Act. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having good Reason to believe, That there is a Principle of murdering his Majesty, and those under him, for doing his Majesty Service, and a Design of subverting the Government of Church and State, entertained and carried on by the Fanaticks, and particularly by Mr. Donald Cargil, Mr. Robert Macwaird, and others their Complices, and that John Spreul and Robert Hamilton have been in Accession thereunto, ordain them to be subjected to the Torture, upon such Interrogatories as relate to these Three Points. 1. By what Reason and Means that murdering Principle is taught and carried on; who were accessory to the Contrivance of Murdering; who were to be murdered; and also as to the Archbishop of St. Andrews's Murder. 2. If there was any new Rebellion intended; by what Means it was to be carried on; who were to bring Home the Arms; if any be brought or bought, and by whom; who were the Contrivers and Promoters of the late Rebellion at Bothwell-bridge. 3. Who were their Correspondents Abroad and at Home, particularly at London, or elsewhere; what they know of bringing Home or disposing of seditious Pamphlets, and such other Particulars as relate to those Generals: And give full Power and Commission to the Earls of Argyle, Linlithgow, Perth, and Queensberry, Treasurer-depute, Register, Advocate, Justice-clerk, General Dalziel, Lord Collingtoun, and Haado, to call and examine the said Persons in Torture, upon the said Interrogatories, and such other as they shall find pertinent upon the said Heads, and report.'

Accordingly he is tortured.

I find no Report in the Council-books, because nothing was expiscate by Torture, which was not before acknowledged. Indeed there was nothing in this Plot and murdering Design, but imaginary Fears, and therefore I shall, from other Papers, give some Account of this Torture, the Questions proposed, and Answers given by Mr. Spreul, as far as his Memory could serve him afterwards to write down.

What past at the Torture.

The Lord Haltoun was Preses of this Committee, and the Duke of Tork and many others were present. The Preses told Mr. Spreul, That if he would not make a more ample Confession than he had done, and sign it, he behoved to underly the Torture. Mr. Spreul said, 'He had been very ingenuous before the Council, and would go no further; that they could not subject him to Torture according to Law; but if they would go on, he protested that his Torture was without, yea, against all Law; that what was extorted from him under the Torture, against himself or any others, he would resile from it, and it ought not to militate against him or any others; and yet he declared his Hopes, GOD would not leave him so far, as to accuse himself or others under the Extremity of Pain.' Then the Hangman put his Foot in the Instrument called the Boot, and, at every Query put to him, gave Five Strokes or thereby upon the Wedges. The Queries were, Whether he knew any thing of a Plot to blow up the Abbey and Duke of Tork? who was in the Plot, and where Mr. Cargil was, and if he would subscribe his Confession before the Council? To these he declared his absolute and utter Ignorance, and adhered to his refusing to subscribe. When nothing could be expiscate by this, they ordered the old Boot to be brought, alledging this new one used by the Hangman was not so good as the old, and accordingly it was brought, and he underwent the Torture a second Time, and adhered to what he had before said. General Dalziel complained at the second Torture, That the Hangman did not strike strongly enough upon the Wedges; he said, He struck with all his Strength, and offered the General the Mallet to do it himself. Mr. Spreul was very firm, and wonderfully supported, to his own Feeling in Body and Spirit, during the Torture. When it was over, he was carried to Prison on a Soldier's Back, where he was refused the Benefit of a Surgeon; but the Lord blessed so the Means he himself used, that in a little Time he recovered pretty well. That same Day his Wife came to Edinburgh, but by no Means could she be allowed Access to him, to help him after his Torture.

He is indicted
in Mar., out the Witnesses failing, is process is delayed.

When he was recovered, the Advocate sent him an Indictment, and, in March this Year, he was before the Justiciary; but the Advocate's Witnesses were not ready, and so the Process was delayed. Under this Dilature, new Witnesses were got in from the West Country; and Mr. Spreul was brought before some Counsellors, and the Witnesses confronted with him. Mr. Spreul protested against examining Witnesses extrajudicially, and not before his Judges and the Assize, and took Instruments in the Clerk's Hand. Mean while, he was informed by by one present, that some of the Witnesses were threatned, and others of them had large Promises given them to bear Testimony against him. Yet, after all, the Lords themselves began to think the Probation would not reach his Life; but the Duke of York very much pressed their going on, alledging they were at much Pains about poor Country People, but Mr. Spreul was more dangerous than Five hundred of them.

1681.

He falls under new Trouble in March, for forming

In March, an Incident fell in, which brought Mr. Spreul to some more Trouble before his Trial, and it deserves a Room here. John Murray a Sailer was sentenced to die for his being at a Conventicle in Arms, as we shall hear. A good many had been already executed chiefly at the Duke of York's Instigation, and some of the Managers were willing to shew this Man some Favour. Accordingly, several Draughts of a Petition were proposed to him, which if he should sign, the Council would procure him a Reprieve: He refused them all, as what he thought imported a receding from his Principles. At length, Sir William Paterson calling Mr. Spreul, who was in the same Room of the Prison with John Murray, to another, told him, the Council inclined to spare Murray, and intreated him to deal with him to sign any Petition, and he would present it. Mr. Spreul was not willing to engage much in this Matter, lest he should be mistaken, and misrepresented; and John Murray would not direct any Petition to the Duke of York: However, at length he drew a Declaration with a petitory Clause added to it, which satisfied John, and he signed it. It was directed to the Council, and ran, 'Whereas I am sadly misrepresented to your Lordships, as if I were a Man of King-killing Principles, I declare I would kill no Man whatsoever but upon Self-defence, which the Law of God and Nature allows; I own the free Preaching of the Gospel, whether in the Fields or Houses, seeing 'tis written, Without Faith 'tis impossible to please God, and Faith cometh by Hearing. I also own Jesus Christ as the only Head of his own Church, and King of Saints, and disown all others pretending thereunto. May it therefore please your Lordships, to recal the Sentence against me, as if I were of dangerous and King-killing Principles, lest you bring innocent Blood upon your own Heads, this City, and Inhabitants thereof; for I declare I am no Papist, and hate and abhor all those Jesuitical, bloody, and murdering Principles.'

A Petition for John Murray
under Sentence of Death.

When this Petition was read in Council, John Murray was asked, who drew it: With much Difficulty he was brought to tell; and straightway Mr. Spreul was called before them, and interrogate, if he knew any thing about a Petition presented by John Murray. He asked a Sight of it, and owned it his Writ, desired it might be read before him, and that he might know what was objected against it; and acknowledged he had drawn it at the Clerk's earnest Desire, and again intreated it might be read, that he might know what they quarrelled in it. This was not done, but the Duke of York rose up, and said with a Frown, Sir, would you kill the King? After a Pause, Mr. Spreul directing himself to the Chancellor, said, My Lord, I bless God I am no Papist, I lothe and abhor all those Jesuitical, bloody and murdering Principles; neither my Parents, nor the Ministers I heard ever taught me such Principles. A great Silence followed, and many expected that Mr. Spreul should have been sent to the Irons immediately. In a little, the Chancellor asked Mr. Spreul, if he had been at Bothwell, and some other Questions relative thereto; which the Pannel declined giving Answers to, since he was before the Justiciary. There was not one Word more of the Petition; but, 'tis probable, what he spoke at this Time made his Prosecution the more violent before the Justiciary, of which I now come to give Account from the Registers.

What past upon this in Council, with
Mr. Spreul's
Answer to the Duke of York.

March 2. John Spreul, Apothecary in Glasgow, is indicted before the Justiciary for Treason and Rebellion, and the Lords continue his Process till June next. Upon the 6 of June I find him in the Pannel, and the Lords desert the Diet simpliciter; whether it was from some Informality in the Libel, or what was the Reason, I cannot tell, but upon the 10 of June, Mr. Spreul is brought again before the Justiciary, and the Advocate produces an Act of Council, dated June 9. ordering him to pursue a Forfeiture against the said Mr. Spreul; and accordingly presents an Indictment of Treason and Rebellion, for corresponding and being present with the Rebels at Bothwell. It runs in the common Form which is insert above, and so needs not be repeated here. Only I notice, that he is charged 'with keeping Company and corresponding with Mr. John Welsh and Mr. Samuel Arnot, the bloody and sacrilegious Murderers of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews;' which is an arrant Falshood, those Two Ministers having had no Share in that Fact.

His Process
before the Justiciary, March and June.

Indictments
June 10.

The Pannel's Advocates are Sir George Lockhart, Mr. Walter Pringle, Mr. James Dacs, Mr. Alexander Swinton, and Mr. David Thoirs. In the Entry, the King's Advocate declares, he makes Use of the Pannel's Confession, when put to the Torture before the Council, only as a Mean of Probation to adminiculate the other Probation to be led, but does not insist upon that Confession at this Time, either as a Crime per se, or as a sufficient Mean of Probation, without being adminiculate, as said is. Mr. Pringle alledged, the Defender could not pais to the Knowledge of an Inquest, because 'tis offered to be proven, that he being examined before the Council for the same Crime, and having denied the same, and thereafter being tortured Two several Times, he still denied the same, and consequently, by the Law of this and all other Nations, he cannot be impannelled nor condemned for that Crime, upon any new Probation, Pannel's Advocates.

Debates whether the Defender can pais to the Knowledge of an Affize after Torture.

1681.

King's Advocate's Replies.

Probation, and protests the Pannel may be heard upon the Relevancy of any pretended Confession, adduced as an Adminicle. The Advocate replies, That a Denial upon Torture cannot infer absolute Liberation, since no Man's Obstinacy should be of Advantage to him; and that were to make Disingenuity a Remission, and tempt Criminals to conceal Truth; nor does Torture in Law import any more than a Presumption of Innocence, & adumbratam veritatis speciem; but so it is, that in Law Presumptions may be taken off by clear Probation, presumptio cedit veritati; and Judges and Magistrates being forced to put suspect Persons to Torture, how soon they are apprehended, for preventing further Danger; if this Torture, by way of Inquisition, preclude future Probation, it will follow, That either Crimes must be left undiscovered, by not putting suspect Persons to Torture, or that Pannels be absolved and suffered to go unpunished, by wanting After-opportunities of leading just Probation against them; and (added he) how absurd would it be, that a Person guilty of burning a Metropolis, and yet denying this in a preparatory Trial, should be let go, when afterwards he might be convicted by plain Probation? By this Means wicked Persons might escape; but there can no Hurt follow from the Advocate's Position, that Torture only ought to prevent a new Trial upon indicia conjecturæ, and Presumptions, but not upon a clear Probation. He further asserts, That tho' most that can be pleaded in Law is, That no Man can be tried upon the principal and chief Grounds and Points for which he was tortured; but the Pannel was never tortured upon the Grounds he is now to be tried upon: That he was tortured upon his Accession to the King's Excommunication, Correspondence with Cargil and other Rebels in Holland; whereas now he is to be tried upon his being in Arms with the Rebels. He adds, That the Pannel, upon Torture, had neither cleared himself, nor satisfied the Judges, but continued in one insuperable Obstinacy; and therefore the Reason from the Torture ceases. And lastly, he alledged there could be no Necessity to examine the Pannel, as to his Accession to the Rebellion, since 'tis offered to be proven, that previously to his Torture, he confessed this Crime clearly and liquidly.

Sir George Lockhart's Duplies.

Sir George Lockhart duplies, That the Defence offered for the Pannel, is so much founded upon the common Law, the Law and Custom of Nations, the Opinion of the most eminent Criminalists, the Practice of the most famous Tribunals in Europe, that it cannot be elided; for 'tis not controverted, that if the Accuser in a criminal Process only make Use of a presumptive Probation, without putting the Pannel to Torture, the Law in that Case considers the Concourse of Adminicles and Presumptions, and in that Case presumptio cedit veritati, according to the Pregnancy of the Adminicles or Presumptions urged; but when the Accuser, not trusting to any Probation he is able to adduce, recurs to the extraordinary Remedy of Torture, as medium explorandi & indagandi veritatem, in which Torture, as being that which the Law looks upon to be res fragilis, and by which the Innocent is as oft oppressed as Necessity discovered; in that Case the common Principles of Law, and Custom of Nations, has proceeded with that Equality of Justice, that as in case an innocent Person, forced by Torture to confess the Crime, behoved to be condemned; so Parity of Reason requires, that if the Person patientia sua vicerit vim tormentorum, absolvendus est, non solum ab instantia, sed etiam a crimine. And the Reason is, because the Accuser, by recurring to the extraordinary and subsidiary Remedy of Torture, does place the whole Vigour and Effect of the Affair, upon what shall be the Effect of the Torture, and that whether the Pannel confess and be condemned, or by enduring, purge all Manner of Probation that was competent against him. Again, it is true, that if the Judge or Pursuer do not subject the Pannel to Torture, or in Torture do not interrogate him super ipso crimine & facto principali, but only pro ulteriore veritate indaganda, vel circumstantiis delictum aggravantibus, in that Case the Torture cannot operate as to the principal Fact; but that does not concern the Point in question, in regard it is offered to be proven, this Pannel was tortured, not upon any special Copy of particular Presumptions delivered to him, nor upon these special Points condescended on by the Advocate, but was tortured twice most violently super ipso crimine, and the principal Deeds libelled, and was particularly interrogate, if he was not present with the Rebels at Bothwell-bridge, Hamiltoun-muir, and Glasgow; upon all which he suffered Torture without any Acknowledgment. And what can be of more dangerous Consequence, than that Subjects accused of Crimes, be first, by way of Expiscation, subjected to the horrid Pain and Violence of Torture? and that, notwithstanding that many Times their Members be torn, lacerate, and disenabled for all their Lives, yea, may run the Hazard of their Lives, and after all shall not by enduring so much, redeem themselves from further Trial as to these Crimes, if this Doctrine be laid down, in all criminal Processes the first Enquiry shall still be by Torture, which the Law only allows as the last and extraordinary Remedy, and in subsidium: Yea, Torture is of it self of so extraordinary a Nature, as the Customs of many Nations do altogether reprobate it, and that even as the last Remedy; but no Law will allow it to be made Use of, and Parties still liable to further Inquiries, as to the same Crimes. And he adds, that there is no Prejudice hereby to the publick Interests, or to his Majesty, because the just and regular Way is still patent, and his Majesty's Officers are first to use their utmost Enquiry for Probation; and if this fail in Treason & criminibus exceptis, there is Room for for the last Remedy: But 'tis the constant Opinion of all Lawyers, that when once Torture is used, it excludes all further Probation, and the Lords of the Justiciary are desired to cast their Eyes upon Farin. Quest. 40. Clarus, Quest. 84. N<sup>o</sup>. 38. where he says, that all the World is of Opinion, that Torture purges, etiamsi delictum fuisset contra ipsum plene probatum, and that if it were not so, double Punishment is undergone: And Gomezius, Cap. 13. N<sup>o</sup>. 28. Carpzovius Quest. 125. Damaderius, Prax. criminal. Cap. 29. And as there is no positive Law and Act of Parliament in Scotland for Torture, except in so far as it is founded on Custom and common Law, so the Effects of Torture must be interpret according to those; yea, the Practice of this Nation hath been exactly agreeable to these. In the Year 1632 and 1633. John Toshach being pursued as guilty of Statutory Treason, for wilful Fire, and burning the House of Frendraught, the Pannel being interrogate, not upon the whole Fact, as libelled, but precisely, whether he entred into the Vault with a Candle that Night the House was burnt, and upon this subjected to Torture, and denied it; and the Process continuing from August to November, and thence to February, and his Majesty's Advocate urging a new Probation, and the Pannel's Lawyers advancing his Torture as a Defence; the Lords of Justiciary sustained it, after advising with the Council, and long considering the Affair. The Practick holds much stronger in this Case, wherein the Pannel was tortured upon the formal Crime and Question. And as to the Pretence, the Pannel had confessed the Crime before Torture, as to himself, and was only tortured as to his Complices, and its Circumstances not now insisted upon. It is answered, this does not elide the Defence, but resolves in a Denial thereof, which mean while is offered to be proven: And further, no such pretended Confession is produced in Writ, under the Pannel's own Hand; and tho' it were, it is only extrajudicial, and cannot be a Mean of Probation before an Inquest; and it is not to be supposed, that after a Confession his Majesty's Advocate would put the Pannel to Torture: And further, it cannot be sustained without the Danger of all Mens Lives, that the Depositions of Witnesses may be made Use of to prove pretended Confessions, whereupon to infer Guilt, the Confessions not being extant. The Pannel indeed was desired to subscribe a Paper containing his Confession, but he absolutely refused the same.

1681.

The Advocate produceth the Council's Commission for Torture, to shew he was not tortured on the Points libelled.
Sir George Lockhart's Duplies.

His Majesty's Advocate consents, that it shall be relevant to the Pannel to prove, that he was tortured upon this very Point by Command of Council; and for verifying the contrary, the Commission it self, November 15. upon which he was subjected to Torture, is adduced, which hath been insert above, and needs not be repeated.

Sir George Lockhart duplies for the Pannel, that the Pretext advanced by the Advocate is irrelevant, that there can be no Necessity on the Pannel to prove that he was interrogate, as to the Crimes libelled by the Authority of Council. He was not in the least obliged to consider who interrogate him, there being a Committee appointed by Council, and he examined in their Presence; no more can be required but a Proof, that de facto he was interrogate upon the Crimes now libelled, as he offers to prove. To suppose he was otherwise interrogate than their Commission bears, were to stage the Committee of illegal Procedure; but it is certain the Pannel was interrogate on the Crimes libelled, and his Answers drawn up as his Confession; yea, the Council's Commission allows Particulars upon the general Heads set down.

Lords Interlocutor repelling the Defence of Torture.

After these Debates, the Lords, by their Interlocutor, 'find the Dittay relevant, and remit the Probation to an Assize, and repel the Defence founded upon the Torture, in respect the Commission of Council did not warrant the Pannel to have been questioned upon any of the Crimes mentioned in the Dittay, and continues the said Action till the Thirteenth Instant.'

New Debates July 13.

Upon the 13. Mr. Pringle alledged for the Pannel, that notwithstanding the Interlocutor and Commission produced, the Defence ought to be sustained, and takes Instruments upon the Production of the Commission, and contends notwithstanding of that, the Committee had Power to interrogate upon the Crimes libelled, by the Second Branch of their Powers, and the general Clause at the Close of the Third Branch; that agreeably to these, they might justly interrogate him if he was at Bothwell-bridge, and offers to prove he was accordingly interrogate. Mr. David Thoms adds, that the Committee are sole Judges of the Pertinency of the Interrogatories, and he having in Torture denied the same, he must be absolved.

Advocate's Replies.

The Advocate oppones the Commission and Interlocutor, and offers to prove, that it was argued and concluded in Council, that he should not be interrogate upon his Accession to Bothwell-bridge; and the Committee again agreed he should not be interrogate simpliciter, upon his being in the Rebellion, which is the only Thing now insisted on.

Sir George Lockhart's Duplies.

To this Sir George Lockhart oppones the Commission of Council, and the Pannel again and again takes Instruments, and protests it may ly and remain in the Clerk's Hand; and adds, that Commissions upon which so important Effects have followed, as Torture, ought not to be subjected ex post facto to Glosses and Interpretations; that the Alledgance of contrary Resolutions is no way relevant, because tantum creditur judici, quantum apparet ex actis, and the Commission under the Clerk's Hand, can never be redargued by any Probation of verbal Conclusions and Debates; and it is an unanswerable Argument, the Committee proceeded according 1681.

according to their Commission, that 'tis again and again offered to be proved, that the Pannel was subjected to Torture the Second Time, because he refused to sign the Confession offered him, which, among other Things, contained an Answer to an Interrogatory as to his Accession to Bothwell.

The Lords adhere to their former Interlocutor, and remit the Libel to Probation.

The Deposition of John Laing.

The Lords having considered this, with the former Debate, ' find no new Matter alleged for the Pannel, and adhere to their former Interlocutor, and remit the Dittay to an Affize.' Their Names I omit for Brevity; after they are lawfully sworn, and the Advocate adduces his Witnesses.

John Laing, Chirurgion in Hamiltoun, depones, he was with the Pannel in June 1679. in Hamiltoun, about fitting Accounts 'twixt them, according to an Appointment made before the Pannel went to Ireland; that not being able to end them, the Pannel took his Horse, and rode away with Pistols and Holsters towards Glasgow, and that he used to see the Pannel before the Rebellion ride with Pistols, and that no Discourse passed 'twixt them as to the Rebels then in Arms, and this was about Eight Days before the Engagement, and the Pannel said he was come straight from Ireland.

David Caldwell, Objections against him as having already deposed on the Contents of the Libel.

David Caldwell in Monkland is next adduced. Mr. Pringle objects against him, in regard, that since the Pannel was cited upon this Libel, he hath been examined, and deposed upon the Contents of the Libel, and by no Law can any previous Inquisition be made, or Witnesses examined after a criminal Pursuit is raised: And Sir George Lockhart adds, That this Matter is of the last Importance as to the Lives of People, that after Pannels are accused, the Witnesses shall not be adduced or examined but in Judgment, and in Presence of the Pannel and Inquest. The Reason is plain, because the Pannel is to be confronted in omni actu judiciali, which concerns his Life, with the Witness, and he to be interrogate upon the mutual Interrogatories of the Pannel, which may tend to clear the Pannel's Innocence, and the Witness is not to be predetermined, by Depositions upon Oath, without calling the Pannel, which in Law is proditio testimonii. This was determined by this Court, January 8. 1672. in the Case of the present Justice-general, and the Johnsouns of Carshago, and my Lord Advocate in his Criminals sets down and approves the said Decision. The Advocate answers, That proditio testimonii is only reprobate by Law when ultroneous, and not when Oath is given before a Judge, which can be no Prejudice to a Pannel, and is necessary in many Cases, especially that of Rebellion, which is so horrid a Crime, that many Things are stamped in a Process of that Nature, not allowed in other Cases, such as socii criminis; and 'tis necessary in this Case, that it may be known what Witnesses are to be secured, who otherwise would not come. Besides, in March last, after a solemn Debate, this very Defence was repelled in Council, and the Justices commanded to examine, and did so. He added, that as there is no Hazard in doing so, the Hazard to the Common-wealth is great, if this be neglected; that honest Witnesses upon Oath will depone nothing but Truth, and that still any Depositions probative must be in the Party's Presence, and this Court is not to regard any Depositions but what are before them: That the previous Trial does not hinder the Pannel from propounding his Interrogatories, which is the Reason of the Act of Parliament; and tho' after the Libel is given, nothing can be further done by way of Inquest, and further burdening the Pannel, yet Oaths may be taken for clearing what Witnesses ought to be secured, lest they abstract themselves for being in the same Crime, otherwise sometimes a Hundred of the Lieges behoved to be secured at once: And lastly, the Advocate declares he makes no Use of the previous Deposition. Sir George Lockhart replies, the Objection stands in full Force; for altho' in indicio inquisitionis, before a Person be cited as guilty, there is Room to hear the Declarations of Witnesses, yet in indicio accusationis, and when the Party is indicted, there is no Room for proceeding, but where the Party is present; and 'tis of no Effect for the Lord Advocate, to declare that he makes no Use of the former Depositions, for they have already had their Effect prejudicial to the Pannel, viz. to limit and predetermine them, so that they cannot depone otherwise than already, without Infamy and Perjury: And 'tis not to interpret but to subvert the Act of Parliament, Act 90. Parl. 11. Jam. VI. to say that Witnesses may be first examined upon Oath, the Pannel being absent, and then examined again in his Presence, after they have deposed. As to this, Points being already determined in the Point of Lanerk Heritors, March last, 'tis answered, The Pretence is groundless, and 'tis peremptorily asserted, that since the Foundation of this Court, there was never a Witness examined upon Oath in the Pannel's Absence, after he was accused, and there can be no Exception, except when the Pannel, after Citation, is contumaciously absent. And even in that Case, there can be no further Procedure made, not so much as to examine Witnesses to ly in retentis, except in the Case of open Rebellion and publick Sedition, and that only by virtue of a late Act of Parliament, before which Witnesses could not at all have been examined.

Advocate's Answers.

Sir George Lockhart's Duplies.

The Lords repel the Objection.

After this long Debate, the Lords ' repel the Objection founded upon the Depositions taken by Order of Council, in regard they do not allow his Majesty's Advocate to adduce them as a Probation, and ordain the Witnesses to be received.' Sir George Lockhart takes Instruments, that it is acknowledged there were other Depositions taken of the Witnesses out with th the Prefence of the Pannel. Another Objection is made against the same Witness as fo- us criminis; but the Lords repel it, because he hath taken the Bond appointed by the demnity, and the Procefs is of Treason. Sir George Lockhart takes Instruments, that it is knownledged the Witness was in the Rebellion, and has taken the Bond.

1681.

Then David Caldwell depones, he thinks he saw the Pannel riding in Arms half a Mile from Hamiltoun, the Friday before the Defeat at Bothwell; that there were some Men with him whom he knew not to be Rebels, but some of them had Arms; that he never saw the Pannel before that he was half a Mile from the Body of the Rebels; that he does not know if the Pannel was reputed one of the Rebels; that he met the Pannel in the High-way at the Mederwall, in the Way from Hamiltoun to Edinburgh; that he never saw the Pannel since, but he thinks he is the Man he saw there; that he knew none in Company with the Pannel, except one Ruffel, whom he saw frequently in Company with the Rebels.

Deposition of David Caldwell

James Hamilton in Hamiltoun, called Nepos, depones, he saw Mr. Spreul in June 1679. going alone through Hamiltoun to an Apothecary's Shop, with a walking Sword about him; that he never heard him reputed among the Rebels at that Time.

James Hamilton

James Millar in Millbeugh depones, in June 1679. he saw one designed Mr. Spreul riding with Arms on a gray Horse, up to the Rebels in Hamiltoun-muir; that the Pannel is like the Man designed Mr. Spreul, but dare not depone he is he; that he never heard that after that Mr. Spreul was among the Rebels.

James Millar.

John Spreul, Writer in Glasgow, depones, that he, being in Company with the Rebels, met the Pannel and another in his Company upon the Road, half a Mile from the Haggs some Days before Bothwell; that he did not see the Pannel in Company with the Rebels in Hamiltoun-muir, nor any where else.

John Spreul

John Aird, Merchant in Glasgow, depones, that he and the Pannel, with another Woman, were in Company in the Deponent's House at Glasgow with Mr. John Welsh. A vast number of other Witnesses are sworn, but they have nothing in their Depositions worth while.

John Aird.

When the Probation by Witnesses was ended, the Advocate, for further Probation, adduced the abovementioned alledged Confession in presence of Council. Sir George Lockhart alledged for the Pannel, that the pretended Confession before the Council could not be repeated as a Mean of Probation in this Procefs, because that 'tis not signed by the Pannel, but, when it was offered to him, was disowned and disclaimed by him, and what he would not sign; that 'tis most unreasonable that a Confession, not acquiesced unto by the Pannel, and drawn up ex post facto, and after a long Interval of Time, should be made to militate against him, by any Witnesses whatsoever, and the Reason is because a Confession, importing what concerns a Man's Life or Fortune may be mistaken by Witnesses as to the Tenor, and Phrases, and Manner of Expression, all which may make a vast Difference as to the Meaning and Import of such a Confession; and nothing can be of worse Consequence in Criminals than to lay down this Foundation, that what is deponed by Witnesses may be taken for a Man's own Confession, especially ex post facto, and after a long Interval of Time; yea, tho' the said Confession were signed by the Pannel, yet being extrajudicial, and not coram competente judice as to the Procefs and Crime, it cannot be sustained; since such extrajudicial Confessions, even in Writing, and incontinently taken, are in Law revocable, & fidem non faciunt in processu criminali, as appears from Matthæus de Crim. p. 370. Clarus, Quest. 54. and the most that such Confessions can operate is only indivium ad torturam, which the Pannel has endured, and was subjected to it, because he refused to own the said pretended Confession. Further, according to the Practice of all Nations, 'tis statuted, Act 90. Parl. 11. Jam. VI. that all Writs and Documents used in Probation, shall be taken in face of the Inquest, and consequently before the Judges competent, whereas this Confession was extra locum juris, and the Privy Council are not proper Judges in this Procefs. All which Defences the Pannel propounds, as separa- tim relevant.

Mr. Spreul's
Confession adduced as a further Proof.

Debates upon its not being signed, and dis-claimed, and Extrajudicial

His Majesty's Advocate replies, That the Pannel's not signing the Confession, says nothing, because it was read to him, and it shall be proven, that he could not disown the Confession; and the Pannel's Contumacy cannot be of Use to him, and ought not, unless one Crime be made to defend another; and the constant Custom has, upon good Reason, made unsigned Confessions valid; and Skene, Stuart, and others died upon such Confessions: That the Confession was written and read ex incontinenti to the Pannel; and it is offered to be proven, that he, being advertised of his Danger, and the Articles read one by one, acquiesced in them all, except that he would not say he was in the Rebellion; and exceptio firmat regu- lam. He adds, That following the merciful Example of the King his Master, and being unwilling to stretch any debatable Point, he hath only adduced this Confession against the Pannel as an Adminicle, and a Presumption joyned with other pregnant Grounds, and insists,
That it is a very strong Argument; for who can know a Man's Accession so well as himself?
Writs may be forged, Witnesses may be false, but a Man will never confess falsely to his own Hurt: And therefore a Confession coram judice incompetente is valid, unless the Confessor can shew what made him err. Mascard. Conclus. 352. N. 2. Clarus, Quest. 55. N. 40. 'Tis proven that he was upon the Spot, and conversed with the Rebels; and all that is wanting,

The Advor-cate's Replies.

1681.

is, Whether it was animo delinquendi. And certainly his own Confession must be owned the most solid Evidence of this. To which it may be added, That the Pannel is universally known to be of these Principles which led Men to Bothwell-bridge, and to be the great Ringleader there, and that he will not yet call it a Rebellion: And how can it once be thought, that he who wished so well to that Party, trafficked so much for them, was so oft with them, and will not yet disown it, to the Hazard of his Life, being proven to have been there in Arms, and confessed it, who will think, that in materia verisimili, that the Confession should not operate against him, and adminiculate, as said is?

Sir George Lockhart's Duplies.

Sir George Lockhart duplies, That the Pannel's Procurators are not straitned by the Instances of Skene and other Traitors, which do not concern the Point in Hand; yea, they resort these Instances, in so far as they were sifted before the Justices, and did repeat their Confessions before them and the Inquest, and ran to the highest Transports of Fury and Treason, disowning the King and his Judges, and were in crimine flagrante, and owning and committing Treason in face of the Court. He further ailets, there cannot be one Instance given, wherever a Confession, importing Forfeiture of Life and Estate, not signed by the Person, or Judge, when he cannot write, but offered to be proven by Depositions of Witnesses, was ever heard of before, or sustained; and contends, this is reprobate by the general Principles of Law, and the Statutes of the Kingdom in judicio civili, and pecuniary Matters, in which nuda emissio verborum will not be admitted to be proven by Deposition of Witnesses, in a Sum of an Hundred Pounds Scots, and can it be admitted in a Matter of Life and Fortune? He adds, that 'tis notour, That a pretended judicial Confession before the Lords of Session, in the Case of Osburn and Buchanan, tho' produced under the Clerk's Hand, was not sustained to be binding in a Matter of Debt, because not subscribed by the Party; and it would be a strange Stretch indeed, if the Subscription of a Clerk, or Deposition of Witnesses, should be admitted in a Matter of this Importance, when cast as to the meanest pecuniary Matters: In short, what is advanced, that extrajudicial Confessions coram iudice incompetente, may be adduced in modum adminiculi, nisi doceatur de errore, comes not at all up to this Case, because that is only true, where constat & apparet de veritate actus, by Production of the Confession it self; in which Case 'tis acknowledged, that both in judicial and extrajudicial Confessions, if the Party be able docere de errore, he may retract, and be heard against the Confession; but here the Point debated is, that the Confession de natura sua requirit scripturam, which is not in this Case, and is not probable by Witnesses: And as to the Concurrence and Qualifications of the other Adminicles insisted on by his Majesty's Advocate, they are neither proper to be debated nor answered hoc loco, and may be represented to the Inquest, where they shall be sufficiently taken off. Mr. David Thoers adds, The Decision of the Court in the Case of Robertoun Soldier, who having confessed a Murder before the Three Commissioners of the Justiciary, the Advocate, and Clerk, the Court refused to sustain the Confession either as plena, or semiplena probatio, in respect it was not taken by Four of the Justices, who are only a Quorum pro tribunali sedentes.

The Lords refuse to sustain Confessions proven by Witnesses. Mr. Spensel interrogate if he thinks Bothwell to be Rebellion, with his Answer.

The Lords having considered this Part of the Debate, 'refuse to sustain the Confession to be proven by Witnesses, as a Mean of Probation either plenary, or adminiculate.' Then the Advocate moved the Pannel might be interrogate, If he thinks the being at Bothwell-bridge, Rebellion. The Pannel answers, That he conceives that he is not obliged to answer, because it is not the Crime libelled, and he may be as well interrogate upon any Point of Treason. The Lords having interrogate the Pannel, if he acknowledged the Rising at Bothwell to be a Rebellion; he answered, that was no Part of the Libel, and his After-life should witness him to be both a good Subject and good Christian. The Advocate closed his Probation, and protests for an Affize of Error, in case the Inquest assilvie the Pannel.

Verdict of the Affize, that the Libel is not proven.

The Lords ordain the Affize to inclose, and return their Verdict to Morrow; which they did, and when opened, was as follows. 'The Affize having considered the Depositions of the hail Witnesses led against John Spreul, una voce find nothing proven of the Crimes contained in the Libel, which may make him guilty.'

Neil Stevenson Chanc.

Act of Council discharging him to be liberated upon any Sentence of the Justiciary.

Whereupon the Pannel and his Procurators take Instruments, and crave he may be liberated: But his Majesty's Advocate produced an Act of Council, Edinburgh, June 14. 1681. 'The Council give Order and Warrant to the Justices, notwithstanding of any Verdict or Sentence, upon the criminal Dittay lately pursued against John Spreul, to detain him in Prison until he be examined upon several other Points they have to lay to his Charge.'

Pat. Menzies.

And so Mr. Spreul was sent back again to Prison. I have given the fuller Account of this Process, and as distinct a Detail of the Reasonings as I could form, because I was of Opinion, pinion, the Debates which fell in in this Case, are in many Branches of them, upon Heads common to several other Sufferers in this Period; and the Pleading of such noted Lawiers on both Hands, will afford no small Light to the Cases of Torture, of extrajudicial Confession, the Refusal to sign Confessions, and other Points not uncommon in this Period. Besides, the Weight of the Case of Torture it self, which deserves a Room here, the Method of treating Pannels, and the Pains used to make every thing turn to their Disadvantage, with the Vigour now used in the Prosecutions, will appear; and if such Efforts were made in this Process, when so many able Lawiers were Procurators for the Pannel, we may easily guess what sad Work was in the more ordinary Processes, with poor ignorant Country People.

1681.

Upon the 14 of July, I find Mr. Spreul, and William Lin Writer in Edinburgh, brought before the Privy Council, for being present at Field-conventicles; and they are found guilty of hearing Presbyterian Ministers preach, when some of the Hearers were without Doors, as likewise of Refet and Converse with intercommuned Persons. The Matter was referred to their Oaths, which they refusing, are found guilty. Mr. Spreul was out of the Kingdom at the Times libelled as to Conventicles; and each of them is fined in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, and sent to the Bass. Mr. Spreul lay Six Years in the Bass, and we shall again meet with him there after this; and, from his long Continuance in that Place, he has yet the Compellation of Bass John Spreul, whereof he needs not be ashamed.

Process against Mr. Spreul, for Field conventicles; he is fined in 500 Pounds Sterling, and sent to the Bass.

I find, joyned with Mr. spreul in the same Process, upon the 10 of June, Robert Ferguson of Letter-pin; he is indicted as guilty of Treason and Rebellion, by his being at Bothwell-bridge. His own signed Confession is adduced as Probation, and the Lords delay passing Sentence against him till November. I find no more about him in the Registers; and, by some Composition or other, I suppose the Matter was dropt.

Process against Ferguson of Letter-pin.

Thus I have gone through what I meet with this Year before the Criminal Court, relative to the Subject Matter of this History. I come now to the Trouble particular Persons are brought to by the Council, and otherwise.

SECTION III.

Of the Sufferings of particular Gentlemen, Ministers, and others this Year, not unto Forfeiture or Death.

THE Persecution of Presbyterians being now advancing to a great Height, I shall bring in a Detail of the Sufferings of severals taken or proceeded this Year, who, in the former Years, had no small Share of Trouble, with some other Hints concerning particular Persons in the Council-books.

In the Beginning of this Year, I find some Presbyterian Ministers in Ireland, who had been forced to flee thither from Scotland, by the Persecution, fall under no small Trouble. Popery was making great Advances, especially in Ireland, and the Meeting of Ministers in Logan, drew up Causes of a Fast, and with their People kept it, February 16. 1681. a Copy of which is before me. For this, Mr. William Trail, Mr. James Alexander, Mr. Robert Campbell, and Mr. John Hart, were called before the Justices of Peace at St. Johnstown in April, where they acknowledged their Accession to the said Causes, and in June they received Summons to appear before the Lord Lieutenant and Council at Dublin. A Copy of Mr. William Trail's Examination is in mine Eye, first before the Lieutenant and Council, June 20. and then before a Committee of Council, June 22. in both which he acknowledges their appointing that Fast, gives his Opinion very frankly upon the Oath of Supremacy, declares himself willing to sign the Confession of Faith of the Church of Ireland, and fully vindicates himself and his Brethren, in Point of Loyalty. The Questions and Answers are so large, that I do not insert them, since they fall not so directly before me in this History. The Four Ministers were referred to the Assizes at Lisford, where they were fined in Twenty Pounds Sterling each, for appointing a Fast, and ordered to give Bonds to pay it, and for their good Behaviour in Time coming, or go to Prison. The Ministers not knowing the Import of the Bond required from them, chose to go to Prison, where they were moderately dealt with, and had Liberty to preach every Lord's Day. They continued under Confinement from August this Year, till July 1682. when their Fines, by an Order from the Exchequer, were reduced to 20 Shillings, and they were liberate.

Mrs. Will. Trail, James Alexander, Rob. Campbell, prosecuted in Ireland, 1681 & Fast, Dec. 16.

In March this Year, James Gray of Chrystoun, in the Parish of Calder, for his alledged

Ac-

1681.

Chrystown aff-follied of Accession to Bothwel.

His Sufferings since the
Year 1677.

Accession to Bothwel, was brought to the Knowledge of an Assize, and affolied; yet his Trouble ceased not after his Delivery, and it grew worse next Year. I shall here, as I have done in some other Instances, give a Detail of the former Sufferings of this judicious Heritor, and singular Christian.

In the Year 1677 and 1678. his House was many Times rifled and searched, upon pretext (for they had no Probation) of his Concurrence with, and Encouragement of the Preaching of the Gospel by Presbyterian Ministers. The Militia quartered upon his House for several Weeks together, for not subscribing the Bond, called the Highland Bond, to his great Loss, and he himself was forced to retire and wander. In Summer 1679. about Twenty Dragoons, for several Weeks, lay at his House, and he with his Family were obliged to remove, and shift for themselves; all he had in his House and Barns was utterly spoiled and eaten up, and his Tenants abused; and when the Soldiers went off, they carried with them all his Cattle and Sheep, and broke and burnt what of his Household Furniture they could not carry with them.

All this, with the Insolencies and daily Quarterings of Soldiers upon his House, in the Months of March and April 1679. run up to a prodigious Loss; and yet, all this Time, there was neither Citation, Probation, or Sentence against him; and when he was forced to remove from his own House, such was the Kindness of those Guests, that many Times his Wife and Children were forced to leave the House, and stay in the Fields all Night. At the Circuit holden at Glasgow, October 1679. without any Order of Law, and contrary to Law, he was declared Outlaw and Fugitive; and in February 1680. put to the Horn, and denounced Rebel; so that he could no more keep his own House, and his Family enjoyed little Quiet in it; and he and his eldest Son, who was killed at Airs-moss, were reduced to the greatest Straits and Difficulties in their Hidings and Wandrings.

1679.

1680.

And though, in March this Year, Mr. Gray was affolied by an Assize, and relaxed from the Horn, which cost him a great deal of Money, and restored to the Peace; yet he could scarce enjoy any Benefit thereby. His known Aversion to the Prelates and their Underlings, because of their Profaneness, and persecuting Spirits, discovered in his continued refusing Subjection to them, or Conformity with them, made him still the Object of their Malice, Fury, and Violence. And tho' he was, by their own Law, freed from all that could be laid to his Charge, as to pretended Rebellion and Disloyalty, yet this same Year in October, his House was again pillaged, at the Instigation of the Clergy, who were indeed the Authors and Procurers of all his Hardships. As an Heritor, he had his full Share of Dragoons sent to his House to be quartered; and, over and above these, Captain Strachan sent his own Servants and Horses to be maintained at Chrystown, well knowing, nothing, how iniquitous soever, would be blamed, which was done to a Person disliked by the orthodox Clergy. Their Incivility and Rudeness was so great, that his Family was again obliged to quit the House, save his Wife who stayed in one of the Rooms, with a young Girl who waited on her. Mean while, the Soldiers took the Keys of the House and Barns, and entertained themselves and Horses as they pleased, threshing and carrying away the Crop, as they saw good: Yea, they would not allow Meat to Mr. Gray's Horses, with which he was to have plowed his Ground, but turned them out to the open Fields in the Winter Time; and it was with Difficulty his Wife could obtain so much Straw as to feed one Cow, upon whose Milk she lived. At this Rate they continued at Chrystown about Three Months. In the Beginning of the next Year, he was seized, with which I shall end my Account of the Severities this excellent Person underwent.

James Pettigrew in Camnethan his Sufferings.

Another Instance, is of James Pettigrew in the Parish of Camnethan; he was alledged to have been at Bothwel, but no Probation adduced. The Year after he was quartered upon by one Fergusson a Donator, who continued with his Party of Soldiers living at Discretion till the said James paid him the Sum of Three Hundred Merks, beside all the Loss he sustained by Quartering. In May 1681. he was seized by Captain Inglis, and carried into Edinburgh, where he continued Prisoner three Months, and before he could be liberated, paid Five hundred Merks to Gavin Muirhead of Lauchop, and afterward he was again oppressed by the Laird of Meldrum in the Year 1683. and was forced to pay near Two Hundred Merks for Horses taken from him, besides frequent Quarterings of Soldiers.

Those of Alexander Smith in the same Parish.

Alexander Smith, in the same Parish, was about the same Time carried in Prisoner to Edinburgh, for alledged being at Bothwel. He got out of Prison in Women's Clothes, and was afterwards taken, and rescued, as we may hear, at Inchbelly-bridge. And in the 1685. he was again seized and sent to Dunnoter, whence he made his Escape; and was again taken in the Year 1687. and continued Prisoner till the Revolution.

And Robert Russell.

About the same Time Robert Russell, in the same Parish, against whom nothing could be objected, met with a Party of Soldiers on the High-road, and refusing to answer their Interrogatories, and declining to pray for the King, alledging it was an owning of him in persecuting the People of God, they threatened him with present Death; but this being not yet so common as afterwards, they only carried him Prisoner to Edinburgh, where he lay near two Years in Irons. These are but a few Hints of many Instances which might be given in the West Country at this Time.

April 6. The Council, upon a Petition from Mr. Archibald Riddel, allow him to go and see his dying Mother, upon Caution to return to his Confinement against the 25 of April. And June 9. I find him cited before the Council, and charged with breaking his Confinement to the Parish of Kippen, keeping Conventicles, and baptizing Children, upon which he is sent to the Bass, and, as we heard, continued there three Years.

1681.

Mr. Archibald Riddel sent to the Bass.

The same Day the Reverend Mr. John Blackader is taken, when living peaceably in his House at Edinburgh, and sent to the Bass. In this Place I shall give the Reader a View of this useful Minister his Sufferings, from original Papers, and other Accounts communicated to me by his Sons, Mr. Adam Blackader, and the honourable Colonel Blackader Governor of Stirling Castle, as briefly as I can, with some Hints of the Hardships his Family underwent,

Mr. John Blackader taken and sent to the Bass.

Mr. John Blackader was Minister of the Gospel at Traquair near Dumfries before the Restoration, and singularly useful in the Work of the Ministry. When the rest of his Brethren were turned out, a Party of the Guards came from Dumfries to seize him, but he was out of the Way, and his Wife and Children, to whom the Soldiers were very rude, were forced to retire to Barndennock in the Parish of Glencairn, a House belonging to Craigdarroch: There Mr. Blackader and his numerous Family met with further Trouble. In the Year 1665. a Party of Sir Janes Turner's Men came in Quest of Mr. Blackader, but he and his Wife were happily at Edinburgh, and attacked the House in the Middle of the Night with the utmost Fury, and most terrible Oaths and Execrations. The Children were turned most barbarously out of their Beds, and one of them was forced in his Shirt to hold the Candle till they searched the House, and went through Mr. Blackader's Books and Papers, where they took what they listed, none being in the House but a Servant, a Nurse, and the Children. They flugged all the Beds with their Swords, and threatened to roit the Children in the Fire, and forced one of them to run from the House with nothing on him but his Shirt, about half a Mile in dark Night: After this, Mr. Blackader was forced to leave that House, and to scatter his small Family; his Children were sent to different Houses where People could be prevailed with to run the Hazard of entertaining them. But kind Providence looked after them, and brought them through many Difficulties. When they came up to some Years, severals of them met with harsh enough Treatment for their worthy Father's sake. His Son Mr. Adam, when but Sixteen or Seventeen Years, was imprisoned five Weeks at Stirling, only because his Master was alledged to have been at Conventicles, where the Magistrates would not liberate him till his Brother Dr. Blackader, brought repeated Orders from the Council. He was afterwards imprisoned in Blackness, for waiting on his Father; and in the Year 1684. he and a young Gentlewoman he married in Sweden, were brought to great Difficulties when they returned to Scotland. But I shall confine my self to the Father's Sufferings.

A Deduction of his Sufferings.

1665.

Mr. Blackader was among the Ministers who preached first in the Fields, and frequently joyned Mrs. Wells, Semple, Arnot, and others. In his Opinion he was against the Indulgence, but preached and joyned with his Brethren of different Sentiments, as he had Occasion: He preached at that noted Conventicle at the Hill of Beeth, before noticed; and there, and at other Sermons he preached in Fife, a Seed was sown which God very much blessed. I have before me several well vouched Instances of his remarkable Success in his Sermons. He continued preaching in the Fields and Houses, as he had Access, till the Year 1678. when he went over to Rotterdam, and proved very useful in healing of the Breaches 'twixt these Two excellent Ministers at Rotterdam, Mr. M'waird and Mr. Fleming. In the Time of Bothwell he was at Edinburgh, and after it very serviceable to the Prisoners in the Grayfriars.

1681. April 6. he is apprehended and examined by a Committee of Council.

So useful a Person could not escape the Fury of this Period, and so Major Johnston having got Notice of him, apprehended him April 6. this Year, and carried him first to General Dalziel, and then to the Guard, whence he is brought up Prisoner to a Committee of the Council, consisting of the Chancellor, General, Advocate, and Bishop Paterfson. His Examination is before me, of which I shall give an Abstract. After Mr. Blackader had owned he was a Presbyterian Minister, ordained to Traquair 1653. the Chancellor asked him if he had excommunicated the King, or was at Torwood? Ans. I was not at Torwood these Four Years. Chanc. But do you approve of what was done there? Mr. Blackader was as free to have declared his Disapprobation of what was done there, as to declare that he had not been there, but perceiving that they were about to impose upon him by ensnaring Questions, he resolved to make a Stand at first; and answered, I am not free to declare my inward Sentiments and Opinions of Things and Persons, and therefore I humbly beg to be excused; you must form a Libel against me, and I shall endeavour to answer it as I can. They frequently urged him to answer, and he declining, the Chancellor said, But do you approve of shedding the King's Blood, and damning him in Soul and Body? Ans. I do not, and no good Man will. Chanc. You have done your self a Favour in saying so: But we hear you keep Conventicles since the Indemnity. Ans. My Lord, I am a Minister of the Gospel, tho' unworthy, and under the strictest Obligations to exercise my Ministry, as I will be answerable at the great Day. I did still, and do count it my Duty to exercise my Ministry 1681. as I am called thereunto. Chanc. But you have preached in the Fields, that is to say, on Muirs and Hill-sides. I shall not ask if you have preached in Houses, tho' there is not Liberty even for that. Ans. I place no Case of Conscience, nor make any Difference betwixt preaching in Houses and the Fields, but as it may best serve the Conveniency of the Hearers, nor know I any Restriction as to either in the Word; my Communion reaches to Houses and Fields, within and without Doors. Chanc. No doubt you know and have seen the Laws discharging such preaching. Ans. My Lord, I have, and am sorry that ever any Laws were made against preaching the Gospel. Chanc. Not against the Gospel, but Sedition and Rebellion. Ans. I preach no Sedition and Rebellion. The Advocate came to the Prisoner, and told him, He was sorry to see him upon the Reserve, and difficulted about the Excommunication. Mr. Blackader answered, He was no way straitned in that, but had kept on the Reserve, because he thought himself only obliged to speak upon Facts relative to himself, and that it was hard to be obliged to declare his Opinion as to others. The Chancellor asked if he had kept Conventicles in Fife, which he did not deny. And after he had owned himself of the Family of Tulliallan, and the nearest Representative alive of that Family, they removed him, and he was carried to the Guard. In the Afternoon the Council sat, and he was brought up, and continued among the Soldiers in the outer Room from Three to Six, but was not called before the Council, who, without hearing, sentenced him to go to the Bast.

Carried to the Bast April 7.
where he continued till June 1685.

Thither he was carried April 7. When in the Way at the Fisher-row, there was a Gathering of People upon some Occasion or other, which, when the Captain perceived, he apprehended it might be for rescuing Mr. Blackader, and came to him, and said, If those People have a Design to rescue you, you are a dead Man, for upon the first Attack I will shoot you through the Head. Mr. Blackader told him, he knew nothing about it, and there was no such Design. He continued in the Bast till he contracted a deep Rheumatism, the Air of that Place being much the same as that aboard a Ship; and a Petition was given in to the Council, June 20. 1685. with the Attestation of Physicians, that he was in Hazard of Death, and could not recover till brought to Land. He was liberate from the Bast, and confined to Haddingtoun, under Bond of Nine thousand Merks, to re-enter Prison when he recovered his Health. But it pleased the Lord to remove him very soon to the glorious Reward of so much Suffering and Service, as he had enabled him for; and he died at Haddingtoun in much Serenity, being aged about Sixty five Years, and lies buried at North-berwick.

Mr. Alexander Symers professed.

May 4. the Committee for publick Affairs report, 'That upon Information that Mr. Alexander Symers, who haunts in the Isle of Combray, being formerly an orthodox Preacher, but now turned vagrant, and apostatized, and debauches the Country, they had given Orders to the Laird of Kelburn to call him before him, and proceed against him according to Law, and if he persist, that he send him into Edinburgh Prisoner, or take Bond of him to appear before the Council.' I have observed no further about him in the Registers.

Mr. John Wardlaw denounced.

Upon the 2 of June Mr. John Wardlaw having been cited before the Council that Diet to answer for Preaching, and keeping Conventicles, and not compearing, he is put to the Horn. Upon the 16 of the same Month Mr. Alexander Hastie being cited to appear that Day, and not compearing, the Council find, that after he had been imprisoned last Year upon Suspicion of his being concerned in the Rebellion at Bothwell, he was liberate March last, and yet since that Time he hath kept Conventicles, in Sense of Law, Field-conventicles: He is now denounced, and ordered to be put to the Horn. The same day John Row, Chamberlain in Carrington, being cited for keeping of Conventicles, and not compearing, is denounced and put to the Horn.

As are Mr. Alexander Hastie,

And John Row.

Mr. Gabriel Semple taken, July 26. liberate on Bond Octob. 1.

July 26. the Council being informed, that Mr. Gabriel Semple is taken Prisoner in the House of Blackcastle, they order him to be brought in to Edinburgh, and require the Justices to call him before them, and see what he has to say, why the Sentence of Forfeiture should not be executed against him; and ordain Blackcastle to be prosecuted for resetting him. October 1. the Council grant Warrant to liberate Mr. Semple upon Bond to compear when called, under the Pain of Ten thousand Merks. December 22. Mr. James Scot, Sheriff-clerk of Edinburgh, his Cautioner is called to present Mr. Semple, and he not compearing, the Council declare he hath forfeited his Bond, and order Letters to be directed against Mr. Scot for that effect, at Six Days Charge. November 3. Sir Patrick Hepburn of Blackcastle appears before the Council, who find him guilty of an high Crime in resetting, conversing with, and harbouring a declared Rebel Mr. Semple, being taken in his House near Old Hamstocks by a Party of the Guards. Sir Patrick confesseth his Libel, and the Council fine him in Two hundred Pounds Sterling, and order him to Prison till he find Caution to pay the Fine in Six Days. This is what I meet with as to Mr. Semple in the Registers.

Mr. Scot his Cautioner prosecuted.

And Sir Patrick Hepburn of Blackcastle fined in Two hundred Pounds Sterling for resetting him.

Further Accounts of Mr. Semple, from other Papers.

This reverend and worthy Person, who endured so much Trouble, and was so useful under this Period I am describing, as well as since the Revolution, deserves a larger Room here; and I shall give the Reader some Account of him from Papers under his own Hand,

com-

communicated to me by his Son in Law, the reverend Mr. G. Gillespie Minister at Stramiglo.

1681.

Mr. Gabriel Semple was a Son of Sir Bryce Semple of Catrart, and ordained Minister of Kirkpatrick-durham; and after the Revolution he was transported to Jedburgh, where he continued very useful in the Work of the Ministry there, till the Year 1706. when he got to the Joy of his Lord. The Papers before me contain a great many remarkable Passages concerning this good Man in his Youth, and when at the Schools, which I pass, and come to his Sufferings since the Restoration.

When Minister at Kirkpatrick-durham, he was reached by the Act at Glasgow. Some Days before his Removal, he acquainted his People that they had called him to be their Minister, and now Authority required him to leave them; but if they would invite him to continue, and run Hazard with him, he would do it. None of them importuned him to stay, and so he left the Manse, and went to the House of Corsack, where Mr. John Welsh likewise came and stayed some Time. This House lay as convenient for Mr. Semple's Parishioners as the Kirk, if not more. The first Sabbath, Mr. Semple preached to such as came, in the Hall of Corsack; next Day, the Hall not holding them, in the Clofs; the Third Sabbath, that not containing them, in the Garden; and that not answering, they went to the Fields, Multitudes coming from all Hands. All this Time, Mr. Welsh preached not. In a little, when the Act of Council came out, discharging Ministers to be in one Parish, Mr. Semple left Corsack House to Mr. Welsh, and went to his Friends in the West; and Mr. Welsh kept up these Meetings in the Fields from Necessity; and this was the first Field-meeting in Scotland. In a little Time, Mr. Semple returned to Galloway, and joyned Mr. Welsh, and continued preaching till Pentland. He was at the Engagement, as we have seen, and intercommunicated, and declared Rebel after it.

His Carriage after he is turned out, preaches at Corsack in the House, and then in the Fields; and Mr. Welsh succeeded him.

After Pentland, Mr. Welsh continued about a Year preaching, as Opportunity served, in the South; and then went over to Ireland with Moncrief and Sundierwell, whom he terms Two of the most eminent Christians that ever he knew; the First died there. In Ireland he met with great Kindness, as all the Banished did. In a little Time, he came back to Scotland, and went to the Border of England, where, for some Time, he absconded, and at length ventured to preach at Haselridge, where Henry Hall of Haugh-head was, and there dispensed the Supper, having Dr. Rule, and another Minister at Berwick helping him: They had Mr. Justice Ogle with them, and many other serious Christians in that Neighbourhood. In some Time, their Meeting increased much about Ford, and the Incumbent there being simple, and many times under Melancholy, and the Gentlemen belonging to that Place friendly, because the Resort of People was beneficial to the Place, Mr. Semple, for several Years, had Possession of the Church of Ford, and dispensed the Sacraments to great Multitudes in the Neighbourhood, and from Scotland. He observes, that the Gospel had extraordinary Success among the rude Borderers. He continued there, till his excellent Wife, Daughter to Sir Walter Riddel of that Ilk, died; when the Persecution turned hotter, and he sickly, and a little before Bothwell returned to Scotland.

He goes to Ireland after Pentland:

And after his Return, went to the Border, where he preached, and had Communion for many Years in the Church of Ford.

He remarks in his Papers, That he would not joyn in Bothwell Rising, because he saw that Robert Hamilton and his Party would either command all, or mutiny. And when he was urged to go, that he might be useful to heal their Divisions, he answered, 'There were many worthy Men there, as Mr. Welsh and Mr. Hume, and where Division turns a Plague, the Lord only can cure it, and ordinary Means will not do, and he feared that was the Case then.' At this Time, he stayed with his Nephew Blackcastle at Old Hamstocks. There he continued mostly, till he was taken, as has been observed, by a Party of the Guards.

Mr. Semple not at Bothwell, and why.

Mr. Semple was very much indisposed of an Ague, when seized, and not able to ride; nevertheless the Council, tho' his Case was represented to them, give Orders to bring him in to Edinburgh. When the Orders came, he could not ride alone, but was obliged to ride behind, and hold by his Nephew William Semple, till he came to Haddington, where he got the Lady Stevenstoun's Calash: He was carried into the Canongate Tolbooth, where he continued till the Parliament was up. The Duke of York was so well satisfied with the Procedure of that Parliament, that he was in better Humour than he used to be in Council; and when Mr. Semple's Supplication for Liberty, because of his Sickness, was presented, it was granted, as we have seen.

Taken when ill of the Ague, and imprisoned in Canongate, and liberated.

In a little Time, he was called before a Committee of Council, merely, as he afterwards found, to draw Money from him to the Advocate and Clerks. The Pretext made use of, was, That his Supplication was forged, and not genuine. At this Committee the Lord Maitland was very friendly to him, and kept Bishop Paterson from proposing some ensnaring Questions. His Supplication was read to him, and, in reading, the Clerk added some Words which were not in it, such as, That the Rising at Bothwell was a desperate Rebellion, and others, with a Design to make him disown the Supplication, and get him back upon that to Prison. When it was read, he was interrogate if he owned that Supplication. Mr. Semple desired a Sight of it; and, upon viewing it, he observed that it had not been vitiate, and was just what he had given in, tho' otherwise read by the Clerk. He returned it, declaring that Called again before the Council, where a Trick was put on him, which he evaded.

1681.

Paper was the very same he had written, and given in, and thanked them for the Favour granted him on it; and prayed for the Spirit of Grace and Government to his Majesty. Thus he was dismissed, and the Snare laid for him evited, and, very providentially, he was not required to renew his Bond of Compearance; so that in Law he was freed from it.

Retires into England.

In a few Weeks, upon some new Pretext or other, he was again cited to appear before the Council; and, upon Knowledge of their Designs against him, and advising with his Friends who were engaged for his Compearance, and finding they would, in the Issue, be safe, he did not compear, but withdrew to England, where he continued till King Charles's Death.

Thomas Lawrie

August 6. Thomas Lawrie, Merchant in Edinburgh, is before the Council: Last Sabbath he had been taken at Leith, at a House-conventicle, early in the Morning. The Council liberate him, upon Caution to compear when called, under the Penalty of 2000 Merks. August 11. the Advocate reports to the Council, he had examined John Spreul Writer in Glasgow, Prisoner in the Canongate, and finds him free of Conventicles. The Council order him to be liberate. I have no Doubt, but this good Man paid for this Liberation.

John Spreul
Writer in Glasgow liberate.

John Drysdale,
James Wharrey,
James Pollock, and John Anderson, banished.

October 11. John Drysdale, James Pollock, James Wharrey, and John Anderson, Prisoners for alledged Field-conventicles since the Indemnity, are brought before the Council. For Probation, the Advocate refers the Matter to the Pannels Oath; they refusing to give it, are banished, according (as the Council's Sentence has it) to Act 2. Sess. 2. Parl. 1. Char. II.

Nov. 3. Process
against Mr.
Jo. Hutchison,
Mr. Jam. Veitch,
and Mr. Rob.
Miller, indulged Ministers, for breaking their Instructions; and in Absence they are denounced.

Little more offers as to particular Sufferers, needful to be insert here, save a Process before the Council, against some of the indulged Ministers. The Clergy were hasting to be rid of them, and prevailed with the Managers, to process some of them now and then. And, November 3. Mr. John Hutchison, indulged at Dundonald, Mr. James Veitch at Mauchlin, Mr. Robert Miller at Ochiltree, were libelled, not only for breaking their Instructions, but also for their having pronounced the Sentence of the highest Excommunication, upon all who have taken the Declaration, or signed the late Bond for Peace, or, having taken the Covenant, have deserted the same, debarring such from the Lord's Table; and that they had preached to the People the Observance of the said Covenant: And they not compearing, are ordered immediately to be denounced, and put to the Horn.

Remarks on their Libel.

This is all mere Mistake; these worthy Ministers knew better Things than to pass the highest Sentence upon such Grounds as these. That, in safe Generals, they might debar from the Lord's Table, all Breakers of Covenant, and Takers of unlawful Declarations and Bonds, I do not doubt; and, it may be, upon some Occasions, they might have some Things in their Sermons, that might tend to confirm the Obligation of the Covenants; but they had preached nothing that came up to the Terms of this Libel.

Nov. 24. Mr.
Veitch petitions
the Council;
the Advocate
gives in an additional Libel against him,
from which
Mr. Veitch purged himself, and is repo-
ned.

November 24. this Year, I find Mr. James Veitch, Minister at Mauchlin, appears before the Council, and petitions that he may be reponed against the abovementioned Sentence. Whereupon the Advocate gives in an additional Libel, which runs thus. 'Mr. James Veitch, you are libelled, besides the Crimes mentioned in the former Libel, further, for debarring from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, by publick Commination from the Pulpit, (which is understood to be the latter Excommunication) all Persons who had taken the Declaration, or signed the Bond of Peace, or, having taken the Covenant, had turned their Backs thereupon: You are further charged, that ordinarily in your baptizing of Children, you take the Parents obliged to educate their Children conform to the national Covenant, and solemn League and Covenant: You further have not only broken your Confinement, but, at your House and other Places in the Shire of Air, you, with other indulged Ministers, kept classical Meetings, where you did treat and determine concerning Church-discipline, the ordaining or licensing young Men, and keeping a Correspondence among your selves, anent Church-matters, contrary to your Instructions.' The Advocate referred all to his Oath. Mr. Veitch denied all the Articles of the Libels, as they stand libelled, and no Probation being ready, he was assolied; and Mr. Hutchison being absent, the Council ordain Letters of Caption against him, and discharge the Payment of his Stipend.

Mr. Hutchison, when he com-
pears, bath his Indulgence declared void,
and is fined in 5000 Merks.

Yea, Mr. Hutchison got not so well off, some Months after, when he compeared. For, July 4. next Year, I find him before the Council, and an additional Libel offered, just as in Mr. Veitch's Case; and he is peremptorily required to purge himself by Oath; and refusing to swear, he is holden as confest, and his Indulgence is taken away, and he fined in 5000 Merks.

Thomas Crawford
for 1.
Thomas Archer

November 24. 'Thomas Crawford, who has been a long Time in Prison, and no Witnesses appearing against him, is liberate upon Caution to appear, and to live orderly. And Thomas Archer (probably Mr. Thomas, whom we shall afterwards meet with) Prisoner, is appointed to continue some time in Prison, that Probation and Witnesses may be brought in against him.'

I shall end this Section with the Trouble Mr. James Frazer of Braes met with in the End of this Year, before the Council; and before I enter upon it, several general Remarks as to the Severities upon Presbyterian Ministers, and their Circumstances at this Time, offer themselves to me, with which I begin.

When the Managers were balked by the excellent Earl of Argyle's Escape, just upon the Back of it, they fall foul upon Presbyterian Ministers who fell into their Hands. No doubt they had the Project in their Head for some time before, but now they got Leisure to bring it to some Bearing against them; and since the Rising of the Parliament, and when the Duke of Tork and his Creatures had the whole Management in their Hands without any Disturbance, the Reader cannot be surpris'd to find the Persecution against the Presbyterians, and particularly their Ministers, increasing, yea, growing very hot.

Presbyterian Ministers, not indulged since Bothwell, had very much forbore preaching in the Fields, partly from the Severities and Harassings of the Country for some time after that Engagement, and partly in hopes of getting Access to preach in Houses, at least more Liberty that way, of which they had some Intimations and Promises made them; and lastly, from the Excesses run to by the Two Ministers who did preach in the Fields last Year and this, and the Extremes People were running upon.

But when once they fell out of the Road of preaching in the Fields, they could never come into it again; Times grew still worse and worse on their Hand, and when they were put from Field-meetings, in a little Time they were almost wholly forced from House-meetings also.

And at this Time the Duke of Tork, for his own Ends, which were now no Secret to such who did not shut their Eyes, mightily caretled the Bishops, and supported them in all their harsh Measures against Presbyterians. And every Body must expect that Papists will do what they can to make Protestants bite and devour one another; and work their Work, the Destruction of the whole, to their Hands. Accordingly, there was now scarce one Presbyterian appeared before the Council, who had any Favour shewn them.

This appeared in the Case of the reverend Mr. James Frazer of Braes. We left him libe- rate after Bothwell-bridge, and Sir Hugh Campbell of Calder Cautioner, to present him when called: I come now to give some Account of his Second Imprisonment, mostly from his own Papers before me.

Mr. Frazer, since his Liberation, had been much in the North. This Summer and Harvest, when he came South, he had preached in Houses, wherever he had Opportunity, and the last Time before he went North, to a very numerous Auditory. Some evil-minded Persons informed against him for a Field-conventicle: Whereupon he and his Cautioner were cited before the Council in November; but some of the Members of the Council being told, and assured, it was only a House-conventicle, the Citation slept.

Mean while Mr. Frazer had gone North to his Wife and Friends, and there fell very ill of an Ague. His Cautioner came to the same Country a little after him, and found him very ill; whereupon he proposed to Braes Writing to the Advocate, or the Bishop of Edinburgh. This Mr. Frazer violently opposed, and assured Sir Hugh, that if the Prelates heard of his Sickness, they would press his Citation the harder, with a View, that upon Noncompearance his Bond of Five thousand Merks should be forfeited, or if he did compear, his Health might be in Hazard at that Season of the Year. This had no Weight with the Gentleman, but he relying upon his Friendship, and the Reasonableness of the Thing, acquainted the Bishop of Edinburgh, that Mr. Frazer had not preached in the Fields, as was laid, and that he was now dangerously ill.

According to Braes's Suspicion, so Matters happened: As soon as Bishop Paterf'n had got Sir Hugh's Letter, his Brother being Clerk to the Council, next Day his Citation was renewed. Mr. Frazer observes in his Life, that the Managers had a Prejudice at his Cautioner, whose Name, says he, was odious to several great Men, being a Gentleman of a good Estate, and engaged in Cautionry for Presbyterian Ministers, for upwards of Seventeen hundred Pounds Sterling; and in their Citation they chose that Time they reasonably thought would be severe for a Man who had the Ague to travel in; and ordered him to appear the 22 of December, when they did not expect his Compearance, and hoped to reach his Cautioner, and make him forfeit his Bond.

Both Mr. Frazer and his Friends wanted not Fears, that the Council intended his Life. He was not indeed guilty of preaching in the Fields, which was Death by Law; but by Law likewise, tho' the Minister and Body of the People were within a House, yet if any were without Doors, it was a Field-conventicle. Now it was not what Presbyterian Ministers had Freedom to do, neither was it many Times in their Power, either to know or hinder People from hearing them at Doors and Windows. Besides, they were sensible how far the Earl of Argyle's Case was stretched at this very Time, far more surely than if Mr. Frazer had been found guilty of a Field-meeting, for one or Two their being without Doors when he was preaching in a House, he might have been staged for his Life; and he was informed 1681.

Mr. Frazer of Braes, in Case Dec. this Year

General Remarks on the Se. ca. as a good Presbyterian Minister at this Juncture.

Field-meetings much abated from by them since Bothwell, with the Restless.

And they are quite put from House-meetings also.

Duke of Tork supports the Bishops in their Persecution of Presbyterians and none else now the great loss the Council.

Mr. Frazer is libe- rated after Bothwell

His Carriage since his Liberation.

He falls sick in the North.

And the Council the 22 of December

And the Council the 22 of December 1681.

Yet he appeared at the Day:

some Notes of his Sermons were in the Prelates Hands, and he did not know how far they might wire-draw some Expressions, tho' never so well meant.

All this was discouraging enough; but he resolved at all Hazards to appear, and not to suffer his Surety to come to Trouble upon his Account, and was much encouraged by a sudden Recovery of his Health, after Six Weeks of a sore Ague; so that he was, to his great Surprise, in Case to venture upon a Journey, for any Thing I know, upwards of an Hundred and fifty Miles, at such a Season of the Year: And he came to Edinburgh the Day of his Appearance, Two Days after the Earl of Argyle's Escape, and with his Cautioner presented himself when the Council were in a very ill Humour.

And is fined in Five thousand Merks, and sent Prisoner to Blackness.

The Bishops and Council were not a little surpris'd to see him at the Bar. All I find about him in the Registers is, 'December 22. Mr. Frazer of Braes is this Day produced by the Laird of Calder, and he being an Heritor, fine him in Five thousand Merks for Conventicles, and send him to Blackness till he pay the same, and engage he shall not keep Conventicles.' But I come to give a larger Account of what pass'd, from his own Papers.

Larger Account of what pass'd from his own Papers. His Indictment.

He observes, that, after some Silence, the Clerk was ordered to read an Indictment against him, wherein he was charged 'with preaching in the Fields, and without Authority, and, venting pernicious, seditious, and rebellious Doctrines and Principles, intending to alienate the Minds of his Majesty's Subjects from his Government, and concluding, that upon all these Accounts he ought to be severely punished, to the Terror of others.' For Probation the Advocate referred all to his Oath, and immediately the President commanded him to depone, whether he had preached in the Fields or Houses, since he came out of the Bass.

His Desire of a Delay for a few Days, refused.

Mr. Frazer modestly desired a few Days Respite to answer to his Indictment, in regard of the long and tedious Journey he had been oblig'd to at such a Season of the Year, and after a sore Sickness, in obedience to their Lordships Summons, and that he was but just now come to Town, and had never seen the Indictment till it was now read to him. One would have thought this was a very reasonable Desire, and yet it was peremptorily refused, and he was presently ordered to give his Oath, otherwise they knew what to do.

Gets Liberty to speak before the Council.

He answered, he was ready enough to give his Oath, that he was innocent in all the Points of the Indictment just now read to him; but humbly craved to speak a little before their Lordships, which they were pleas'd to allow him, and he had a very handsom extemporary Discourse, for upwards of Half an Hour, without any Interruption. He observes in his Papers, That his Design in it was, if it might be, to prevent the Torment of their Questions, which, as hath been noticed in his former Process, they vexed him with, and to state the true Grounds of his Sufferings, and to essay to vindicate himself and others, from the Imputations charged upon them. The Reader, I persuade my self, will be satisfi'd to have the Sum of his Discourse, as far as he himself could recollect it.

His Discourse in answer to his Indictment.

After he had returned his hearty Thanks for the Liberty they had given him to speak in his own Defence, he protested, 'That it was his Endeavour to discharge what he conceived to be his Duty, with as little Offence to Authority as he could, and that, were the Things he was called in question for, such as he could come and go upon, relating either to his Person, or Interest in the World, he would be very loth to be heard with their Lordships, but refer himself and those Matters wholly to their Disposal, and that now he would be short, ingenuous, and clear in his Answer for himself.'

His Answer as to preaching in the Fields.

'As to the first Head, of preaching without Authority, and in the Fields; he acknowledged he had preached, and was neither ashamed nor terrified to own this; but asserted, he had not preached in the Fields since he came out of the Bass; neither had he preached without Authority, seeing he was called of God, and by such of his Servants as he really believed had Power from Christ for that effect: Therefore, he conceived the first Article of his Indictment was answered and elided.'

His Authority to preach.

Not guilty of seditious Principles.

'As to his preaching seditious Principles, that he was able, with all good Conscience, to deny it, because he and others were slandered and defamed, as Persons of disloyal and antimonarchical Principles. He said, He would presume to give some Account of what Principles were maintained by himself and others, and of his own Practice.'

His Principles as to Doctrine.

'That as to Doctrine, dogmatical Points, and Articles of Religion, his Faith was contained in and according to the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, that he was of the reformed Protestant Religion, and did approve, and was ready to subscribe the Confession of Faith penned in King James VI's Time, and, he supposed, ratified in this current Parliament.

As to the King's Power.

'That as to the King's Majesty's Power, he acknowledged Magistracy an Ordinance of God, and owned the King's Authority; his Subject he profess'd himself to be, and reckon'd himself oblig'd to submit to him, and highly to reverence and esteem him; and was never resolv'd to resist, for any thing relative to his Person or Estate; but how far his Majesty's Power was extended, or in what Subject it was placed, and how conveyed, he thought it not so much his Part, as that of Lawyers, to determine.'

‘As to the King’s Power in Ecclesiastical Matters, he acknowledged the Persons of Ministers, and other Ecclesiastical Persons subject to him, and that he had a Jurisdiction Civil, reaching not only to Civil Things, but likewise Spirituals, which he was to judge, that so he might, as the nursing Father of the Church, either encourage, or punish and restrain in a coercive Way, and that not implicitly, relying upon the Judgment of others, or seeing with their Eyes: That his Majesty might call Synods when and where he pleased, and propose his Mind to them, whose Duty not only it was, but Wisdom, to take the Magistrate’s Concurrence, where it might be had: But still it remained undeniable, that this Power of the Magistrate was not privative of any intrinsecal Power of the Church, granted her by Christ, for preserving or edifying her self; which therefore, in case of the Magistrate’s Opposition to the Truth, or Want of Access to him, through Distance of Place, or other casual Emergencies, she might exercise without him, as was clearly seen in the Times of the heathen, and Arian Roman Emperors.’

1681.

Magistrate’s Power in Ecclesiastical
Matters

‘That as to the Government of the Church, it was true he did not close in with that Form of Government by Archbishops, &c. now established in this Kingdom; and therefore could never concur with, or submit to the same, any manner of Way; but whatever was his Dissatisfaction therewith, or Opposition thereto, he never opposed it but by spiritual Weapons.’

As to Church-Government

‘And as for his Practice, he had endeavoured to keep a good Conscience both before God and Man, and to live unblameably and peaceably, giving to God what was God’s, and to Cesar what was Cesar’s: That he was never in any Insurrection, Rebellion, or Conspiracy against his Majesty’s Person or Government, neither ever stirred up others thereunto, but rather to live peaceably, and by Repentance, Reformation, bearing Testimony for God, Quietness, Confidence, and other spiritual Means, to expect Deliverance, than by irritating the Rulers to make their Bonds heavier, or by taking the Sword, and resisting by Force; and these Things he inculcate both publickly in Sermons, and privately in Discourse.’

His Practices

‘These then (added he) being our Principles, which we are not ashamed to own, but ready to defend, it is a Wonder to me how I, or any sober Person of our Way, can be charged for seditious Principles or Practices, or charged with them; and if these Principles be innocent, then is the second and great Branch of my Libel, referred to my Oath, elided likewise. He ended with his Prayers for the King, that the Lord would bless his Majesty with all Blessings spiritual and temporal, that he may be a Terror to evil Doers, and an Encourager of those that do well, and the Throne established in Righteousness.’

After this Discourse, to which very close Attention was given, the President asked Braes, Whether he had preached since he came out of the Bass. He answered, that he begged Leave to reply to what he was charged with in his Indictment, which he humbly conceived was, Whether he had preached without Authority, and seditiously; and this he denied. They enquired very pressingly, Who ordained him. He answered, ‘He had no Freedom to answer that Question, since it concerned others whom he was not to stage; but assured them, his Ordainers had lawful and good Authority; and he supposed their Lordships could not compel him to answer to that, neither was he obliged, since it was res habitaus judicata, for which he was formerly questioned; and (as we have heard) had satisfied the Law; and therefore could not be questioned for the same Fault. And seeing his Ordination to preach was before the Act of Grace, any Crime therein (if any was) was now purged; and, in a Word, this was not in his Indictment.’

Further Interrogatories, and his Answers.

When Mr. Frazer was removed, there was a considerable Debate among the Counsellors, most of them being very much taken with his Discourse, and willing to liberate him: But the Bishops insisted, that he was a dangerous Person, and behoved to be made an Example of. The drawing of the Sentence was left to them and the Clerk. He being called in, it was intimated to him, to this purpose, ‘That he be sent to Blackness Prison, there to continue till he paid his Fine of 5000 Merks, and give Surety either to preach no more, or go out of the Kingdom.’ And till a Guard was got ready, he was ordered to remain in Edinburgh Tolbooth.

His Sentence

Many of the Onlookers, for considerable Numbers got in that Day to the Council-house, were surprized at the Severity of the Sentence; yea, several of the Counsellors themselves said openly enough, That he had met with very hard Measure. He continued some Time in the Tolbooth, and was used very discreetly, and had abundance of Visits, and much Peace in what he had done. On the Lord’s Day he preached to the Prisoners, which was refreshing to him. He twice supplicated the Council for Liberty, but was refused, the Prelates still opposing it; and he remarks, That Sir William Paterson Clerk to the Council, Bishop Paterson’s Brother, was his great Enemy, tho’ he had never done him any Injury.

Remarks on it.

After he had been six Weeks in Edinburgh Prison, he was sent to Blackness Castle, under the Convoy of a Party of the Guards, and there continued about Seven Weeks. The Governor at first kept him close Prisoner, which was not in the Council’s Order; and a Soldier

After being
Six Weeks
Prisoner in Edinburgh, he is sent to Blackness.

1681.

Liberate after the D. of Tor's going to England, upon his Friends Bond that he should leave the Kingdom.

dier had still the Key of his Room, tho' he opened it when he called for him. At the Beginning he was put in a very bad Room; but the Governor's Lady, a Child of little more than Thirteen Years, and a Gentleman who came in, prevailed to get it altered.

About Six Weeks after, the Duke of York went for England, and Bishop Paterfon and his Brother waited upon him. Mr. Frazer's Friends took this Opportunity, without so much as acquainting him, to apply to the Council, that the Fine might be remitted, and that he might be liberate, and begging a competent Time to order his Affairs in Scotland, and promised in his Name, he would submit to their Sentence of Banishment. His Friends bound themselves Caution for him, that he should go out of the Kingdom in a Month, and not return without the King and Council's Liberty. The Council, now that his Enemies were absent, went in to the Proposal; and the first Account he had, was the Order sent to the Governor to liberate him.

And goes to London.

This Deliverance, without any sinful Acknowledgments and Compliances upon his Part, or by his Cautioners, he observes, as no less sweet than it was unexpected by him; and this holy Man, in his Life, takes Notice of the Kindness of Providence in this, in a very affectionate Way. Next Year he went off for London, where he was not free from Sufferings, as I shall observe afterwards.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Sufferings unto Death, and the publick Execution of Mr. Donald Cargil, and a great many others, this Year 1681.

Several Persons this Year condemned for Treason committed in face of Court.

WE have, in the former Sections, some View of the Severities, and Oppression, and the Forfeitures of a Number of good People, whose Lives were this Year taken. Against them it was alledged, and indeed it was all that could be said, That they committed Treason in face of the Court before which they were staged; but if we consider their Circumstances, the Views they had of Matters, and the Hardships they were brought under, certainly great Charity must be exercised towards them; and altho, according to the present Laws, they were found guilty of Treason, yet their Blood-shed will, by After-generations, be reckoned innocent Blood; and the Courses taken with, and Inhumanities exercised towards them, must certainly be abominated by all sober Persons.

Upon the last Year I gave some Account of their Case, and of the Condemnation and Execution of severals of Mr. Cameron and Mr. Cargil's Followers, for disowning of the King, and hearing them at Field-conventicles; and upon this Section I shall put together the Accounts of near Twenty more, with Mr. Cargil himself, who suffered this Year, just in the Order of Time they fell out.

The Cunning and Severity in dealing with these poor People.

And when entring upon this melancholy Subject, I cannot but regret the cunning and unprecedented Severity of the Persecutors, with a great many of these People who came before them. It is certain, the Managers had more to say in their own Defence as to the Treatment of these now under their Hand, than in many Processes before and after this, when Persons were taken in actual Resistance, upon the Back of a Kind of Declaration of War against the King; then the Prelates and Persecutors triumphed in the Necessity and Justice of cutting them off, and yet it was but a very few who were thus taken, Two or Three at Airs-moss, who were attacked, and obliged to defend themselves; but the greatest Part who suffered now were such who were discovered by their bribed Informers, and alledged to have been at Field-meetings; and when brought before them at Edinburgh, a Confession was extorted by Boots and Thumbkins from some of them, and the rest, when brought before the Justiciary, Council, or Committees of it, were ensnared by captious Questions, upon Subjects common People could not be supposed to understand; and upon their Answers they were condemned and executed.

Their Sense of disowning
the King's Authority.

True it is, they did disown the King's Authority, wherein I have already declined to vindicate them: But the Reader, who may be a Stranger to those Times, would know, that by owning the Authority, the poor People understood a virtual Approbation of all that was done by the King since his Restoration, the rescinding of the excellent Laws and Constitution we once enjoyed in Scotland, and the Severities against, and the Persecution of the People of God following thereupon. And this was in the poor Country Women and Men now

now put to Death, a Matter of Opinion and Conscience misinformed indeed by the unwarrantable Expressions of some who were sowed by the Rigidity of the Times, and, it may be, likewise by some unguarded Expressions they might have heard at some Sermons in the Fields since Bothwell; but then it is certain, this was such a Misinformation and Ignorance of Facts, as they could scarce ever be brought from under; and indeed, except in an Instance or Two, no Care was taken to inform them, but they were hurried from the Council to the Justiciary, from them to the Prison, and in a few Hours into Eternity.

Mean while the Government could be in no Manner of Hazard from a Handful of those People, and if any Thing of this Nature could breed Disturbance, it was the barbarous Extremities they ran to with such of them as fell into their Hands: But it was easy to have secured the Peace against Ten Times their Number, by gentler Methods, than butchering so many Scores of otherwise serious and religious Persons; this, with many other unaccountable Measures now taken, did very much lessen the King, fully his Reign, and made the Administration burdensom and grievous to Multitudes of his best Subjects.

Sometimes indeed the Council in their good Mood, would offer the Country People their Life, upon Acknowledgments and Declarations, which at first View seem very low and reasonable; but if narrowly considered, these were imprestible by the People to whom they were made, in their present Circumstances, and under the uptaking of Matters which they had: And I must observe, that it was only to the warmer and more ignorant Sort such Offers were made, probably under the Prospect they would not be accepted, since the Sense the People took the Managers Proposal in, did import a receding from bearing Witness against the Evil of the Times; yea, most of them did think the accepting of the Managers Proposals included an Approbation of what they had been, and were at present doing. In short, the Cruelty the Sufferers remarked in one Process after another, and the whole Conduct of this Time, and the subdole Fetches and Cunning used to carry them off their Feet, made them jealous of every Thing proposed; and their warm Zeal for and Love to the Truth, the small Prospect they had of any End to their daily Snares and Troubles, together with a generous Kind of tadium vite, in such a wicked Age as this, did prevail with them to stand out. And all these some way heightened the Wickedness of the Managers, in putting them to Death, of which I come now to give some Account.

The Instance of the Trial and Execution of Two poor Women, with which this Year begins, is a flaming Proof of the Iniquity of this Period. Upon the 17 of January, I find Isobel Alison, a young unmarried Woman, who lived in Perth, and Marian Harvey, a Servant Maid in Borrowstounness, where sometimes Mr. Cargil haunted, staged for their Lives before the Justiciary. This is an Evidence of what was just now said. What Hazard could the Government be under from Two such Persons, against whom nothing could be adduced but their Opinions, which they had taken up from the Severities of the Clergy at Perth, as the first owned, and the Violence of the Soldiers? Their private Sentiments, I am persuaded, could have a very small Influence, and would scarce ever have been noticed, had not the Severity of the Managers brought them upon the Stage, evidently to their own Reproach and Shame.

Their Interrogatories and Speeches are printed in the Cloud of Witnesses, and I shall give a Hint of their Trial before the criminal Court, from the Records, if once I had noticed a few Things concerning them and their Treatment before the Council.

Isobel Alison lived very privately in the Town of Perth, and was of a sober and religious Conversation: She had now and then heard Mr. Cargil preach in the Fields, and some few others before Bothwell, but not very often, Field-conventicles not being common in that Country. Upon her Nonconformity at Perth, and speaking against the Severity used upon some religious People there, she was seized, and nothing else could be laid to her Charge, till she was brought before some of the Magistrates, and in her Simplicity voluntarily confessed Converse with some who had been declared Rebels. When the Managers are informed of this, a Party of Soldiers seize her living peaceably in her Chamber at Perth, and carry her into Edinburgh. When she is brought before the Council, the Interrogatories were invidious and ensnaring, and knowing they had no Probation but from what was elicited from her, they essayed sometimes by Commendations and Promises, and sometimes by Threats, to bring her to confess she had conversed with Rathillet, Balfour, and the Two Hendersons, said to be concerned in the Primate's Death; and when some very trivial Things were owned by her, they jested her, and acted the Buffoon rather than Privy Counsellors, as may be seen in their Interrogatories.

Marian Harvey was taken up in the Road, when going to some Sermon or other, and was soon ensnared by the Questions put to her. She was scarce Twenty Years when brought into Edinburgh, and sisted before the Council. They had nothing to lay to her Charge but what she owned, to wit, her being at Field-conventicles. When interrogate as to Sanquhar Declaration, and the Queensferry Paper, she knew nothing about them, but being read to her, to ensnare her, she said she owned them, because she thought them agreeable to the Scriptures. Some of the Counsellors told her, A Rock, a Cod and Bobbins, would set her better 1681.

The Government really in no Hazard, from them.

Allowances and Offers made generally to the more ignorant Sort, with the Indulgences or their falling in with them.

Isobel Alison and Marian Harvey procured criminally.

Their Interrogatories in the Cloud of Witnesses.

Isobel Alison her Carriage before she was seized.

Remarks upon her Examination before the Council.

Remarks on Marian Harvey, her Examination before the Council.

1681.

than these Debates, and yet they cast them up to her, and murder her upon them : And by the way it may be noticed, that the Bishops were the great Proposers of Questions to these poor People, which helped to exasperate them, especially when urged to give them their Titles, they looking on them as at Bottom of all their Persecution.

Their Process
before the Justiciary.

After they were examined before the Council, they are brought before the criminal Court. This was the constant Practice at this Time, the one Day to bring such as fell into their Hand before the Council, and there engage them by captious Questions into a Confession of statutory Crimes, and next Day to pannel them before the Justiciary, where, if they were silent, they were asked if they would quit the Testimony they had given Yesterday. Both of them were indicted for hearing at Field-conventicles, harbouring Mrs. Cargil, Cameron, Douglas, and Welsh, for owning Rugland and Sanquhar Declarations, Queensferry Covenant, and treasonable Opinions. For Probation, their Confession before the Council is adduced. Isobel Alison, being interrogate on several Heads before the Assize, answered, She was not obliged to answer, for she did not look upon them as Judges, declined their Authority, and the King's, by whom they sat there, because they carry the Sword against the Lord. In their Interrogatories they come and go, and act like Persons thirsting after Blood, who resolve she shall be guilty. She owned Converse with one they alledged was at the Primate's Murder, she owned the Sanquhar Declaration, and Bond of Combination spoke of last Year, and Queensferry Covenant, when read to her, because, she said, she saw nothing in them against the Bible, and refused to sign. Marian Harvey, before the Justiciary, owns the Fourth Article of the Queensferry Paper, disowns the King's Authority, abides by the Sanquhar Declaration, says, it was lawful to kill the Archbishop of St. Andrews, when the Lord raised up Instruments for that Effect, adding, He was as miserable and perjured a Wretch as ever betrayed the Church; blest God she heard Sermons in the Fields, and approves of Mr. Cargil's Excommunication. She refuses to sign what she had said, and protests they had nothing to lay to her Charge, but her Opinion, and owning Christ and his persecuted Truths.

Assize bring them in guilty

When the Assize was sworn, it was observed that some of them trembled and would not swear, this Process against two Women being every way extraordinary : However they got as many as served their Purpose. The two Confessions, as writ by the Clerk, were read to the Inquest, and, in a Discourse to them, the Advocate aggravated every Particular, and endeavoured to prove them guilty of Treason. Some of the Assize urged there was no Fact proven against them, and they had not signed their Confessions. The Advocate answered, what they had said was Treason, and charged them to Act according to Law, otherwise he knew what to do. The Assize find them both guilty of Treason by their own Confession. The pronouncing their Doom is delayed till January 21. when they are both sentenced to be hanged in the Grass-market upon the 26 Instant.

I find the Council allow Presbyterian Ministers to converse with these two Women ; but this was only a Feint to rub off the Odium of this Affair, the Council did not so till, after the Sentence was past, they could have no Prospect of any great Benefit to the Women who did not desire this Conversation, the Ministers were unfavoury to them because sent by the Council, and Reasoning could have but very little Influence in their Circumstances, and upon Subjects above their Capacity.

They are executed
January
26.

These two young Women were executed upon the 26. according to their Sentence. The Cloud of Witnesses narrates a Passage, which, if it be vouched, gives an odd Idea of Bishop Paterfson, and is not disagreeable to the Opinion not a few had of him at this Time, as a Man of a light and profane Temper. Just when they were going out to the Place of Execution, probably in the laigh Council House, whence Malefactors used to go to the Gibbet, the Bishop came in and said to Marian Harvey, You would never hear a Curate, now you shall hear one pray before you die, and ordered One who was attending to pray. The poor Women thus jettied upon, could not retire, and the one said to the other, Come, let us sing the 23 Psalm, which they did, and soon drowned the Bishop's Curate, imployed either in Jest, or to vex these poor People. I am informed they were executed with some three or four wicked Women guilty of Murdering their own Children, and other Villanies, which was very grievous to these two. One of the Episcopal Ministers of the Town, who waited upon the others on the Scaffold, railed bitterly upon these Sufferers, and assured them they were in the Road to Damnation, while he, without any Evidence of Penitence, was sending the other wicked Wretches straight to Heaven : However Isobel Alison and Marian Harvey were not commoved, but sang some suitable Psalms on the Scaffold, and prayed, and died with much Composure and Joy.

Process criminal against
John Murray.

In March I meet with a new Process against some more of the People who adhered to Mr. Cargil. I need only give a few Hints from the Records, the Course now with all of them being much the same. Upon the 2 of March, John Murray of Borrowstounness, is indicted of Treason in common Form. The Advocate now gives himself no further Trouble, than to adduce the Confessions made by these Persons when examined before the Council, in presence of the Justiciary and Assize where they are examined upon them, and sometimes the Confessions are only read to the Inquest, who bring them in guilty by their own Confession, and so they are sentenced. In John Murray's Case, he had confessed he was at the Conventicle at Tor-wood

wood with Arms; and indeed Mr. Cargil's Followers being daily hunted for, were obliged to carry Arms with them wherever they went, for their own Defence. When he is interrogate, it he owns the King's Authority, he answers, He owns all that is from God, and to be owned, and adds, That while the King observed the Covenant, his was from God, but since he has broke that, he knows not what to say. As to the Archbishop's Murder, he says, If they were sent of God to execute Judgment on him, he will not judge them nor their Actions. He judiciously owns his Confession, but refuses to sign it. And having a printed Copy of the Queensferry Covenant and Sanquhar Declaration given him to consider on, after some Days he owns them.

1681.

The same Day Christopher Millar, Weaver in Gargonnock, is indicted as above: His Confession before the Council is adduced, where he acknowledges he was in Arms at Bothwell-bridge, and thinks he may lawfully rise in Arms against the King for the Covenant; declared he cannot write. Before the removing of the Assize, the Advocate threatens them (as still he does now) with an Assize of Error. They bring both in guilty by their own Confession; and the Court sentences both to be hanged in the Grass-market upon the 11 Instant.

And Christopher Millar in Gargonnock

Upon the 8 of March, William Gougar in Borrowstounness, and Robert Sangster a Stirling Shire Man, are indicted, as above, before the Justiciary. The Probation is their Confession. The First acknowledges he was at Bothwell-bridge, and refuses to take the Bond; that he was at Tor-wood, and owns Mr. Cargil's Excommunication, and says, He thinks it lawful to kill the King's Servants, because they are Enemies to Christ; owns the Sanquhar and Queensferry Papers; and refuses to sign. Robert Sangster owns Bothwell Rising, and Tor-wood Excommunication, as lawful, disowns the King's Authority, says, it is lawful to kill him and the Judges, in as far as they are against God, and adds, He thinks they are God's Enemies. He refuses to sign. The Assize bring in both guilty, and they are sentenced to be hanged at the Grass-market, the 11 Instant.

William Gougar and Robert Sangster

John Murray, June 2. is recommended by the Council to the King's Clemency, as being rather misled than malicious. The other Three were executed. William Gougar had a short Paper in his Bible, which he designed to have delivered as his Speech to the Spectators; whether it be that which is printed, and goes under his Name, I know not; for I find it remarked at this Time, that Gib and his Followers, both put some well-meaning Prisoners to Heights they would not otherwise have gone to, and corrupted and made Additions to Papers which went under their Name. This Paper, it seems, fell into the Hands of some of the Soldiers at the Ladder-foot, and enraged them, and made them treat him very harshly. They tied his Hands very strait before he went up the Ladder, and when gone up, and beginning to speak, the Drums were ruffled, and he was turned off the Ladder, without Time so much as to pray: Such was their Barbarity upon the least Provocation.

John Murray's Paper, and the other Three executed, March 11.

Another Process is intended before the Justiciary, July 11. against Three Country People in Fife, Adam Philip, Lawrence Hay a Weaver, and Andrew Pittilloch Land-labourer. There was no Act of Rebellion, nor Field-conventicles alledged against them. These Three had joined in a Society for Prayer and Conference in Fife, when they had not the Gospel preached to them by any they could hear. Their Society, in June last, had agreed to, and signed a Paper, which they called A Testimony against the Evils of the Times: Whether they published it, or how it came into the Hands of the Managers, I have no Account, but I find them indicted for publishing an infamous Paper, the 11 of June last, called by them the Sixth Month, disowning the King and all the Ministers of this Church, excepting Mr. Donald Cargil. The Paper was produced, and they acknowledged they had signed it. They are found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged at the Grass-market, upon the 13 Instant, and their Heads to be severed from their Body, and affixed to the Tolbooth of Cowpar. The last Two of them are named in the Cloud of Witnesses, and their Speech or Testimony set down. I know no further about them. The Paper, by the Citations from it in their Process, is very wild, and seems to smell of Gib and his Delusions.

Process criminal against Adam Philip, Lawrence Hay, and Andrew Pittilloch for a Paper drawn by them.

Sentenced to be hanged, July 13.

I come now to give some Account of the Trial of Mr. Donald Cargil, and Four others with him, who were executed the 27 of July, the Day before the Meeting of Parliament, this Year. It hath been noticed in the former Part of this History, that it was not unusual to grace that Solemnity with the Execution of some of the persecuted Party.

Mr. Donald Cargil's Trial.

We have already heard much of Mr. Cargil, and I shall not offer here any Account of this good Man, and successful Preacher of the Gospel. 'Tis but a Hint or Two at Matters of Fact concerning him that I can give, leaving the Vindication of several singular and peculiar Steps he took, towards the End of his Ministry, to such who approve all that he did. There were not a few remarkable Steps of Providence in his Call unto, and Settlement in the Parish of the Barony of Glasgow, some time before the Restoration, which being out of my Road here, I pass with a Regret, that none have been at Pains to collect and publish a well attested Account of remarkable Providences towards Ministers and Christians in the Church of Scotland, since our Reformation from Popery. Many likewise were his wonderful Preservations in his Wandrings and Sufferings, since the turning out of the Body of Presbyterian Ministers, and under the particular Spite and Malice exercised against him; of which, with those of others thers in this Period, had I good Attestations, I would reckon a Collection of them would be a very agreeable and useful Appendage to this Work.

Some Hints at his Circumstances before his being taken

1681.

Mr. Cargil's Sufferings are what I am now concerned in. We have already heard, he was, for his Freedom in his Sermons, after the King's Restoration, and refusing to solemnize the anniversary Day appointed by Parliament, particularly the Object of the Persecutors Rage, and continued under many and inexpressible Difficulties till after Bothwell. The Measures he took after that, at Queensferry and Tor-wood, have been narrated, and 'tis evident the Government was particularly imbibited against him by these Steps. No sooner were any Notices got of his being in a Place, but presently all the Soldiers round were in Arms, and searched all the Country about for him. Upon the 5 of May this Year, he kept a Fast in the Fields, near Loredonhill: The Soldiers at Glasgow getting Notice of this, immediately seized all the Horses in Town, and about it, and mounted in quest of him; but he got off at this Time: Yea, such was their Haste and Fury, that one of them who happened to be behind the rest, and furiously riding down the Street called the Stockwell, in the Middle of the Day, rode over a Child, and killed her in the Spot.

Seized and brought in to Glasgow in July.

Remarkable Judgment upon one who mocked him there.

However, Mr. Cargil escaped them not much longer. The Circumstances or Place of his seizing I have not; but I find, May 15. next Year, James Irvin of Bonshaw petitions the Council, for the Reward promised in their Proclamation, for his taking Mr. Cargil, and is recommended to the Treasury: And some Time, July this Year, Mr. Cargil was brought in to Glasgow by a Party of Soldiers, in great Triumph, and put in the Guard-house there. Multitudes came in to gaze upon him, and among others, one John Nisbet, an Hater of Godliness and the truly Religious, a besotted Drunkard, and Mocker at Piety, and at present the Archbishop's Factor: This profligate Wretch addressed himself to Mr. Cargil in a Way of Mocking, and said, Mr. Donald, will you give us one Word more? alluding to an Expression Mr. Cargil used in his pathological serious Way of Preaching. Mr. Cargil looked on him a little with Regret and Sorrow, and then addressed him thus, Mock not, lest your Bands be made strong; the Day is coming when you shall not have one Word to say tho' you would. This came very shortly to pass; not many Days after, the Lord was pleased to lay his Hand upon that ill Man: At Glasgow where he lived, he fell suddenly ill, and for Three Days his Tongue swelled; and tho' he seemed very earnest to speak, yet he could not command one Word, and died in great Torment, and seeming Terror. Some yet alive know the Truth of this Passage.

Brought in to Edinburgh, and examined before the Council, July 15.

From Glasgow, Mr. Cargil was carried in to Edinburgh, where, July 15. I find him examined before the Council, and his Confession then, in answer to his Interrogatories, I set down from the Records.

Edinburgh, July 15. 1681.

MR. Donald Cargil, being interrogate if he owns the King's Authority, and the King as his lawful Prince, answers, As the Magistrate's Authority is now established by the Act of Parliament anent Supremacy, and explanatory Act, denies the same. Being again interrogate, if he owns the King as his lawful Prince, yes or no, he refuses to give any other Answer than as aforesaid; confesses, that in October 1680. he preached in the Fields in Tor-wood. Being interrogate, if he excommunicated the King there, answered, That being merely a Question about an Ecclesiastical Matter, he cannot answer it before the Council, being a civil Judicatory; and that he was content privately to give an Account of all the Reasons of all his Excommunications that ever he made or pronounced; being pressed to a direct Answer, refuses to make any further Answer. Being interrogate, when he saw any of those who killed the Archbishop, or if he knew any thing of the Intention of it before it was done, declares he knew nothing of the Intention before it was done; confesses he knew Balfour, Henderson, and Russel, but thinks he did not see Balfour these Two Years, but did see the other Two within these Twelve Months, or thereby, to the best of his Knowledge. The Copy of the Sermon alledged to have been by him preached at Tor-wood, being produced, and he asked if that was the Copy thereof, desires a Time to consider thereof before he answer. Being interrogate, if he thinks the Rising at Bothwell-bridge was a Rebellion against the King and his Authority, declares he owns defensive Arms in case of Necessity, and thinks these who rose at Bothwell were not Rebels, and thinks they were oppressed, and rose in their own Defence. Being interrogate, if he was with those who were in Arms at Airs-moss, refuses to answer, and desires it may be made out against him. The same Answer as to Bothwell-bridge. Being interrogate, if he was at the emitting the Paper at Sanguhar, denies he was. Being interrogate, if he had any Hand in drawing of that Paper, refuses to give Answer thereupon, but declares he did not see it till after it was proclaimed. Being interrogate anent that Paper, if he owned the Principles therein, refuses to answer, and desires a Time to consider thereof, not being unwilling, upon Time given him, to declare his Judgment thereof: Gives the same Answer as to the Paper called Cargil's Covenant, or the Fanaticks Covenant, when read to him. Being ing interrogate, if, when he preached at Tor-wood, his Lecture was upon Ezek. XXI. 25, 26, 27. confesses it was. Being interrogate where his Text to his Sermon was, declares he remembers not. Being interrogate, if he thinks the killing of the Archbishop of St. Andrews was Murder, declares he cannot give his Sense thereof; but that the Scripture says, That the Lord giving a Call to a private Man to kill, he might do it lawfully; and instances in Jael and Phineas. Being interrogate, if he thinks the King, by his falling from the Covenant, hath lost his Civil Right as King, declares he thinks this an Ecclesiastical Matter, and cannot answer here, but that he is not obliged to obey the King's Government, as it is now established by the Act of Supremacy. Being interrogate, where he was the Night before and after he was at Queensferry, declares he does not now remember; but seeing it may concern others, he thinks he is not obliged to answer. Being interrogate, when he was in Fife, confesses he was there Friday was a Twenty Days or Month, and preached in Devan-common. Being interrogate, if any of the Hendersons were there, confesses there was one John Henderson, a Man about Thirty Years of Age. Being interrogate, when he was in Stirling Shire or Craigmade, declares he was not there these Eleven Months, and denies he was in Angus these Three or Four Years past.

D. Cargil.

Ch. Maitland I.P.D.

He was again called before the Council, July 19. and his Interrogatories and Answers are as follow.

His second Examination,
July 19.

Edinburgh, July 19.

IN Council being interrogate, if he owned his Sermon at Tor-wood, in which the King, &c. were excommunicated, he could not answer for it, but before an Ecclesiastical Court, being an Ecclesiastical Act. Being asked, if he owns the Excommunication of his Majesty, under the Name of Charles Stuart, and as a Tyrant, refuses to answer. Being interrogate, if he owns the Principles in the Queensferry Paper, declares he has not yet had sufficient Time to consider it. Being interrogate, if he owns the Principles in the Paper called the Sanquhar Declaration, he will not answer, but declares he did not see it before it was published. The Sixth Article of the Queensferry Paper being read, he refuses to answer about it. Being interrogate, who was the Author of that Paper, and who wrote it, refuses to answer.

Upon the 26 of July, the Managers resolved to put an End to Mr. Cargil's Troubles, by a Sentence to be executed next Day; and accordingly he is pannelled before the Justiciary; and he, with Mr. Walter Smith, and Mr. James Boig Students of Theology, and William Thomson in the Shire of Fife, and William Cuthil Seaman in Borrowstounness, are indicted in common Form, as being at Bothwell-bridge, and denying the King's Authority. All of them were to have the same Fate, and the Procedure against them is much the same.

July 26. he with Mrs. Wal- ter Smith, and
James Boig,
William Thom-
son, & James
Cuthil, are before the Just-iciary.

The above Confessions before the Council, are adduced against Mr. Cargil by the Advocate. When they are read before the Justiciary, he declared in the Face of the Justices, that the Word Act explanatory, in his Confession, is to be understood thus, 'That the Act explaining the King's Supremacy, gives him a Right to the Authority of J. sus Christ, and that Supremacy given him by Act of Parliament is against Right; and further declares, that those who rose in Arms at Bothwell, were not Rebels, but raised by Oppression.' After the Confessions are read, the Lord Haltoun depones, these are Mr. Cargil's true Words at Examination; and Hugh Stevenson, one of the Clerks, declares the Paper produced is his Writ, and that he wrote it at the Council-table, as Mr. Cargil did dictate it. I take these Attestations to relate to the Paper, July 19. which is not signed. And further, Two Witnesses depone they saw Mr. Cargil in Arms with the Rebels at Bothwell-bridge. This is the Probation against him.

Probation against Mr. Car-gil.

Mr. James Boig, Son to James Boig Merchant in Edinburgh, comes next, and his Confession before the Council, July 15. is adduced against him, which in short contains, 'That he was taken in Company with Mr. Donald Cargil; that he owns the Principles of those who are persecuted for the Truths of God; that these People who were defeated at Bothwell-bridge, were the People of God, and were fighting for God. Being interrogate, if the Rising in Arms at Bothwell was lawful, declares it was, for the Defence of the Truth, and that it was lawful, and those are his Principles. As to the Archbishop's Murder, declares, he thinks he is not obliged to answer for the Actions of others. And being interrogate, if

Against Mr.
James Boig.

1681. he owns the Sanquhar Declaration, declares he does. And being desired to sign his Declaration, declares this would be an owning of the King's Authority, which he disowns; and refuses to do it.' When this is read before the Justiciary, he adheres to all that is in it.

Mr. Wal. Smith.

Mr. Walter Smith, Son to Walter Smith in the Parish of St. Ninians, was an eminent Christian, and good Scholar; he studied under the famous Leusden, who had a great Value for him. Against him the Advocate adduceth his Confession before the Council, July 15. wherein he declares, 'He heard Mr. Cargil preach in the Fields; confesseth he was at Tor-wood, where he heard the King and his Royal Highness excommunicated; declares he does not think it lawful to rise in Arms against lawful Authority. Being interrogate, if he owns the King and his Authority as lawful, declares he cannot acknowledge the present Authority the King is now invested with, and the Exercise thereof, being now clothed with a Supremacy over the Church. Being asked, if he was at Bothwell-bridge, refuses to answer; declares James Ruffel was at the Conventicle lately held at Devan; that about Twelve Months ago, he saw Balfour of Kinloch in Holland; that he did not see Hendersen lately. Being interrogate, if the King's falling from the Covenant looses him from his Obedience, and if the King thereby loses his Authority, answers, he thinks he is obliged to perform all the Duties of that Covenant, conform to the Word of God and the King is only to be obeyed in the Terms of the Covenant. Being interrogate, if he thinks the Excommunication of the King lawful, refuses to answer. Being interrogate, how he liked the Reasons of the Excommunication when he heard them, declares he thinks the Reasons were just. A Copy of Mr. Cargil's Sermon being read to him, in that Part of it, bearing these Words as one of the Reasons, viz. Because the King is still working for the commanding of Armies, to destroy the Lord's People, who were standing to their own Defence, for their Privileges and Rights, against Tyranny, and Oppression and Injuries of Men; for the Blood that he hath shed in Fields, and Scaffolds, and on the Sea, of the People of God, upon the account of Religion. He owns the same as a just Reason and Ground of Excommunication, and thinks the Excommunication, and the Grounds thereof, ought not to be judged by this, but an Ecclesiastical Court. As to the Bishop's Murder, and King's Authority, he answers as Mr. Boig. And further, the Advocate adduceth his additional Confession, July 19. 'where being interrogate, if he owns the Sanquhar Declaration, and it being read, he owns the same in all its Articles, except that he does not look on these Persons as the formal Representatives of the Presbyterian Church, as they call themselves. And as to that Expression, The King should have been denuded many Tears ago, does not like the Word denuded, but says, what the King has done justifies the People's revolting against him. And as to that Part declaring War, he does not know if they were called, or in a Capacity to declare War; and thinks that they thereby intended only to justify the killing of any of the King's Forces in their own Defence, when assaulted, otherwise it might have been esteemed Murder. As to these Words, where the King is called an Usurper and a Tyrant, declares, he knows certainly the King is an Usurper, and wishes he were not a Tyrant. This Confession not being signed, is proven by the Depositions of the Lord Haltoun, and the Council-clerks.

William Thomson.

William Thomson, Servant in Frosh, comes next, and against him is adduced his own Confession, when examined before the Committee for publick Affairs. Edinburgh July 12. 'That he was at Bothwell; that he hath not taken the Bond; that he assisted to the Relief of Two Prisoners in the Town of Airth. As to Bothwell Rising being Rebellion, the King's Authority, and the Archbishop's Death, he refuses to answer. Being asked if it was lawful to kill the Officers of the Army, he asked at the Committee, if it was lawful for them to kill the People of God, adding, that if they pleased they might lay the one to the other. Being asked, if to save his Life, he will say God save the King, answers, he will not buy his Life at so dear a Rate, as to commit any Sin.'

William Cutbil.

William Cutbil Seaman, hath his Confession likewise brought as Probation against him, 'That he was taken by some of the Earl of Mar's Men, with Two Pistols and a Durk about him; being interrogate, if it be lawful to kill the King, answers, the King has broken the Covenant, and presses others to do so by his Forces, and therefore he thinks he deserves to die, and denies his Authority upon that account: As to the Murder of the Archbishop, he thinks the Persons who did it, had the Glory of God before their Eyes, and refuses to sign.'

Verdict and Sentence.

Both the last spoken of owned their Confessions before the Justiciary and Inquest; and the Affize bring in Mr. Cargil guilty of treasonable declining the King's Authority, and being at Bothwell, and the other Four as guilty of owning the treasonable Principles in Sanquhar Declaration, and disowning of the King's Authority: Whereupon the Judges pass Sentence, that they be hanged to Morrow the 27 Instant, and the Heads of Mr. Cargil, Mr. Boig, and Smith, be placed on the Nether-bow Port, and the Heads of the other Two on the West Port; which was pronounced for Doom.

It is but very little Account I can give of these Persons. Their Speeches, and some other of their Papers are published in the Cloud of Witnesses. Mr. Cargil had a Design to have left behind him a large Paper, giving an Account of his Principles and Practices, and had writ some Part of it; but they were all hastned to Eternity, sooner than any Body almost was expecting; and the Night after his Sentence, Mr. Cargil had all his Papers seized, and Pen and Ink denied him. However, some way or other he got Access to write, and sign the short Paper I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 55. I need make no Reflections on it, the Reader will perceive in it, he abstracts much from publick Matters, and presses Regeneration and the Exercise of Godliness; and when he comes to state his disowning the King, as he had done in this Examination, so now he puts it on this Bottom, the Magistracy I have rejected, is that founded on the Supremacy, and that because invested with Christ's Power. When he was upon the Scaffold, he discoursed much to the same Purpose, with what is in the fore-said Paper. He was frequently interrupted by beating of the Drums. He declared his full Assurance of Faith, as to his own everlasting Happiness, his Fears of a Stroke coming upon Scotland, his Cheerfulness in suffering, and says, He is going up the Ladder with less Fear and Perturbation, than ever he entred the Pulpit to preach. He forgave all Wrongs done to him, and died in the Lord with a great deal of Sweetness and Composure. These Hints were taken from his Mouth, and printed shortly after his Death; but the Confusion of the Soldiers was so great, that much was lost. In short, he was a Person of very deep and sharp Exercise in his Youth, and had a very extraordinary Outgate from it; the Account of both is too large to be insert here. Afterwards he lived a most pious and religious Life, and was a zealous and useful Minister, and of an easy sweet natural Temper. And I am of Opinion, the singular Steps he took towards the End of his Course, were as much to be attributed unto his Regard to the Sentiments of others, for whom he had a Value, as to his own Inclinations.

1681:

They are executed July 27.
Mr. Cargil's Carrage and short Paper at his Death.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 55.

After Mr. Cargil, Mr. Walter Smith was next executed; he stated his disowning of the King's Authority upon the same Foot with Mr. Cargil. At his last he spoke without that Heat, and these Heights, which, in some Cases, he had discovered in the former Part of his Life. Upon the Scaffold he was frequently interrupted, and there he repeated much of the Paper he left in Writing. He disclaimed the unlawful Exercise and Tyranny of Authority, and gave very solid and pleasant Advices to the Spectators, as to their Practice, and making their Calling and Election sure; and as in his Testimony, so now he presses them to beware of a Spirit of Bitterness, Peremptoriness, and ignorant Zeal; and refers, for his Judgment in many Things he would not now dip into, to a Paper drawn up by him some time ago, entitled, Some Steps of Defection, &c. and cautions against Division, in adhering to some Points, anent which, he himself, it seems, once had protested.

Mr. Walter
Smith.

Mr. James Boig was next dispatched. I have nothing further about him, than what is contained in a Letter of his to his Brother, the Day before his Death, which, tho' it be already printed, yet having Matters of Fact in it I have not observed elsewhere, I have annexed it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 56. Both he and Mr. Smith died under much Comfort, Joy, and full Assurance; and the Reader will remark a considerable Difference 'twixt the Papers they left behind them, and many others unwarily published in the Book I last cited. I have little to add as to the Two Country People, who suffered with them, probably not without a Design in them who ordered it so. William Thomson was taken at Alloa, when coming from a Sermon of Mr. Cargil's, in the End of June last; what they had to lay to the Charge of these Two Men we have seen. Both of them run much higher in the Papers they left behind them, than any of the other Three; and certainly, Allowances ought to be made for the different Character and Capacity of the Persons.

Mr. James Boig.

His Letter before his Death.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 56.

William Thomson
and Guthrie.

These Five in one Day, and the Day before the new Parliament met, were but a melancholy Preface, and ought to have been a moving Spectacle to these Law-makers. One would have thought they might have been very much satiate with Blood, and this Day's Executions might have scared from any more; but that was not the Design, but rather to harden them in making sanguinary Laws, and imposing new and contradictory Oaths, which would bring me to the next Section; but I have yet before me some more Executions, near a Kin to these I have been describing, after the Parliament is up.

In the Beginning of October, by the Registers, I find Six more before the criminal Court; and the Account I give of them, shall be from these and some original Papers before me. October 7. I find Robert Garnock Hammerman in Stirling, Patrick Foreman in the Parish of Alloa, David Fairie, James Stuart, George Lapsley, and Alexander Russel. We heard of Robert Garnock before, since Bothwell-bridge; he has continued now Two Years in the Irons. The Case of James Stuart was really lamentable, and a fresh Instance of their Barbarity. He was a young Man, I might almost have termed him a Boy, of good and serious Inclinations, who had never been, as far as I can learn, engaged in any Thing for which the Law could have reached him. He came in from the West Country, to see a Relation of his in Prison at Edinburgh; by what Means, I know not, the other got out, and he was found in the Room whence the other escaped; whereupon he was brought before a Committee of Council, and Criminal Process against Six more, Oct. 7.

1681.

soon ensnared by their Questions. When he was silent in some Heads, and would not answer, some Papers before me bear, That Sir George Mackenzie threatened to take out his Tongue with a Pair of Pincers. Precisely upon his Answers he was condemned, and in a few Days after, he was taken, and executed with the rest at the Gallows-lee.

Robert Garnock.

Robert Garnock's original Indictment being in my Hands, and it being a little out of the Road of the Indictments given since Bothwell, and that of the rest condemned with him being much of the same Tenor, tho' I know not if they joyned in Robert Garnock's Papers or not, I shall here insert an Abbreviate of it. He is indicted, that 'Whereas the Deniers and Decliners of the King's Authority, are to be punished by Forfeiture of Life and Fortune, by Act 129. Parl. 6. Jam. VI. and Act 2. Sess. 2. Parl. 1. Char. II. nevertheless, the Pannel did, before the Council, upon the First of October instant, decline the Authority of the King and Council, and called the King and Council, Tyrants, Murderers, perjured, and man-sworn, declaring that it was lawful to rise in Arms against them, and kill them, and gave in a most treasonable Paper, termed, A Protestation and Testimony against Parliamentari, Wherein he terms the Members of Parliament Idolaters, Usurpers of the Lord's Inheritance, and protests against their Procedure in their Hell-hatched Acts; which Paper is signed by his Hand, whereby he is guilty of the Crime of Treason: That further he gave in a signed Declaration to the Council, wherein the said Robert Garnock disowns the King's Authority and Government, and protests against the Council as Tyrants. Therefore, &c. in common Form.' This was now the ordinary Way of their Indictment, when, by their Severity, they were driven to Heights, or by Cunning they had elicite Confessions, their own Papers and Confessions were turned into an Indictment, without any Matter of Fact, generally speaking, to lay to their Charge; and they were sentenced merely upon the wild Opinions, which one way or other they were brought to own before them.

There was no Difficulty of Probation against this Pannel; his own Declinature and Protest signed by him were produced before the Assize, and Lords of the Justiciary, before whom, again he renews his Declinature of the King and them, and adheres to his former Papers.

Patrick Foreman.

Patrick Foreman is indicted for disowning the King. The Probation is his Declaration before the Council, October 1. where he confesseth, 'That a Knife was found on him with this Inscription, For cutting Tyrants Throats. Being asked, if that was to kill the King, answers, if the King be a Tyrant, why not cut his Throat, and if the Council were true Judges, they would have that Posie on their Swords. Being asked by his Royal Highness, if he owned the King's Authority. He answered, Not. Being asked, if he knew that was Treason, he asked, Against whom? And it being answered, against his Sovereign the King. He said, he disowned the King for his King and Sovereign.' All this he adheres to before the Justiciary, and repeats his disowning the King.

David Fairie.

David Fairie is the sameway dealt with. His Confession before the Council bears, 'That he disclaimed the King's Authority, that he calls him a Tyrant, asserts it is lawful to kill Murderers; says, the King is a Murderer, because he hath murdered the People of God.' James Stuart and Andrew Russel, plainly disown Authority. Hugh Stevenson Clerk-depute, and Sir William Paterson depone, these were their Expressions, and they all know their Declinature of the Lords of Justiciary, and are remitted to the Assize.

James Stuart.
Andrew Russel.The Pannels Protestation
given in to the Assize.

Before the Assize went aside, the Pannels delivered to the Inquest, a Paper containing a Protestation and Warning to them, if they brought in an unlawful Verdict against them. A Copy of it is before me, signed by the Six Pannels; and indeed it is not so much out of the Road, as some other Protests given by some of them. 'They advise them to consider what they are doing, and upon what Grounds they pass a Sentence upon them; they declare they are no Rebels, that they disown no Authority which is according to the Word of God, and Covenants which the Land is bound by. They charge them to consider how deep a Guilt Covenant-breaking is, and put them in Mind they are to answer to the great Judge of all, for what they do in this Matter; and say, they do this since they are in Hazard of their Lives, only because they cannot in Conscience yield to the iniquous Laws of Men; and acquaint them, it is a dangerous Thing to pass a Sentence on Men, merely because of their Conscience and Judgment; that they are free Subjects, never taken at any Action contrary to the present Laws; and add, that now these whom they once thought would rule for God, have turned their Authority for Tyranny and Inhumanity, and make out both in destroying the Laws of God, murdering his People against and without Law, adding, as we ourselves can prove and witness, when brought in before them: After Two Years Imprisonment, one of them most cruelly and tyrant-like, rose from the Place of Justice, and drew a Sword, and would have killed one of us, but Providence ordered it otherwise, however, the Wound that was received is yet to be shewn; the like Action was never heard or read of. Some time since they cruelly murdered David Finlay at Newmills, guilty of nothing they could call a Crime, living peaceably at his own House, without a Witness, or any Shadow of Law; when brought by a Party before them, he was shot immediately. What they did in Mr. Mitchel's Case, after his Life was granted under the publick Faith, to break which they perjured themselves, is publickly known: And James Learmont they likewife murdered, after he had been Three Times freed by the Affize. They add, that after such Murders which deserve Death, they cannot see how they durst own them as Judges. After all, they charge them solemnly to notice what they do, and assure them their Blood will be heavy upon them. They put them in mind of Mr. John Ellies, who pleaded against Mrs. King and Kid, how terrible this was at his Death; and conclude with Jer. xxvi. 15. and charge them not to take innocent Blood on their Heads: And subscribe all at Edinburgh, October 7. 1681. David Fairie, James Stuart, Alexander Ruffel, Patrick Foreman, Robert Garnock, George Lapsley.

1681.

Notwithstanding of this Paper, the Inquest brought them in guilty of the Crimes libelled, by their own Confession. George Lapsley is delayed until November 7. where I find the Diet is deserted against him, simpliciter as to Treason. The Occasion of this Difference, I hear, was, that George Lapsley, when interrogate as the rest were, disowned Authority, and other Things they disowned, with this Qualification, according to the Word of God, and our sworn Covenants. He got out of Prison afterward when it was broke: But the other Five are sentenced to be hanged 'twixt Leith and Edinburgh, upon the 10 instant. Foreman's Hand is to be cut off before Death, and the Heads and Hands of the rest are ordered to be cut off after they are hanged, and set up upon the Pleasance Port.

Verdict and Sentence.

The Sentence was executed against all of them at the Gallow-lee, 'twixt Leith and Edinburgh. The Reason of this Change of the Place, was, the Multitude of Executions at the Cross and Grass-market, drew so many Spectators, and the Carriage and last Speeches of the Sufferers, when allowed to have them, made such Impressions, that it was found adviseable to take the Sufferers out of the Town, to a Place where some of the most notorious Criminals used to be executed; and I am told, that several Times they carried them down thither early in the Morning, and at Hours when they expected few would come out of Town. I have nothing further upon this Process, unless it be that their plain upbraiding Popery as Idolatry, and the Duke of York as a Papist, heightened the Fury of the Managers against them. And after the Acts, we shall in the next Section find the Parliament passed making it Treason to speak against the Succession of the Duke of York, tho' a Papist. This was a new Handle against the Sufferers, many of them speaking boldly against him as a Papist, and the Author of all their sufferings.

Executed Oct. 10. at the Gallow-lee. Reason of the Change of the Place of Execution.

Thus I have put together all these Sufferers unto Death this Year. The Heights some of them ran to, are Proofs what Lengths the Oppression of such a Period puts less knowing People upon, and will never entirely vindicate the Severity with which they were treated. It is Time now to take a View of the new Laws made this Year.

S E C T. V.

Of the Laws and Acts made in the Parliament, which met July 28. this Year, in as far as they relate to the Church.

It is now about Nine Years since we had a Parliament in Scotland, and it may be, considering all Circumstances, the Kingdom was at no great Loss. Other Ways were now fallen upon to manage Affairs than by these, which were none of the King's darling Courts, tho' he had no Reason to be much displeased with our Scots Parliaments, since his Restoration; only the Country Party last Session thwarted a little with him, or rather the Duke of Lauderdale; yet, in every Matter which tended to advance the Oppression and Hardships upon Presbyterians, they had been abundantly obsequious to his Majesty and his Bishops. This was King Charles's last Parliament, and the next we shall find summoned by him, who is Commissioner to this, James Duke of Albany and York.

No Parliaments in Scotland for Nine Years.

There was no great need of a new Parliament from the Untowardness of the former Members, but after so long an Interval, Decency required a new Election, and so a Proclamation, of the Date Whitehall, June 8. indicting a Parliament to be held at Edinburgh, July 28. is emitted.

Proclamation for a Parliament.

Another Proclamation Edinburgh, July 19. is before me, wherein his Royal Highness his Majesty's High Commissioner, by the Lyon King at Arms, warns the Members to convene at Holyrood-house July 28. by nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, the Lords furnished with their Gowns, Robes, Horfes, and Foot-mantles, the Commissioners of Shires with their Horfes and Foot-mantles, to attend his Royal Highness on Horse-back in his going to the Parliament

Another so. Members riding in their Robes.

1681

House, and in his Return, and ordering all, having Commissions from Shires and Borroughs upon the 25 instant, to deliver them in to the Register in the Parliament House.

Great Parade was made at the Riding of this Parliament. The Manner and Order of it was printed by Authority, which was kept, and every Thing very splendid. When they met, the King's Letter to this Parliament was read, which stands App. N<sup>o</sup>. 57. Papers of this Nature readily contain as much of the Mind of the Ministry and Minions about the King, as his own, and so I make no Reflections upon it. The Commissioner's Speech came next, and is annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 58. Therein he expresses a very great Concern about his own Succession to the Crown. From both these Papers we may easily gather the two great Designs in View this Meeting of Parliament, to bear down Separation, that is, Presbyterians in Scotland, and to secure the Duke's Succession, that is, Popery in Britain. The first is pretty plausibly pressed in the King's Letter; and the second is plainly insinuate in the Duke's Speech; tho' one would think the Business of the Succession would have come as gracefully from his Majesty as the Duke; but Papists stick at nothing to promote their own Designs.

The first Thing the Parliament fell upon, was the making a Return to the King's Letter, and upon the first of August an Answer was read and approved, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 59. Every one who knows the Method of penning these publick Letters of Compliment, will easily perceive, that in common Course a Return of this Nature would follow such a Letter at such a Juncture, from so loyal a Parliament, under the Management of a Popish Commissioner; therefore very little needs be said upon it.

Generally speaking, it is just a Repetition of the King's Letter, with turning the Compliment upon him and his Brother, which is the plain Scots of the Royal Family. Indeed I cannot but wonder a little at their Modesty, when they pretend to give his Majesty's other Kingdoms a Pattern to maintain the native Succession, which, they add, cannot be invaded without subverting the fundamental Laws. The Reader, I apprehend, will be at a Loss to know where these are which oblige Protestants to bring upon themselves and Posterity the Yoke of Popery, and a Popish Successor. They plainly add, they rather venture upon this than upon Presbytery, which, they alledge, brought Confusion and Slavery in the last Age; whereas Order and Liberty were never so much known in Scotland, as when Presbytery was in its Height and Vigour.

Next, they make a Compliment to the King upon his Concern in the Protestant Religion; where I cannot help thinking they came near a Self-contradiction to their Declaration which follows, of their Intention to support the Royal Family, that is, the Duke of Tork, a virulent Papist, in his Claim to the Succession. Then they take on an Engagement, to declare their Acknowledgment of the Prerogatives of the Crown in its lineal Descent; which they did with a Witness in their succeeding Acts, as shall be observed. Mean while they promise never to depart from the Royal Family, and their Commissioner the lawful Successor, and conclude with Compliments to him.

From such Beginnings we may easily guess what will be the Tenor of the Acts of this Third Parliament, and I need not insist long upon them. Their first Act ratifies all former Laws for the Security of the Protestant Religion. It is but short, and I have added it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 60. This Act came in common Course, and agreeably to the ordinary Form of the King's Instructions. Most Parliaments, since the Reformation, have begun with what they thought had a Reference to the securing Religion. The Lords of Articles used to enter their Work by appointing a Committee for Religion, out of their Number, which they did at this Time. Of this Committee that excellent Person, Archibald Earl of Argyle, of whom more this Year, was a Member, and a very worthy Member, seeing he really had the Protestant Religion at his Heart.

I am told this Committee did prepare an Act securing the Protestant Religion, the Draught of which I have not seen; but I am informed it ratified Act Parl. Jam. VI. approving the Confession of Faith, and Act Parl. Jam. VI. containing our Coronation Oath to be taken by all our Kings at their Coronation, and Regents before their Entry to and Exercise of their Government. It was indeed less hard upon the Successor as to his own Profession, but every way as peremptory, if not more, than these Acts, as to the publick Exercise of the Reformed Religion, and contained a Test to exclude Papists out of Places of Trust; and because the Penalties to be incurred, by their acting in such Places without taking this Test, would be precarious in the Event of the Sovereign's being a Papist, without their being exacted, therefore they were not to come to the Treasury, but the one Half to the Informer, and the other Half to pious Uses, and a plain Way was laid down for their being exacted. But when this Project took air, the Commissioner stormed extremely, and the Committee for Religion after this was discharged to meet. Somewhat of this Nature was aimed at in the Act for the Test; but it was, as we shall hear, so managed, as its Edge turned only upon Protestants.

Instead of such an Act as Argyle had in his Eye, the Lords of Articles agreed upon this short and general Draught, and brought it into the Parliament without the Clause, and all Acts against, Popery, so tender were they of the Duke. But when it came to be read in the House, King's Letter, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 57.Commissioner's Speech App. N<sup>o</sup>. 58.Parliament's Answer to the King's Letter. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 59.

Remarks on it

Act 1. for the securing the Protestant Religion.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 60.

Another Act relating Religion, proposed, but stopped by the Commissioner.

Clause added to the Earl of Argyle.

House, that noble Earl moved the Addition of the abovenamed Clause. The Motion was opposed as unnecessary, by not only the King's Advocate, but also some of the Bishops, and seconded by Sir George Lockhart, and Sir James Dalrymple President of the Session, and was yielded to without a Vote. This Motion, with some Appearances the Earl made about the Act anent the Test, drew the Commissioner's Indignation upon him, so that nothing but his Blood would satisfy him, tho', before this Appearance for the Protestant Interest, Argyle was as much in Favour with him as any Protestant in the Kingdom.

1681.

After all, there was no great Hazard to the Commissioner's Religion, from this Act and Clause; it was but a fair General, and we shall find much the same Surety granted at an after Parliament, by the Courtiers, when they were about to rescind the penal Statutes. Indeed little real Security can be expected to the Reformation, from a Popish Commissioner and Claimant to the Crown; and in my Opinion, tho' a Security had been intended in the Act, yea, given in much stronger Terms, it was quite taken away by the following Act, which was a Stroke at the Root of the Reformation, and an Opening of the Door to bring in One who by his Religion is bound to rescind this Act, and all it refers to, as soon as he could have an Opportunity.

Their second Act then is, asserting the Right of Succession to the Imperial Crown of Scotland. Which it is very proper I insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 61. This Act is of so high flying a Strain, that I could wish to see Remarks upon it by some Lawier and good Hand. To me it appears to run cross to all our Law and Practick since we had any Parliaments. Every Sentence of it breathes the Language of Slavery, and so is exactly adapted to introduce Popery, by bringing a Popish Successor to the Throne.

Act is upon the Succession,
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 61.

The Kings of Scotland are said to derive their Power from God Almighty alone; a Phrase unknown in Scotland till the Restoration, and contrary to the constant Practice of Parliaments, and the primores regni, who frequently unmade Kings when they had declared themselves unfit for Government, and Tyrants, and consequently claimed the Power of making them, as well as the breaking of, and diverting from the lineal Succession.

Remarks upon
it.

This is now so fully set in its Light, from our Records, ancient Monuments and Papers, that it is undeniable. The learned and industrious Antiquary, Mr. James Anderson, hath published Two unanswerable Evidences of this in his valuable Essay upon our Independency, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 24 and 25. the Declaration of the Estates of Scotland, concerning the Settlement of the Crown, and the Act of Parliament for the Security of the Kingdom, in the Days of King Robert Bruce. I hope, from his curious and diligent Researches into our History, we shall yet have further Proofs of that noble Spirit of Liberty which prevailed in Scotland, both before and since our Reformation from Popery.

The Connection 'twixt this Assertion and what follows, is as unnatural as the Position was false in Fact. Kings deriving their Power thus, do succeed lineally thereunto, according to the known Degrees of Proximity in Blood. There is but one Instance of a Succession of Rulers deriving their Power from God alone, the Judges under Israel's Theocracy; and sure no lineal Succession can be pretended there: For my Share, were I of the Principles advanced here, I would be ready to think this Derivation of Power from God alone, natively requires a divine Designation, reaching to each who enjoys it, and so bears heavy upon the lineal Succession, which appears to me to stand better upon the Foot of the People's Choice, if they shall be such Fools as to tie themselves down to it, tho' it should be a lineal Succession of Fools and Madmen, or Papists, which takes in both.

Next, 'tis added, That this lineal Succession cannot be interrupted, suspended or diverted by any Act or Statute whatsoever. This is clever Work, and an everlasting Act to secure the Jacobite Interest against all Revolutions: But one, meanwhile, must think this might have saved the Parliament's Pains in making this Act, who, if they could not suspend by the same Rule, could not confirm such a wonderful Succession. And greater Stretches were made in explaining Laws during this Period, than if I should say this Clause was high Treason in the Sense of our Scots Law, and a Declaration flatly contrary to the Power and Privileges of Parliament, and consequently these Gentlemen were Felo's dese.

They further declare all Attempts to alter the lineal Succession, do involve Perjury and Rebellion, and expose to a Civil War. How Deviations from the lineal Succession involve Perjury, I comprehend not, never having heard of any Oath whereby Subjects were knit down to the lineal Succession; surely the Gentlemen who made this singular Act, cannot have any Eye to the national, or solemn League and Covenants. Rebellion this might be against the Duke of York, who, I fancy, took all the Laws and Actings in Scotland, since his great Grandmother was set aside for Popery and other Crimes, and confined to Lochleven Castle, to be a Tract of Rebellion; but it was no ways against the Laws of the Land. This the best in the Three Kingdoms perceived, when their Eyes came to be opened, by the Actings of a lineal and Popish Prince, a few Years after this; and had I at that Time been in case to make any Judgment of Things, I would not have been so apprehensive of the Numbers of Papists in Britain, as to have dreaded a Civil War. When the lineal Popish Successor for was set aside, we had no great Proofs of the Courage of the Papists, with the Hereditary-right and Lineal-succeſſion Gentlemen.

1681.

After this Narrative they declare, That by inherent Right and Nature of the Monarchy, and fundamental and unalterable Laws of this Realm, the Succeſſion is lineal. Some Things here need a Commentary before I can underſtand them; and all I remark, is, That if they had known thoſe Laws they mention, 'tis very probable they would have ſtrengthened their Act by citing them. They next declare, That no Difference in Religion, no Act of Parliament made or to be made, can divert the lineal Succeſſion; which is much the ſame as they had ſaid. The Kingdom never could, and never would be able to ſecure themſelves from Pope-ry. All this is our Scots Proteſtant Parliament, with Prelates in it to look after the Security of Religion, their Declaration. At length they take in the King with them, and make it high Treason in any Subject, by ſpeaking, writing, or any other way to endeavour to alter the lineal Succeſſion; that whoever did any Thing to prevent a Papiſt's coming to the Crown, was guilty of Treason. After this we need not wonder to find Multitudes condemned by this Iniquity eſtabliſhed by a Law.

Act 3. for a Supply to the King.

Having thus ſettled their lineal Succeſſor, they come, by their Third Act, to offer a new Supply to the King. Therein I only remark, That they reſume and give their Parliamentary Sanction to the Narrative of the Act made by the Convention of Eſtates, 1678. imposing the Cefs, viz. 'Beauſe of the Danger the Kingdom was in, by ſeditious and rebellious Field-conventicles, and to ſupport the Army in bearing them down.' The Parliament now conſidering, that the Danger from the foreſaid Cauſes doth much increaſe, do renew their Offer. Then they lay down the Method and Manner of raiſing the Money, much the ſame with what the Convention had done; only they diſcharge all free Quartering of Soldiers, tranſient or local, after the Firſt of November this Year, becauſe of the many Inconveniencies which ariſe therefrom to the Subjects. There are Two Things obviously offered here, that the alledged Reaſon from Field-conventicles did not hold at this Time. It hath been noticed, that, excepting a few which Mr. Cargil kept, there have been none ſince Bothwel: Now they are rid of him, and there was no more for ſeveral Years. The other is, That notwithstanding of this Diſcharge, the Country was as much almoſt as ever troubled with free Quarter; and when Redieſs was ſought, none could be had from thoſe who could give it.

Act 4. for ſecuring the Peace of the Country.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 62.
Remarks on it.

Their Fourth Act is, for the ſecuring the Peace of the Country, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 62. Many Obſervations might be made upon it. The Act begins a little ſtrangely, with a Ratification of all Acts and Laws made for ſecuring the Church, as now eſtabliſhed. Whereas really it was the eſtabliſhing of Prelacy, and the Practices of Prelates and their Underlings, with the ſevere Laws, in their favours, they had got made, which theſe Twenty Years were the Occaſion of all the Diſpeace and Diſquiet that was in Scotland: For, the further ſecuring of Prelacy, called the Church and the State, is, for the Faſhion, thrown in with it. This Act itatutes, That all Tenants and Servants, delated upon the Informer's Oath of Calumny, within Three Months, ſhall be held as confeſt, and guilty of being at Field-conventicles, or of Reſet and Converſe, as more fully in the Act. This is a ſummar Way of Probation, eſpecially when the Informer is to have Half of the Fine. Another terrible Clauſe is added, to make this of more general Influence: After the Perſon is found guilty, the Judge is to intimate his Name to the Landlord or Maſter, who muſt pay the Fine, providing the Perſon found guilty have Goods which will pay his Rent; and if not, he is to diſmiſs him preſently out of his Land and Service, with his Family, or preſent him to Juſtice. This makes all Heritors and Maſters, Executioners in the Crime of Field-conventicles. It was well there were but few for ſeveral Years; but this made terrible Work as to Reſet and Converſe: And, as if all this was not enough, theſe who afterwards receive ſuch, are made liable to pay Three Years Rent or Fee to their Maſter or Landlord who diſmiſſed them, and a Hundred Pounds to the King. The Unaccountableneſs and Hardſhips here are plain, unleſs a publick Stigma had been put upon ſuch as were diſmiſſed.

By this ſame Act, the Fines for Field-conventicles are all doubled, and Burgeſſes, beſides their former Fines, are to loſe their Burgeſſhip, and be baniſhed the Town. One would think, the former Severities for bearing down of the Goſpel, were ſufficient, and more than enough; but evil Men wax worſe and worſe. In the laſt place, the King, by this Act, is impowered to name Perſons for puniſhing Conventicles, and irregular Baptiſms and Marriages. This is a new Handle to the Managers to give Commiſſions, and gratify whom they pleaſed thereby, to uplift the Fines. This way, the Council's and the Biſhops Underworkers, in all Places of the Country, were rewarded, and not a few of them enriched with the Spoil of Men more righteous than themſelves; but an evident Curſe was in what they got this way.

Act 14. againſt Affaſſinations.

Remarks.

Their Sixth Act is anent the Teſt, which made ſo much Noiſe, and was ſo great a Handle to Perſecution, that I thought it deſerved a Section in this Chapter, by it ſelf, which I ſhall come to, if once I had taken a little Notice of the Fifteenth Act of this Parliament, againſt Affaſſinations. The Matter of it, in the general, is certainly very good, and no Body can aboabominate them more than I allow my self to do; but the Scope of this Act, is to insinuate, many of the now persecuted Party maintained this vile Principle. Several Things have been already noticed for their Vindication; and I now add, that the poor People who were driven to the greatest Heights at this Time, whatever rash Threatnings they used, and wrong Conclusions they drew from the horrid Violence done them, yet many of them, when they came to step into Eternity, most solemnly declare themselves against Murder and Assassination.

1681.

This Fifteenth Act is shut up with a very ample Testimonial the Parliament are pleased to give to Bishop Sharp, who, by his treacherous betraying of Presbyterians, and violent persecuting them, and no otherwise that I know of, deserved well of the Prelatich Church, and went very great Lengths to advance and carry forward arbitrary Power in the State. By a pretty singular Step, they appoint weekly Searches to be made by the Sheriff of Fife, for his Assassines, when they were all out of his Reach, and ratify all Acts of Council formerly made against them.

I find no other Acts of this Parliament which relate to the Subject I am upon; unless it be the Twenty sixth Act, concerning publick Debts, whereby, how justly, I leave to Lawyers, the Debts contracted for the Service of the Kingdom, when in imminent Danger, are all discharged by this Parliamentary Sponge; and yet in such a Way, as to tempt those concerned, to swallow down the unlawful Oath of the Test. They are pleased to except the late Duke of Roths his Heirs, because of his eminent Services to his Majesty.

These Acts, and particularly that anent the Test, laid a Foundation for a new Scene of Persecution, which I shall consider, if once I had taken some View of the Test imposed at this Time.

SECT. VI.

Of the Imposition of the Test, its Explications, and the begun Persecution upon it, this Year 1681.

I Have delayed the Consideration of the Test to this Place, as of too great Importance to be intermixed with my cursory Remarks upon the Acts of Parliament this Year. The Imposition of mixed and State Oaths, upon the Subjects of these Nations since the Reformation, would afford Matter for a very large and black History; and their violent cramming down Peoples Throats, hath had very dismal Consequences: But this complex and self-contradictory Oath of the Test, indeed wants its Parallel among all the Oaths that ever were forced upon a Protestant Nation. For many Years it became an Handle for persecuting, even to the Death, great Numbers, and some of them of very considerable Rank, and oppressing Multitudes of Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others, who could not comply with it.

Mixed State-oaths of all consequence since the Reformation, the Test worse than any Imposition before.

Many flaming Instances of this we shall meet with in the following Years. In this Place I am only to give the Reader some View of its Nature, and the Act imposing it, with its After-explications, and the Stir it made among the Episcopal Clergy, and some begun Persecution occasioned by it this Year.

Upon the last of August, the Parliament pass their Act anent Religion and the Test, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 63. The Oath it self, which, in the After-part of this History, comes under the Name of the Test, deserves a Room here.

Act about Religion and the Test. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 63.

The Oath to be taken by all Persons in publick Trust.

I solemnly swear, in presence of the eternal God, whom I invoke as Judge and Witness of my sincere Intention in this my Oath, That I own and sincerely profess the true Protestant Religion, contained in the Confession of Faith, recorded in the first Parliament of King James VI. and that I believe the same to be founded on and agreeable to the written Word of God: And I promise and swear, That I shall adhere thereunto during all the Days of my Life-time, and shall endeavour to educate

The Oath called the Test.

1681.

cate my Children therein, and shall never consent to any Change or Alteration contrary thereunto; and that I disown and renounce all such Principles, Doctrines, or Practices, whether Popish or Fanatical, which are contrary unto, and inconsistent with the said Protestant Religion, and Confession of Faith: And, for Testification of my Obedience to my most gracious Sovereign Charles II. I do affirm and swear, by this my solemn Oath, that the King's Majesty is the only supreme Governor of this Realm, over all Persons, and in all Causes, as well Ecclesiastical as Civil; and that no foreign Prince, Person, Pope, Prelate, State or Potentate, hath or ought to have any Jurisdiction, Power, Superiority, Preheminency, or Authority Ecclesiastical or Civil, within this Realm: And therefore, I do utterly renounce and forsake all foreign Jurisdications, Powers, Superiorities, and Authorities; and do promise, that from henceforth I shall bear Faith and true Allegiance to the King's Majesty, his Heirs and lawful Successors; and, to my Power, shall assist and defend all Rights, Jurisdications, Prerogatives, Privileges, Preheminencies, and Authorities belonging to the King's Majesty, his Heirs and lawful Successors: And I further affirm and swear by this my solemn Oath, that I judge it unlawful for Subjects, upon Pretence of Reformation, or any Pretence whatsoever, to enter into Covenants or Leagues, or to convocate, convene, or assemble in any Councils, Conventions, or Assemblies, to treat, consult, or determine in any Matter of State, Civil or Ecclesiastick, without his Majesty's special Command, or express Licence had thereunto, or to take up Arms against the King, or those commisionate by him; and that I shall never so rise in Arms, or enter into such Covenants or Assemblies, and that there lies no Obligation upon me from the national Covenant, or the solemn League and Covenant, (so commonly called) or any other manner of Way whatsoever, to endeavour any Change or Alteration in the Government, either in Church or State, as it is now established by the Laws of this Kingdom: And I promise and swear, that I shall, with my utmost Power, defend, assist and maintain his Majesty's Jurisdiction foresaid, against all Deadly; and I shall never decline his Majesty's Power and Jurisdiction, as I shall answer to God. And finally, I affirm and swear, that this my solemn Oath is given in the plain genuine Sense and Meaning of the Words, without any Equivocation, mental Reservation, or any manner of Evasion whatsoever; and that I shall not accept or use any Dispensation from any Creature whatsoever. So help me G O D.

Remarks on it.
It is complex,
and extensive,
and far above the Reach of many on whom it was pressed.

Observations upon this Oath are almost needless, especially when I shall just now give some of the Difficulties that were raised against it. From a cursory View of it, without entering upon the Papers now handed about, for and against it, the Reader cannot but remark the Hardship, in violently pressing such a vastly extensive and complex Oath, upon Multitudes of poor ignorant Country People, who cannot be supposed to know the Things affirmed and sworn in it, and running them down even to the Death, when they stuck at it, as what, at first View, and to every Body's uptaking, overturned our solemn Covenants, and for ever excluded the Presbyterian Establishment.

Turned from a Test of Office to a Test of Loyalty.

As an Historian, I must further remark, That tho' at first this Oath was only pretended as a Test and Tie to such who were in, or should come to Places of Trust and publick Office, and, it may be, was designed so by the Parliament; yet, when the Duke of Tork and the Managers had once got the Edge of it turned from Papists, and found that the best of Protestants stuck as much at it as they, it was turned to be a general Test of Loyalty; and every Body were suspected Persons, in the Eye of the Government, who were not willing to take it, except the Papists, who were more employed than ever. Thus, vast Numbers of Gentlemen came to have it put to them, and when they refused it, were fined in Sums equivalent to their Estates; and no Way was allowed to any, except Papists, to purge themselves of Disaffection, but by taking of this Oath; and the doing of that cleared, from all Crimes almost, those who had a wide enough Throat for it.

A Medley of Popery, Prelacy, Rastianism,
and Self-contradiction.

Mean while, the very reading it over may discover it is a Medley of Popery, Prelacy, Rastianism, and Self-contradiction; and it appears to have been framed, or at least so loaded with Amendments, as no Body might take it. It opened a Gap for Popery, by renouncing the national Covenant, the great Bulwark of Scotland, against that wicked Idolatry, and obliging the Swearers to receive a Popish Successor. Prelacy is so plainly approved in it, and sworn to, that I need say nothing of this. The Supremacy, and the utmost Extent of the King's Power in all Causes, is again and again affirmed and asserted; and the Contradiction 'twixt the Confession sworn to in the Entry, and the subsequent Branches of the Oath, 'twixt the maintaining the Protestant Religion, and the introducing of a Papist to the Throne, yea, 'twixt the King's Supremacy and the present Establishment of the Prelatical Church, at least in the Opinion of some of the best of its Members, hath been many Times discovered.

It involves an Approbation of the indefensible here-

It appears further necessarily to involve Approbation of, and Subjection to the pretended divine, indefeasible, hereditary Right of Kings, asserted in the late Act of Parliament, and the lineal Succession, which by no Statute can be diverted, and the rest of the Nonsense formerly merly mentioned, which is necessarily included in his Majesty and his Successors Jurisdiction, Privileges, &c.

1681.

It plainly makes the Swearer renounce defensive Arms, against the greatest Oppression a Subject can be under, and clearly enough condemns the late glorious Revolution, and binds down to an unlimited Obedience to all the then iniquous Laws, and obliges the Person in no Case to decline the King's Authority. And after all this, I need not add, That no Presbyterian could take it, yea, even such who were of other Principles, and had any remaining Sentiments of Freedom and Liberty, justly scrupled at it.

ditary Right of Kings.

With a Renunciation of defensive Arms.

After all, it may be enquired how so many fell in with this Imposition; and indeed I can give no Account of this, unless it be, that many of the Branches of this Oath had been insensibly and gradually threaded in upon Persons in Places of Trust, by these Oaths, Declarations and Bonds, imposed these Twenty Years in Scotland; and the Whole of the Bishops, who ought to have been Patterns, gave into it: Yea, the Iniquity of the Times, and Impiety of the greater Part now in Office, was such, that the Fear and Solemnity of an Oath was quite worn off the Spirits of many, and the reasonable and just Cords of the Oath of God upon these Nations, being wickedly cast off, it was but righteous, People should be given up to strong Delusion, and the Belief of Lies.

Reasons why so many fell in with this Oath.

I come now to consider the Act imposing this Oath, and it may be worth while, before I make Remarks upon it, to point at some Part of its History, while a passing in the House. When the first Act anent Religion was read and past, it appeared very general and insufficient to all Members who had any Regard to the Protestant Interest; and, upon the Desire of Additions, or another Act, by severals, the Commissioner, in face of Parliament, promised, that full Time and Opportunity should be given to bring in any other Act which should be found necessary to secure the Protestant Religion: Nevertheless, tho' many Overtures, Memorials and Draughts were offered, yet they were never allowed to be read before the Lords of the Articles, or Parliament, but this Test Act was formed in private, and at length obtruded.

Some Account of its Rise, and the way how it past in Parliament.

It deserves to be remembred, that this Act and Oath was brought in and voted in one Day, tho' it was of that Extent and Importance as required the greatest Deliberation. At first, the Draught was brought in without the Clause relative to the Confession of Faith; but this was pressed with great Ardour, and, after some Hours Debate, it was got added: Many other Additions and Alterations were moved, but not granted.

Brought in and voted in one Day. The Clause about the Confession of Faith added in the House.

The Earl of Argyle, in reasoning upon the Oath, said, 'He was of Opinion, that as few publick Oaths should be required as might be, and these as short and clear as possible: He thought a very small Addition to the Oaths in Force these Twenty Years, might suffice, since it is evident the Oath of Allegiance, and Declaration, had effectually debarred all Fanaticks from Places of Trust, all this Time. It is true, added he, some Papiists have swallowed them, but a Word or Two of Addition might likewise hold them out.'

Earl of Argyle's Appearance against it.

This same noble Member, with Warmth, opposed the Clause toward the End of the Act, excepting the King's Sons and Brothers, and said, 'It was our Happiness that King and People were of one Religion by Law, and he hoped the Parliament would do nothing to loose what was fast, nor open a Gap for the Royal Family to differ in Religion; and therefore wished if any Exception were made, it might be made particular for his Royal Highness.' But the Commissioner rising up, opposed this openly; whereupon the Earl concluded with his Fears, 'That if this Exception did pass, it would do more Prejudice to the Protestant Religion, than all the rest of the Act, yea, many Acts, would do good.'

Many other Speeches were made in Parliament, upon this solemn and extraordinary Occasion, which I am sorry I can give so little Account of. When the Members were wearied with Reasoning, the Half of the House pressed a Delay, were it but till next Morning, the Draught of the Act in the Clerk's Hands being so much blurred, changed, and interlined in the Course of the Debates, that the far greater Part knew not what was in, or what was out of it; but no Delay could be granted: Whereupon several refused to vote it, among whom were the Earl of Argyle, and Sir James Dalrymple President of the Session, whom the Duke of York blamed for bringing in the Clause about the Confession of Faith, with a Design to crush the Whole.

A Delay till next Day refused, and several refused to vote.

Remarks upon the Act need not be multiplied, since they will fall in with what hath been and may be said upon the Oath. It is Pity, Religion and this Test, or Trial of it, should be coupled in the Title, since every Body must own scarce any Thing done at this Time exposed Religion more than this Test.

Remarks on the Act imposing the Test.

In the Act, the Parliament begins with declaring the Laws already made, sufficient to secure the Protestant Religion against Popery, and Fanaticism, as Presbytery was now most unjustly termed; but they find the Growth of both comes from neglecting their Execution, and the Hopes of Papiists and Fanaticks of getting into Offices. The Execution of the Laws was extremely remiss as to Papiists, who by the Managers were encouraged, made Sharers of the Fines exacted from Presbyterians, and employed to persecute them: But I wonder where the Remissness can ly against Presbyterians, and never heard of their being employed in Places of Trust, yea, their greatest Enemies cannot give one Instance; so this Pretext is mere Sham as to Presbyterians; and Means were found, after this Act was made, to put and keep Papists in Places of Trust.

1681.

The old Confession of Faith, 1567. is next ratified and sworn to, which contains many Articles contrary to the After-clauses of the Oath: Then they ordain the Laws to be executed against Papists, of which no Care was taken. The Thunder is really levelled against Fanaticks, and these are explained to be Preachers at House as well as Field-conventicles. Refreters of intercommuned Persons, and perhaps all Nonconformists to Prelacy, are pointed at by Separatists from this national Church: The Laws are ordered to be executed against all these, and disorderly Baptisms and Marriages; and, that none may escape, the Enumeration is ended with a General, all schismatical Disorders whatsoever; and how much is in the Belly of this I know not.

In order to this, all the Curates are ordered to give up Lists of Papists, and, which they were very willing to do, of all schismatical Withdrawers from publick Worship in their Parishes: These are to be given in to the Sheriff or other inferior Magistrates, that they may proceed against them in the Rigour of Law, and Reports of their Diligence are yearly to be sent in to the Council. The Bishops are likewise to send in Lists and Accounts to be a Check upon the former, and according to which their Diligence is to be examined.

To hinder Papists and Fanaticks to get into Places of Trust, the Oath of the Test is imposed upon all Persons in publick Office; a very particular Enumeration of them, and a specifying the Diets when they are to take the Oath, fills up the rest of the Act: And that none may escape, an additional List is made by Act 15. September 17. which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 64. These Additions seem to be made with a particular Eye to Elections, and to corrupt Deaconries in Burghs. Persons now in Offices are to take this Test, 'twixt and the First of January 1682. and others when they enter upon their Offices.

No Exceptions are made, but the King's lawful Brothers and Sons: He wanted not unlawful Sons in good Store, and had but one Brother, who, above all, ought to have been obliged to give Security for doing nothing against the Protestant Religion, as being of greater Influence for sheltring of Papists, than all the Persons named; but the Oath was principally pointed against Presbyterians; and this way there was no real Hazard from this Exception.

The Penalties annexed to exercising any Office, without taking the Test, are Incapacity for any publick Trust for ever, and the Loss of their Moveables and Liferent-estate; and to encourage the Informers, the one Half goes to them, and the other to the King.

When the Test is thus imposed, I find not many in Places of Trust who made any Difficulty to take it, except the Earl of Argyle, and some few of the best of the Episcopal Clergy. The Earl's Case will come in upon the following Section at full length, and here I shall give a few other Instances from the Records, and other Papers, of some little Opposition made to this grievous Imposition.

Upon the 22 of September, when the Members of Council came to take the Test, the Earl of Queensberry, never much observed before for Strictness, stayed out of Council till Six and Twenty Members took it, and then came in, and being called upon to take it, declared he was willing to swear it with this Explication, That by that Part of the Test declaring there lies no Obligation on the Swearer to endeavour any Change or Alteration in the Government of Church or State, &c. he does not understand himself to be against Alterations, in case it should seem good to his Majesty to make them in Church or in State: And then took the Oath. No Body challenged this as Treason, tho' it was as much an Explication as that the Earl of Argyle offered; but the One was a Friend, and the other a Foe.

I find a Representation made in Council October 6. That John Hope of Hopetoun, heritable Sheriff of the Shire of Linlithgow, had some Scruples to take the Test; whereupon the Council, in the Terms of the 25 Act of the last Parliament, declare, 'He hath amitted and tint the said Office, and that it is at his Majesty's Disposal.' I don't know what his Scruples were, but this Declaration was probably in terrorem, when upon his Scruples he was thus bre-vi manu deprived.

That same Day the Council order Intimation to be made to the Dutches of Roths by the Earl of Haddingtoun, that she cannot hold any Sheriff Court, nor any in her Name, until she take the Test. The Parliament, in one of their Acts, as we have seen, except the Heirs of the Duke from some Hardships of this Nature, yet the Council urge this excellent Lady, who scarce had a Parallel for Religion and every good Thing in her Age, with this Oath, as what they knew she would never take, that the Offices might fall in the Managers Hands.

The Earl of Murray had been desired by the Council to administrate the Test, at London, to the Duke of Monmouth as a privy Counsellor, and bearing other Offices in Scotland. The Secretary in his Return signifies, that he had spoken to the Duke of Monmouth and acquainted him of the Council's Desire; and the Duke's Answer was, 'That the Act of Parliament did not authorize the Privy Council to administrate the Test out of that Kingdom, or in any Place, but such as are mentioned in the Act; and that he being a Lover of Parliaments would about the Test.

Additional Act
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 64.

Most Part in Office take the Test, but some refuse.

Earl of Queensberry explains
the Test, before he takes it.

John Hope of Hopetoun scrup-ple to take the Test, and is divested of his Office as Sheriff of Linlithgow.

Dutches of Roths urged to take the Test.

Duke of Monmouth refuses
the Test.

would not be the first Breaker of an Act of Parliament. ' This very much displeased our Managers, and next Day, October 21. the Council wrote the following Letter to the Secretary.

1681.

My Lord,

BY your Lordship's Letter of the 11 Instant, we find that his Grace the Duke of Monmouth pretends, that the Council are not impowered by the Act of Parliament, to require any who live not in this Kingdom, to take the Test, in which he does most unwarrantably charge the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council with Injustice ; for the Act of Parliament, appointing all his Majesty's Subjects who have any publick Employment to take the Test, it must bind them as well Abroad as at Home ; since wherever they are they are still Subjects : And as this is clear from the Words ; so it is most clear from the Design of the Act, the same being designed to secure the Kingdom against the Influence of Papists and Fanaticks ; and since either of these may influence Places where they have publick Trust, tho' themselves be abroad, it is very clear that they should be obliged to take the Test, tho' they be abroad, and if this Pretext were allowed, such as are unwilling to take the Test, might disappoint the Act of Parliament by going abroad immediately before the Time pre-fixed for taking thereof. This Refusal then from his Grace the Duke of Monmouth being of so ill Example, and it being necessary for his Majesty's Government to see the Acts of that loyal and judicious Parliament obeyed with Firmness and Steadiness ; it is our humble Opinion that his Majesty should name Deputes in these Offices which the Duke of Monmouth possesses until the first of January, at which Time if his Grace take not the Test, he will certainly forfeit these Offices, notwithstanding his being forth of the Kingdom. We do also desire your Lordship, as his Majesty's Secretary, to require the Earl of Sutherland, as Sheriff of Sutherland, the Earl of Callendar, as Sheriff of Stirling, and Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, as heritable Bailie of the Regality of Glenluce, to take the said Test before his Grace the Duke of Lawderdale President of the Council ; and that you will transmit the Certificates thereof to your Lordship's affectionate Friends. Subscribed ut in Sederunt.

Council's Letter to the Secretary upon this, Oct. 21.

November 3. The Lord Privy Seal acquaints the Council that the Duke of Hamilton had yet Scruples upon the Test ; but was willing that they should name Deputes in any Jurisdictions belonging to him. The Council remit it to their Committee, to name fit Persons in all his Jurisdictions. And Nov. 8. the Council being informed, that Patrick Brown Sheriff-depute of Haddington had refused the Test, and demitted his Office, do appoint George Halyburton to officiate in the mean Time.

Duke of Hamilton scruples the Test.

And Sheriff Depute of Haddington.

Even the Bishop of Aberdeen seems to have had some Scruple about the Test ; whether it arose from himself or others, I cannot say. It may be he was not willing to take it till he got in some eminent Persons of his Clergy who for some Time made a Bussle about it, and we shall afterward meet with him and his Synod, putting a Sense and Explication on the Test. The Registers November 10. bear, ' The Council being informed, that the Bishop of Aberdeen, who was appointed to administrate the Test to the College and Commissary there, hath himself demurred to take the same, do impower the Earls of Marischal, Errol, and Kintore, or two of them, to administrate it to the College and Commissar.

The Bishop of Aberdeen demurs some time.

That same Day the Council considering, that the Sheriff Principal of Fife refuseth to take the Test, do appoint Mr. Alexander Malcom Advocate, Sheriff-depute of that Shire, till they shall recal his Commission. This was not done for some Years ; and we shall find he was a good Instrument under the Primate, for fining and other Branches of Persecution.

Alexander Malcom appointed Sheriff-depute of Fife on the Sheriff Principal's refusing the Test.

November 22. the Council find the Marquis of Huntley hath refused the Test, and thereupon they appoint Alexander Innes of Cockstoun Bailie of the Regality of Spensie, to act with as full Power as ever any had before him in that Bailiary. But I do not find they declare the Marquis had tint and amitted his Bailiary. It was ordinary in the Case of Papists who held Offices and refused the Test, to name some of their Confidants to their Places, who had the Name of Protestants, and qualified. Mean while they still continued to enjoy all the Perquisites and Profits of the Office ; whether this was the Case with Cockstoun, I know not, but it was ordinary enough.

Marquis of Huntley refuses it.

I shall end this Account of the Persons who at this Time demurred upon the Test, with a Letter from the Secretary to the Council, dated December 18. wherein he acquaints them, That he had made Enquiry after the Earl of Callendar at London, but could not find him out, and had given over all Hopes of seeing him, and can say no more about his taking the Test ; that he had moved to the King what he had in Commission from them about the Duke of Monmouth's Offices, and his Answer was, that the first of January was so near, that there seems no Necessity to name Deputes to them, but that if 'twixt and then he take not the Test, he will grant Deputation to such as they recommend. And as to the Earl of Sutherland he has farmed out his Estate and Jurisdictions to others for some Years, and so is not obliged to take it : And adds, That Sir James Dalrymple of Stair had informed him, that having quitted all his publick Employments to his Son, there was no Obligation on him by Earl of Callendar does not.

Duke of Monmouth.

Earl of Sutherland.

Sir James Dalrymple of Stair.

1681.

The Council's Zeal this Year in pressing the Test.

Privy Counsellors
take it Sept.
22.

'Law to take the Test.' In this Account I have confined my self to the Registers. Besides those, several others quit their Offices upon this Imposition.

Mean while the Council exert themselves to the utmost, to bring all to comply with the Test, and I shall give a short Detail of their Endeavours this way from their Books during this Year, and in the following Years we shall find a more general and severe pressing of this Oath.

They begin with casting a Copy to others, and September 22. they sign the Test, and resolve that all absent Members shall take it before they take their Places, and repete the Words on their Knees. And September 24. they recommend it to the Earl of Murray, to administrate it to the Duke of Lawderdale as President of the Council, and desire the Duke to administrate it to the Duke of Monmouth and him. And at the same Time require all the Judges, Counsellors, and Clerks of Burghs to take it at Elections. And October 26. they order the Magistrates and Council of Cowpar, Queensferry, and other Burghs, to be cited before them for electing without taking it. That same Day John Graham Post-master, is ordained to take it, and to administrate it to all Post-masters under him. November 3. they declare that Masters and Treasurers of Hospitals in Edinburgh, and the Treasurer to the College are not obliged to take it: This is upon a Representation from the Magistrates, that they cannot find other Persons fit to fill their Place, in case they be turned out for refusing it. November 8. all Masters and Doctors of Universities in this Kingdom, are ordered to take the Test before their respective Bishops. November 10. the Magistrates of Jedburgh are ordered to take it before the Earl of Roxburgh. The Town of Selkirk generally refusing the Test, are cited in before the Council by the Committee for publick Affairs, who have this Matter committed to them. The Magistrates of Peebles, Renfrew, Dumbar, Dysart, and Kirkaldy, being Recusants, are cited as above, and some of them remitted to Privy Counsellors.

That Day the Council take a general Course, and write to the following Persons, Lord Montgomery as to the Sherifdom of Renfrew and Regality of Paisly, Laird of Orbistoun for the Regality of Kilpatrick, Laird of Aruncaple for the Regality of Lennox, Earl of Dundonald for Kilmarnock, Earl of Cassils for the Bailyary of Carrick, Earl of Annandale for the Stewartry of Annandale, the Laird of Lochneal for the Shire of Wigtoun, Earl of Niddale for the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Earl of Tweeddale for the Shire of Peebles and Regality of Dumfermling, Laird of Monrief for the Bailyary of St. Andrews, Sir William Bruce for the Shire of Kinross, Lord Torphichen for the Regality of Torphichen, Earl of Linlithgow for the Regality of Ogleface; and require them to send an Account under their Hand against the first of December, whether they have taken the Test, that they may, in case of Refusal, appoint Persons for these Jurisdictions.

November 24. the Earl of Murray is desired to administrate the Test to the Duke of Lawderdale as Governor of Edinburgh Castle and the Bass, Captain of the Company in the Castle of Edinburgh, Sheriff of Haddingtoun, and Commissioner of the Treasury. Sir George Kinnaird is writ to, immediately to come to Edinburgh and qualify as a Privy Counsellor. In short, there is very little in the Registers for some Months but Appointments about administrating the Test; and where Persons in Civil Offices refuse, others are named in their stead.

Some of the conform Episcopal Ministers scruple the Test.

But the Opposition by some of the conformable Clergy made yet a far greater Noise upon this Head. The Act anent the Test, with the Oath annexed, was printed separately, and was sufficiently spread, and not a few of the Clergy began to raise Dust upon this Oath: Whereupon the Bishop of Edinburgh, Mr. Paterson, one of the most violent Defenders of it, having himself sworn and subscribed it, among the first of the Counsellors, was at the Pains to draw up a long Explanation of it, especially to satisfy the Scruples and Objections made against it by his Brethren in the Clergy. His Paper I have not seen, but I find, upon the 21 of October, he presented it to the Council, the Duke of York being present.

A long Paper of the Bishop of Edinburgh, in defence of the Test, read in part by the Council, and is allowed to be printed.

It was ordered to be read, but being long, it proved tedious, and a little irksom; and, after reading a Part of it, the Duke being weary of such Papers, interrupted the Reading with the English Sarcasm, The first Chapter of John with a Stone will chase away a Dog: So there was no more read; but the Bishop was allowed to print his Paper if he pleased. Whether he did print it, I do not know; but I shall insert here a shorter Paper, handed about at this Time, as the Bishop's, which, it may be hoped, contains the Substance of the long Paper, and is as follows.

The Bishop of Edinburgh's Sense of the Test.

The Bishop's
Short Paper.

'1mo. THAT the Confession of Faith, ratified in the Parliament 1567. was formed in the Infancy of our Reformation, and deserves its own Praise; yet, by the Test, we do not swear to every Proposition or Clause therein contained, but only the true Protestant Religion, founded upon the Word of God, contained in that Confession, as it is opposed to Popery and Fanaticism.'

'2do.

‘ 2do. That by this Test, or any Clause therein contained, no Invasion or Encroachment is intended or made upon the intrinsic spiritual Power of the Church, as it was exercised by the Apostles, and the most pure primitive Church, for the Three first Centuries after Christ, which is still reserved to the Church.’

1681.

‘ 3tio. That this Test is without Prejudice to the Episcopal Government of this national Church, which is declared by the 1 Act, 2 Seff. 1 Parl. Charles II. to be most agreeable to the Word of God, and most suitable to Monarchy, and which his Majesty (as upon all Occasions he hath declared) will inviolably and unalterably preserve and defend.’

This Sense we shall afterwards find insert in the Council's Act, November 3. which gave it all the Authority the Authors were capable to give; but it still remained a Doubt with many, whether their Declaration could alter the plain Sense and Meaning of Words and Phrases already fully obvious and plain: And so neither the Bishop's large nor short Paper gave Satisfaction to many of the Scruplers. Some indeed were brought over by forcible Measures, and Persecution: I give but one Instance from the Records.

Mr. Andrew Lumsden Minister at Duddingston, November 22. is libelled before the Council, in that not only he hath refused the Test, but, within this Month or thereby, hath publicly and privately inveighed against it, as unlawful, and contradictory: That in October last or November, in a Sermon he premeditatedly applied Jer. xiv. 19. and Matth. vii. 9. to the Test, adding, ‘Yet we have got a Stone that is like to break all our Teeth, and instead of a Fish we have gotten a Serpent to poison us: And say it were a Fish, it hath such Bones, and so many, as are like to worry us all, which neither we nor our Posterity will get digested.’ Whereby he has depraved and misconstrued his Majesty's Laws, to the great Contempt of his Authority.

Mr. Lumsden, Minister at Duddingston, proceeded for speaking against the Test, and to read to take it.

He compeared, and the Libel being referred to his Oath, he deponed, That by these Words he did not mean the Test; and the Council absolved him from the Libel: But it seems he did not escape so well at his Ordinary the Bishop of Edinburgh his Hand; for, upon his not taking the Test, his Church is declared vacant. All I know of the Matter is, That, December 6. ‘Mr. Lumsden, Minister at Duddingston, petitions the Council for Liberty to take the Test from his Ordinary the Bishop of Edinburgh, when, upon his Delay, his Church had been declared vacant.’ And the Council are pleased to allow it him, and re-pone him to his Church.

Altho' these wholsom Severities wanted not their Effect, yet it must be owned, to the Credit of a great many others among the Episcopal Clergy, that upon this Occasion they made the best Appearance that ever they did. The Ministers of Aberdeen, as if the Test had really been as choking to them, as the Covenant had been to some of the Doctors who were before them in that Place, and, I am perswaded, upon far better Grounds, drew up some Arguments, by way of Queries, against the Test, which deserve a Room here.

The Ministers of Aberdeen their Objections against the Test.

‘ WHEN an Oath is of the strictest Obligation, and must be taken in Judgment, Truth, and Righteousness; and when Conscience is the most tender Thing in the World, and not to be contrained, I cannot but enquire, for my Satisfaction, anent the present Test, and desire to be resolved,’

Ministers of Aberdeen their Queries upon the Test.

‘ 1mo. How can I swear, that Confession of Faith, recorded Parl. 1. James VI. to be the true Standard of the Protestant Religion, and the Rule of my Faith, and sincerely swear it to be founded upon the Word of God, and bring up my Children in that Faith? which in some Passages is obscure and doubtful; as Chap. 3. where the Confession says, That the Image of God is utterly defaced in Man; and Chap. 19. The Marks of the true Church, the Power of expounding the controverted Sense of Scripture, and the supreme Judge of Controversies in the Church, are dubious and disputable Things: In which some Things are contrary to the Doctrine of this present Church, and all other Reformed Churches; as Chap. 23. where the Confession denies the Ministers of the Popish Church to be true Ministers of Christ; for the Reformed Churches never re-ordained Popish Priests, when they turned Protestants. Chap. 14. the Confession denies that to be a true Church, where the Sacraments are not rightly administrate, where they are not administrate in the Elements appointed in the Word. Whereas the Christian Churches do not unchurch one another, because of the different Circumstances in Administration, because some use pure Wine, and some Wine mixed with Water; nor did the Church baptize such as were not baptized with Water: And in which some Things are contrary to the Test it self, and the found Principles of Protestants; as Chap. 25. the Confession enjoins Obedience, and paying Tribute to Rulers, only conditionally, while they travel vigilantly in the Execution of their Office; and Chap. 15. the

1681.

the Confession forbids the resisting of the Magistrate, only conditionally, while they pass not over the Bounds of their Office; and Chap. 25. He that resists the Power, doing that which pertains to its Office, resists the Ordinance of God; and Chap. of good Works, says, 'Tis a good Work to bear down Tyranny. I think such a Confession would learn us Religion, as well as the solemn League and Covenant.'

2do. How can I swear that I believe the King's Majesty to be the only supreme Governor over all Persons and in all Causes? when the forementioned Confession obliges me to believe Jesus Christ to be the only Head of the Church: And when I believe all Ecclesiastick Authority to be derived from Christ, and not from secular Princes; when I believe no Judge on Earth is supreme Judge in Error or Heresy, albeit they can punish the same; and when I believe the King's Power to be cumulative, and not destructive of the intrinsic Power of the Church. I ask therefore, whether the King's Supremacy, as 'tis extended by the Act, November 16. 1669. doth deprive the Kirk of her intrinsic Power? when the Disposal of the external Government, in all Ecclesiastical Matters, Persons or Meetings, is put in his Majesty's Hand, without any Restriction, Distinction, or Limitation, by former Laws or Customs, all Acts, Laws, Customs, or Constitutions, contrary to the said Supremacy, being expressly rescinded and annulled, which is to be well marked.'

3tio. If I believe the present established Church to be juris divini & apostolici, how can I swear that it is in the King's Power to alter or change the same? And if it be, in its Nature, indifferent, how can I swear to that which the King can alter at his Pleasure?

4to. How can I swear to defend the King's Privileges and Prerogatives, until I know them, and consider them, if they be consistent with the Principles of Religion? And if Acts of Council, founded upon the Supremacy, be a just Commentary on the King's Supremacy, perhaps it will not be found to be consistent with the Principles of the Christian Church.'

5to. How can I swear, that I judge it unlawful, upon any Pretext whatsoever, to enter into Leagues and Covenants, without the King's express Licence and Consent, when it was lawful enough, in the first Days of Christianity, to enter into a Covenant with Christ, and a League with one another, tho' not to cast off the Yoke of secular Princes, yet to cast off the Yoke of Paganism, Judaism, and Idolatry, even contrary to the express Commands of the earthly Sovereigns. And put the Case of avowed and professed Popery in the Kingdom, (which God forbid) would it be unlawful for Subjects, without Tumult or Force of Arms, to shake off the Romish Yoke, and to enter into a Covenant for that effect? Will not that Clause in the Test condemn our Reformation in Scotland?

6to. Can I swear sincerely, that I judge it unlawful for Subjects to convene in any Assemblies, to treat, consult, or determine, in any Matter of State, Civil or Ecclesiastick, when I have no Security from the Test, or the Laws of the Land, but that Clause may comprehend the Assembly and Meetings for the Worship of God, and the ordinary Exercise of Discipline? especially when all Ecclesiastical Meetings are put in the King's Hand, by the Act, November 16. 1664. and all Acts, Clauses, and Constitutions, Civil and Ecclesiastick, to the contrary, rescinded and annulled. Can I condemn it as unlawful to meet or assemble for Preaching the Gospel, administering the holy Sacraments, or exercising Church-discipline, unless I condemn the Apostles and primitive Christians, who did meet for such Purposes? Again, if the Licence which we enjoy for meeting for God's Worship, and the Exercise of Discipline, according to our reformed Customs, should be, in process of Time, recalled, (which God forbid) would it be unlawful for us to assemble with one another, for the said Purposes?

7mo. Can I swear, there lieth no Obligation upon me, any manner of Way, to endeavour any Change or Alteration in the Government of the Church or State, as it is now established by Law? For if there be any Corruption in the Government, or Administration thereof, may I not, if I have Opportunity, advertise his Majesty, his Commissioner, his Council, or some of his Court? May I not desire quietly what I would have reformed? And tho' there were no Corruptions at present, may not some creep in in Process of Time, and may not I in the least endeavour to reform these, tho' I may not in the least endeavour any Alteration or Change in the Government? It must be a perfect Constitution that needs no Alteration in any of the least Circumstances; and yet a Change in some Circumstances, is a Change: Yea, the Confession prescribed by the Test, Chap. 21. teacheth me, That no Policy or Order of Ceremonies in the Church, can be appointed for all Ages, Places, and Times, because what is now convenient may prove burdensome at another Time, or in other Circumstances. May I not pray to God Almighty to put it into the Hearts of Men to reform what is amiss? and yet to pray, is some Sort of Endeavour. What if the King's Power in national Synods, by Act of Parliament, be destructive of the true Church-power? What if there be something in the Act of Restitution of Bishops, to be amended?

8vo. I ask, if there be no more in this Test, than in the Acts of Parliament whereupon it is founded, albeit there be a vast Difference 'twixt an Act of Parliament and an Oath; and and tho' it be said there is no more in the Test nor in former Oaths? But in Act 8. Parl. King James VI. and in Act 4. Parl. 1. Charles II. against convocating and assembling the King's Lieges, without his Licence, there is an express Clause put, (but except in ordinary Judgments) now this considerable Clause is kept out of the Test, which should be well marked; for I swear by it, that I judge it unlawful to convene or assemble upon any Pretext whatsoever, even tho' it were to worship God with others. Again, in the Declaration, Act 5. Seff. 2. Parl. 1. Charles II. these Words are mentioned, There lieth no Obligation upon me, from the Covenants, to endeavour Reformation; but the Test adds any manner of Way, May I not be under some Obligation, tho' from neither of the Covenants? And tho' I be under no Obligation for the present, may I not be under some afterwards? Again, if there be no more in this Test, than in former Oaths, how comes it to pass, that the Test is imposed upon them who took the Declaration and Oath of Supremacy formerly, and upon Ministers who take the Oath of Supremacy, and Canonical Obedience, at their Entry? To all this may be added the Evil of imposing and multiplying of Oaths.

1681.

Not a few of the Remarks made upon the Confession, are upon such Parts of it as speak forth a true Sense of Liberty in our first Reformers, and discover how far they were from that absolute Slavery the passive Obedience Gentlemen since set up for: Neither can I say, the Ministers who made these Objections, were all, in their Sentiments, opposite to the Confession, since these might be very good Arguments against the Test, tho' not what they were dissatisfied with in the Confession, since they made a fair Contradiction in the Oath.

Another Paper was handed about, which I shall likewise insert here, as containing, besides some of the former Arguments, some more Reasonings at this Time, which may give some Light to the History of the Test. By whom it was writ, I know not; it may be, it might be penn'd by some of the Episcopal Ministers about Edinburgh, who stuck at this Oath; but of this I am not certain. Its Title is,

Grounds whereupon some conform Ministers scruple to take the Test.

Grounds whereupon some conform Ministers scruple to take the Test.

1mo. Passing by the Danger of Oaths, when prest so generally, Men of the least Tender-ness ordinarily swallow them most easily, and make small Conscience of observing them, while these that fear Oaths are hardly induced to take them, and by their strict Observance, make themselves a Prey: We think it strange, that this Oath should be enjoined upon us who cannot rationally be expected to incline either to Fanaticism or Popery; since, by our Subscriptions to the Oaths of Supremacy and Canonical Obedience, we have sufficiently purged our selves of the First; and, by confuting Popish Errors daily in our Pulpits, do shew an utter Abhorrence of the other. And further, since mainly our owning of Episcopal Government hath begot, and still increases upon the Minds of our People, such an Aversion from, and Dislike of us, we would have expected, that our Spiritual Fathers would not have exposed us to so great Loathing and Contempt, by such Engagements; which, although it should be granted to be causeless and unjust, yet we should think our selves bound to eschew it, that our Ministry may be the more taking with them, since the Thing prest upon us is not so absolutely necessary, nor yet so evident in what is asserted for Truth, as may encourage us to underly these Prejudices: And finally, since it is known, that the abjuring of the Covenant did, in our Neighbour-kirk, hinder both Ministers to conform, and People to joyn in Ordinances dispensed by Conformists, and our Parliaments have hitherto shewn such wise Moderation, as to free us from the Declaration, we cannot but look upon it as sad and fatal, that our Church should now be dashed upon that Rock, which may occasion its splitting.

2do. As we wish, that for the suppressing the Growth of Popery, a more particular Test had been made use of, even for the Discovery of such as are in no publick Trust; so we cannot but regret, that this Test hath been so framed, as to divide the sound sober Protestants among themselves, whereby the common Adversaries are gratified, and the true Faith endangered; we being perswaded that there are many Presbyterians in this Kingdom, Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, who cannot in Conscience take the Test, and yet do daily joyn, and are ready to joyn with us in Ordinances: We think it had been fitter to have condescended something to such, for gaining of them, than to put such a Bond upon them, which may alienate them, and weaken us. That Confession of Faith, recorded in the first Parliament, James VI. hath some Things in it, which may scar People from swearing to it without Limitation; as Section 15. it asserts these to be evil Works, which are done not only contra but præter verbum Dei. Seff. 25. That these who resist the supreme Power, doing that which appertains to its Charge, and while he vigilantly travels in his Affairs, resists the Ordinance of God. Which Clause may bear an exclusive Sense, especially 1681. ' specially when in the 15 Section, it is reckoned among good Works, to suppress Tyranny. Sect. 11. Jesus Christ is asserted to be the only Head and Lawgiver of his Church, and 'tis Blasphemy for Angels or Men, to intrude themselves into that State and Office. Sect. 19. One of the Sacraments, Popish Baptism, is denied as to its Validity, and Popish Priests denied to be true Ministers. Those Expressions, if narrowly scanned, will be found of dangerous Consequence, and contradictory to some other Propositions in the Test it self. We fear our People may look upon us rather like Countenancers and Encouragers of Popery, than Suppressers thereof, seeing, by the Act, we are obliged to delate yearly, in October, such as withdraw from our Ministry, that they may be punished by the Civil Magistrate, conform to Law; yet, in the same, the King's lawful Brother and Sons, in perpetuum are excepted from taking the Test, and consequently to be left at Liberty to be Protestant or Papist. And what bad Influence the Example may have on inferior People, may be easily apprehended; and our taking the Test, will be accounted an approving of that Exemption, which will be the more stumbling; that all Acts formerly made against Papists were made without any such Exemption; and all these are declared to be disloyal, who embrace not the Reformed Religion, particularly set down in the 47 Act, Parl. 3. James VI.'

' 3tio. We are to swear, that no Obligation lies on us by the late Covenants, or any other Way, to endeavour a Change of Government, &c. where, we suppose, that we are not only to maintain Monarchy, but also, as the Laws tie us to this present Government, and to the present Line, in the nearest of Kin to this present King, altho' they should be Popish, to which we judge the Coronation Oath, Parl. Act 8. James VI. is contradictory, which yet is a standing unrepealed Law, since this current Parliament hath ratified and confirmed all Acts made in favours of the Protestant Religion, whereof this is one; so that we swear a Contradiction.'

' 4to. As for the Church-government as it is now established by Law, there have not been, nor are yet wanting to assert a jus divinum in Episcopacy; and such could not in Conscience take this Oath, seeing the King, by virtue of his Prerogative and Supremacy, is empowered by Law, to dispose of the external Government and Policy of the Church, as he pleaseth.'

' 5to. And as for such who look upon Episcopal Government as indifferent in it self, notwithstanding the Submission they give to it, or have engaged for, they can as little swear on these Terms; for why should they swear never to alter that which they judge in it self alterable? And tho' we have engaged to obey Bishops, we ever wished, that they might be settled among us in a Way more suitable to the primitive Times, viz. That their Number might be increased, that they might be allenarly called by the Church, and liable to her Censure, for their Doctrine, Life, and Diligence; that they might not be such pragmatical Meddlers in Civil Affairs, and that Synods and Presbyteries might have more Power than they have by the Act of Restitution. Now this Oath ties us up from seeking a Remedy in these Things.'

' 6to. The Power given by the present Laws to the King, if he should be Popish, will be very prejudicial to the Protestant Interest, since, by Act 1. Parl. 2. Charles II. he may not only dispose of the external Government of the Church, but emit such Acts and Orders to Ecclesiastical Persons and Meetings, as he thinks meet. In which Case 'tis easy to divine, what Advantage the Enemies of our Religion will have for the overturning all.'

Hoc Itachus velit, & magno, &c.

Bishop and Synod of Aberdeen, their Sense of the Test.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 65.
Synod of Perth
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 66.

Besides those Papers, which want not abundance of Strength and Argument in them, which were much handed about, the Bishop and Synod of Aberdeen agreed upon a Sense, wherein they were willing to take the Test, which I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 65. Likewise, the Synod and Clergy of Perth fixed upon the Sense wherein they were willing to take the Test, which the Reader will find App. N<sup>o</sup>. 66. No Reflections need to be made upon them.

Council's Act explanatory of the Test. Nov. 3.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 67.

King's Approbation.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 68.

Remarks on it.

This Stir among the Clergy, which was new and unprecedented in any thing imposed by the State, made the Managers about Edinburgh begin to reflect a little, and to huddle up a Declaration, and Act explanatory anent the Test, which is just made up of that short Paper before insert, said to be drawn by Bishop Paterson. I have insert it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 67. The Act is past by the Council, November 3. and, upon the 15 of the same Month, the King, by his Letter, approves of it upon the Desire of the Council. His Letter follows App. N<sup>o</sup>. 68.

How far this Explication is consistent with the plain and natural Meaning of the Words, will appear by comparing it with the Oath. To an unbiassed Person the Contrariety of the Two will very soon appear. The first Article of the Explication perfectly overturns the Confession of Faith, and opens a Door to Papists to take the Test, since it declares, That every Clause therein is not sworn to; and, no doubt, there are some Propositions in the Confession, even a Papist will make make no Scruple about. The second and third Articles take off the Difficulties of the high-flying Prelatists, but no Care is taken of the moderate Sort: But after all, this Explication not being from the Imposers of the Oath, it may be well questioned if it was of any Weight at all; and even the Imposers can never explain away the plain Sense and Meaning of the Words.

1681.

Nevertheless the Bulk of the Episcopal Clergy went into this Oath very glibly, which evidently discovers what a Set of Men they were, and none of the Bishops I hear of stood out. Indeed several of the best of the inferior Clergy would never take it, after all the Explications could be given. The reverend Mr. George Meldrum, then Minister at Aberdeen, abundantly known by his universal Usefulness in this Church, since the Revolution; the learned and pious Mr. Lawrence Charters, and many others were of this Sort, and left their Charges.

The Bulk of the Episcopal Clergy went into it, yet some refuse it.

And some who swallowed this Oath, ere they got off the Stage, had bitter and sorrowful Reflections upon this Step. I could name several; but the Instance of the very learned and pious Mr. John Menzies, Professor of Divinity at Aberdeen, so well known by his excellent Writings against the Papists and Quakers, made the greatest Noise. He died some time after he had taken the Test, of a lingering Distemper, and I am told that great Man never had any Health almost after his complying with this Oath; yea, his Reflections upon the Evil of it, led him up to see the Sinfulness of his complying with Prelacy, and joining so long in the Course of this Church's Defection from our Reformation; and I suppose it will be acceptable to the Reader to have this great Man's Sense of the Methods he had been engaged in, which I insert here from a Paper before me, writ by the reverend Minister to whom he communicated his Distress of Mind, and whom he ordered to propale and make it known.

Some who took the Test had bitter reflections afterwards. The Case of Mr. John Menzies, Professor of Divinity at Aberdeen.

The Person Mr. Menzies used Freedom with, was the reverend Mr. Mitchel Minister at Lumphnan, his Brother in Law, who was forced to leave his Charge for not taking the Test. To him Mr. Menzies fully opened his Mind, when upon his Death-bed, several Weeks before his Death. The first Time he disclosed his Trouble, he told him, 'That he was much troubled in Spirit, and under great Perplexities for a Course of Defection he had been guilty of throughout his Life; particularly, that before the Restoration he had declined to Independency, and espoused some of their Principles, which he declared was heavy to him now, since that was his first Breach of Covenant. But alas! added he, I stopped not there, so dangerous is it to loose the least Buckle in the Matters of God, for after that I had received a Paper from Bishop Mitchel, Bishop of Aberdeen, and went into all the Measures he proposed towards a Compliance with Episcopacy, I subscribed the Paper, as the Bishop pressed me, relative to my canonical Obedience; and to crown all my Defection, I took the Test, which is so contrary to the Covenant, that notwithstanding all the fair Glosses put upon it, I find it now contradictory thereunto. Here he cried out, that it was a hainous Aggravation of his Sin, that a Man of his Knowledge and Experience should have meddled with contradictory Oaths: Adding, that he found himself obliged to use this Freedom with Mr. Mitchel, for the Exoneration of his own Conscience, and being desirous to leave a Testimony in his Hands, against his former Defections, which he desired him to manage with Secrecy and Prudence, after he was dead.'

Some Days after, he again called Mr. Mitchel, and 'grievously complained of the Hainousness of his Sins, and the constant Uneasiness of his Spirit; adding, that he could get no Rest until he took off the former Restriction he had laid upon Mr. Mitchel, willing him now to make no Secret of what he had told him, but to shew it to as many as desired to know it, or might be edified by it.' However, Mr. Mitchel published it not as yet, but to some few Friends, in order to their deeper Sympathy with his Brother under Distress.

Mr. Menzies in his Conversation came frequently over that Scripture, Strait is the Gate, and narrow is the Way, &c. which, he said, he found now to be true in his sad Experience. He declined to communicate his Soul Trouble to his Colleagues in Aberdeen, because, except Mr. Meldrum, who by this Time had left his Charge, they had all taken the Test: But he added, they are not so guilty as I, not having taken the Covenant before. Neither would he impart his Mind to his Sons in Law, or any of his Friends, lest they should mistake him, and apprehend he was crazed in his Judgment.

He further told Mr. Mitchel, 'That now he had no Satisfaction in any of his Labours, except those of his younger Years, wherein he walked more closely with God, according to his Covenant Engagements; adding, that then it was he was most sensible of the Divine Presence with him, but that he trusted to none of his Labours, but to the Merits of Jesus Christ allenarly.' Sometimes in his greatest Agonies he expressed his Hope of Salvation through Christ, subjoining, that he hoped to be saved, but so as by Fire, which he himself explained to be with the greatest Difficulty.

He frequently exhorted those about him by Times, to lay Salvation to Heart before they come to a Sick-bed, and gave many other seasonable and savoury Advices to such as were with him.

And a little before his Death, he acknowledged to Mr. Mitchel, that 'he had too long stuck upon the Point of Self-reputation, in not disclosing his Mind sooner, and in not giving 1681.

‘ giving him a fuller Freedom to divulge it, than he had done at first : But now he was persuaded firmly, that if he did not deny himself in that and all other Points, he could be none of Christ’s Disciples. And so again gave him full Freedom, as above, to impart his sorrowful Recantation of the Test, and his other Defections to whom he pleased.’

Mr. Mitchel desired to know, ‘ in what Terms he should impart his Sorrow for his taking the Test. He answered, he would have him to signify, That he repented of his taking the Test, and was grieved therefore, and if it were to do, he would not do it. And this, added he, I declare, with a Protestation of my Loyalty, and that I do not this from any seditious Principle, but only to exoner my Conscience.’

This is the Sum of Mr. Menzies’s Conferences with Mr. Mitchel, taken off the original Copy writ by Mr. Mitchel that Day when Mr. Menzies was interr’d, which discovers how heavy this Self-contradicting Test was to this excellent Person, when under the Views of Eternity. I am well informed also, that Mr. Menzies, when near his End, declared, he longed for one other Opportunity to be in the Pulpit of Aberdeen, where, he said, he would openly own the Evil of those Courses he had been engaged in, and publicly bear his Testimony against them ; and indeed Prelacy, and his Conformity to it, was exceeding burdensom to his Spirit. However, his Passage into Eternity was safe, and he wanted not Peace in believing, tho’ Joy was not his Attainment, until he entred to the Joy of his Lord, which, no doubt, made his Entrance into it doubly sweet to him. This great and good Man died at Aberdeen, Friday, February 1. 1684. and Mr. Mitchel, February 4. wrote the Narrative from whence I have given what is above.

I would reckon it a Piece of Justice to those good Men of the conformist Clergy, who suffered upon the account of the Test, to insert their Names here, but I can only give those of them whom I meet with in the Registers, and shall here insert what I meet with as to them this Year. Some few others will come in upon the following Year ; but I know there were many Recusants that are not noticed in the Registers.

November 10. Mr. Robert Elliot Minister at Alasuden, and Minister at Lumsay, are cited in before the Council for dissuading the Magistrates of Peebles from taking the Test. I find no more about them. They and many others, I suppose, were before the Committee of publick Affairs, of whose Proceedings there is no Account, but in their Reports to the Council, which are now but rare. That same Day a Letter is writ to the Earl of Tweeddale, to present a Minister to the Kirk of Newbottle, in room of Mr. Archibald Douglas, who refuses the Test, and another to Sir John Clark of Penny-cook, to present one to the Kirk of Penny-cook, in room of Mr. William Hamilton, who refuseth to qualify.

December 1. the Council, considering that there are several aged and infirm Ministers, who live at a great Distance, or cannot at this Season come in to their respective Bishops, to take the Test, do authorize the Bishops to appoint fit Persons to administrate it to them ; and appoint the Moderators of the several Presbyteries to administrate the Test to the Schoolmasters and Chaplains, in their respective Presbyterial Meetings. The Dean of the Isles is to assist the Bishop in administrating the Test to that Diocese.

At length the Council come to free themselves of the Trouble of recusant Ministers, and roll the Matter over upon Patrons, by their Act December 22. ‘ His Royal Highness, and the Lords of Privy Council, considering that several Ministers do undutifully refuse to swear and subscribe the Test, do hereby require the respective Patrons of the Churches possessed by such Ministers, as do or shall refuse to obey the Law in taking the Test, to present fit and qualified Persons to the said Churches, immediately after the First of January next to come, as they would testify their good Affection to his Majesty’s Government, certifying all such Patrons as shall delay to present as aforesaid, that they shall be esteemed Persons disaffected to his Majesty’s Service and Government, and shall be proceeded against as accords, and appoint the Lords, Archbishops and Bishops, to intimate these Presents to the respective Patrons in their Dioceses, with the first Opportunity.’

Thus I have given all the Accounts come to my Hand, of the Episcopal Clergy’s Carriage as to the Test, and it was the Occasion of a vast deal of Trouble to many others. That good and great Man and Lawyer, President Stair, was obliged, for his refusing it, to retire, and take on a voluntary Banishment until the Revolution. We shall hear more of him in the following Part of this History ; and the Earl of Argyle’s Persecution upon this Score deserves a Room by it self, and I come now to it.

Council’s Procedure with conformist Ministers who refuse the Test.

Mr. Robert Elliot.

Mr. Archibald Douglas.
Mr. William Hamilton.

Bishops may delegate their Power in administering the Test to Ministers.

Act Dec. 22. about Ministers who refuse the Test.

S E C T. VII.

Of the Trial of the noble Earl of Argyle, for his Explication of the Test; his Sentence and Escape in December this Year.

THe Case and Trial of the Earl of Argyle is already in Print, but it is in the Hands of so few, and the Matter of it relateth so much to the Subject of this History, and the Sentence now pronounced being afterwards made the sole Foundation of the Death and Martyrdom of this noble Lord, an Abstract and short State of this Affair, with the most important of the Papers relative thereunto, will not, I hope, be unacceptable to the Reader.

The Earl of Argyle's Case already printed.

This Process was perfectly singular and unprecedented; it surprized all sober Persons exceedingly, and was evidently pushed on against Law and Equity by the Rancour and Pique of the Duke of York and his Underlings, upon the account of the Earl's vigorous and yet cautious Appearances for the Security of the Protestant Religion in the Event of the Accession of a Papist to the Throne. I may term it an Epitome of the Righteousness of this Period, and a Specimen of what Protestants are to expect from a Popish Government. And if such terrible Stretches were made against a Person of such Quality and Sense, we may easily believe very little Care was taken how the Managers dealt with Persons of meaner Stations.

General Remarks on his Prosecution.

Before I enter upon the particular Account of the Earl's Trial and Trouble at this Time, it may not be unfit to observe, that he was not the only Person who had Difficulties upon the Test, as we have seen in the preceeding Section. It is plain then, the Managers had other Views in this severe Prosecution raised against him, tho' his natural and modest Declaration as to the Test, was the great Thing insisted upon. It was now the common Method to palliate Oppression in Civil Matters, by open trampling upon Conscience. And this excellent Person was designed to be a Sacrifice to the Duke and the Papists, and behoved to be taken out of the Way as one of the eminent Bulwarks of the Reformation and the Nation's Liberty.

Indeed there is no Instance in this Period does in a more sensible Manner expose the Tyranny of the Administration, and the Spite of the Managers against the Protestant Religion, than their Usage of this noble Peer. He was the Representative of one of the most ancient and most potent Families in Scotland. In his Youth he had done remarkable Services to the Crown, against the Usurper and his Adherents; he had faithfully served the King for Twenty Years in many of the most remarkable Stations in the Kingdom; and now, by reason of the Offices he held, was comprehended in the Test Act, but could not swear never to resist or attempt any Alteration of the present despotick Government, and cruel Hierarchy. He was most willing to swear Allegiance to the King; and yet for the reasonable and conscientious Explication we shall just now hear of, he was found guilty of high Treason, his Blood tainted, his Family declared ignoble, his Estate forfeited, his Honour extinguished, and himself was condemned to die as a Traitor, and did die upon this very Score some Years after this.

To come more directly to the Story of the Earl's Trial, the Reader would know, that upon the first gallant Stand, before noticed, which this noble Person made in Parliament, to the Plot he saw forming under the Duke of York, against all that could be valuable to Scotsmen, the Commissioner gave him an Innuendo, by way of Threatning, to look to himself: And there was Ground for this; Evil was designed against the Earl, and a Storm forming upon the account of his Honesty in the Parliament.

After his Appearance in Parliament, the Earl is threatened by the Duke of York.

Ere long two Bills were given in to the Lords of the Articles, which concerned him pretty nearly. The Earl of Errol gave in a Claim for a vast Sum, for which, as he said, he had been Cautioner in favours of the Marquis of Argyle. And the Advocate, by Orders from above, or Direction from the Duke, gave in the Draught of an Act for taking from the Earl of Argyle his heritable Rights of Sheriff, and Justice General of Argyle Shire. Both the Bills were invidious, to every Body's Observation. The Marquis of Huntley, equally bound in the foresaid Sum with the Marquis of Argyle, had got from the Estate of Argyle when forfeited, Four thousand Pounds Sterling a Year, tho' he was owing to the Family of Argyle Five and thirty thousand Pounds Sterling: And the foresaid heritable Rights had been confirmed by Authority of Parliament 1663 and 1672.

Bills proposed in the Articles against the Earl.

When those Proposals could not bear Reasoning, or almost a Hearing by reasonable Persons, and no Hopes almost could be entertained they would carry in Parliament, the Lords of the Articles most iniquously went into the Proposal of a Committee to be named by Parliament, with a Parliamentary Power to determine what Controversies might arise anent any of the Earl's Rights. This was not only unprecedented, but illegal, and when it was tabled

And a Committee with a Parliamentary Power to enquire into the Earl's Rights rejected.

1681. led before the Parliament, the Iniquity and Hardship not only to the Earl, but all the Lieges, was so fully opened, that the Duke of York put a stop to the Proposal, and pretended it was his Unacquaintedness with Scotts Forms and Laws, which made him at all give into it.

Another Design against the Earl, he goes to the Council.

After the Parliament was up, a Design was formed to procure a Commission from the King to enquire into the Earl's Rights, with Power to deprive him of his heritable Offices, and to burden his Estate with more than it was really worth. The Earl took pains to inform the Duke how unreasonable this was, when the Law was open in its ordinary Course, and how injurious to him and others a Commission of this Nature would be; but all he could bring the Duke to, was a Liberty to go to the Country, and bring in his Rights and other Papers relative to the Things in Debate.

License granted him to wait on the King, and afterwards refused.

Mean while the Earl wrote to Secretary Murray for Liberty to come up to Court, and wait upon the King, which was at first most readily granted him; but afterwards, when he came to Edinburgh, he was told, he could not see the King until he took the Test, and within a little, that, even that would not procure him Access.

†

As soon as he came to Glasgow, in his Way to Edinburgh, he found himself and President Stair turned out of the Session. And when he came in to Edinburgh, he was cited by one of the Clerks of Council, to be present next Council-day, and to take the Test. Upon this the Earl went to the Duke of York, and complained of this Treatment, when the Time, appointed by Law for taking the Test, was not elapsed, affirming, that he had never given any Ground to think he was a suspect Person. All the Answer he got was, He behaved to take it next Council-day, November 3.

His Conversation with the Duke of York on the Test.

Mean while the Earl frequently dealt with the Duke upon this Affair, and plainly told him, he was the less fond of that Oath, since he found some who refused it were in Favour, and others who had taken it were turned out, as the Register. He took the Liberty to ask, why his swearing that Oath was so much pressed by his Highness, since there were some Things in it the Duke did not very much approve of. The Duke answered in a Passion, that the Test was brought in at first without the Confession, but the late President (Stair) caused add the Confession, which makes it such as no honest Man will take it. The Earl only replied modestly, that he had the more Reason to advise upon it.

Bishop of Edinburgh's Warning to the Earl.

The Bishop of Edinburgh used some Pains to bring the Earl to swallow the Test, and, to clear his Way, gave him his Paper upon that Subject, which had no great Weight with him. They parted after the Bishop had desired the Earl to take a Care of an old and noble Family, and told him, that his opposing the Clause, excepting the King's Sons and Brothers, had fired the Kiln.

Further Conversation with the Duke, Nov. 2.

After many Applications to the Duke, the Earl waited upon him the 2 of November, and in a very modest Manner declined the present taking of the Test, and begged that he might accept of his Refusal of it in private. This was peremptorily denied: Whereupon the Earl offered further to consider this Matter, and either give Satisfaction before the Time prescribed by Law were elapsed, or go off the Country without any Noise. But the Duke still insisted he should appear to Morrow; and when the Earl asked, what Advantage his appearing to Morrow, and refusing it, could have to the Government or himself; the Duke said, he needed not come himself, but imploy a Friend, and named one to him. This the Earl condescended to, as the best he could do in his present Circumstances; and to Morrow drew a Letter to the Person named, warranting him to declare his Mind in Council, and that he resolved to continue a true Protestant and loyal Subject, which were the true Ends of the Test thus violently pressed, and concluded with his delaying at this Time to swear. But upon an Intimation that this would displease the Duke, tho' it had been his own Proposal, his Friend would not undertake that Work.

Nov. 3. upon Notice the Council would allow an Explication, the Earl formed one which the Duke approved.

Whereupon the Earl drew another and very short Letter, to any who should preside in Council that Day. When about to have sent this, Notice was brought to him, that an Explication would be allowed by the Council, and the shorter the better; and, as we have heard above, this very Day the Council passed their Act explaining the Test, which the King afterward approved of; this certainly to any unbiassed Person will make the Managers After-treatment of the Earl every way unaccountable. Upon this the Earl presently drew up an Explication, and being told it was too long, he instantly shortened it; and so cautious was he that he would offer none of them till he had the Duke's Approbation, lest he might take it ill, and be piqued; neither did he stir out of his Chamber, till he was acquainted with the Duke's Satisfaction.

The Earl comes to the Council, and after he had declared before them

Accordingly a Coach was sent for the Earl, and he was told that the Bishop of Edinburgh had signified to his Royal Highness, that the Earl was willing to take the Test with an Explication, and the Bishop sent him (the Earl) Notice, that it would be very kindly accepted: Then, and not till then, did this noble Person come in to the Council, and pronounced the following Explication to the Duke and Council with an audible Voice.

His Explication.

'I have considered the Test, and am desirous to give Obedience as far as I can. I am confident the Parliament never intended to impose contradictory Oaths, therefore I think no Man can explain it but for himself. Accordingly, I take it in as far as it is consistent with ' itself,

itself, and the Protestant Religion; and I do declare I mean not to bind up my self in my Station, and in a lawful way to wish and endeavour any Alteration, I think, to the Advancement of the Church or State, not repugnant to the Protestant Religion and my Loyalty; and this I understand as a Part of my Oath.'

1681.

After the Earl had thus expressed himself, the Test was administered to him, and he swore it, and the Duke, with a pleasant Countenance and Smile, commanded him to take his Place at the Council-table, and spoke, as appeared, very pleasantly to him all the Time the Council sat, tho' some others, who wished him from that Board, appeared dissatisfied, and even in some Confusion. That which fell to be before the Council, when the Earl took his Place, was the Act explanatory of the Test above insert, for the Benefit of the Clergy. In this the Earl did not vote, because the Reasonings anent it were over before he came in.

The Test is administered to him.

Since so much afterwards depends upon what followed in Council, this Day and the following, I shall here insert what stands in the Register as to the Earl. 'November 3. the Earl of Argyle being called in, and having taken and signed the Test appointed by the late Act of Parliament, upon his Knees repeating the Words, did take his Place as a Privy Counsellor.'

To Morrow the Earl visited the Duke, under the Expectations of Yesterday's Countenance, but others by this Time had been with his Highness, and now he saw nothing but Frowns. The Duke told the Earl, he was not pleased with his Explication; the other replied, he did not give it till the Bishop of Edinburgh gave him Notice his Highness was satisfied with it. The Duke owned this was Matter of Fact, but he thought it had been a short one like Queensberry's, and added, Well, it passed with you, but it shall pass so with no other. This the Earl understood as an Acceptance, and a passing any Offence (had there been Ground for it) given, and rested satisfied the Duke intended to push the Matter no further.

Another Conference 'twixt the Earl and Duke, Nov. 4.

It is not to be doubted the Umbrage and Prejudice against the Earl did continue, but it would seem the Duke did not see Footing at present to attack him, until private Suggestions were made, and some undertook to extract and forge such Crimes from this Practice of the Earl, as afterwards were advanced. Advocates were consulted whether the Earl's Words could be stretched to a treasonable Import, and after the ablest Lawyers had given their Opinion, that what the Earl had said would infer no such Thing, at length the King's Advocate ventured upon an Indictment, when he had got the Judges secured as to the Sentence and Event. Upon this the Duke's natural Enmity against so gallant a Pillar of the Reformation, began to discover it self, and as is ordinary enough with Papists, what was not at first almost projected, came boldly to be ventured upon. However, before the Design was fully ripened, the Duke more than once, in Conversation with the Earl, told him his Scruples were unnecessary, and that the Test did not bind him up as he imagined, and it was never intended that he or any other should be bound up in those Things named in the Explication.

A Design formed to prosecute the Earl for Treason upon his Explication.

That same Day, November 4. the Earl is called before the Council, as a Commissioner of the Treasury, again to take the Test. I shall not here digress upon the Unaccountableness of this Practice, which, in my Opinion, goes too near a Profanation of the holy and terrible Name of God, that the same publick Oath should be repeted for every particular Office a Person enjoys, whereby the same Man may be called Ten Times in one Day, to attest the omniscient God upon the same Matter. Indeed I cannot help thinking, that an Extract and Attestation under the Hand of the Clerk of the Court, where once the Oath is taken, might be sufficient in most Cases of this Nature, without unnecessary, I had almost said vain, Repetition of the same Oath, I know not how frequently.

November 4. he is called to take the Test, as a Commissioner of the Treasury. Observation on the needless Repetition of the same publick Oath.

The Earl offered to take the Test as before; whereupon a Member of the Council, who did not use to harangue much there, being prepared as a Tool, asked, What was said, and desired what had been said before might be repeted; the Earl observing a Design upon him, declined repeting, until being vehemently urged by the Duke, he answered, He had a Note in his Pocket of what he had delivered by Word of Mouth, having committed it to Writ to prevent Mistakes: This was violently called for by the Duke and some others, and was produced and read.

The Earl offers to take it as yesterday, and produceth his Explication in Writ.

Yea, so confident was the Earl of his Integrity and Innocence in the Matter, that at the first Motion he was ready to have signed it. But the Juncto of the new President, who, within a little, is made Chancellor, and the new Register, with some others, not being ripe to insist upon the signing of it, the Earl was removed till the Council should consider whether it were needful to sign it; and being called in, he was ordered to do it. The Earl upon a little Reflection replied, He meant well in it, and saw no Reason to question but he might safely sign it; and if it did as much satisfy the Council, as it appeared to do the other Day when he emitted it, he would sign it, but if they found the least Matter of Displeasure in the Words, he would forbear.

He is called to sign it, which at first he was willing to do, but observing a Design against him, he wavered, it.

Upon which he was again removed, and after they had shaped their Project, he was called in, and told he had not given the Satisfaction required by Act of Parliament, in taking the Test, and so could not sit in Council; and an Innuendo was added, as if the Matter drew a little deeper. The Earl replied, He conceived the Parliament had only excluded Refusers from Places of Trust; and if he were judged a Refuser, tho' the Time named by Law for taking the Test was not yet run out, he submitted, but could not think there was any other Danger in the Matter, and he had served the King faithfully within Doors, and would do it without Doors, and, making his Obeisance, removed. I shall make no Reflections upon the Earl's Caution and Modesty in all this, nor compare it with the illegal and unaccountable Procedure of the Managers towards him, but narrate plain Matter of Fact.

1681.

Council's Minute about this, Nov. 4.

Accordingly, I insert the Minute of this Day's Procedure, from the Registers. ' November 4. a meridie, resolved that the Commissioners of the Treasury in Town take the Test before the Council, as being Officers of the Crown; but that no Person hereafter shall be allowed to take the Test with any Explication, but in the plain Sense and Meaning expressed by the Act of Parliament. Post meridiem, his Royal Highness acquainted them that he had called them together, to the effect the Commissioners of the Treasury might take the Test, according to the Act of Parliament. The Earl of Argyle being present, declared he was content to take the Test in the Sense and Meaning he had taken it the Day before. And it being answered by the President of the Council, that he having delivered himself in so low a Voice, some did not hear what he said, and taken it so suddenly, without giving Time to those of the Council who heard him, to make any Answer, he was now desired to explain himself, what the Sense and Meaning it was in which he did pretend to take the said Test. The said Earl did thereupon take out of his Pocket a Paper, and declared he had taken the Test Yesterday, in the Sense and Meaning therein expressed, and was content again to take it in that Sense and Meaning, and not otherwise. Which Paper being publicly read, and the said Earl owning the same judicially, and declaring he was instantly willing to sign it, and called for Pen and Ink to do it. The Earl being removed, and the Council having again read the said Paper, thought fit, before they should enter into any further Consideration thereof, to appoint the Earl to sign it, and did send out Two of their Number, with one of the Clerks, to see him do it; who reported that they desired him, but he had deferred a further Time to deliberate before he should do it. The said Earl being called in, was again desired to sign that Paper, seeing he had publicly owned the same, and had, before he was removed, offered to do the same, the said Earl again owned the said Paper, and desired Time to advise with his Lawyers, before he should sign it. His Royal Highness and Privy Council having fully considered that Affair, in regard the Earl of Argyle owned the foresaid Paper, as the Sense and Meaning in which he did take the Test the foregoing Day, and repeted the same as a Part of his Oath, and nevertheless refused to sign the same, did find that the said Earl had not satisfied the Law in taking the Test in the Terms, Sense and Meaning appointed by Act of Parliament, but expressly contradictory thereunto, that he ought not to sit and act as a Privy Counsellor or Commissioner of the Treasury, and thereupon was ordered to remove. And which Paper, being judicially owned by the Earl, as said is, was signed by the Lord Marquis of Montrose Preses, by Order of Council, and ordained to ly in the Clerks of Council their Hand, till further Order.'

Conversation 'twixt the Duke and Earl.

Next Morning, November 5. the Earl waited upon the Duke, and expressed his Surprise, that these Things which he had spoken to himself in private more than once, without any Offence he could notice, and to the Council more publicly, with some appearing Satisfaction, should now be made a Crime; and asked again, What Evil his Highness perceived in his Words. The Duke said only, that the Words were unnecessary, and his Scruples groundless, and he was not tied up by the Oath, as he imagined; and, after a Pause, added, As I have already told you, you have cheated your self, you have taken the Test. The Earl answered, Then he hoped his Highness was satisfied. Upon this the Duke began to complain, that the Earl had not voted the Council's Explication. The Reply was as above, That he had not been present at the Reasonings which were upon that Subject. No doubt the Earl had considered that Matter of Explications fully; but the Reason, which plainly offers for his not voting for the Council's Explication, which he was not bound to give the Duke, was, that the Parliament certainly intended, that the Confession should be sworn to, without Reserves and Explications; and he himself had sworn to it, as all others who took the Test before the Council's Explication. The Duke insisted, that the Earl could not but fully understand the Affair, and added with a Frown, That he, with some others, had designed to bring Trouble upon a Handful of poor Catholicks, that would live peaceably however they were used, but it should light upon others. This is a good Key to explain the Council's explanatory Act, which was certainly designed not only to gratify the scrupling Clergy, but to be a Back-door for Papists to come in at. They parted after the Duke had laid his Commands upon the Earl, not to go out of Town until he saw him again, which he promised to do.

Remarks on the Council's Explanation of the Test.

The Earl's Explanation of his Explication.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 69.

The Earl finding his short Explication, tho' once allowed, was like to be Matter of Trouble to him, did draw up an Explanation of it, which he communicated to some privately, as his Sense more enlarged, and designed to have offered it afterwards in publick, if there was any Occasion for it. This I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 69.

But

But the Design against the Earl was now formed and ripened. That same Night, November 5. one of the Clerks of the Council, as he said, by Order of Council, intimated to him, That it was their Pleasure he should not go out of Town till next Council-day, which was November 8. When the Council, without calling this noble Peer before them, sent, by one of their Clerks, an Order to him to enter himself Prisoner within the Castle of Edinburgh, before next Day at Twelve of the Clock. Joynt with this, they sent a Warrant to the Deputy-governor of the Castle, to keep him Prisoner, wherein the Word sure Firmance, tho' once writ fairly, was struck out, and resolve to intent a criminal Process.

The Minute in the Council-books stands thus. November 8. 'His Royal Highness and the Council, having considered a Paper exhibited by the Earl of Argyle last Council-day, as his Sense of the Test, and repeated by him as a Part of his Oath, and finding the same to be a Paper of dangerous Consequence, reflecting on his Majesty's Authority and Government, and particularly on the late Act of Parliament enjoining the Test, do therefore ordain the Earl of Argyle, once before to Morrow at Ten of the Clock, to enter his Prison in Prison in the Castle of Edinburgh, there to remain till his Majesty and Council give further Order. And further, his Majesty's Advocate is ordered to intent and pursue a Process of Treason, or such other Crimes against the Earl of Argyle, as shall be found convenient, upon that Paper he presented before the Council about the Test, and the said Process to be pursued before the Justices with all convenient Speed.'

At the same Time, they write a Letter to the King upon this Affair, which I insert here.

1681.

The Earl is ordered to the Castle, Nov. 8. and a criminal Process is intended against him.

Council's Minute upon this.

May it please your Majesty,

Nov. 8. 1681.

THE last Parliament having made so many and so advantageous Acts for securing the Protestant Religion, the imperial Crown of this Kingdom, and your Majesty's sacred Person, (whom God Almighty long preserve) and having for the last, and as the best for securing all these, appointed a Test to be taken by all who should be entrusted with the Government, which bears expressly, that the same should be taken in the plain and genuine Sense and Meaning of the Words, we were very careful not to suffer any to take the said Oath or Test, with their own Glosses or Explanations; but the Earl of Argyle having, after some Delays, come to Council to take the said Oath, as a Privy Counsellor, spoke some Things which were not then heard nor adverted to, his Lordship, at his next offering to take it in Council, as one of the Commissioners of your Majesty's Treasury, was commanded to take it simply; he refused to do so, but gave in a Paper shewing the only Sense in which he would take it; which Paper we all considered as that which had in it gross and scandalous Reflections upon that excellent Act of Parliament, making it to contain Things contradictory and inconsistent, and thereby depraving your Majesty's Laws, misrepresenting your Parliament, and teaching your Subjects to evacuate and disappoint all Laws and Securities that can be enacted for the Preservation of the Government, suitable to which his Lordship declares in that Paper, that he means not to bind up himself from making any Alterations he shall think fit, for the Advantage of Church or State: And which Paper, he desires, may be look'd upon as a Part of his Oath, as if he were the Legislator, and able to add a Part to the Act of Parliament. Upon serious Perusal of which Paper, we find ourselves obliged to send the said Earl to the Castle of Edinburgh, and to transmit the Paper to your sacred Majesty, being expressly obliged to both these by your Majesty's express Laws; and we have commanded your Majesty's Advocate to raise a Pursuit against the said Earl, for being Author of, and having given in the said Paper; and, for the further Prosecution of all relating to this Affair, we expect your Majesty's Commands, which shall be most humbly and faithfully obeyed by,

Their Letter to the King upon this Affair.

Your Majesty's most humble, most faithful, and most obedient Subjects and Servants,

Glencairn,	Jo. Edinburgen.
Wintoun,	Ross,
Linlithgow,	Geo. Gordon,
Perth,	Ch. Maitland,
Roxburgh,	Geo. Mackenzie,
Ancrum,	M. Raithland,
Airly,	Jam. Fowles,
Livingstone,	Drummond.

Reflections upon it are needless, after the above Deduction of Matter of Fact. It may be of more Use to observe, that they order the Prosecution to be begun against the Earl, as we have Remarks upon it.

1681.

have seen, before they have any Allowance from the King; so that this illegal and unaccountable Process came entirely from the Duke of York and the Managers at Edinburgh; and that very same Day, by a Letter to the Earl of Murray, they ask the King's Approbation to the Explication of the Test, of which above, according to which the Clergy were allowed, before their signing the Test, to insert these Words, We underwritten do take this Oath according to the Explication made by the Council, and declare we are no further bound by this Oath; and yet the Earl is proceeded for declaring the Sense in which he takes it.

King approves of their Procedure, Nov. 15.

November 22. the King's Letter, dated November 15. is read, approving their Procedure against the Earl, only he requireth them to acquaint him before they come to a Sentence.

The Earle-
nters the Castle, and writes to the Duke.

The Council's Order was obeyed by the Earl, who entred the Castle within the Time prefixed, and thence he wrote a Letter to the Duke, 'signifying his Obedience, tho' such a Punishment appeared to him the Effect of high Displeasure, which he hoped he had not deserved, adding, that he resolved to continue in all Duty, and begging to know what Satisfaction was expected.' The Earl was informed that his Letter was kindly received, yet he had no Answer.

His first Summons.

Yea, before the Council could have a Return to what they wrote to the King, the Earl had Summons sent him, to answer a Charge of Leasing-making, and depraving the King's Laws; yet, under all this, such was the Baseness of his Persecutors, that they pretended, yea, one of the Club came and told him, Nothing was intended but to take his heritable Offices from him; and when the Duke of York was told by some, that this was hard Measure, upon such a Foot to threaten such a Person with a Forfeiture of Life and Fortune, he answered, Life and Fortune, God forbid. Whether he was yet in the Secret, or that he disssembled, as Papists may do by their Religion, I shall not determine.

His Second,
with the Indictment.

When the King's Letter came to Hand, the Managers, as I have observed, made larger Steps. Formerly they had given Commission to the Advocate to form an Indictment of Slander, Leasing-making, and Depravation of the Laws; now they appoint him to give him another, upon Treason and Perjury, not exclusive of the former, to which he was to answer before the Criminal Court, December 12. A Copy of which the Reader will desire to see, and I have insert it App. N°. 70.

App. No. 70.

The Council
refuse to allow Sir George Lockhart to plead for the Earl.

Upon the 22 of November, a Petition was presented by the Earl, that he might have Sir George Lockhart, who was his ordinary Doer and Advocate, allowed and warranted by the Council to plead for him before the Justiciary; which reasonable Petition they saw good to refuse. Upon the 24. the Earl caused present another Petition, insisting, that the Council might oblige Sir George to plead for him, according as is provided in like Cases, by Act 38. Parl. 11. James VI. This a second Time they refused, tho' it was every way according to standing Law. Whereupon the Earl, by an Instrument, required Sir George to plead for him, not that the Gentleman was unwilling, but to secure him the more in Law.

Lawiers Opinion is to the Earl's Case.

The Earl's Case was so very plain, that Eight or Nine Advocates, Sir George Lockhart, Sir John Dalrymple, Mr. ( afterwards Sir ) James Stuart, and several others, the most eminent Gentlemen of the long Rob, in their Time, gave their Opinion in his favours, which, because 'tis but short, I insert here.

Opinion of divers Lawyers concerning the Case of the Earl of Argyle, December 5. 1681.

WE have considered the criminal Letters, raised at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, with the Acts of Parliament contained and narrated in the said criminal Letters, and have compared the same with a Paper or Explication, which is libelled to have been given in by the Earl to the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, and owned by him, as the Sense and Explication in which he did take the Oath imposed by the late Act of Parliament; which Paper is of this Tenor, I have considered the Test, and am very desirous, &c. (as above inserted) And having likewise considered, that the Earl, after he had taken the Oath, with the Explication and Sense then put upon it, it was acquiesced to by the Lords of Privy Council, and he allowed to take his Place, and to sit and vote; and that before the Earl's taking the Oath, there were several Papers spread abroad, containing Objections, and alledging Inconsistencies and Contradictions in the Oath; and some thereof were presented by Synods and Presbyteries of the orthodox Clergy, to some of the Bishops of the Church: It is our humble Opinion, that seeing the Earl's Design and Meaning in offering the said Explication, was allenarly for the clearing of his own Conscience, and upon no factious or seditious Design, and that the Matter and Import of the said Paper is no Contradiction of the Laws and Acts of Parliament, it doth not at all import any of the Crimes libelled against him, viz. Treason, Leasing-making, depraving his his Majesty's Laws, or the Crime of Perjury; but that the Glosses and Inferences put by the Libel upon the said Paper, are altogether strained and unwarrantable, and inconsistent with the Earl's true Design, and the Sincerity of his Meaning and Intention, in making the said Explication.'

1681.

This was taken so hainously ill by the Council, that the Earl of Athole, President, and Lord Collington, with some others, were appointed to examine how far that Paper might import Scandal against the Government, and deserve a Prosecution of the Signers.

December 12. being the Day of the Earl's Compearance before the Justiciary, the Lords being assembled, the Earl was brought from the Castle, under a Guard, and set in the Panel. The Court was made up of the Earl of Queensberry, Justice-general, Lords Nairn, Collington, Forret, Newtown, and Kirkhouse. The Advocate produced his Commission to prosecute the Earl, which he said he would manage with the greatest Moderation of Spirit imaginable. How he kept his Word all present were Witnesses. Then the Indictment was read: Whereupon the Earl made a very affecting Speech in his own Vindication, wherein he gives a short Narrative of his Life and Loyalty. This I have added App. 70. No. 2.

Dec. 12. the Earl appears before the Justiciary.

The Earl's Speech upon reading his Indictment. App. 70. No. 2.

Having ended, he gave in to the Court several Letters for his own Vindication, and to manifest his untainted Loyalty. One of them was from the King, all writ by his own Hand, wherein his Majesty declared his full Confidence in the said Earl, and his Obligations to him; and another from the Earl of Middletoun, containing the deep Sense the King resolved it still to maintain of his singular Services, when at his lowest. The Earl craved that they might be read, and recorded in Process; the first was granted, but not the other. All these made little or no Impression now; and, as hath been formerly noticed, Gratitude was none of the Virtues could prevail, when a Spirit of Popery and Persecution was raging.

Readings of the Lawyers.

To the Earl-Sir George Lockhart succeeded, and pleaded the Irrelevancy of the Libel, with a great deal of Force and Plainness, during almost Three Hours Time, alledging, that it was plainly impossible, that a Man's exonerating his own Conscience could make Leafing-making, or that his declared private Meaning could give Laws to others, or come under the Statute against private Mens making Laws to beget a Misunderstanding betwixt King and Subjects. These Reasonings are so pointed, that tho' the Paper be a little long, it certainly deserves a Room App. 70. No. 3.

Sir Geo. Lockhart's Defences

App. 70. No. 3.

The King's Advocate answered Sir George's Defences at a good Length, which, that the Reader may have both Sides of the Debate, I have insert App. 70. No. 4. But all intelligent Persons did reckon, that Sir George's Defences remained very much in their Strength, after all the Advocate was able to advance.

King's Advocate his Answer. App. 70. No. 4.

Sir John Dalrymple in the next room, supported the Innocence of the Earl, in an excellent Discourse of the Nature and Obligation of Oaths, which I have likewise subjoyned App. No. 70. No. 5. Unto this the Advocate gave Duplies, added App. 70. No. 6. And the Advocate gave Triplies, which likewise follow App. 70. No. 7. Those Papers, tho' not short, I durst not venture to abridge, but have put them together in the Appendix, as containing very distinct and full Reasonings upon Oaths, and the Explication of them.

Sir John Dalrymple's Answer. App. 70. No. 5.
The Advocate's Duplies. App. 70. No. 6.
His Triplies. App. 70. No. 7.

The Reasonings continued till Nine at Night, and when all were dismissed, the Lords continued together upon their Interlocutor, till Two in the Morning, and adjourned till the 13 in the Afternoon; when the Interlocutor was pronounced, that they found the Earl's Defences relevant as to Perjury, but all his Defences as to Treason and Leafing-making were repelled. It is said, Two of the Lords dissented from the Relevancy: Whether they entered a formal Dissent, I cannot say, but they were outvoted, by calling in one who had not been present at the Debate. The Truth of the Matter of Fact is known to many yet alive, and is as follows.

Lords Interlocutor, Nov. 13.

There were but Four of the Lords with the Justice-general at the Debates. The Lord Nairn was now an old infirm Man, so far decayed, that he was not able to take his Turn in the Outer-house of the Lords of Session, as Ordinary, for a considerable Time. The Lord Collington, an ingenious Gentleman, and an old Cavalier, with the Lord Kirkhouse, said to be a very learned and upright Judge, were peremptorily against the Relevancy of the Libel, and its inferring Treason or Leafing-making; and these Two stuck by their Point. The Earl of Queensberry was not very willing to give his casting Vote in this important Matter, nor to have the Odium of it lying upon him. The other Two, the Lord Newtown, afterwards made President of the Session, for his being through-paced in this and other Matters, with the Lord Forret, well enough known, were not able to answer the Reasons of the other Two Lords, against the Relevancy of the Libel. Therefore, about the Middle of the Night, the old infirm Gentleman the Lord Nairn, behoved to be wakned out of his Sleep, raised out of Bed, and brought into the Court, that Numbers might supply the Want of Law and Reason. It was in vain to urge, that he had not been present at much of the Debate, his Vote was now necessary; and to supply that, when he came in the Clerk was ordered to read over the Reasonings, and when this was a doing, his Lordship fell asleep among their Hands. However, he knew how to vote, and his Vote with the other Two carried the Relevancy, as above.

One of the Lords is wakned out of his Bed to vote.

1681.

The Assize.

When the Interlocutor of the Lords was read in Court, the Advocate proceeded to the Proof; and the Earl's giving in the abovementioned Explanation of the Test, was soon proven by the Depositions of the Two Clerks of Council, and the Laird of Lundie. Then the Assize were sworn, Fifteen out of the Forty five named, and they were,

Marquis of Montrose,	Earl of Perth,	Lord Burntisland,
Earl of Linlithgow,	Earl of Dalhousie,	Laird of Gifford,
Earl of Roxburgh,	Earl of Middleton,	Laird of Ballymain,
Earl of Dumfriess,	Lord Sinclair,	Park Gordon,
Earl of Airly,	Lord Lindores,	Laird of Claverhouse.

The Earl was enquired if he would prove his Defence against Perjury, or if he had any Objections to make against the Assize. He declined making any Defences anent his Perjury, about which no Body believed he was in any Hazard; and told them, since what had been so well spoken against the Relevancy, had been over-ruled by their Interlocutor, he would give them no further Trouble of Objections and Defences. He did not want Matter of valid Exception against both Witnesses and Assize, but said nothing upon those Heads, because he saw now, that say what he pleased, he would be found guilty of Treason. The Advocate forgot not to threaten the Assize with a Process of Error. Sir George Lockhart and the rest of the Earl's Lawyers would not speak one Word, finding, after the Interlocutor, all further Pains would be in vain.

Their Verdict.

The Assize inclosed, and in a little Time brought in their Verdict by the Marquis of Montrose, all in one Voice, 'And find, that the Earl of Argyle hath proven against him the Crimes of Treason, Leasing-making, and Leasing-telling, and find the said Earl by Plurality of Votes not guilty of Perjury.'

Council's Letter to the King after the Verdict.

As soon as the Verdict was opened, the Council met and sent a Letter to the King, acquainting him with what was done, and plainly enough desiring Leave to give Orders to the Justiciary to pronounce Sentence upon the Verdict brought in; and they give it as their Opinion, his Majesty after Sentence should siff Execution during Pleasure, which they knew well enough would be as they directed.

A Design probably against the Earl's Life.

By all the Steps taken, it appeared pretty evident a Design was formed against the Life of this good Man, and all his Friends were of Opinion, he ought to provide, if possible, for his own Safety. A Gentleman was dispatched to Court by the Earl, who, as soon as the King's Mind in answer to the Council's Letter could be known, came off, and outrode the Bearer of the Letter to the Council, near Twenty four Hours. By him the Earl found that the Sentence of Death was to be palled, and a Siff given to the Execution, till the King's Pleasure was known, and in short, that Evil was determined, and the King would be prevailed with to yield to the Execution.

Even before this Gentleman came, the Earl had good Ground to expect the worst. He had Notice sent him, that on the 21. he was to be carried down from the Castle of Edinburgh, to the Tolbooth, the common Prison, whence condemned Persons used to be carried to their Execution. The Duke had refused to hear any Applications made in his Favour. Some Soldiers were ordered in towards Edinburgh, and the Guards upon him were doubled, and strict Orders given to keep him close in his Room: And the Reader will find some other Reasons of the Earl's withdrawing himself, in his printed Case.

Dec. 20. he gets out of the Castle in Disguise.

Yet, notwithstanding of all this, the Earl was very unwilling to make any Essay to escape, till upon Tuesday the 20 of December, about Six at Night, he got his Letters from London, and by Seven he resolved to attempt to get out, and against Eight he came out in Disguise, and very narrowly escaped; for one of the Guard suspected him, and took him by the Arm rudely enough, but through the good Hand of Providence he got off undiscovered.

As soon as the Earl was out, and got off his borrowed Garb, Horses were ready for him by the Care of his Friends. Some Days before, Torwoodlee and Mr. John Scot, Minister of Hawick, with some others, had laid the Plan of his Conveyance to London, at a Meeting, in the Event of his Escape. Torwoodlee was gone from Edinburgh to his own House; and that Night the Earl got out, Mr. Scot advised him to ride, without stopping, to Torwoodlee, and gave him a verbal Token to fend by his Servant to that Gentleman, who was to meet him at a Country Ale-house near by, and convoy him to Mr. William Veitch's House in Northumberland.

The reverend and worthy Person last spoke of, was pleased to communicate with me a very particular and distinct Account of their Journey to London, and the many remarkable Providences and strange Deliverances the Earl, now going under the Name of Mr. Hope, and he met with, which are too long to be set down here.

In short, Mr. Hope and Torwoodlee came safe to Mr. Veitch's House, who was at that Time in the Town of Berwick visiting Friends, who had been very kind to him in his Sufferings formerly narrated. Just when he was about to leave that Place, an Express came giving Account of the Earl's Escape, and Mr. Veitch, known by some in that Place, was suspected, and the Gates shut, and a Search made for him and other Strangers; but he escaped by a singular Train of Providences.

1681.

Come with Torwoodlee to Mr. Veitch's House in Northumberland.

When he got off thence, he came to Mr. Luke Ogle's House, who had been Minister of Berwick, and, after his being turned out, lived in the Country, some Miles from it, and was by him engaged to stay till Sabbath was over, and give a Sermon to a Gentleman and his Lady near by, their good Friends. Little did Mr. Veitch know what Company was at his House at Stantoun-hall, more than Thirty Miles Distance. This Resolution he entered into on the Thursday Evening; but when in Bed, he was alarmed with a Dream that his House in Northumberland was all on Fire, which awaked him with no small Concern, about Two in the Morning. However, he resolved not to notice it, till falling asleep he had the Dream repeated, with very alarming Circumstances, towards the Morning, which made him break his Yesternight's Resolution, and go homewards on the Friday.

It was Saturday before he reached his House, near to which he met Torwoodlee's Servant looking after him, by whom he was, to his Surprise, acquainted with the Company that were at his House. The Beginning of the next Week, after having bought fresh Horses, Mr. Hope and he with two Servants went off the best way they could for London. At the Post-house at Rodderam, where, against their Mind, they were forced to stay, Letters came to the Post-master there, their Landlord, from the Post-master at Doncaster, signifying the Earl of Argyle's Escape, and desiring him to examine all that came his Road, and acquainting him with the premium of Five hundred Pounds to the Discoverers. The Landlord at Supper got the Letter, and handed it to Mr. Veitch, who, when he read it, put the best face might be on the Matter, and turning to Mr. Hope said smiling, Here are admirable good News for you and me, Argyle has escaped, and Five hundred Pounds is set on him; and if he be come to England, certainly he will be in these By-roads, off the Post-road, and when we are riding Southwards we may chance to hit him, and Five hundred Pounds will do us Service, only I fear he ride much in these Moon-light Mornings: I would find in my Heart to give my Landlord a Bottle of Sack to allow his Hostler to go with us early to Morrow to the great Inn, four Miles hence in the Way to Clowen, for he may readily lodge in such a single Inn, and we and the Servants will search the House, and if we find him, the Landlord shall share of the Reward. To which the Landlord replied, The Hostler is at your Honour's Service. The Sack came, and the good Success was drunk, and to Morrow the Hostler guided them to the House, which they searched briskly, but found no Lodgers, and sent Home the Hostler to his Master with the Account, and rewarded him well.

The Earl and Mr. Veitch got undiscovered towards London.

The Alarm turning pretty hot where ever they came, they sent off the two Servants to Nottingham to stay at an Inn till further Orders, and Mr. Hope rode upon the Horse who carried the Cloke-bag, and he and Mr. Veitch came to Mr. Willis's House at Clapwell-hole upon Saturday's Night, and stayed till Munday. There Mr. Veitch met with an old Acquaintance of his, Captain Lockey, who generously undertook to conduct them safe to London, and the Servants being ordered off from Nottingham to an Inn at London to wait Orders, they three came to Battersey some Miles above London, where the Captain carried them to Mr. Smith's a Sugar-baker's House, whose Lady was a pious, wise and generous Gentlewoman, and they were very rich, and this was the first Acquaintance the Earl had of Madam Smith, of whom we shall afterwards hear.

Where Madam Smith provides for them.

She was soon acquainted who Mr. Hope was, he passed a Day or two for a Scots Gentleman, till she sent down to the City to Major Holmes a Friend of hers, to provide two Rooms for two of her Friends, where they might be quiet and retired for some Time; and when he sent word the Rooms were ready, Mr. Hope and Mr. Veitch came down at Night to Major Holmes's Lodgings, whom none of them knew. When ever the Major came to the Room, he looking on Mr. Hope, stood a little till he recovered himself, and then getting him into his Arms, said, My dear Lord Argyle, you are most welcome to me. My Lord was a little surprized, and said, Pray, Sir, where did you know me? My Lord, said the Major, I knew you since that Day I took you Prisoner in the Highlands, when you were Lord Lorn, and brought you Prisoner to Edinburgh Castle: But now we are upon one Side, and I will venture all that's dear to me to serve you.

So they were conducted to their Rooms, and lurked a good Time in the City, and after the Hurry of his Escape was over, Madam Smith brought them to a Country Seat of hers at Brentford, seven Miles off the City; where I shall leave them for some Time. We shall meet with them there, and in Holland, in the following Years.

After this Digression, which coming from the first Hand, will not, I hope, be unacceptable, I return to Edinburgh, where the Earl's Escape was as vexing to the Managers, as it was satisfying to others. Next Day, the 21. the Council emit a Proclamation anent the Earl of Argyle, which I have inserted App. N°. 71. Therein they make the King declare the Earl's Proclamation Decemr 21. 1706. On the Earl's Flight.

App N°. 71. Remarks upon it.

Explanation

H h h

1681.

Explanation a treasonable Paper, and him guilty of High Treason, before the Justiciary had pronounced Sentence. Indeed this sovereign and grave Court, at this Time, were but Tools to the Council. They add, that he was kept at large without any such Restraints as are usual to Persons found guilty. 'Tis certain he was not yet judicially found guilty, and we have heard what Restraints and double Guards he was put under, and how every Thing was hastening to his Execution. Then all are ordered to assist in apprehending him, and every one prohibited to assist him or his Accomplices, or furnish him with any Thing comfortable, under the Pains of Treason.

Council's Letter to the King
December 21.

That same Day the Council send up this Proclamation by a flying Packet, with a Letter to the King, signifying ' the Earl's Escape, as they say, from Distrust of his Majesty's Clemency, tho' to it he owes both his Life and Fortune, and desire to know what Measures they shall take after so high and atrocious a Violation of the Laws. , At the same Time his Royal Highness acquaints the Council, that after the Earl of Argyle was found guilty by the Verdict of the Assize, the Laird of Lundin desired to know if the Earl should be kept more strictly than formerly ; he gave his Opinion it was not fit to alter the Manner of his Imprisonment. And the Council discharge the said Lundin of all Hazard and Danger from his Escape. The Earl's of Strathmore, Perth, Dumfries, Queensberry, Register, and Sir George Kinnaird, are appointed to examine all Persons suspect guilty of the Earl's Escape.

King's Letter allowing Sentence to be pronounced against the Earl.

Upon the 22 of December, the Council had his Majesty's Return to their Letter, allowing Sentence to be pronounced against the Earl, but sisting all Execution until his Pleasure was farther made known to them. When the Bird was flown, there was some little Hesitation among them, whether the Justice-court should be ordered to pronounce Sentence of Forfeiture of Life and Fortune, in absence. I have formerly noticed the Arguments made use of as to this Subject, upon other Occasions. In short, it was urged by the more moderate Party in Council, that no more could now be done, but the declaring him Fugitive and Outlaw, at least by our old Scots Law ; and that even in Cases of Treason, it is only the Parliament can forfeit in absence. The first Instance to the contrary was that of Pentland, but in that Case an open Rising, as they termed it, a Rebellion was notour, and little Prospect of any Parliament's sitting ; but this was far from being the Earl's Case. It was further urged, that it is a known Maxim in Law, That in criminal Actions there neither is, nor can be any other Conclusion of the Cause, than the Party's Presence and Silence. And strictly speaking, the Earl had never been heard in his own Case himself, for in his Speech he had not indeed entred on the Merits of the Cause.

Sentence pronounced, Dec. 23.

However, the pronouncing Sentence carried in Council, and to Morrow the Council's Act was presented to the Justiciary. The Countess of Argyle hearing what was done, gave in a Petition to the Justiciary, humbly craving, that no Sentence might pass in her Lord's Absence, with many Reasons in Law backing her Desire ; but the Council's Advice was now a Law to the criminal Court, and, without ever being at the Trouble to give any Answer to the Lady, they went on to pronounce the following Sentence.

‘ FOrasmuch as it is found by an Assize, that Archibald Earl of Argyle is guilty and culpable of the Crimes of Treason, Leasing-making, and Leasing-telling, for which he was detained within the Castle of Edinburgh, out of which he has now, since the Verdict, made his Escape : Therefore, the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, decern and adjudge the said Archibald Earl of Argyle, to be executed to the Death, demeaned as a Traitor, and to underly the Pains of Treason, and other Punishment appointed by the Laws of this Kingdom, when he shall be apprehended, at such a Time and Place, and in such Manner, as his Majesty, in his Royal Pleasure, shall think fit to declare and appoint ; and his Name, Memory, and Honours to be extinct, and his Arms to be riven forth and deleted out of the Book of Arms, so that his Posterity may never have Place, nor be able hereafter to bruike or enjoy any Honours, Offices, Titles, or Dignities, within this Realm, in Time coming ; and to have forfeited, amitted, and tint all and sundry his Lands, Tenements, Annualrents, Offices, Titles, Dignities, Tacks, Steadings, Rooms, Possessions, Goods and Gear whatlomever pertaining to him, to our Sovereign Lord, to remain perpetually with his Highness in Property ; which was pronounced for Doom.

Remarks on it.

Observe upon the account of this Sentence, in the Memoirs of Archibald

The Injustice of this Sentence needs not be exposed, after what hath been already said. The Parliament, after the Revolution, was so sensible of the Hardships of it, that they not only repealed his Attainder, as the Author of the Memoirs of North Britain, who has some Blunders in this Trial, remarks ; but allowed his Son to bring an Action of Damage, for a considerable Sum, against the Heirs of those Judges who condemned his Father. I wish the Writer of that Book had not charged all the Forty five Assizers, as the base Betrayers of the Earl of Argyle, and as his Judges, and Signers of his Verdict. He omits indeed the Chancellor of the Assize, and the Laird of Ormistoun, and inserts Mr. Francis Montgomery, and the Laird of Lamington. These Three, and probably others named, were very far from approving what was done as to this noble Lord, and we shall meet with Two of them suffering fering themselves just now, and imprisoned and harassed before Courts. The Author's Mistake has been the confounding of the Forty five, out of which the Fifteen Assizers are chosen, with the Assizers. The slump Number he has taken, as the List is ill printed, from the Scots Mist, without knowing that these worthy Persons could not hinder themselves from being named on the Forty five, but, by undergoing a Fine, could stop their being of the Fifteen, and so ought not to be charged with this Sentence.

As the Sentence was unjust, so, for any thing I can see, the Execution of it, as far as lay in the Justiciary's Power, was Treason, and flatly against the King's Letter. His Majesty had peremptorily sited all Execution, and yet the Sentence was not only pronounced for Doom, in the Court, and at the Cross, but the Earl's Coat of Arms was torn and renversed. This was undoubtedly a Part of the Execution of the Sentence, and to me appears to be Treason, greater sure than what the Earl had been guilty of, being forbid by the King, and illegal, yea, contrary to Law, if we allow the Advocate's own Judgment, Criminals, Page 61. That this ought to be done in the Crime of Perduellion only, and not in other Treasons.

In the Earl's printed Case, the Reader will find what that excellent Person designed to have delivered in his own Justification before the Justiciary; Providence gave Things another Turn, and there was no Occasion to deliver it, and 'tis too large to be insert here, or even in the Appendix. I only remark, that the Earl did not expect so grave and cautious a Court, as the Justiciary ought to be, would have paid an Interlocutor upon the 12 of December, after Twelve Hours Reasonings before them, and after Ten of the Clock at Night, and in such a Manner as hath been observed, and that without ever calling him, or requiring and considering the Sense he gave of his own Words.

He complains likewise, that several of his Assizers were evidently Parties; and, if I mistake not, the Plurality of them were so, having, as Privy Counsellors, ordered his Imprisonment, signed the Letter to the King, which was a Petition for his Trial, yea, ordered his Process, and gives several Reasons to prove they were plainly perjured.

Then he inserts some excellent Rules laid down in criminal Matters, by that great Man Judge Hales, which not being long, deserve their Room here.

Abstract of what the Earl designed to have said in his own Vindication, before the Justiciary.

Judge Hales's Rules in criminal Matters.

- 1st. Not to be rigid in Matters purely conscientious, where all the Harm is Diversity of Judgment.
- 2<sup>dly</sup>. That popular or Court Applause or Dislike, have no Influence on any thing is to be done in point of Distribution of Justice.
- 3<sup>dly</sup>. That in a criminal Case, if it be a measuring Cast, then to incline to Mercy and Acquittal.
- 4<sup>thly</sup>. In criminal Things, which consist only of Words, where no Harm ensues, Moderation is then no Injustice.
- 5<sup>thly</sup>. To abhor all private Solicitations, of what Kind soever, and by whomsoever.
- 6<sup>thly</sup>. In Matters depending, not to be solicitous what Men say or think, so long as the Rule of Justice is exactly kept.
- 7<sup>thly</sup>. And in the last room, never to engage themselves in the Beginning of a Cause, but reserve themselves unprejudged, until the whole Business be heard.

In the next room, he makes his additional Defences in Four Generals, which are,

- 1st. The absolute Innocence of his Explication, in its genuine Meaning, from all Crimes or Offence, far more from the horrible Crimes libelled.
- 2<sup>dly</sup>. The Impertinency and Absurdity of his Majesty's Advocate's Arguings, for inferring the Crimes libelled, from the Earl's Words.
- 3<sup>dly</sup>. The Reasonableness of the Exculpation.
- 4<sup>thly</sup>. The Earl's Answers to the Advocate's groundless Pretences, for aggravating his Case.

I cannot pretend to give an Abstract of the Application he makes of them to his own Case, 'tis so full and particular; only, upon the Third Head, he justly gives the Case of Bishop Cranmer, which is almost parallel to his own, from Fuller's Church History, Book 5. Pag. 185, 186.

The Publisher of the Earl's Case, who, if I be not misinformed, was an eminent Lawyer, and Fellow-sufferer with his Lordship at this Time, concludes with several Citations out of Sir George Mackenzie his printed Books, and from them makes it evident, that Sir George premeditatedly gives it as his Opinion, and prints it, That an Act of Parliament (which he disliked) is most unreasonable, most unjust, and, in its Reason, most inept; and that it puts a sharp Sword in the Hands of blind Men: Which is a great deal more than ever could be inferred, yea, than was pretended to be inferred from the Earl's Explanation of the Test, for which he was sentenced.

1681.

Mr. Stuart comes under new Trouble,
after the Earl's
Escape.

And this brings it in my Mind to observe, That the Earl's Escape was the Occasion of a great deal of Trouble to Mr. Stuart, since the Revolution Sir James Stuart of Goodtrees, formerly mentioned. This great Lawyer was employed in private, (for he could not plead in publick without taking the Oaths) to draw up the State of the Earl of Argyle's Case, to be sent up to London with the Gentleman the Earl dispatched. Three Copies were writ of it by his Servants; and, before he sent them to the Earl, he caused them to be read over, holding one of the Copies in his own Hand, upon the reading of which, he made an Amendment or Two with his own Hand upon the Copy he held, and the Two Servants amended the other Two Copies.

He sent all the Three to the Earl, and desired that Copy, with his Hand on the Margin, might either be returned or destroyed; the other Copies were sent up to London, and the Third was found in the Earl's Coat-pocket, after he escaped from the Castle. The Paper was very home and close, and abundantly heavy in Point of Argument, and consequently not a little irritating to the Counsellors. The Amendment was soon known to be Mr. Stuart's Hand, and the Paper concluded to be his: Whereupon a Party was sent to his Mother's House, the excellent Lady Goodtrees, but he was happily abroad. His Two Servants, Mr. Spence, and Mr. Montgomery, now Laird of Langshaw, were next searched after, but they thought it convenient to step out of the Way a little; and Mr. Montgomery, tho' but a Youth, found he was not in Safety in Edinburgh, and was obliged to retire to Ireland to his Relations, where he continued much till the Liberty, in the Year 1687.

From this Gentleman last named I have this Account; and when I name him, I must acknowledge my Obligations to him, for his obliging Kindness, in allowing me Access to the criminal Books, and giving me several valuable Hints of the Severities of this Period, which he had from his worthy Father, whom we shall meet with in a Year or Two.

Mr. Stuart was obliged, after lurking a while, to retire to Holland, where he continued until the Toleration; afterwards he will fall in more than once, before I end this Work. Thus, as briefly as I could, I have run through this strange and unaccountable Treatment of the truly noble Earl of Argyle, to which, in all its Circumstances, I think History scarce affords a Parallel, unless it be their own murdering this great and good Man upon this very Sentence, near Four Years after, when indeed, as Things then went, they had much more to lay to his Charge.

When I have laid before the Reader this large Account of the Earl of Argyle's Trial, not a few Reflections might be made upon the Narratives given of it by the English Writers. Bishop Kennet gives a very fair Account of the Parliament's Procedure, where the Foundation of the Displeasure taken up against the Earl, was laid, when he tells us, 'That the Duke of York had this Year an obsequious Parliament in Scotland, who being first amused with an Act ratifying the Protestant Religion, fell readily into another Act, asserting the Right of Succession; after which they made another for a standing Army, Act continuing the Supply, and concluded with the Test Act. The Earl of Argyle moved for a Security against a Popish Successor; (but he is mistaken when he adds) he was immediately committed.'

Dr. Sprat's Account of this Matter is very unjust; and, it seems, hath led Mr. Eachard into that ill-natur'd Account of the Earl, in the first Edition of his History, Vol. III. Page 646. The Archdeacon has been so fair, as, in his Appendix, to retract what he had written, and to make the following Acknowledgment before this Amendment. Upon a Review of the Earl of Argyle's Case, I find, that my Account, chiefly taken from Dr. Sprat, was somewhat too crude and partial. His Amendment the Reader may take in his own Words. 'This zealous and active Man, (the Earl of Argyle) increasing in Power and Lustre, after his Father's and own Forfeitures, seemed to be marked out by his Royal Highness, though he had given some signal Instances of Loyalty, before as well as after both their Prosecutions; for, during the Sitting of the Parliament, he did not only endeavour to hinder the passing of the Test, (which was as much against Popery as Fanaticism) but when it was in Debate, he was the Person that spoke against excepting the King's Brothers and Sons from taking that Oath then intended, or declared for the Security of the Protestant Religion; for which he was afterwards told by a Bishop, That that had downright fired the Kiln. Accordingly, when he was to take this Test, as one of the Privy Council, and had declared, that he would not do it but with a Reserve of his own Explanation, he was shortly after made Prisoner in the Castle, as guilty of defaming the King's Laws. And though his Explanation was no more than what the Council itself thought fit to allow for the Satisfaction of the People; yet, the Actions of his Father, as well as his own, seemed to have made such an Impression upon the Duke of York, that he was resolved to humble his Greatness, and therefore caused his Interpretation to be scann'd and sifted to that Degree, that at length his Advocates found a latent Piece of Treason in it. Upon which, he was brought to a formal Trial, with great Solemnity; and, after many Strains of Eloquence, and uncommon Aggravations, he was found guilty of Treason, and had Sentence of Death pass upon him, but with

Remarks on
Bishop Kennet,
Dr. Sprat, and Mr. Archdeacon Eachard's Accounts of the Earl's Trial.

with Reserve of Execution. One Thing aggravated against him with Plausibility, was his being condemned and pardoned in the Year 1662. But that Condemnation was thought so hard, that the King then declared, It was impossible to take a Man's Life upon so small an account. And the Lord Chancellor Clarendon blessed God, That he lived not in a Country, where there were such Laws. This Prosecution was thought no less severe and unjust, insomuch, that in the great Claim of Right, 1689. it was, by Act of Parliament, annulled, and ordered to be expunged and ras'd out of the Records. The Court gave it out, that there was no Design upon his Life, but only the Forfeiture of some eligible Jurisdictions and Superiorities, which seemed to have been the first Motive towards the Prosecution. But the Earl finding the Heat of his Pursuers, made his Escape; whereupon he had all the Marks of Dishonour denounced against him, as were by national Custom due to Traitors. This gave Rise to new Disturbances; and the Earl, now desperate in his Fortunes, never left pursuing his Revenge, till he met with his own Destruction.

1681.

I could make several Observes on this Author's Amendment, were it worth while. I don't well understand his Meaning, when he says, In the great Claim of Right, in 1689. it (the Earl's Prosecution) was by Act of Parliament annulled, and ordered to be expunged. I can more easily pass his Ignorance of our Scots Forms, which seems to bewray it self here, than his severe Turn upon the Earl in the Close of the Paragraph. When we come forward to what he calls new Disturbances, we shall find it was neither a desperate Fortune, nor a Pursuit of Revenge, but his Regard to the sinking Interests of the Protestant Religion, and the Liberty of his Country, led him to this new Attempt; and when Mr. Eachard had seen himself imposed upon in his first Account, I wish, for his own sake, he had softened his Expressions as to this noble and excellent Person.

S E C T. VIII.

Of several other Things this Year, which fell not in on the former Sections.

I Come now to take Notice of a few Things I have passed during this Year, which may tend a little to the clearing of the History of this Period; and I set them down much in the Order of Time.

In the Beginning of this Year, the Council were much taken up in prosecuting some Boys in the College of Edinburgh, for their burning of the Pope, on the 25 of December, 1680. This the Duke of Tork could not bear, and a great Enquiry was made about it. The Matter of Fact, as far as I can gather it from some missive Letters writ at this Time, was thus. Some of the Students that Day brought up to the Head of the Coragate, the Effigies of the Pope in his Robes, with his Keys, Mitre, and triple Crown; and after they had excommunicated him, they carried him about in a Chair, of the same Form with that wherein he is elected at Rome, to the Foot of the Black-friars Wynd. The Boys knowing the Thing had taken Air, and that the Soldiers and Guards were ready to oppose them in the high Town, gave it out they were to carry his Holiness in Procession to the Grass-market, the Place of the Execution of Criminals; upon which the Guards, little expecting such a Trick, went all down towards the Grass-market. Mean while, the Boys turned up with their Procession by the Black-friars Wynd, towards the high Street, Three of them going before with kindled Torches: When they came to the high Street, at the Head of the Wynd, finding they could go no further, the Chair was set down, Sentence was passed upon his Holiness, and he condemned to be burnt, and accordingly the Torchmen drew near, and did their Work, and by the Help of Gun-powder the Effigies was blown up. This was about Ten of the Clock, and as soon as the Chair appeared at the Head of the Wynd, Lindgow, his Son, and some Soldiers made an Attack upon the Boys with Sword in Hand. They stood their Ground, and warned him to beware whom he struck, for he had Relations among them, and got their Business done.

Some of the Students at Edinburgh College burnt the Pope.

The Rise of this Appearance the Students made, was this, as I am informed by one of them, now a reverend Minister of this Church. Several of them happened to be together in a Tavern, where there was hanging a Copper Plate, representing the Manner of burning the Pope at London, which pleased them so, that in a very little they entred in a Concert to do the same at Edinburgh. The Matter came to take Air, and Mr. George Ridpath, who had been very active in the Project, was seized and put in Prison the very Day before the Design was to be executed, and a severe Search made for the Effigies, but in vain. As we have seen, the Scholars got their Business done, but next Day several Gentlemens Sons were called before the Council, and particularly examined whether any Presbyterian Gentlemen, or Ministers did contrive, assist, or direct them in burning the Pope; they all declared, they did not. The Chancellor was civil and favourable to the young Gentlemen. The Bishops endeavoured to ensnare the Scholars with Questions about their Conformity, and other captious Heads; however, no Advantage was got of them, and they were dismissed that Day.

Rise of it, with some other Circumstances.

1681.

Only Mr. Ridpath then entering upon his Philosophy, and a Youth of a promising Genius, was very hardly treated. Sir William Paterson was rude to him, and, I am told, he was beat, and had his Hair torn by the Council Servants; and either by the Council, or their Committee, he was banished his native Country, for no other Cause than his Accession to this Matter. This Gentleman is so well known, since the happy Revolution, by his Appearances in favour of his Country and Mother Church of Scotland, and his suffering for his steady Adherence to the Protestant Succession, when in the utmost Hazard, that I need say nothing of him. His Modesty is such, as though I sought and expected from himself an Account of his Sufferings at this Time, in consequence of the Friendship he hath favoured me with now for many Years, he hath still declined this Piece of Justice to himself, otherwise the Reader might have had distinct Accounts of this Matter.

About the same Time the same Spirit was working at Glasgow, in a different Manner. They only put on Favours, and coloured Ribbons, and other Marks of Distinction, as, they said, Tokens of their being Protestants. For this, several of their Leaders, and particularly the present Marquis of Annandale, then a Student there, were called before the Masters and Archbishop. Annandale defended himself and his Fellows, with Briskness enough, and speaking to the Bishop, called him only Sir. Mr. Nicolson his Regent took him up, and said, William, you do not understand whom you speak to, he is a greater Person than your self. Annandale very quickly answered him, I know the King has been pleased to make him a Spiritual Lord, but I know likewise that the Piper of Arbroth's Son and my Father's Son are not to be compared; and added, he had the Vanity to say, he had more noble Blood in his Veins, than all the Fourteen put together. Nothing further could be made of this.

At Edinburgh, several of the Students were imprisoned, besides Mr. Ridpath, which irritated the rest so far, that they threatened to burn the Provost's House at Priestfield, who, they reckoned, should have interposed in behalf of the Students, since the Town of Edinburgh are Patrons to the College, and yet, it seems, he had been very virulent by his Proclamations and otherwise against them: And in a few Days the House of Priestfield was accordingly burnt; whereupon the Council emit a Proclamation, January 13, this Year, offering Two thousand Merks and a Remission, to any who would discover the Actors: But I don't find any Discovery was made; yea, some wanted not their Jealousies, his House was burnt with a View to bring an Oidium on some People who had not the least Share in the burning.

January 4, the Masters of the College of Edinburgh present a Petition to the Council, declaring their Abhorrence of the late tumultuary Gathering of their Scholars and others, December 25 last. The Council remit it to the Committee for publick Affairs, and so I can give the less distinct Account of what was done. In the Council-books I meet with what follows, January 6. 'The Lords of Privy Council considering, that Bonds and Combinations have been entered into by the Students of the College, and several Tumults raised thereupon in the City, and the Government it self is defamed by them, ordain the Magistrates of Edinburgh instantly to cause shut the College Gates, and cause the Classes be dissolved till further Order, and ordain the said Magistrates to appear before the Council, that they may hear what they have to offer for the Security of the City, and the King's Peace therein.'

Upon the 21 of January, the Council emit another Proclamation concerning the Students in the College, wherein they charge them with entering into Bonds and Combinations, obliging themselves to adhere one to another, in case any of them should be called in question, which, they say, appeared from the Confessions of the Masters and some Students: They complain likewise of their assembling, December 25 last, in a tumultuary way, (but not a Word of burning of the Pope) and associating themselves with Prentices, and introducing a new way of tumultuating, by putting up blue Ribbons as Signs and Cognizances; and that being justly threatened for these Things, they made Tumults in the Streets, disturbed the Nobility and Gentry in the Streets, and threatened the Provost with burning his House, which in a few Days was done. Whereupon the Council by an Act of this Day's Date, having ordered the College Gates to be shut, till they take further Trial thereanent, do now command all the Students to retire Fifteen Miles from Edinburgh, within Twenty four Hours, and not to come within the said Limits without Leave of the Council, under the Pain of being treated as seditious Persons.'

This Matter ended in an Act of Council February 1, ordering all the Students to take the Oath of Allegiance; and if the Masters accept of any Scholars otherwise, they are ipso facto to be deposed, as it bears at more length, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 72.

Mr. George
Ridpath's Sufferings at this Time.

Students at Glasgow put on coloured Ribbons.

Account of the Council's Procedure upon this Gathering at Edinburgh.

Act of Council
imposing the Oath of Allegiance, and a Bond on the Students, Feb. 1,
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 72.

Upon

Upon the 17 of February, the Duke of York moves in Council, that in regard of the young Years of many of the Students in the second and third Clashes, the Oath prescribed by the Act of the first Infant be delayed till they enter the fourth Class, they not being in a Capacity to understand the Nature and Import of an Oath, and that the Penalties in the Bond be mitigated one Half. The Council go into both.

1681.

Duke of York's Mitigation of it.

In January this Year the Laird of Lundin gets a Patent to be Master of the Artillery. February 24. The Lord Livingstone is admitted a Privy Counsellor. June 2. the King by a Letter declares he has continued the Command of the Castle of Edinburgh with the Duke of Lawdale, and in his absence the Laird of Lundin, and that they are only to receive the Command from the King or his Commissioner. In July, the Earl of Dumfries, and the Earl of Antrim are made Privy Counsellors.

Lundin Mr. of the Artillery, Livingstone Dumfries and Antrim Counsellors. Castle's Command continued.

That same Month John Maclurg and Humphry Clark, are examined by the Council for having a scandalous Paper in their Coffee-house, called the Gazette, and imprisoned. January 20. finding that John Maclurg's Coffee-house is a Receptacle of disaffected Persons, order the Magistrates of Edinburgh to shut it up, and call for all the Masters of other Coffee-houses or Houses of Intelligence, and take them bound under Five Thousand Merks, that no News Papers be read in their Houses, but such as are allowed by the Officers of State. And March 8. John Maclurg, upon his Petition, is allowed to open his Coffee-house under the same Bond with the rest.

Council's Procedure with the Coffee-houses.

In the Beginning of February, the Duke of York went to see Linlithgow and Stirling. A printed Account of his Progress, and the Noblemen and Gentlemen who waited on him, is before me, where there is little remarkable, but a Design to make a Parade, and to affect somewhat of the State of our old Kings, before he came to the Throne, and render himself a little more popular.

Duke's Progress to Linlithgow and Stirling in February.

After the Parliament was up, toward the Beginning of October, the Duke made another Progress to Glasgow. I find no printed Accounts of that as of the former, and one would think they might both have been spared, since he came down to Scotland as a Sanctuary. He was entertained in the best manner the Country could afford, and no small Charges were bestowed upon regaling him and his Attendants. He declared himself highly pleased with the Respect shewed him, but, it seems, forgot all this, when he would have all the five western Shires turned to a hunting Field.

To Glasgow in October.

His Mirth at Glasgow was a little spoiled by an Incident. One of the Society People put a Paper into the Duke's Hand when coming down the Street. The Duke received it as it had been a Petition for Charity; but it was a Protestation, whereof a Copy is before me, which I need not insert at length, being much the same with that of Robert Garnock and others before spoke of.

Where a Protestation is put into his Hand by one of the Society People.

The Penners of it protest against the King in all his Tyranny, heading, hanging, quartering quick, stigmatizing, scourging, drowning in Seas, and oppressing the People of God, his usurping over Conscience, and assuming that Power that is due to none but Christ alone. They add, that what he cannot do himself, having sinned away his Wisdom and Parts with his Harlots, he hath made over to a profest Papist the Duke of York, and protest against his being sent to Scotland to execute his Policy, and cheat People, first out of their Souls, and then out of all other Things. They protest likewise against the late dreadful Bond the Test, which so avowedly renounceth the Covenants, to which all were once sworn, and the King himself, and therefore bound to maintain Presbyterian Government with their Lives and Fortunes: Therefore they protest against the King and all who act for him, and particularly against welcoming a Papist to Scotland, with a Draught of the Blood of Saints at two different Times, the welcoming him to Glasgow with ringing of Bells, Bonfires &c. Whereas, say they, he ought to be punished with such loading Punishment as the Word of God allows to be put upon profest Idolaters. In a word, they protest against his sending in his Baggage and Provision to the Town on the Lord's Day, and against the Magistrates and all who received him.

When the Paper came to be read, the Duke did not find it proper to notice it much, but it turned him a little fullen and thoughtful; and it was observed he hastened out of Glasgow after the Receipt of it. I do not find the Giver or Authors of it were discovered by the Government.

This was a softer Protestation than several Papers emitted at this Time by the High-flyers. One of them, affixed upon the Church of Kettle April 3. this Year, fell into the Council's Hands, and they caused print it to expose the suffering People. But it was a very few who ran those Lengths even among Mr. Cameron and Cargill's Followers, and the other oppressed Sufferers disowned, and as much differed from those Extremities as sober Persons could do.

A Paper affixed on the Church of Kettle, April 3.

It is not worth while to give the Reader any Extract out of this inconnected Paper; the Writer of it disowns the King's Authority, renounces him and paying Cess to him, or Tiends to Mr. John Barclay Episcopal Minister in that Place, and gives his Reasons to prove the King a Tyrant, and Mr. Barclay a Thief and Robber. This Ruffel, or another of his Name tur-1681.

Some Account of Gib and his Followers, the Sweet Singers.
They are unjustly charged with suffering
Presbyterians.

ned very insolent and uneasy to the People of the Societies when formed in Meetings, because they would not come up to his Extravagancies, as I find by their Registers.

But Gib and his Followers made the greatest Noise of any of this Gang, and I shall give some little Hint of them here, and from them probably many of these Heights came. The Raveries and Blasphemy emitted by John Gib, once a Master of a Ship in Borrowstounness, Walter Ker, David Jamison and John Young, are not indeed worth the noticing, were it not that the Publishers of their Paper in the Title of it classes these Madcapes among the Fanaticks, the Name given ordinarily to Presbyterians: Yea, the Publisher of Sir George Mackenzie's Vindication, London 1691. Page 36. hath the Impudence and Villany to couple Gib's senseless Paper with the Solemn League and Covenant, and publish it, as he says, to inform Strangers of the seditious Principles of the Scots Presbyterians. This horrid Imposition upon the World, under so great a Name as that of the King's Advocate, hath brought me to give some Account of this Matter.

Spring of those Followers of
Gib.

I have formerly regreted the manifold Temptations poor ignorant People had at this Time, to run to Enthusiasm and Ravery upon the one Hand, and Atheism and Irreligion upon the other. Presbyterian Ministers who had been careful in instructing People in the Foundations of Religion, and the Catechisms of this Church, and were at singular Pains upon the Youth, were now all almost turned out. Their Successors in the Churches were generally ignorant or vicious, and totally neglected Catechising; and indeed such were the People's Prejudices at them, that as they were neglective and lazy, so People would not submit to such of them as were willing to take any Pains: And it is not to be wondered at, that some turned wild and monstrous in their Opinions; and, no doubt, the Extremities run to by some in Conversation, and unhappy Divisions among the suffering Party, helped all on. It is much easier to set a People a going to Extremities in a broken Time, than to put a Stop to them: And that Mr. Cargil found and regreted, for tho' he took much Pains to reclaim Gib and his Followers, yet it was to very little Purpose. There was undoubtedly too much of an Inclination at this Time, to insist and debate upon publick Matters, as they were termed, to resent the Faults of Persecutors, and Apostacy, as it was called, of Friends; and real Religion, Faith, Patience, and mutual Forbearance, were too much neglected. And perhaps the Apprehensions of singular and extraordinary Judgments upon the Land, expressed by some worthy Persons at their Death, possessed the Minds of many, and were presumptuously shaped by the more ignorant, according as their Fancy, not a little heated by Oppression, led them, and particular Determinations were made, who would suffer by them, and who escape. Thus we had too many bold and peremptory Assertions, Prophecies, and other Things, whereby Satan played his Game, and many were deluded.

When Things were in this Posture, John Gib, and some few with him laid aside all Business, pretending to spend all their Time in Fasting, Prayer, and other Acts of Devotion, came out from Borrowstounness taking their Way South and West. Where they came they enjoined publick Acknowledgments to be made by all Persons guilty of Compliance, hearing the Curates, and the like; and Gib, as Spokesman, took on him to rebuke, reject, or receive into Fellowship with them. Their Zeal and seeming Devotion made many run to them, and they came the length of the Parish of Strathewan making Profelytes.

James Gray of Chrystoun, with some others,
Oppose Gib's Extravagancies
in the West.

There happened to be in the Neighbourhood Three worthy and judicious Men upon their Hiding, I think, or Business, James Gray of Chrystoun, James Slofs, afterwards Bailie in Glasgow, and James Baird: Some of their Acquaintances besought them to go with them to a Meeting where Gib was to be. They yielded, and when they came, Gib was with a considerable Company toward Eglisbam Muirs. He was entertaining the People with Calls to leave their Business, and joyn with him in extraordinary Acts of Fasting, &c. and that in a very insolent and authoritative Way. These Three entred a little upon Reasoning with him, but found nothing but haughty Ignorance, and no Reasoning. He and his Followers withdrew a little, to rebuke a Man for Compliance. James Gray followed, and hearing him rebuke the Man authoritatively, publicly questioned him, how he took on him such an Act, not being a Minister, adding, we had a Gospel Ministry, and Church-officers to manage that Work, and commanded the Countryman (who was of his Acquaintance) to be gone. Upon this Gib's Countenance changed, and his Eyes kindled, and spoke like a mad Man: 'Your Ministers, your Ministers, we will curse them to Hell, we will damn them and you to Hell, we'll pray you to Hell;' with many other horrid Expressions, which frightened the People so much as they left him, and came about Mr. Gray and the other Two, who warned them of the Hazard of Separation, and Heights they were leading them to, and prayed a while with them, and advised them to go home, and mind their Callings.

Thus Gib's Folly being made manifest, his Progress was stopped in that Country, and he proceeded no further; only a few silly Women followed him a Day or Two more, till he went home to Borrowstounness, and for his Scandals and Blasphemies he was carried into Edinburgh, and with the abovenamed Persons lay some time in the Canongate Tolbooth, many Times carrying like possessed and distracted Persons. And Mr. Gray of Chrystoun frequently used to say, he did take him at that Meeting to be possessed with a Devil. This Account I have given at more length, because I have it from the worthy Persons present.

Toward the End of April, 1681. they were taken by Order of Council. A few Days after, these hair-brain'd deluded Wretches were deserted by the few Women who had associated with them, as soon as they began to discover their Madnefs; and their Society, which had got the Name of sweet Singers, lasted but Two or Three Days. The Followers of Mr. Cargil and Cameron, as soon as they heard of their Extravagancies, threw them out of their Company, and the Body of Presbyterians in Scotland never owned them, or had any Thing to do with them, but sat silently bemoaning the Depth of Judgment, and strong Delusions they were given up to, and praying that others who had left Ordinances dispensed by all Presbyterian Ministers, except Mr. Cargil, might not be left to their own Ways.

This Matter was indeed particularly grieving to Mr. Cargil before his Death: He took Pains upon them, as we noticed, fruitlessly; yet the Letter he wrote was of Use to recover some who were in Hazard of their Delusions in the Prison. And that the Reader may see their strong Delusions, I insert the blasphemous Paper they gave in to the Council, May 1. this Year, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 73. and that he may have his just Cautions, I have insert his Letter to the Prisoners in the Canongate, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 74.

These deluded Wretches found more Favour in the Eyes of the Government, than many worthy Persons at this Time; and it was said, that the Duke's Jesuits wanted not some Influence upon them, and by their Interest, as some think, they were dismissed in the Beginning of August. The Act of Council about them is but short. ' Edinburgh, August 2. 1681. His Royal Highness and Lords of Privy Council, having considered the Condition of these Prisoners, called the sweet Singers, David Jamison, John Gib, Walter Ker, John Young, and some Women, give Order to the Magistrates to liberate them, provided they give under their Hand, that they abjure the disloyal Principles once owned by them; appointing such as are able to find Caution, to appear when called, and such as are not, to enact for themselves.'

It is indeed Matter of Wonder to me, that at such a Juncture more Delusions and monstrous Errors did not break out. When, after Mr. Cargil's Death, his Followers formed themselves into Societies, their Records bear, that they have been at much Pains to keep themselves from these delusive Extravagancies, and had no small Difficulties from one Grant, who, if I mistake not, is yet alive, the foresaid Ruffel and others, and through this Diligence their Madnefs was crushed in the Bud: And the rest of Presbyterians, who now and then had Sermons, and Pains taken on them by their Ministers, and under the Want of stated Ordinances, gave themselves to Meditation, Reading, and Prayer, were in no Hazard this way, and many of them were solid, knowing exercised Christians.

I shall end this lamentable Subject, by remarking, that the Raveries of Gib and his Followers, when broke out, gave some little Turn to the Heights and Extremities of others who had any real Good in them; they were somewhat like a Crise, and, as it were, the separating the morbidick Matter from the Blood, whereby it became a little more cool and settled, tho' I cannot but say, too much of the Distemper remained to the Revolution, and even to this Day.

Another lamentable Effect of the bearing down of the Gospel, and the Neglect of instructing of People at this Time, was the Apostacy of too many from the very Profession of Religion; and indeed Profaneness was now at a terrible Height. In the Justiciary Registers I find a Process against the underwritten Person for Judaism, which being the only Instance, as far as I know, of this since the Reformation, the curious Reader will be content to have a View of it. I give it as it stands in the Criminal Books, and it is what may be a Caution to Parents to found their Children well in our holy Religion, before they suffer them to go abroad.

' Edinburgh, June 15. 1681. Francis Borthwick, second Son to James Borthwick of Harelaw, being often called to have compeared before the Justiciary, this Day and Place, in the Hour of Cause, to have underlien the Law, for the Crime of Blasphemy committed by him, in so far as being born of Christian Parents, and baptized and educated in the Christian Faith, and continuing in the open Profession thereof, and Communion of the Christian and Catholick Church, until the Age of Fourteen Years, he went abroad to foreign Places, to follow the Trade of Merchandize, where he was seduced to make a shameful Apostacy from the most holy Faith, and to profess and openly declare himself to be a Jew, and was circumcised: And having returned to Scotland, at Edinburgh, Wrights-houses, Brandsfield, and Hall-beriot, he did rail against our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, denying him to be God, and affirming him to be mere Man, and a false Prophet, and outragiously reviling him by such other horrid Blasphemies as are not fit to be uttered, renouncing and cursing the holy Sacrament and Rite of his Baptism. And he did with great and horrid Execrations wish all Manner of Judgment to befall him, if ever he should return to the Christian Religion, in Manner at length mentioned in the Criminal Letters, raised at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, and James Cockburn in Duddingstoun Informer against him thereanent.

K k k

' And 1681.

Gib's Paper.
And Mr. Cargil's Letter to him and his Followers.

App. No. 73.

App. No. 74.

Act of Council Aug. 2.
about Gib and the sweet Singers.

Observes on these Raveries.

Process against Francis Borthwick Apostate to Judaism.

1681.

Lord Bargeny's
Bond given up.
Duke of Rothes's
Death, July 30.

Mr. Carstairs
with him.

Duke of York's Remarks on this.

Meetings of Correspondence
of the Society People, began Dec. 15.

Their Declaration at Lanerk Jan. 12.
1682.

‘ And being lawfully cited, and not compearing, the Lords adjudged the said Francis Borthwick to be Outlaw and Fugitive, and all his Goods and Gear to be brought in for his Majesty's Use, for his Contemption and Disobedience; which was pronounced for Doom.’

June 21. the Council recommend the Lord Bargeny to the Secretary, that he may have a Warrant to get up his Bond of Compearance. July 30. the Duke of Rothes being dead, the Council lodge the Seals in the Hands of the Lord Treasurer, till the King give Orders about them. This great Man, as we heard, was brought in by the Duke of Lawderdale, and enjoyed many publick Offices. As through his Life, except when pushed on by others, he was never for Severities against Presbyterian Ministers, so at his Death he had the Advantage of some of them with him. He appeared concerned upon Views of Eternity, and the reverend Mr. John Carstairs, upon his Desire, waited upon him, and prayed with him, the Duke of Hamilton, and many others of his noble Relations, being present; and few were present without being affected very sensibly. When the Duke of York heard that Presbyterian Ministers had been with the Chancellor, he is said to have had this Expression, That all Scotland were either Presbyterian through their Life, or at their Death, profess what they would. Lawderdale's being out of the Secretary's Post, and the Duke of Rothes's Death, made a considerable Change among the Managers at Edinburgh, and the Duke of York's Party come in, many of whom, in a little Time, compliment him with their Religion, and turn Papists. And in October this Year, a new Commission comes down for the Lords of Session.

This Year the Council in May, pass an Act in favours of John Adair Mathematician, and allow him a Hundred Pounds Sterling out of the Fines they shall impose, and recommend him to the Encouragement of Noblemen and Gentlemen in his Design, to correct Blaw's Maps of Scotland, and form new ones for the Shires wanting, in order that there may be a complete Atlas for this Kingdom. And November 17. they send up the Draught of a Patent for erecting the College of Physicians, and recommend it to the King, after Consideration of the Reasons advanced against it by the Surgeons, Apothecaries, Town of Edinburgh, and Universities.

I come to end this Section and Year, by acquainting the Reader, that the Society People now began to form themselves into a general Correspondence among their Societies, in the West and South, and had their first Meetings, December 15. 1681. at the Logan House, in the Parish of Lefmabago, in the Shire of Lanerk; and these general Meetings they kept as much as they could quarterly, until the Revolution, and sometimes oftner, in different Places where they could most conveniently meet.

At this first Meeting they agreed upon their Testimony against the last Parliament, the Duke of York, a Papist, his being Commissioner to it, and particularly against the Test enacted by it; and in this Declaration they adhere to the Sanquhar Declaration, mentioned last Year, and appointed this their Testimony to be published at the Market-cross of Lanerk, upon the 12 of January next.

That Declaration, commonly termed Lanerk Declaration, hath been many Times printed, and the Reader will find it in their informatory Vindication, Edit. 1707. Page 156. When Mr. Renzwick, and Mr. Shiels joyned with them afterwards, and wrote the Vindication of their Actings, the Reader will find their Apology for this Testimony in the above cited Book, p. 69. and there they own some Expressions in it to be very exceptionable, and inexpediently and unadvisedly inserted, and pass from the same. However, this was the first Essay of the Societies united in Correspondence; and in this and most of their other Papers, I shall mostly direct the Reader, who desires to be informed about them, to their own Accounts of them.

C H A P. VI.

1682.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1682.

THE Year before me was extremely troublefom to Presbyterians, but not fo bloody as the laft, tho' the Blood of fome Innocents was fhed. The Death of Mr. Hume towards the Clofe of this Year, was as much cried out upon, as many Things the Managers did, being not only illegal, but unfair, and ungenerous in the Opinion of many, and the Gentleman's Character being fingular for Piety and Peaceablenefs.

General View of this Year.

The Reason why fo few, comparatively, were brought to publick Executions, does not appear to have been from Want of Inclination, but Opportunities, very few efaping with their Lives, againft whom they could proceed with any Colour of Agreeablenefs to their prefent Laws: But it was well, that not fo many of the Sufferers fell into their Hands this Period, as formerly.

There was no Seflion of Parliament this Year, nor any more this Reign, and fo no new fanguinary Laws; and, as far as I have noticed, but one Proclamation againft the persecuted Party, which indeed is a little uncommon at this Time: But the Managers had gone fo far already againft the Sufferers, that little more could be done.

Towards the Beginning of the Year, the Duke of York went for London to his Brother, and returned about the End of it; and, while he was away, there was a Sort of Refpite of the Severities againft Presbyterians, tho' it was but for a fhort Space.

Bifhop Paterfon went up to Court with him, and, no doubt, he had fome Errand, and more to do, than barely to wait upon the Duke to London. I find fome Papers giving an Account, that the Bifhop brought down Warrants for a more general and fevere Profecution of all Presbyterians; and we fhall afterwards hear, that Comiffions are given, not only to Sheriffs, Bailies, and other Magiftrates, but to Soldiers, and particular Gentlemen of broken Fortunes and violent Tempers, to fine and imprifon all Perfons fufpect, or guilty of hearing Presbyterian Minifters in Houfes or Fields, fince the Indemnity, Auguft 1679. By which the Country was terribly oppreffed, and feveral Gentlemen were fined to the Value of their real Eftates, for mere Abfence from Church, and being at Houfe-conventicles, and Horning and Caption given againft them: Yea, Matters run yet higher this way, next Year.

Many Courts were held up and down the Weft and South, of which no Registers being kept, I can only give fome general Hints, as Informations are come to my Hand; and the Test was pretty generally preffed, tho' I fee nothing of a Foundation in Law to urge it, except upon fome who were in Places of Truft; and, as far as I can learn, it was pretended as yet only to be that which would fatisfy the Government entirely, as to the Loyalty of fufpected Perfons; yet this Pretext was good enough to harafs Multitudes, not in Law obliged to take it.

In fhort, the Jufticiary go roundly to Work in Forfeitures; and the Council, as well as particular Perfons commiffioned by them, opprefs Multitudes by extravagant Fines. Thefe Heads will afford Matter for Five Sections upon this Year.

S E C T. I.

Of the further Proceedings about the Test, the Changes in publick Pofts, and other incidental Matters this Year.

Since lefs Matter offers this Year, directly upon this History of the Sufferings, than upon fome of the preceeding Years, it may not be amifs to begin my Account of it, with Matters of a more general Nature, tho' I have formerly moftly left thefe to the Clofe of the Chapters; and it will have this Advantage, that it may give fome Light to the more particular Narration of the Sufferings of Presbyterians, in the After-Sections.

Sum of this Section.

1682.

Proceedings as out the Test.Papists at no rent Loss by eluding it.'Tis pressed upon many not obliged in Law
to take it.Letter, Jan. 6. to the Town of Aberdeen, about their Ministers refusing
the Test.Letter, Jan. 7.
about filling the Jurisdiction of such as refuse the Test.

By the Act of Parliament last Year, Persons in Offices and publick Trust were allowed until the First of January this Year, to take the Test. It hath been already remarked, that not many lost their Posts by refusing it. Some few Papists indeed, who, alas! are firmer to their Idolatry, than many professed Protestants to our excellent Reformation, refused the Test: But, as the Duke of Tork told the Earl of Argyle, Care was taken of them; and the Act, which, by some, was designed against them, was turned another Way. The Profits of their Offices were enjoyed by them, and they put in some Protestant, who had the Name, but all the Emoluments came safely enough to themselves. Thus, the Laird of Stonehouse, a violent Papist, and Persecutor, had been Sheriff of Niddale, and made a Kind of Demitition of that Office, when he refused the Test. This Gentleman was so vigorous a Bearer down of Presbyterians in that Country, and so heartily a Friend to the Popish Succession, that the Duke of Tork and Bishops could not see him come to any Loss: Therefore, Queenberry and he ordered Matters so, as one James Mitchel, a small Heritor, and Tool of his, gets the Name of Sheriff, holds Courts, and goes on with the Finings and Severities we shall afterwards hear of; and the Laird of Stonehouse is, generally speaking, with him, as was pretended, to direct in the Forms for some Time, but, in reality, to do all that was done; and he received the Money and Profits, and Mitchel was satisfied with a very small Part. Many Instances might be given of such Favours to Papists, while none was shewn to real Protestants.

Until the Act for the Test was afterwards extended, it could only be pressed upon Persons in Trust; and here there was little Difficulty: But such as held Courts, yea, the very Soldiers, having no Body to challenge any thing done by them, took the Liberty to press it upon Persons whom they were pleased to suspect, most illegally; and so this Year, and much more in the succeeding Years, the Test came to be Matter of sore Suffering to great Numbers.

Mean while, the Council go on to press the Test upon all in publick Trust. January 5. they send a Letter to the Magistrates of Aberdeen, 'That they are informed that their Ministers have undutifully refused the Test, and their Churches are now vacant; therefore, require them, as Patrons, to present fit and qualified Persons, in Three Weeks after their receiving this Letter.' 'Tis signed, Alex. St. Andrews.

January 7. they write to the King the following Letter about the Test.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

YOUR Majesty's late loyal Parliament, having, for the Security of the Protestant Religion, of your Majesty's Royal Power, and for the Establishment of the Government, and Extirpation of these Disorders which have so over-run this your Kingdom, appointed by their Sixth Act, that a Test should be taken by all who were to exercise any Jurisdiction within the same, and that betwixt and the First of January instant: We have, after the elapsing of that Day, considered who had not taken that Test before the Time prefixed; and, after mature Deliberation, we have sent to your sacred Majesty a List of such Offices and Jurisdictions as are now vacant, and at your Majesty's Disposal, upon this account, with our humble Opinion of these who may be fit to succeed in them, and a Draught of the Commission to be granted to them; and, after serious Reflections upon the whole Matter of the Test, we may sincerely say, That it has been a most happy Expedient for filling all Offices with Persons who are well affected to the Protestant Religion, and your Majesty's Government, and from whom your Majesty and People may expect the unanimous and firm Prosecution of your Laws, against all Manner of Irregularities. We have likewise thought fit to acquaint your Majesty, that, by reason of the Minority of the Duke of Lennox, the Sheriffship of Dumbartoun, and Regality of Lennox and Darnley, are to be supplied, and that fit Persons be named by your Majesty, to be Keepers of your Palace of Holy-rood-house, and your High Chamberlain, being now fallen in your Majesty's Hands, by reason of the Dukes of Hamilton and Buccleugh their not taking the Test, conform to the Act of Parliament. We are

Your Majesty's most humble, most faithful, and most obedient Subjects and Servants.

Subscribed ut in Sederunt, except his Royal Highness, Linlithgow, Balcarras, and Dalziel.

With this they send the Draught of a Signature to be past, to such Persons as they recommend, for filling up the Places of such as refuse the Test; which, being in common Form,

Form, needs not be insert. At the same Time, they send up the following List of Jurisdictions fallen into the King's Hands.

1682.

List of Jurisdictions fallen in his Majesty's Hands, and at his Disposal, by the Possessors their not taking the Test, with the Names of the Possessors, and of these now recommended to be commissiionate in their Places.

List of Jurisdictions fallen in the King's Hands.

Jurisdictions fallen in his Majesty's Hands.	Formerly posselt by	The Persons recommended to have Commissions, are.
Heritable Regality of Dalkeith and East-Calder	The Duke of Monmouth	The Earl of Dalhousie
Heritable Sheriff of Roxburgh, Regality of Hawick, and Lochholm	The Duke of Monmouth	The Earl of Roxburgh
Heritable Regality of Torphichen	The Lord Torphichen	The Lord Livingstone
Heritable Regality of Borrowskounness and Polmood	The Duke of Hamilton
Heritable Sheriff of Bathgate	Cochran of Babachlay	The Earl of Hume
Heritable, the Regality of Dryburgh	The Lord Cardross
Heritable, Caldstream, a Part of the Regality of Melrofs	The Earl of Haddingtoun	The Earl of Hume
Heritable, the Regality of Melrofs	The Earl of Haddingtoun	The Earl of Roxburgh
Heritable Stewartry of Kirkcudbright	The Earl of Nidsdale	The Lord Livingstone, and Sir Robert Maxwell
Heritable Sheriff of Wigtoun	Sir Andrew Agnew of Lochnaw
Heritable Regality of Tongland	The Viscount of Kenmuir	The Laird of Claverhouse
Heritable Regality of Whithorn	The Earl of Galloway	The Laird of Claverhouse
Heritable Bailiary of Carrick, and Regality of Crofsragwell	The Earl of Cassils	The Earl of Queensberry
Heritable Regality of Kilpatrick	The Laird of Orbistoun	The Laird of Ardmillan
Heritable Sheriff of Fife	The Countess of Rothes	The Earl of Glencairn
Heritable Sheriff of Lanerk, and Regality of Hamilton	The Duke of Hamilton	The Earl of Balcarras
Heritable Regality of Strolay	The Earl of Findlater	The Marquis of Douglas
Heritable Sheriff of Stirling	The Earl of Callender	The Lord Ogilvie
Heritable Regality of Falkirk	The Earl of Callender	The Earl of Mar
Sheriff of Sunderland, Regality thereof, and as the Bishop's Bailie	The Earl of Sutherland	The Earl of Linlithgow
Heritable Sheriff of Cromarty	In the Creditors Hands	The Lord Duffus
Sheriff of Clackmanan	In the Creditors Hands	The Marquis of Montrose
		The Lord Register.

Upon January 26. a Letter comes from the King, approving this List. The Clerks are ordered to form Commissions, and expedite them, and deliver them to the Persons named.

January 12. the Committee for publick Affairs make the following Report of Parishes fallen vacant, by the Ministers refusing the Test, which the Council approve, with the Draught of the Letter to Patrons, to supply these Parishes.

Report, Committee about Parishes vacant, by Ministers refusing the Test, with the Tenor of the Letter to Patrons.

The Report of the Committee for publick Affairs, offering it as their Opinion, that Ministers be direct to the several Patrons of the Kirks underwritten, now vacant by the Ministers Refusal of the Test, immediately to present fit Persons thereto, being read, Parishes vacant by Ministers refusing the Test.

1682.

was approved of by the Council, and Letters appointed to be sent to these Patrons accordingly, viz. to the Earl of Haddingtoun, for the Parish of Haddingtoun; to the Duke of Lawderdale, for the Parish of Bolton; to the Laird of Saltoun, for the Parish of Saltoun; to the Earl of Tweeddale, for the Parish of Tetter; to the Earl of Wintoun and Bishop of Edinburgh, for the Parish of Tranent; to the Laird of Prestongrange, for the Parish of Prestounpans; to the Earl of Tweeddale, for the Parish of Garvet; to Sir John Seton of Garletoun, for the Parish of Athelstounford; to Sir William Bruce of Balcaskie, for the Parish of Newburn; to the Duke of Buccleugh, for the Parish of Dalkeith; to the Earl of Lothian, for the Parish of Newbottle; to the Laird of Humble, for the Parish of Criehtoun; to the Laird of Deuchar, or Sir William Nilson, for the Parish of Temple; to the Viscount of Oxford, for the Parish of Cranstoun; to Sir Mark Carse, for the Parish of Cockpen; to Sir William Primrose, for the Parish of Carringtoun; to the Laird of Pennycook, or the Bishop of Edinburgh, for the Parish of Pennycook; to the Town of Edinburgh, for the Parish of Falla; to the Lord Torphichen, for the Parish of Torphichen; to Archibald Primrose, for the Parish of Dalmenny; and to the Town of Edinburgh, for the Trone-church Parish of Edinburgh. And further, the Lords of Privy Council do recommend to the Bishop of Edinburgh, to appoint such young Men Expectants, as he shall think fit, to serve in these Kirks, until the same be planted; declaring, that, for the Space they serve, they shall have Allowance out of the vacant Stipends; and that in case the Presentation shall happen to fall in the Bishop's Hands, jure devoluto, these Persons that shall serve in the mean time, shall be preferred to the Charge of the respective Kirks.

Follows the Tenor of the Letter direct to the several Patrons abovementioned.

Letter to Patrons, Jan. 12.

THE late Minister of having undutifully refused to obey the Law, in taking of the Test, so that the said Church is now vacant, and destitute of a Pastor; and we considering, that it is necessary, for the Care of the Souls of the People, and for his Majesty's Service, to have the Charge speedily supplied, do therefore require you, as Patron of the said Church, within Twenty Days after these Presents shall come to your Hands, to present a fit and qualified Person to the Ministry thereof, as you would testify your Zeal for promoting the Happiness of that People, and your Readiness to comply with his Majesty's Commands and Service. This, at Command, and in Name of his Majesty's Privy Council, is signified to you, by your, &c.

Alex. St. Andrews, I. P. D.

Mr. Alexander Wood gets his Scruples removed, and takes the Test.

This Procedure brought some over their Difficulties. Accordingly I find, January 26. Mr. Alexander Wood, Minister of Cockpen, petitioning the Council, 'that whereas through Weakness he had entertained some Scruples anent that excellent Oath and Test imposed by the last Session of Parliament; but they were now removed by the pious Endeavours of his Ordinary, begging the Council may commiserate his Case.' They allow the Bishop of Edinburgh to administer the Test to him, and recommend to the Patron of Cockpen to give him a new Presentation.

Letter January 31. about the Earl of Argyle's Jurisdictions.

App. No. 75.

Several Ministers of the Diocese of Aberdeen also take the Test.

When the Managers are thus busy with the Refusers of the Test, they fail not to remember the Case of the Earl of Argyle, and write a Letter to his Majesty January 31. about his Jurisdictions, which they move may be for ever annexed to the Crown. I have added it App. No. 75. It is full of Bitterness and groundless Insinuations against that noble Family.

A good Number of the Clergy of Aberdeen having stood out against the Test, as we have seen, till the Day was elapsed, and after that taken it before the Bishop, they wanted an Act of Council to repon them to their Benefices and Stipends, which was very readily gone into, and follows. 'Edinburgh, February 23. His Royal Highness and Lords of Privy Council being informed by some of the Lords of the Clergy, that several loyal and learned Churchmen within the Diocese of Aberdeen, had for a Time some Scruples anent the Oath and Test imposed by the 5 Act of the present Parliament, and could not obtain Clearness about it, before the first of January last: But being thereafter fully cleared and satisfied, did before the Decease of their late Ordinary take and sign the Test in his Presence; and particularly the Persons underwritten, Mr. John Menzies Professor of Divinity in the College Marshal of Aberdeen, Mr. Patrick Simson, and Mr. William Blair, Ministers of the said Burgh, Mr. James Garden Professor of Divinity in Old Aberdeen, Mr. George Anderson at Mortlich, Mr. John Barclay at Cruden, Mr. John Corkbrien at Old-deer, and Mr. Patrick Innes at Banff: The Council allow them to return to their former Charges, and to enjoy the Emoluments and Profits thereof unto belonging.'

With some others.

The good Nature of the Council in these Cases encouraged more Applications. And March 2. Mr. Robert Irvin, Minister of Towie, petitions to be admitted to take the Test, and the Lord Primate is allowed to administer it to him. And March 16. upon their petitioning, Mr. Hugo Hugh Munro at Durness, Mr. James Smith Minister at Dore, Mr. Duncan Macarthur in Invercholan in Argyle-shire, Mr. William Black Minister at Clofburn, Mr. John Fullarton Minister at Kilmodan Heritor, are all allowed to take the Test before their Ordinaries.

Upon the other Side one Instance offers. April 20. it being represented to the Council, that Mr. Robert Spotiswood, Minister at Creightoun, having refused to take the Test, continues to possess the Manse and Glebe; and Mr. Robert Arbutnot, now Minister in that Place, complains of this; the Council order him to be possessed of Manse and Glebe.

I observe no more this Year in the Registers, about the Test, but an Act of Council May 11. His Royal Highness and the Privy Council understanding, that in several Places of the Kingdom divers Kirks are vacant through the late Incumbents not taking the Test, whereby the Right of presenting to these vacant Kirks hath fallen, or may fall into the Bishops Hands, jure devoluto, and finding it necessary for his Majesty's Service, and the Good of the Church, that those Vacancies be forthwith filled up, do require and command the Archbishops and Bishops, so soon as the Right of Presentation falls by Devolution, to supply those Parishes with fit and qualified Persons who will take the Test.

While the Council are thus busy about the Test, the Society People are bearing their Testimony against it. According to their former Resolution in December, upon the 12 of January this Year, a considerable Company of them came in Arms to the Town of Lanerk, and published their Declaration before spoken of, and left a Copy of it affixed to the Market-cross.

As soon as the Accounts of this came in to Edinburgh, January 14. the Council write a Letter to the King, bearing 'that some vagrant Persons, about Forty Horse and Twenty Foot, well armed, published the Declaration sent herewith, January 12. and that they had sent some Forces to the Town of Lanerk with a Committee of Council to enquire into that Matter, and punish the Actors.' Afterward we will find they delayed this Committee of Council, and sent Major White with severe Instructions, which will come in next Section.

I am likewise informed, that they burnt the Act of the last Parliament, anent the Duke of York's Succession to the Crown, and the Act imposing the Test. This was the Method that People choosed to signify their Abhorrence of these iniquitous Acts; and it proved a Handle to the Managers, to put a more publick Affront upon the solemn League and Covenant, which had been burnt before at Linlithgow, only by the Authority of the Magistrates: The Council, at the same Time, emitted the following Act, which, because short, I insert here.

Act of Council for burning the solemn League and Covenant, and several other traitorous Libels.

At Holy-rood-house, January 14. 1682.

FORasmuch as, albeit by the Seventh Act of the first Session of his Majesty's first Parliament, and the second Act of the second Session of that same Parliament, that Oath and Combination, commonly called the solemn League and Covenant, is condemned as treasonable, and the taking and renewing thereof by any of the Subjects, is declared to be high Treason: Yet, in the Year 1666. and since, several desperate and incorrigible Traitors have taken upon them to renew and swear the said Covenant, and to emit and publish several treasonable and scandalous Libels, founded thereupon, as particularly these treasonable Declarations published at Rutherglen and Sanquhar, the Libel called Cargil's Covenant, the late Declaration published at Lanerk upon the 12 of this Instant, Intituled, The Act and apologetick Declaration of the true Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland: His Royal Highness his Majesty's High Commissioner, and Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, to evidence the great Abhorrence they have of these treasonable Libels, do ordain, that upon Wednesday next, being a Market-day, the said treasonable Libels, viz. the solemn League and Covenant, the Rutherglen and Sanquhar Declarations, the Libel called Cargil's Covenant, and the late treasonable Declaration at Lanerk, be publicly burnt at the Cross of Edinburgh, by the Hand of the common Hangman; and ordain the Provost, Bailies, and Town-council of Edinburgh, to be present, and see the same solemnly done the said Day, betwixt Eleven and Twelve in the Forenoon; and to report an Account of their Obedience, to the Council, the next Council-day thereafter; and that these Presents be printed and published. Extracted by me William Paterfon, Cl. secr. Concilii.

In this Act, the Council follow the Copy casten by the Society People, in shewing their Abhorrence at these, as they call them, treasonable Libels. This Practice Mr. Hamilton and his Party at Rutherglen, probably borrowed from the publick Burning of the solemn League at London, 1682.

Mr. Robert Spotiswood continues to refuse it.

Act May 11. ordering the Archbishops and Bishops to plant the Churches of these who refuse the Test, jure devoluto.

Society's Declaration at Lanerk January 12. with the Council's Letter to the King upon it.

Act, Jan. 14. for burning the Covenant

Remarks on it.

1682. London, after the King's Restoration, and the Example of the Linlithgow Cavaliers. Many Reflections might be made upon this Act. I do not see, that the Acts of Parliament cited, condemn the solemn League and Covenant as treasonable, tho' the renewing of it be discharged; and if the Council found this good Reasoning against the solemn League, that because it was discharged to be renewed, and yet had been renewed 1666. and since, it holds as much against the national Covenant, and yet they had not the Effrontry to condemn that to the Flames, neither can I see the Grounds upon which the Council say, the Rugland, Sanquhar, and Queensferry Papers are founded upon the solemn League and Covenant. This indeed is one of the best Authorities the Framers of these Papers could almost have desired at this Time, to have the Opinion of their Persecutors, that their Declarations were so well bottomed. I only further notice, That the Bailie of Edinburgh, who waited on the Execution of this Act, had a Fire, not long after, in Providence, sent to a large Building of his in that Town; but it becomes all to be very sparing in putting Commentaries upon particular Providences. The People of the Societies add in their Papers, and I see no Ground to doubt its Truth, That this publick Affront to the Covenants, the Glory of the Kingdoms, was gone about with great Pomp. A large Theatre was erected at the Cross, and some of the Magistrates attended in their Robes, until these Papers were burnt by the Hangman. And because the Magistrates of Lanerk had not prevented the publishing the Declaration, which was not in their Power to do, the Council fine the Burgh in 6000 Merks, which, I am informed, they were actually forced to pay. And in the Council-register of Acts and Decrees, July 7. I find a Bill presented by the Magistrates of Lanerk, for lessening their Fine, but it was peremptorily rejected.

It was February 2. before the Council came to pass an Act directly upon the Lanerk Declaration; and that Day it runs, 'Whereas a Company of Vagabonds and desperate Villains, on the 12 of January last, entred the Burgh of Lanerk, and published a most infamous and treasonable Libel, and none of the Magistrates, Counsellors, or Inhabitants, offered to make the least Opposition thereto, nor gave timely Notice to others, the Council fine the Magistrates in 6000 Merks, reserving them Relief off the Inhabitants and Community, declaring still, that the common Good of the Town is not to be burdened with any Part of it.'

In short, in the Societies Records, they observe upon the Back of the publishing that Testimony at Lanerk, the Sufferings of that Handful were sad and sharp. Some were banished, and made Recruits to serve in the Army in Flanders, some were sold as Slaves in Carolina and other Places in America, in order to empty the full Prisons, and make way for more of their Number, who were daily brought in from all Quarters, and either kept in nasty Prisons, Thieves-holes, or in Bolts and Irons, to make them weary of Life, or dispatched as Sacrifices, without suffering them to speak at their Death, or gifted, as Slaves, to Masters of Ships, to be transported, and sold as such.

When the Council thus so severely executed the Laws, and even took upon them to make upon the Matter new Laws, there was no need of a Parliament, at least for the Designs of the Persecutors: And so the Parliament which was to sit in March, is, by a Proclamation in January, adjourned to the 17 of April. In the Proclamation the King is made to say, That he will not part soon with so loyal and dutiful a Parliament. And after that, by another Proclamation, it is adjourned till November.

This Year I find several Additions to the Council, and Changes among the Managers. January 10. the Earl of Strathmore is received a Counsellor. February 23. the Earl of Dalbousie is admitted a Counsellor. May 8. his Royal Highness delivered his Majesty's Pleasure to the Council about the Officers of State; that the Lord President, afterward Earl of Aberdeen, is made Chancellor, the Marquis of Queensberry Treasurer, and the Earl of Perth Justice-general in Queensberry's room. The Sufferers can expect little Lenity now, when a Papist, or one, who, as soon as Occasion served, turned Papist, is at the Head of the Criminal Court. May 11. by a Letter from the King, Duke Hamilton is added to the Council on his taking the Oaths and the Test; and July 4. he is restored to all his Jurisdictions. The Earls of Tweeddale and Middleton are admitted Counsellors. And May 12. Lieutenant-general William Drummond of Cromlix, and August 1. David Falconer, President of the Session, are added to the Council.

August 31. Orders are given by the Council to prosecute the Lord Haltoun and other Officers of the Mint: But, it seems, the Thing was not gone into, since November 7. I find a Letter from the King to the Council, commanding them to pursue the Lord Haltoun, now Earl of Lawderdale, and other Officers of the Mint. I shall not dip further into this Process, it not falling under the Design of this History. I only notice, that now upon the Duke of Lawderdale's Death, after he had been brought to a great Pitch of Disgrace at Court, his Brother is attacked, and Faults found in their Administration by others than the Duke of Hamilton and his Party. October 10. the Earl of Middleton is made conjunct Secretary with the Earl of Murray. And thus a great many new Managers, all of the Duke of Tork's Party, are taken in.

Having

Parliament adjourned from Time to Time.

Strathmore and Dalbousie Counsellors.

President made Chancellor, Queensberry Treasurer, Perth Justice-general.

Duke Hamilton, Tweeddale, Middleton, L. G. Drummond and President of the Session Counsellors.

Lord Haltoun prosecuted.

Earl of Middleton conjunct Secretary with Murray.

Having thus taken a View of the Change of Hinds this Year, let me go through some incidental Things, which will not fall in so well in the following Sections. Now that the Episcopal Clergy are come in to the Test, the Council take no little Care of them. January 19. they ordain the Commission for the Kirk, the same we now term the Commission for Plantation of Kirks and Valuation of Tiends, to meet on Wednesday next, and orderly thereafter; and recommend it to the Lords of Session not to meet these Afternoons when they meet, that their Members may attend.

February 9. the Council make an Act about sending in, and recording the Sets of Royal Burghs: It was one of the arbitrary Measures in this Period, to bear down the Royal Burghs. The Council find it for the King's Service, that a particular and exact Account of the Constitution and Set of all the Royal Burghs, be sent into Edinburgh, that they may know of what Number each Burgh consists, Merchants or Tradesmen, being Magistrates and Counsellors, and require attested Copies from every Burgh, to be sent in under the Clerk's Hand, and that the Agent for the Burghs record them all in a Book, and give in the same to the Clerks of Council with all Diligence.

March 5. a Letter is read from the King, bearing, 'that Don Rostano Cantellino, a Person of eminent Trust under the King of Spain, and Brother to the Duke de T'opuli in the Kingdom of Naples, had given him a Representation, that these two Brothers had good Evidences to produce, that their Family was descended from the Royal Family in Scotland, for a continued Course of Pedigree, from about 330 Years before the Incarnation to this Day, and desiring the Proofs and Account of their Descent may be entered in the proper publick Records in Scotland, and an authentick Extract granted him in the most solemn Manner.' The King requires the same be done in ordinary Form, that it may be presented to the next Parliament, and allowed by them.

That same Day his Royal Highness acquaints the Council, that he goes to Morrow to wait upon the King at New-market; and March 6. Queensberry is by him desired to follow him, and lay the State of the Treasury before the King. March 9. our Bishops write a Letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, full of Encomiums of the Duke, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup> 76. I find Bishop Pateron went up with the Duke, and probably he carried this Letter. Bishop Kennet upon this very justly remarks, 'that the Duke of Tork, while in Scotland at this Time, found his greatest Interest to be among the Highest of the Episcopal Party, for which Reason he confined his Favours to them, and encouraged them to be very severe on the Presbyterians. Upon his Return he thought fit to have Letters Testimonials from the Scots Bishops to the Archbishop of Canterbury.' April. 4. by a Letter from the King, the whole Counsellors are required to stay at Edinburgh, till his Royal Highness return from England. And May 8. the Duke returns, and, as we heard, intimates the King's Pleasure as to the Change in the Officers of State. He came down by Sea, and the Ship he and his Company were in, struck on a Rock and was lost. The Duke and a good many were saved in the Boat, but the Earl of Roxburgh, the Laird of Hopetoun, Sir Joseph Douglas, the Lord Obrian, with the Duke's Brother in Law Mr. Hyde, with several others, were lost. It is said, these and others might have been saved, had there not been too much Care taken, not to throw the Boat where the Duke was.

May 15. the Duke takes his Leave of the Council, being to return with his Dutcheſs to England, where Matters were now brought to such a pass, as he might return and manage all. At parting he recommended to the Council, the Suppression of rebellious Persons, especially in Clydsdale, Teviotdale, Fife and Air-shires, and that some Troops might be sent thither; and in a particular Manner presses the Care of the Archbishops and orthodox Clergy. May 20. the Council write a very fullsom Letter to the King about his Brother, which stands App. N<sup>o</sup> 77. And at the same Time they write another to the Duke, 'and thank him for the excellent Patterns of Government he has left them, and beg the Continuance of his Kindness as one of the greatest Blessings they can have, and promise their constant and firm Adherence to his Service upon all Occasions, and beg he may acquaint them with what he thinks fit for his Majesty's Service, they resolving to follow his Measures therein, as the surest Methods that can be prescribed.' The Managers were now intirely in his Interest; but such Expressions seem a little beyond the Respect they owed to the King.

It is not so material to add, that November 15. this Year, Mr. Thomas Gordon is admitted Clerk to the Justiciary, and Mr. Thomas Skene renounces; and under his Hand many of the Sentences, Forfeitures, and other Papers following, against the persecuted, fall out.

When thus a violent Persecution of real and hearty Protestants, is going on apace by nominal Protestants, under the Management of a bigotted Papist, and thereby the Interests of Popery are fast advancing in Britain and Ireland, the Church of France are standing up for their own Liberties, and at the Brink of casting off the Pope, when his fallen Kingdom in these Kingdoms is fast repairing; and to gratify the curious Reader, I have insert the Declaration made by the French Clergy in the Beginning of this Year, with the French King's Edict thereupon in March, App. N<sup>o</sup> 78. and shall leave it to himself to make a Parallel 'twixt this and the Act of Supremacy, and other Things now so eagerly pressed. I have further

1682:

The Commission for the Kirk to meet on the Wednesday.

Act February 9. that the burghs send in their Set to the Council.

Borebrief for the Duke de Popoli as det. sent from our Kings three hundred Years before the Birth of Christ.

March 5. Duke of York goes to Court, and returns by Sea, when the Ship with Hopetoun and others is lost. App. N<sup>o</sup> 76.

He with his Dutcheſs go to England.

Council's Letter to the King about him.

App. N<sup>o</sup> 77.

Another to the Duke.

Mr. Thomas Gordon Clerk to the Justiciary.

Declaration of the Clergy of France, with the King's Edict March.

App. N<sup>o</sup> 78.

1682.

App. No. 79.

added a Protestation of the General Assembly of the Clergy of France, May 6. against some Encroachments they apprehended were going to be made on them by the Pope, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 79. And the Reader, if he pleases, may compare it with the Carriage of the Bishops and Clergy in Scotland, who were more the Duke of York's Servants, than the Gallican Church would be thought to be of the Pope. Indeed the French King turned all these good Appearances to a Politick, and served his own Ends from them, and when that was over, soon made up the seeming Breach.

Design of a Settlement at Carolina, by Sir John Cochran, Sir George Campbel and others, recommended to the Council.

Original Bond among the Undertakers for a Settlement at Carolina.

Towards the End of the Year, the King signified to the Council, that Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, and Sir George Campbel had come up from several of his Subjects in Scotland, as Commissioners to deal with him anent a Settlement in Carolina, and recommends to the Council to encourage them therein; so that whatever Meetings might fall in afterwards under this Covert, yet such a Design was at first really projected, however some English Writers ridicule it.

Since writing what is above, the honourable Mr. William Carmichael, Brother to the Earl of Hyndford, has done me the Favour to send me the original Bond among the Noblemen and Gentlemen, as to their Settlement at Carolina, bearing in the Body of it a Contract 'twixt Sir John Cochran and Sir George Campbel, and the Lords Proprietors of Carolina, for a County consisting of Thirty two square Plats, each of which consisted of Twelve thousand Acres, at a Penny per Acre, quit Rent, with Clauses needfuls here to be resumed, and an Obligation of the Undertakers to advance Ten Pounds Sterling each, to Sir Robert Baird Cash-keeper, before the First of October 1682. for each Hundred Acres, and other Ten Pounds Sterling, if need be, for Charges, with a Clause of Renunciation to the Undertakers, from Sir John Cochran and Sir George Campbel, and the ordinary Clause of Registration and Procuratory. The Subscribers are about Thirty six, Callender, Cardross, Haddington, Yester, P. Hume of Polwart, Archibald Cockburn, Archibald Douglas, George Lockhart, Alexander Gilmor, &c. This, I hope, with what is above in the Registers, will suffice to stop the Mouths of such as give out there was no real Design for a Settlement at Carolina, and that it was only a Pretext to colour their Meetings about the Plot we shall afterwards hear of.

S E C T. II.

Of the Procedure, Proclamations, Commissions, and other Actings of the Council against Conventicles, and suffering Presbyterians this Year.

Sum of this Section.

Meldrum commissioned to bear down Conventicles in East-lothian.

Proceedings after the Declaration at Lanerk, Jan. 12.

BEfore I come to lay before the Reader the Oppression and Persecution through the Country, as well as that of particular Persons, it will be fit in this Section to give, from the Registers, the Foundations laid for both by the Managers, in their Acts, Proclamations, and extensive Commissions to particular Persons, which were very numerous this Year. January 5. 'The Council understanding there have been of late Conventicles kept in East-lothian, and that they increase, and seditious Preachers lurk in those Bounds, do appoint the Laird of Meldrum to be a Sheriff-depute of East-lothian, and empower him jointly with Eagles-cairny already Sheriff-depute, or by himself, to prosecute and pursue Persons guilty of those Disorders, by Finings, Imprisonments, and dissipating their Meetings, declaring this Commission is only as to these Disorders abovementioned.'

The Declaration published at Lanerk, brought a great deal of Trouble to that Shire, and upon this Score we shall afterwards see William Harvey condemned. Besides what hath been already noticed, that Matter had been referred to the Committee for publick Affairs, and their Report agreed to in Council, follows, with the Instructions given to Major White.

Report from the Committee, and Instructions to Major White.

Report from the Committee.

THE Report underwritten, brought in from the Committee for publick Affairs, anent the Insolence committed lately at Lanerk, was approved of by his Royal Highness and Council, and Summons ordered to be issued out against the Magistrates and Council of Lanerk, conform thereto, of which Report the Tenor follows. 'The Committee is of Opinion, that it will be fit to delay the sending of a Committee of Council to the West for some Time, until his Royal Highness be further informed of the Condition of the Shire of Lanerk.'

'The

The Committee has offered to your Lordships Consideration, the Draught of some Instructions to be given to Major White, who is to command the Forces in Lanerk Shire, for your Lordships Approbation. 1682.

It is the Opinion of the Committee, that Letters should be direct against the present Magistrates and Council of Lanerk, at the Advocate's Instance, for the Neglect of their Duty, in not raising the Town, and oppoling these Villains that published that infamous Libel, at the least for not pursuing after them, and detecting and discovering them.

Instructions given by his Royal Highness and Lords of Council to Major White, who is appointed to command the Forces to be sent to the Shire of Lanerk.

1st. YOU are to get a List from the Clerk of the Justice-court, of the Persons forfeited, or denounced Fugitives, for being in the late Rebellion. Instructions to Major White.

2<sup>dly</sup>. You are to inform your self where these Rebels do haunt and lurk, and do your best to seize the Persons of such as have not taken the Bond, and imprison them, and present them to Justice, or otherwise drive them out of the Shire, and to acquaint the next Sheriffs where they are gone, to the best of your Information, and order them to seize upon them.

3<sup>dly</sup>. You are particularly to seize these Rebels in the Town of Lanerk, that have not taken the Bond, and imprison their Persons, and give Account of their Names.

4<sup>thly</sup>. You are to inform your self of the Resettlers, Aiders, and Abettors of the Rebels, and especially of any Heritors that do so, and send in a List of their Names to the Council, and in the mean time to put them under Caution for their Appearance, when called.

5<sup>thly</sup>. You are to concur with any who shall be appointed for uplifting the Rents and Moveables of these Rebels who are forfeited or fugitive, and to inform your self of what Sums are due to them, and be careful, that none of these Rebels, or any of their Friends or Relations, or any others to their Behoof, enjoy any of their Rents or Moveables, and to hinder them or their Tenants to plow, sow, or possess the Lands by themselves or their Tenants, until they find Caution to pay the Rents to the King, or his Donatar or Collector.

6<sup>thly</sup>. You are particularly to inform your self of these Villains, that upon the 12 Instant published that infamous Libel at the Cross of Lanerk, and to seize upon, and secure their Persons: As also to inform your self of their Resettlers, Aiders, or Assistants, and who are their Masters, and send in Lists of their Names, and what Proof can be had against them, and in the mean time to put them under Caution, as aforesaid.

7<sup>thly</sup>. You are to be careful to dissipate Conventicles, and apprehend any vagrant or fugitive Ministers, and send them in to the Council Prisoners, that they may be secured and proceeded against according to Law.

No Reflections are necessary upon these: The Major was a very fit Hand to be employed in a Work of this Nature; and we shall afterward meet with him clothed with new and larger Powers. Many Bonds were taken for Compearance before the Council, and General Dalziel was afterwards sent West; but Duke Hamilton interposed, and got Matters a little softened, as shall be observed.

January 27. Claverhouse being sent into Galloway with a Troop of Guards, to execute the military Orders given him, (which I have not seen) The Council allow him to make Use of the House of Chapel, belonging to Sir John Dalrymple, to keep Guard in, and in the House at Kirkcudbright, belonging to Sir Robert Maxwell, and allow him to call for, and commune with the Rebels, or any suspect to have been in the Rebellion from Galloway, and grant him Power to give them safe Conducts, not exceeding Fourteen Days, to pass and repass, and commune with him. These Powers to continue during Pleasure. And Claverhouse sent to Galloway. His Powers.

January 30. they grant him a Commission, as Sheriff of Wigtoun, to punish all Disorders, Disturbance of the Peace, and Church Irregularities in Kirkcudbright, Annandale, Wigtoun, and Dumfries, as the Commission bears, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 80. We shall in the following Section have some Consequents of this large Commission. May 15. Claverhouse gets the Council's Thanks, for his Diligence in executing his Commission in Galloway. His Commission for Wigtoun, &c.

Upon the 3 of February, to support the Forces sent under Claverhouse and others, the Council emit a Proclamation anent furnishing Corn, Hay, and Straw to the Forces. Which, instead of easing the Country, as was promised at the Parliament, turned about to be a new and heavy Imposition. The Narrative takes Notice that formerly the Soldiers not being exactly paid, could not give Money for what Sustenance they received from the Country round them, but only gave Receipts which were allowed by the Collectors of the Cess, yet now their Pay and Sustenance Money being well settled, they are in Case to pay for Corn, Hay, and Straw, and so the Country will, instead of being burdened by them, be the better of them: Yet Complaints continuing of not Payment, the Sheriff and Two of the Commissioners Proclamation Feb. 3. anent furnishing the Forces. Remarks on it.

1682.

ners of Supply are ordered to meet, and cause provide the Forces in Garifon, or otherwise, in each Shire, with Corn, Hay, and Straw, at the usual Rates of the Country, the Soldiers being enabled to give ready Money; if the Sheriff's neglect, they are to be proceeded against, and if the Country refuse, they are to be fined and imprisoned. And if the Soldiers refuse to pay ready Money, they are to be proceeded against according to Law. By this Act the oppressed Country People were obliged to bring Provision, and the Execution of this was well seen to; but when the Money was not paid, as was most frequent, no Redress could be had against the Soldiers, who, in this, and most Things, were both Parties and Judges, and no Complaints could be easily tabled against the Army, and when made, they were generally neglected.

Commission
and Powers to Major White
and Meldrum, for the Shire of Lanerk.

February 10. the Council grant the same Powers in the Shire of Lanerk, to Major White and Meldrum, that Claverhouse hath in Galloway, but superadd a Juiticiary Power against all below Heritors, who have been in the Rebellion. This Commission was, in March, a little superseded, by the Interposition of the Duke of Hamilton.

Major Johnstoun
commissionated to prosecute irregular Marriages and Baptisms in Edinburgh.

Because the Presbyterians in the Town of Edinburgh, now when Conventicles were but rare, could best be reached as to Baptisms and Marriages, therefore the Council, March 2. grant Power to Major Johnstoun, to pursue Persons in the Town of Edinburgh, and Liberties thereof, guilty of disorderly Marriages and Baptisms, in Terms of the Act 4. Parl. 1. and Act 6. Sess. 2. and Act 11. Sess. 3. and Act 4. of this current Parliament; and the Council declare they will reward him according to his Diligence, out of the Fines of the Delinquents. This was Matter of fore Oppression to many; and, in a short Time, we shall hear, that Gifts of these Fines, in other Burghs, were given to others, and vast Sums raised by Compositions.

Upon Application made to the Council, by the Heritors of the Shire of Lanerk, they pass the following Act, March 5.

Act suspending the Execution of Bonds in the Shire of Lanerk.

Act, March 5. suspending Execution in
Lanerk Shire.

His Royal Highness his Majesty's High Commissioner, and Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered some humble Offers made by several Noblemen and Gentlemen of the Shire of Lanerk, viz. the Lord Duke of Hamilton, the Lords Semple and Blantyre, Cromwel Lockhart of Lee, Sir William Hamilton of Prestoun, Sir George Lockhart of Orbistoun, John Hope of Hopetoun, William Bailly of Lamington, William Hamilton of Wishaw, and Mr. John Bannantyne of Corehouse, do hereby suspend all further Execution upon any Bonds given to the Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, Major White, or Laird of Meldrum, by the forenamed Persons their Tenants, who have been in Use to frequent any other Parish-church, tho' not their own, upon the account of their incurring the penal Statutes, in withdrawing from the publick Ordinances in their own Parish-churches, for the Time past only, or upon any Decrees pronounced by them, or either of them, upon that account, as to the said Time past, and that during his Royal Highness and the Council's Pleasure allenarly, that they may see what Endeavours the fore said Persons their Masters will use to reclaim them, and what Success such Endeavours shall have.

We shall afterward see, that General Dalziel was sent to that and other Shires, to bring Heritors yet a greater Length, and what followed thereupon.

Commission 'against Conventicles in the Shire of Hadd-ington.

March 9. Upon some Gathering at Haddingtoun, of which I cannot give an Account, the Council, considering the Increase of Conventicles and Disorders in the Shire of Haddingtoun, do command Eaglescairn Sheriff-depute, and Lieutenant Thomas Windram, to call before them Persons guilty of Disorders and Conventicles in Preston, Prestonpans, Tranent, Seton, Cockenny, and pass Sentence, and put the Laws in Execution against them, and report against the 24 of March.

Balcarras and Sir William
Bruce commissioned for Kinross.

March 14. Upon Information of a Field-conventicle lately kept in Kinross Shire, the Council order the Earl of Balcarras, with Concurrence of Sir William Bruce, to pursue and punish the Persons guilty, with the utmost Severity of Law, that in the Beginning these Disorders may be crush'd.

Lord Livingstone
in Kirkcudbright.

Marquis of Athole in Perth
Shire.

Earl of Linlith-gow in Linlith-gow.

March 21. the Lord Livingstone is allowed to act alone in Kirkcudbright, in holding Courts, since Orchardtoun is indisposed; and a Party of the Forces is ordered to wait on him. At the same Time, the Council being informed that Conventicles are breaking out again in Perth Shire, particularly towards Fife, and in and about the Town of Perth, grant Commission to the Marquis of Athole, and his Deputes, to execute the Laws against Conventicles, Withdrawers from Ordinances, and that he call a Party of Soldiers, or the Gentlemen and Heritors, to his Assistance. And March 30. the Earl of Linlithgow and his Deputes are im- powered to execute the Laws against Conventicles, and other Disorders in the Regality of Oghface.

Ogleface, Falkirk, and Linlithgow. April 6. Sir William Bruce reports from the Shire of Kinross, 'That he had convened before him all who were present at the late Conventicles, and fined them; and since they have all, save a few, returned to their Duty, and engaged to keep their Parish-kirk.'

1682.
Report from Kinross.

May 5. the Council pass an Act discharging Suspensions to be past upon Fines for Conventicles, without their Order. How far this inchoated on the Power of the Lords of Session, I leave to Lawiers to consider. The Act follows.

Act about Suspensions.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering the Sheriffs, Stewards, Bailies of Regalities, and other inferior Judges in several Places of the Kingdom, have, in prosecution of the Laws and Acts of Parliament, called and convened divers Persons before them, and fined them for Conventicles, disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and withdrawing from the publick Ordinances; and being informed, that, to elude and evacuate the Execution of the Laws, some Persons have given in for Suspension of these Sentences before the Session, and the same being Matter of Government, wherein his Majesty's Privy Council are only competent Judges, do therefore prohibit and discharge any Writer to the Signet, to form any Bills of Suspension of any Sentences or Decrees, pronounced or to be pronounced by any Judge or Magistrate, or any having Commission from the Council, of any Fines imposed or to be imposed by them for Conventicles, disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and withdrawing from the publick Ordinances, and the Clerk of the Bills, or any of the Servants, to receive in or present to the Lords of Session, or any of them, any such Bills, under Pain of Deprivation of the said Writers and Clerks; and recommend to the Lords of Session, in case any Bills of the Nature foresaid shall happen to be presented to them, to reject the same, and leave them to the Consideration of his Majesty's Privy Council, as only Judges competent therein; and ordain an Extract hereof to be delivered to Sir William Sharp, who is to intimate the same to the Writers to the Signet, and another Extract to the Clerk of Bills, who is to affix the same in the Bill-chamber; and the Lord Advocate to intimate the same to the Lords of Session.'

Act of Council
May 5. about Suspensions.

The Council, May 20. in prosecution of what the Duke of York, as we heard, recommended to them at his Departure to England, instruct General Dalziel to go with some of the Forces to the Shires of Lanerk and Air, and the Laird of Meldrum, and such Officers as the General shall think fit, to send to the Shires of Roxburgh, Selkirk, and Berwick, in a very large and comprehensive Manner. I insert them here.

Council's Instructions to General Dalziel, May 20.

Instructions to General Dalziel, or such Officers as he shall think fit to send into Lanerk and Air Shires.

1. YOU are to be at Hamiltoun upon Friday next, being the 26 of this Instant, and there to confer with the Lord Duke of Hamilton, and such others of the Commissioners and Gentlemen of that Shire, as shall be present, and to hear and consider what Proposals shall be offered by them, for the Security of the Peace of the Shire of Lanerk, in Time coming.
2. You are to enquire for a List of such Rebels, either Heritors or Tenants, as have not yet submitted themselves, and to consider what is fit to be done for bringing in the obstinate and rebellious Ringleaders, that they may be brought to Justice, and their Refettters.
3. You are to hear what Submission and Offers shall be made by any of the Rebels, or their Refettters, or their Friends in their Names, as desire to cast themselves on the King's Mercy, and will live peaceably in Time coming, and what Security they will give for their future good Behaviour.
4. You are to inform your selves of fit Places for lodging and receiving any Number of Forces shall be thought fit to send into that's hire, and to consider how they shall be provided with Grasse and other Necessaries.
5. You are particularly to think upon some fit Ways for seizing of any Rebels, or vagrant Preachers, skulking upon the Confines of the Shires next to Air and Gallo-way.
6. You are to take Care that Ways be fallen upon for making Persons, both innocent and guilty, keep their Parish-churches, and to consider what Methods shall be used to that effect.

1682.

- ‘ 7. You are also to consider of a great Abuse lately committed by some who take all illegal Courses to take back the Goods of such as have been fined or sequestrated upon the account of Rebellion, and who threaten any who buy such Goods that have belonged to the Rebels.’
- ‘ 8. You are to be careful to fall upon Ways, to know if any of the Rebels Estates, and Rents, and Moveables, be possessed by their Wives, Children, or Friends, to their Behoof, and to send in Lists of any guilty of such Contrivances.’
- ‘ 9. You are to consider, and inform your selves of fit Persons to be named as Commissioners of the Militia, and Justices of Peace in that Shire, and such as shall be fit to be recommended as Officers of the Militia thereof, such as Lieutenants of Horse, and other inferior Officers.’
- ‘ 10. Upon Tuesday come Se’en-night, you are to repair to the Town of Air, and there to meet with the Earl of Dumfries, and the Commissioners of that Shire, where the Laird of Claverhouse is to be present with you, and there to confer with them anent the Security of that Shire, and you are to follow the rest of the Instructions above set down, as to Lanerk.’
- ‘ 11. After you have taken all the Pains and Care you can, for Discovery of the present Condition of that Shire, and considered of the Proposals offered by the Gentlemen, you are to return back to the Shire of Lanerk, and the Laird of Claverhouse with you, and there to consider what further necessary is to be done, as to the settling of the Peace of both these Shires; and, upon the whole Matter, you and Claverhouse are to come in with all possible Diligence, and give an Account to the Lord Chancellor, of your Procedure, to be communicated to his Majesty’s Privy Council.’

The General, and these commissioned by him, obeyed those Instructions, and, June 9. the Council make the following Act upon their Report.

AA June 9.

‘ THE Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council, having considered the Report of General Dalziel, of the Condition of the Shires of Lanerk and Air, and of the Laird of Meldrum, anent the Condition of the Shires of Roxburgh, Berwick, Selkirk, and East-lothian, representing, that they were informed, that some of the late Rebels, who hitherto have not submitted themselves, are desirous to have Allowance to supplicate for the King’s Mercy, in the great Sense they have of their high Crime; the said Lords of Council, out of Pity and Compassion to these Miscreants, have thought fit to grant, and hereby give and grant full Power and Commission to the Lord Duke of Hamilton, for the Shire of Lanerk, the Earl of Dumfries, for the Shire of Air, and the Laird of Meldrum, for the Shires of Roxburgh, Berwick, Selkirk, and East-lothian, to grant safe Conduct to such of these Rebels as, by Petitions, shall, in a humble Manner, address themselves to these respective Bounds, bearing the great Sense they have of their high Crime of Rebellion, and Treason against their lawful King, and their Resolutions, Promises, and Engagements to live as becomes good and faithful Subjects, in Time coming, and, as they find Cause, to receive or reject their Petitions; and that such Petitions as they shall think fit to receive, to transmit them to the Council, to be considered by them, whether or not they shall think fit to commend them to the King’s Majesty, for Mercy and Pardon for their Lives, providing the said safe Conducts exceed not the Space of one Month, after the ingiving of their Petitions, they always acting nothing contrary to the Peace of the Kingdom, during the said Time; giving Warrant hereby to the said Commissioners, or any of his Majesty’s Subjects, during that Time, to meet, speak, and correspond with them, without any Peril or Danger, notwithstanding of any Law to the contrary; provided also, that no Petitions shall be received from any of these Rebels, if they be Prisoners for the Time; and ordain this Commission to endure until the Third Day of August next only, except the Council shall think fit to prorogate the same.’

That same Day, a Letter is writ to the Duke of Hamilton, wherein they acknowledge his good Offices to bring People to their Duty, and promise to acquaint the Duke of Tork with it, who, they say, will signify to his Majesty, and tell him, they have impowered him to give a safe Conduct to such Rebels as apply to him. July 7. this Power is lengthned out till August 15. The Duke, that Day, presents six Petitions for Rebels, and they are allowed to come in before the Council.

May 20. upon Information of a Riot in the Parish of Dron upon the Person of Mr. George Drummond serving an Edict for Mr. Taylor, to be Minister there, the Council order a Troop of Horse under the Lord Ross’s Command, and a Company of Foot under Captain Maitland, to quarter in that Parish, and receive Orders from the Marquis of Athole, and seize upon the

Riot in the Parish of Dron.

the Persons active therein, particularly Mr Alexander Pitcairn and his Beadle, who are reputed to have hounded them out ; and by a Letter to the Marquis, order him to hold Courts, and convene Old and Young, Men and Women, who were in the Kirk, and did not assist the Minister, and fine such as are capable of Fining, and imprison and scourge others for an Example, and report to the Council. 1682.

With this Letter they send Instructions to the Lord Ross and Captain Maitland, ' to march to Dron and quarter there till further Order, to concur with the Marquis of Athole in executing the Laws against the Rioters, to get Information of such as had Accession thereto from Mr. Drummond and Taylor, and the neighbouring Ministers and Gentlemen, that such as committed any Violence upon the Ministers, be sent over Prisoners to the Council, with the Names of such as cannot be apprehended, to concur for installing the Minister as the Bishop shall direct, and to insert the Names of the Heritors of the Parish in the Council Letters sent them, with those of the Ringleaders and principal Actors whom they cannot apprehend, that they may compear before the Council, June 7. ' I find that Day some Prisoners ordered to be brought up to Edinburgh. And June 9. the Council write another Letter to the Marquis of Athole, approving what he has done, and requiring him to continue his Diligence.

Instructions to Lord Ross, and Captain Maitland on it.

June 8. the Council grant Commission to Andrew Atchison, under the Direction of some others, to execute the Laws against Persons guilty of Disorders in the Shire of Renfrew, as the Commission it self more fully bears App. N<sup>o</sup>. 81.

Commission to Andrew Atchison for Renfrew. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 81. Occasion of the Proclamation about the Hue and Cry.

July 5. the Lord Chancellor having represented, ' that a considerable Number of Men in Arms had been discovered in the Shire of Peebles, yet none of the Heritors or Country People had given Information of it : And seeing by ancient Laws it is statute, that where any Number of Men are seen in Arms in the Highlands, Borders and other Places, the People are obliged to discover them, and assist the Magistrates in apprehending them, he moved that those Laws might be considered, and a Proclamation for that end emitted. ' The Council remit it to Lord Register, Advocate and Collingtoun, to bring in the Draught of a Proclamation.

Accordingly the Council emit their severe Proclamation July 8. for Discovery of Persons in Arms, and apprehending of Rebels and Fugitives, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 82. The Societies united for Correspondence had their general quarterly Meeting at Tala-lin, in the Parish of Tweedsmuir in the Shire of Peebles, upon the 15 of June last. In their Registers I find nothing done at this Meeting, save some Endeavours to free themselves of a Schism breaking in upon some of their Societies by the Endeavours of James Russel and some others, who were running to some Extravagancies like those of Gib. The Proclamation makes them Eighty armed Men; but neither were they all in Arms, nor near that Number by far. The Curate of Tweedsmuir acquainted the Council with this Meeting, and they saw good to issue out this Proclamation in the Manner we have seen.

Proclamation it self July 8. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 82.

Its Tenor is somewhat singular, and therefore I shall make a Remark or two upon it. The Penners of the Proclamation blame the People whom they prosecute, for Designs to overthrow Religion, Government, Liberty and Property. I have not met with the Two last in the publick Papers emitted by the Managers. And one must reckon it next to Impudence, to charge their own Crimes upon the suffering Party, who were struggling for Religion, Liberty and Property. And these who put forth this Proclamation had done so much against all the Three, that it was a Wonder they blushed not to put the Subjects in mind of them. Quis tulerit Gracchos ?

Remarks on it

Next follows a Triumph on the Success of their persecuting Courses of late ; and it is alleged, that most Part were reclaimed, and brought to an Abhorrence of Fanaticks and their Impieties, and that many of those, who were misled by the lying Spirit of some of their pretended Ministers, are shrunk from those Ways. This is a Triumph before the Victory in their Sense. There is no doubt but their Cruelties and Oppressions had very much born down the persecuted Party, and, one way or other, they had now for some Time got rid of Field-meetings ; but when Providence, in Kindness to this poor Land, had brought their Barbarities to a Period by the happy Revolution, it appeared what a vast Body of Presbyterians remained even in these Places where their Rage mostly had been exercised. And since, according to them, so very few remained unreclaimed, it may be naturally enquired, why so much Severity as in this Proclamation ? And what Account can be given of their growing Impositions, and Hardships upon Presbyterians in the following Years ? But the Matter is magnified in Compliment to the Duke of York and his Administration, which was as far from Moderation as from Justice, and had very little Prudence mixed with it.

Notwithstanding of this alledged Success, they complain that some Traitors, Runagates, and Fugitives, had a Meeting, to the Number of Eighty armed Men, at Tala-lin. I question much if there were Twenty. The People of that Country are blamed for not informing against them, which, it is probable, they could not do, since these Meetings were kept with as much Secrecy as possible.

1682.

Whereupon all Subjects and Inhabitants of the Kingdom are commanded, upon Knowledge or Information that any Number of Men convocate unlawfully in Arms, or appear in Company in any Place, or where any one or Two of such as are Traitors or Fugitives shall repair, that they shall with all Diligence inform the Chancellor, or such of the Privy Counsellors as shall be at Edinburgh, and the next Commander of Forces, Sheriff or Magistrate, within an Hour at least for every Three Miles Distance, who are required, upon the Information, to convocate good Numbers of Subjects, and do their utmost to search for, seek, and apprehend such who are so met, and present them to Justice, and to follow them till apprehended or expelled out of their Jurisdiction; and, upon their Flight, they are to acquaint the Magistrates of the next Shire, who are to do the like Diligence; and so from Shire to Shire, till they be apprehended or expelled forth of this Realm: With Certification, that whoever fails in the Premises, Magistrates in pursuing, or others in informing, or rising with and assisting the Magistrates, shall be held as disaffected to the Government, as Art and Part with, and shall undergo the same Punishment with those who were in the said Convocation.

And the Council of new intimate, that all Intercommuners with, Refettors, Suppliers, &c. of Traitors or Fugitives, or who conceal, reset, or shelter such who convocate in manner foresaid, shall be proceeded against as if they were guilty of the Crimes whereof these Traitors and Fugitives are guilty, according to the Rigour of Law.

I have given this statutory Part at full Length, and nothing needs be said to expose the Unaccountableness and Severity in it. Upon Informations, whether true or false, the Hue and Cry must be raised, and the Country alarmed, and all who are silent, or refuse to concur in Persecution, are Traitors in Law. Perhaps the Parallel to this, all Circumstances being considered, is not to be found in History, except in this Period.

This Proclamation for raising the Hue and Cry, as it was called after the English Method, was exceeding troublesome. We shall find it was the great Handle some Years after this against the Lairds of Allantoun, and Hartwood, Mr. William Violant, and Multitudes of others. And upon the Score of this Meeting at Tala-lin, great Numbers of People were cited before the Courts, now held all the Country round. In the Parish of Strathaven, a good many Miles distant from it, I find Thomas Leper in Field-head, Thomas Walker his Servant, and John Mack, with Five more, were imprisoned, upon Alledgeance of their being at that Meeting, whereas none of them were there; and though Accounts have not come to my Hand, I have no doubt but in the Parishes of Lanerk Shire, nearer than Strathaven, and others bordering yet more near to the Place of Meeting, great Numbers of People were brought to Trouble on this Score.

July 11. upon Information of some Resistance made to some Soldiers near Lowdon, the Council send the following Commission to the Earl of Dumfries.

Commission
to the Earl of
Dumfries, July 11.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having received Information of an horrid Outrage and Violence committed on Sunday last, upon the Persons of Three Dragoons, in the House of one of the Earl of Lowdon's Tenants, near to the House of Lowdon, who were sent there by the Collector of the Cess, to quarter for some bygone Deficiencies, the said Soldiers being set upon, invaded and wounded to the great Hazard of their Lives; and whereas the Council reflecting, that at or near to the same Place, there hath been several such like Outrages committed upon the King's Soldiers, on the like Occasions, have ordained Letters to be direct for citing the Earl of Lowdon to appear before them the First of August next, and to exhibit and produce the Persons guilty: And do hereby grant full Power and Commission to the Sheriff-principal of Air and his Deputes, the Bailie-depute of the Bailiary of Cunningham, and commanding Officers of the Forces, sent or to be sent by the Lieutenant-general thither, to meet upon the Place, and to enquire into the said Violence, and to make Discovery of the Persons guilty thereof, and of the former Violences done to Soldiers in that Place, by all legal Ways and Methods; as also to cause sequestrate the Goods of such as they shall find guilty, and to take Possession of them until sufficient Caution be found to make the same forthcoming; and appoint them to return an Account of their Procedure to the Council, with all Diligence.

Safe Conducts
further prorogated, August 3.

The Council, August 3. have some Petitions presented by the Earl of Dumfries and Duke Hamilton, from Persons who had been at Bothwell, and they allow the Earl to prorogate the safe Conduct granted by him to such Persons, or others who are content to take the Test, until the 6 of September, that they may apply themselves to the Council, otherwise the Earl is not to prorogate the said safe Conduct to them. This Prorogation did Service but to a few, for it was not many concerned in Bothwell who ever came in to the Test, which was still now required at Compareance. However, it was a little Calm to others for the Time.

Council Power
granted to the Officers of the Army and Gentlemen,

At the same Sederunt the Council came into that which was extremely burdensome to many Parishes in the West and South, and brought the most Part of Presbyterians to very great Hardships, and that was, the granting a Council Power to some Officers of the Army, and

Gentle-

Gentlemen of desperate Fortunes and ill Morals, to examine and fine for Church Irregularities, as they were called, and add a Justiciary Power to some of them.
It will be proper here to insert the Council's Act, which was the Foundation of the granting of all those gravaminous Commissions, and it follows.

1682.

to examine and fine for Church Irregularities,

At Edinburgh, August 3. 1682.

Tenor of an Act whereupon Commissions are granted to Major White and the Laird of Meldrum.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that albeit by the Laws and Acts of Parliament, the Sheriffs, Stewarts, and Magistrates of Royalty and Regality, are authorized and impowered to call before them, pursue, and punish Persons in their respective Bounds and Jurisdictions, guilty, or suspect to be guilty of withdrawing from publick Ordinances in their Parish Churches, of keeping Conventicles, of disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and for uplifting and exacting the Fines in the Way and Manner appointed by the Acts made thereanent, and are thereby obliged to return an Account of their Diligence yearly to the Council, in the Month of July, under the Penalty of Five hundred Merks yearly, in case of Failie; yet, by reason of the said Magistrates their Remissness in the Discharge of their Duty, the said Disorders have of late much increased.

Council's Act August 3. which was the Foundation of these Commissions.

And further, the Persons guilty of being in the late Rebellion, and of murdering some of the King's Soldiers, are suffered to live in Quiet, and to possess their own Lands, Rents, and Moveables, and are harboured, refet, and encouraged by several Persons in the Country, without being noticed, far less pursued, apprehended, and brought to Justice, by the said Magistrates, as in Duty they ought to have done, which hath occasioned the sending of several Parties of his Majesty's Forces into those Parts. And his Majesty's Privy Council taking Notice of the Diligence, Care, and Activity of some of the Officers intrusted with the Command of these Forces, especially of Major White and the Laird of Meldrum, and considering how necessary it is, that when the ordinary Magistrates do not their Duty fully, that fit Persons should be nominate for the King's Service.

Do therefore ordain a Commission to be direct in his Majesty's Name, under the Signet of the Privy Council, to Major White, for the Sherifdom of Air, the Bailiaries of Cuningham, Carriick, and Kyle-stewart, and haill Burghs of Royalty, Regality, Bailiaries, and Baronies within the same; and to Adam Urquhart of Meldrum, for the Shires of Haddington, Selkirk, Berwick, and Peebles, and the haill Burghs of Royalty, Regality, Bailiaries, and Baronies within the said Shires.

Giving and granting them, as Commissioners named and appointed by his Majesty's Privy Council, full Power to meet, concur, and joyn with the Sheriff, Bailie of Regalities, Bailiaries and Baronies, and other Magistrates foresaid, and to call before them at such Times and Places as they shall think convenient, all Persons within their respective Bounds, whether in Burgh or Land, Heritors, Tenants, or others, guilty or suspect to be guilty of withdrawing from Ordinances in their own Parishes, keeping Conventicles, or disorderly Baptisms or Marriages, since his Majesty's late Act of Indemnity, 1679. to pronounce Sentence against them, and to put the same in due and legal Execution. And for that effect to fence and hold Courts, create Clerks and other Members of a Court needful.

Providing always, that the said Commissioners and Magistrates shall be holden to count for the Fines of Heritors, according to the Acts of Parliament thereanent, and former Instructions granted by the Council conform thereunto.

And in case the said Commissioners shall find, that the said Sheriffs or Magistrates aforesaid, refuse to concur with them, or are remiss in their Duty, with full Power to the said Commissioners to proceed by themselves, and pursue the Delinquents foresaid, who have not been pursued by the said Magistrates, and uplift their Fines, or any other Fines not yet uplifted by them: As also to pursue for, uplift and exact the Fines of the Persons foresaid, for Delinquencies and Disorders, whereupon they have not been libelled by the foresaid Magistrates.

And further, the said Lords do ordain the said Commissioners to call for the Magistrates of the respective Burghs within the respective Shires foresaid, and to enquire what Diligence they have done against the Persons guilty of the said Disorders, since his Majesty's late Act of Indemnity, and return an Account thereof to the Council, against their first Meeting, or so soon thereafter as may be.

Likeas, the said Lords grant full Power and Commission to the Persons foresaid, to inform themselves of any Persons within the foresaid Shires and Burghs, who were in the Rebellion, and dwell and live within the same, or others for them, who possess and enjoy the Rents and Moveables belonging to them, and inventar and sequestrate the same to be made forthcoming to his Majesty's Use; and to pursue, take, and apprehend the Rebels themselves.

1682. ' themselves, to the effect Justice may be done them: As likewise, to inform themselves of their Refetters, and cause pursue and imprison them till they find sufficient Caution to appear before the Council or Justices therefore: As also to pursue, take, and apprehend any Persons that they have been informed have been guilty of murdering any of the King's Soldiers, and to imprison them and present them to Justice.'

' And whereas, notwithstanding of his Majesty's gracious Act of Indemnity, divers desperate Rebels do yet stand out, and have not submitted themselves to his Majesty's Mercy, the Council being resolved to have Justice done upon them, upon the Place, for their Punishment, and to the Terror and Example of all such incorrigible Traitors, they ordain a Commission of Justiciary to be direct to the said Major White, and Adam Urquhart of Meldrum, within the respective Bounds foresaid, as Justices in that Part, giving and granting to them, in the said respective Bounds, full Power and Commission to meet at such Times and Places, as they shall find expedient, and then and there to affix and hold Courts, create Clerks, Sergeants, Dempsters, and all other Members of Court needful, and to call before them any of the late Rebels, that are or shall be apprehended by virtue of this Commission, not being Heritors, and to put them to the Trial and Knowledge of an Assize; and, according as they shall be found innocent or guilty, that they cause Justice to be done upon them, according to the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Realm; and, for that effect, that they cite Assizes and Witnesses, of Persons best understanding the Verity of the said Matter, Absents to be amerciate, and Unlaws and Amerciaments to be uplifted and executed, and generally all and sundry Things necessary and requisite, anent the Execution of this Commission, to do, use, and exerce, promitten. to hold firm and stable.'

' And ordain the Sheriffs, Stewarts, and other Magistrates in the Bounds foresaid, to concur with the foresaid Commissioners, in the Execution of their Sentences against the said Delinquents; and this Commission to continue until the Council think fit to recall the same: And these, signed by the Chancellor in presentia, shall be Warrant for granting the said Commissions under the Signet.'

G. GORDON, Cancel. I. P. D.

Remarks on it.

Many Remarks might be made upon this Act, according to which Commissions were given, by a Lawyer who knows the limited Power of the Council, and the just Rights of Sheriffs, Regalities and Burghs, which I cannot so much as offer at. 'Tis only a few natural Observations, which result from the looking over this Act, I shall point at.

By it the Council take upon them, materially to vacate and make null the executive Powers lodged by the Parliament in the Hands of inferior Magistrates, and fix them in Creatures of their own making. True it is, that, in the first room, these Commissioners are ordered to act in conjunction with them; but then, this is entirely at their own Choice; for they are made Judges, whether inferior Magistrates have been formerly remiss; yea, the Council, in the very Act, have determined that in their favours, and so, generally speaking, they acted still by themselves; yea, we shall find, that in Competitions 'twixt them, the Council over-rule in favour of these Commissioners, and there were frequently Competitions, and the poor Country was put to double Attendance, and sometimes twice punished for the same alledged Crime.

It is asserted indeed, that ordinary Magistrates had been neglective in executing the Laws, of which we have hitherto had little Proof; and the Multitudes of Fines exacted, which, in some Places, are yet standing in the Sheriff-books, are good Evidences against this, together with the sudden enriching of Sheriffs and the Deputes, upon the Spoils of the oppressed Country; tho' indeed a sensible Moth hath been seen to be in such ill got Estates.

But granting Matters had been thus, the Law was open, the Parliament had provided a Penalty upon negligent Magistrates, and another Way was plain, than this direct casting their Office. And 'tis evident these Commissioners were not only established as Checks upon the legal Magistrates, and ordered to take an Account of their Diligence, but were directly put in their room.

As this Step, for what I can see, was every way singular, yea, everfive both of the private Rights of Persons and Families, as well as the Constitution of the Kingdom, so the granting the Commissioners a justiciary Power, was equally unprecedented and unjust, yea, of more hazardous Consequences, by so far as a Man's Life is more valuable than his Goods and Means. The Question here is, not only whether these Officers of the Army were Persons so well versed in Criminal Matters, as to be able to judge in Matters of Life and Death, which require the gravest Court in a Nation, but likewise, whether one Man, with any Conscience, if this may be spoken of in such a Period as this, could undertake such a Power, as to judge Rebels through Four Shires, in Burgh or Landward: Yea, the very Council themselves seem to be sensible of this, when, next Year, they appoint Circuits for this end.

After

After all this, 'tis almost needless to observe, that they have all the Fines they exact from such as are below the Rank of Heritors; and tho' they were to account for Heritors Fines, yet we may suppose their Accounts with the Treasury would not be over strict; and what a Stretch was it, to subject all Heritors, some of the greatest of the Kingdom, in the Bounds of their Commission, to those mean and profligate Men? To say nothing of their being set over the Magistrates of royal Burghs, and these being made responsible to them.

1682.

Notwithstanding of all this Unaccountableness of this new Office, the Thing took, and the Country was fearfully oppressed by them. In the Registers, I find divers Forms of Commissions granted to different Persons. The Treasury granted those for the uplifting of Fines, and the Council ratify these, and sometimes grant Power to enquire into the Estates of the Rebels, sometimes to try with relation to Refect and Converse, and to some they add a Judicial Power. It was almost the same Thing what their Commission was, for they equally spunged and harassed the Country, upon the Pretext of some Irregularity or other, and filled their own Pockets. After the general Act, which comprehends all, it would be needless to insert all the Commissions granted, and therefore I shall only take Notice of one or Two of them this Year, and some more of a different Nature will fall in afterwards.

November 9. this Year, a Commission is granted to Cherford of Arduillan, for Carriek. He was a most virulent Persecutor of the suffering Party, and it had been declared against him last Year upon Oath, that he had suborned Witnesses to swear against the Lord Bargeny, and the Duke of Hamilton, and threatened them with present Death if they would not swear, as appears by Cunningham of Montgrenan's Deposition before the Council, August 1681. which hath been more than once printed: Yet such a Man is now pitched on to execute the Laws.

Nov. 9. a Commission granted to Cherford of Arduillan

At the same Sederunt, a Commission is granted to Adam Urquhart of Meldrum, in Terms of the Act, August 3. above insert. It relates to the Parishes of Stow, Herriot, Borthwick, Pennycook, Glencors, Creightoun, Falla, Temple, Nicolson, Carrington, East and West Calders, with the Bounds granted to him before.

To Meldrum

November 16. they grant a Commission to the Earl of Linlithgow, for the Shire of Linlithgow, which needs not be repeated; and, November 23. they grant a Commission to John Skene of Hallyards.

To Earl of Linlithgow and Hallyards

And, December 20. the Council grant a Commission, in Terms of the Act of August 3. to Kenneth Mackenzie of Suddie, for the Shires of Ross and Cromarty, where there were, it seems, Irregularities; and the Effects of the ministerial Labours of Mrs. Hog, Macgiligan, and other Presbyterian Ministers, continued till the Revolution.

To Kenneth Mackenzie of Suddie

Thus we have seen a broad Foundation laid for a heavy Persecution in all Corners of the Country, and even in the Northern Shires, where Presbyterians were comparatively very few. In the next Section, I shall give some Hints of the Prosecution of these Powers granted to so many.

S E C T. III.

Containing some general Account of the Persecution up and down the Country, this Year.

WE have just now seen Foundations laid for a very severe and general Persecution, this Year; but it is needful, that this Matter may stand in its full Light, to take a View of what followed upon these large Commissions in the West, South, and other Places: And I shall leave the particular Hardships I have larger Accounts of, to the next Section.

Sum of this Section

I have already noticed, that this new and general Persecution owes very much its Rise to the Prelates, and Bishop Paterfon's Journey to London; and therefore, towards the End of May, their Schemes for further Persecution came to take some Air. The Views of them that Presbyterians had, will appear from an original Letter of the Reverend Mr. John Carlyairs, to Mr. Robert Wylie, then in France, of the Date May 30. The Passage relative to this is, ' Things here have still a most formidable Aspect, and I hear, that quickly the Gentlemen of our western Shires, will be put to bind for themselves and these under them, that they live peaceably and orderly; which, if refused, will draw the Forces on them, wherewith they have been so fore squeezed already. Not going to Church, Baptizing, Marrying with any other than the regular Incumbents, are almost every where severely mulcted and punished; neither 1682.

Prelates the Spring of this Persecution

The Matter of Refet and Converse run very high
this Year

Consequences of the Commissions this Year, come in under the following Years.

Soldiers sent to the different Shires where the Commissions are granted.

Some of their Work.

Presbyterians
now generally attacked, even those no way concerned in any Rulings.

neither is there any probable Appearance of an Outgate : The Lord knoweth how to deliver the Godly out of Temptation. Many Ways are obvious to him, when none appear to us ; he can save by Prerogative, when Salvation cannot be expected by common Rule.

A good Number of the Heritors concerned in Bothwel were forfeited, or had compounded. The common Prisoners were either transported, or otherways disposed of ; but then Multitudes had not fallen into their Hands, some of whom were declared Fugitives, but many were, either not got Notice of, or overlooked, and had been now openly about their Business, and at Kirk, Market, Fairs, and some of them in Posts under the Government, so that the most cautious were perfectly secure as to their Converse with them. Yet this Year the Matter of Refet, of Converse with such, yea, with such as were habit and repute to have been in the Rebellion, was screwed so high, as involved the whole Country, and every Body was at the Mercy of the Soldiers and Managers. Tho' no legal Sentence had been pronounced against a Person for being at Bothwel, yet if two Witnesses deposed he was repute to be there, and that you had conversed with him, this was reputed Treason, as in the Case of Blackwood, and many others. And the utmost Severity was resolved on in this Matter ; and the vast Number of Commissions given out, were partly in order to the executing of this.

The lamentable Fruits of this Multitude of Commissions will appear not only in this but the following Years ; and I know Commissions were granted to several others who are not mentioned in the Council Registers, if I have not overlooked them, as to the Laird of Lagg, and others. It is only some general Hints of the Persecution this Year, most of it by virtue of these Commissions, I am to insert here. And, it may be, some of them may belong to some of the following Years, since they want particular Dates sometimes.

I shall only observe further, that the Soldiers were sent to those Places of the Country where these Commissioners were to act, and many of the Commissioners were in some Office in the Army. The Pretence of this was, as the Commissioners represented to the Council, that many withdraw their Goods to elude the Sentences for not keeping their Parish Kirks, &c. And the Council allow them to send for some Soldiers after Citation or Sentence, to see that none of their Goods be withdrawn, and that they be inventared, and that the Soldiers pay for their Quarters. And September 2. they order a Party of Soldiers to go to Kirkcudbright, to secure the Lord Livingstone in Possession of the Estates of the Rebels there gited to him. And by other Papers I find Claverhouse's Troop came in and kept Garison at the Kenmuir, September this Year, and ilk Horse had allowed him three Pecks of Corn, and eight Stone of Straw or Hay weekly. And at the same Time another Troop was settled at Kirkcudbright, and had allowed for each Horse, Two Pecks of Corn, and Seven Stones of Straw or Hay weekly.

And when I am upon this Head, the Reader will have some View of the Work of the Soldiers of Kirkcudbright, at this Time, from an original Order just now before me, to a Serjeant and Fifteen of them, which deserves a Room here ; and, from it, we may guess at their Practice in other Places. The Order follows.

SErjeant Persie, in obedience to my Lord Livingstone's Commands to me, you are hereby ordered to go with your Fifteen Dragoons, presently under your Command, and quarter them proportionally, as you think convenient, upon the pretended Heritors of Mircartney, and Tenants thereof, the pretended Heritors and Possessors of the Lands of Bar, ( and Glisters pertaining thereunto ) ay and while they come into Kirkcudbright to me, and take Tacks of the haill forementioned Lands from me, in name of George Lord Livingstone Donatar of the same ; and not only find Caution for the yearly Rent thereof in Time coming, but also make Payment of all Bygones, preceeding the Term of Whitsunday last, from Bothwel. You are to exact free Quarter during your Abode, and, if Need be, to take what you stand in Need of for your Provision, from them, without Prejudice to any other. You are also to dispossess and remove the Lady Holm younger, forth of the Lands of Mircartney, and to cause some of your Party to possess the same till further Orders. And you are not to remove from any of your Quarters, till such Time as you receive my Order of new for that effect. Subscribed, for Warrant, at Kirkcudbright, the 23 Day of October, 1682.

Tho. Lidderdale.

It is Time now to give some general View of the Oppression of the Country this Year, in prosecution of the former Laws, and these Commissions and Powers. The Efforts of the Persecutors were unweariable, in their harassing of all Nonconformists to Prelacy, by their Soldiers, Searchings, Courts, and many other Ways ; and we shall have Occasion to observe the inferior Clergy prtty open, and most willing Agents in these Cruelties. The Attacks were now made almoste universally upon all Presbyterians and Nonconformists to Prelacy ; and the most Part now brought to Trouble, had no active Share in Bothwel or Airs-moss, and could not be reached for Field-conventicles.

Parti-

Particular Instances would be endless. I shall then put together some few Things in each Part of the Country where the Persecution raged, as a Vidimus of the lamentable State of the Country at present. There was no Register kept of the Courts held by them, nor was it their Interest it should be so; and any Accounts I give, are the more short and indistinct. 1682.

To begin with the South this Year, David Graham held Courts both in Galloway and Niddale, whether under Claverhouse, or by a particular Warrant, I know not. I shall notice a few Instances which are before me, without any other Date than the Year. In the Parish of Twinam, he had all his Informations from the Curate. He imprisoned several Country Women with sucking Children on their Breasts, because they would not give Bond to keep the Church, and hear their persecuting Incumbent. Instances in different Places.

In the Parish of Tunnergarth, in Niddale I suppose, Courts were held, at which Husbands, under such and such Penalties, were made to oblige themselves either to bring their Wives to the Church, or to engage not to harbour or reset them; and some in the Parish, who scrupled at hearing the Incumbents, were forced, by their Husbands, to wander up and down; and others, by Force, were carried to hear the Curate: And when he came into the Pulpit, some of them would speak and cry out against him, as the Fountain of all their Trouble. Tunnergarth.

In the same Place, there was a poor old Woman, really pious, as my Information bears, lame of both her Arms, and having but little Sight to guide her any where from her own House, for mere Nonconformity was cast out of her Cottage by the Soldiers, and her House razed to the Ground. Upon this, she was obliged to hide her self in a neighbour House. The Curate getting Notice of it, came himself with a Party of Soldiers to the House, and, having found her out, said, Jean, you shall crook no more in Moss-side, and sent her away with the Soldiers, that she might be turned out of the Parish; and added, She was a scabbed Hog, and would infect all the Flock. However, her Brother, by a little Money, prevailed with the Soldiers, and got her back, and harboured her a few Days, till she got to a better World. The Curate's Severities there.

The same Incumbent hearing of several religious People in Tunnergarth, who used to meet together for Prayer, fell upon such Methods as to hinder their meeting in any House of the Parish; and plainly threatned any House he suspected they could gather in, with staging them for a Conventicle. The honest People betook themselves to a retired Place in the Fields, and used to meet there for that Exercise. As soon as this came to the Incumbent's Knowledge, he went to them himself, and scattered them, threatning to delate them; and, which was worse, having noticed the Persons carefully, he sent for a Company of Soldiers, and directed them to their Houses, which they pillaged and rifled, for no other Cause than what is above.

No small Share had the Episcopal Ministers in this hot Persecution in this Country, at this Time. In the Parish of Lochmaben, I find Mr. George Graham Incumbent there, a violent Pulver of Severities against Nonconformists. He used to give in Delations against them, and was really the Cause of all their Hardships; tho' the Papers before me say, it is notoriously known, that he skreened some Things of a deeper Dye. Some of his Elders, such as they were, used habitually to profane the Sabbath; some good People of the Parish, threatned them with a Delation, and were resolved upon it, had they not been hindred. Some of the profane Persons against whom they resolved to complain, way-laid them, and endeavoured to murder them; and it was notour, Mr. Graham did all in his Power to palliate them as to both; and he was generally observed to overlook the Fornicators in his Parish. Lochmaben, the Curate's Share of the Persecution.

Near by, in the Parish of St. Mungo in Annandale, an old Man was fined by Cornet Graham, for bare Nonconformity, and forced to leave his House and wander; and he, with too many in the same Circumstances, were really put very hard to it. The Country were so bound up, by the Fear of Soldiers, and not a few by direct Oaths, that they could have no Reset, and were in the greatest Difficulties for Want of Subsistence. The old Man sometimes haunted about his own House, mostly to get a little to satisfy his Hunger; whereupon his Master was fined in Five hundred Merks at some of these Courts, and allowed Regrefs. And further, he was impowered, upon Notice of his coming on his Ground, to employ the Soldiers to catch him, and if he was caught, he was to be discharged his Fine, and if he was missed, he was to pay it. St. Mungo.

In that same Parish of St. Mungo, there was a Boy, not above Sixteen Years of Age, cited to one of the Courts held this Year or the next, for not keeping the Church, and his Age made him free of any other Thing. When he did not compear, Cornet Graham sent a Party of Soldiers to quarter upon his Father, who was regular enough. Mean while, the Father was cited to the Court next Meeting, where the Cornet required a Bond of him, never to reset, converse with, countenance, or any way supply his own Son. The Incumbent of the Parish sitting in Court, said, That it was fit and reasonable the Father should suffer for his Son, who was but a Child, and his Parents ought to have made him regular by a Bridle. Boy of 16 Years.

1682.

Parents persecuted to Children, mean while Papists are overlookt.

Galloway.

Balmaghie.

New Glenluce.

Anworth.

Air Shire.

The poor Youth however, was forced to wander up and down in Cold and Storms, without any Shelter, till he fell into a most violent Fever, and had no Body to look after him. Innumerable are the Instances of this Nature, that might be gathered from the different Parishes in that Country. Parents who were entirely regular, were bound under great Penalties, not to speak to, or resist their Children; and some of the coarser Sort of them were brought, by Frights from the Soldiers, to use great Severities on their Children, to force them to go to Church. Mean while, neither Clergy nor Soldiers troubled the Papists in these Bounds: They had Popish Priests continually among them, and Mas's publicly and regularly gone about; but, it seems, these were their good Friends, and never disturbed.

Let us turn in to Galloway, and we shall find Matters much in the same Posture. In February this Year, there was a very honest Country Man in the Parish of Balmaghie, suspected to have been at Bothwell, but no Evidence found against him; however, the Soldiers came to search the House for him, but he was got out of the Way: His Wife was but a few Hours brought to Bed of a Child, and they most barbarously turned her out to the Fields, and rifled the House. This same Man was in April delated for Nonconformity, and as suspected of being at Bothwell, by the Curate. By a little Money, he got his Name scored out of the Roll, which the Curate noticing, challenged, and nothing would satisfy him till he got a Party of Soldiers sent to his House, who rifled it a second Time.

In August this Year, Claverhouse attacked Multitudes of Nonconformists, who were not so much as alledged to have been in any Rising. In the Parish of New Glenluce, he seized John Archbald, Anthony McBryde, John Macleanochan, and John Wallace, merely for not hearing of the Incumbents. They were brought in to Stranraer, and lay in Prison Twelve Weeks; and because they refused to oblige themselves to wait upon Ordinances, and live regularly, as it was termed, they were not only kept in Prison, but Soldiers sent to their Houses to quarter on their Families, and eat up all their Living: Twelve Horie were quartered upon one, Seven upon another, and so proportionally, as their Stock would bear. Anthony McBryde's Seven Soldiers, tho' they had Plenty of Victuals in his House, such as Country Places afford, they would have his Wife go out on the Sabbath Day, and bring in Two Sheep and slay them: This she refused, whereupon one of them threatened to throw her into a large Fire before them, and attempted to do it, but was prevented by the Family. After these Men had been a Quarter of a Year in Prison, and their Houses thus spoiled, Claverhouse ordered them to be tied Two and Two together, and set upon bare-backed Horses, and carried into Edinburgh, there to be tried. When they had gone one Day's Journey, he sent his Servant to them, with Bonds to be signed by them, a Thousand Merks per piece, and promised them their Liberty; the Bonds ran just in common Form, and therein they obliged themselves to pay the Sum upon Demand. This was yielded to, and they got Home; and the most of them paid the Money, yet this did not prevent many new Hardships during the following Years. This is another Instance of Oppression of People in their Civil Rights, under pretext of Religion.

Another Instance of Cruelty, at this Time, I meet with in the Parish of Anworth. A Troop of Dragoons came into that Parish, and a Gentleman there had Seven of them for his Share. They wanted for nothing in that House but Ale, and, instead of that, had Milk in abundance. One of the Soldiers came to the Gentleman, and ordered him to provide them in Ale; the other answered him calmly, There was none about them to be had; and till the Waters, at present very much up, were fallen, none could be had. The Soldier said, He would have Ale, if he should go to Hell and seek it. The Gentleman said innocently to him, If once you were there, you will not come back to tell News. Whereupon the Soldier fell a threshing him with a Thorn Staff; immediately the Gentleman closed in, and wrestled with him in his own Defence, till the rest of the Soldiers parted them. The Soldier in a little Time went off, and, resolving to be avenged, came to his commanding Officer with a Multitude of Lies, and got another Party, by his Direction, who took the Gentleman, as he was on his Way coming to inform the Officer, and carried him away Prisoner. The Cause was not heard for some Time; mean while both the Parties quartered upon the House, eat up all about it, perfectly destroyed the Meadows, and took away all the Gentleman's Horses. When the Officer came to examine the Matter, he found the Soldier had misrepresented the Thing to him, and dismissed the Gentleman, but would not punish the Soldier, nor restore what was taken away by his Men, far less satisfy for Damage done.

This same Year, James Harris of Ardmenoch, and John his Son, Men of known Integrity and Usefulness in their Stations, were, for mere refusing to hear the Incumbents, after many Ravages committed upon their Houses and Lands, carried Prisoners to Dumfries by Captain Strachan, and kept there till they paid Fifteen Pounds Ten Shillings Sterling, Fine, besides Thirty Shillings to the Jaylors. The old Man had paid Forty Pounds Scots to Sir James Turner, besides several other smaller Sums at different Times.

I come now to the Shire of Air, and there Ardmillan, but especially Major White oppressed the Country most grievously. John Boyd Schoolmaster in Cowend, formerly an Indweller in the Shire of Air, was this Year, at the Instance of Ardmillan, merely for not hearing the Curates, Curates, sorely harassed. His House was Three Times robbed of all the Furniture in it, by the Soldiers. He was forced to pay Forty Pounds Scots to Ardmillan, and after that carried in Prisoner to Edinburgh, where he lay Three Months in close Prison, and before he was liberate paid upwards of an hundred Pounds Scots, whereby he was reduced to great Wants. Major White did in a particular Manner exerce his Commission this Year, in the Shire of Air. He went through almost every Parish in particular, fining Nonconformists, and imprisoning not a few.

I find him, together with Mr. John Cockburn, and William Crichtoun Sheriff-depute, holding a Court at Kilmarnock. Much of the Country round was summoned, and the Curates were the principal Delaters; and at this Place he pressed the following Bond.

Bond pressed by Major
White at Kilmarnock.

‘ We Undersubscribers respectively bind and oblige us, our Wives and Children, and Servants, that we shall in all Time coming keep our Parish-church, and shall not be present at House or Field-conventicles, nor receive Baptism to any of our Children from any Minister, but our own Parish Minister, and in case of his Absence, from the next conformist Minister; and shall not harbour, refect, or entertain any intercommuned Persons or vagrant Preachers: And all this under the Pain and Penalty of an Hundred Merks, to be paid by me to ———— for each Failie in the same.’

When the Country People appeared before this Court, they were first sworn to declare the Verity, and nothing less or more, of every Thing which should be enquired of them. Then they were enquired upon Oath, if they were guilty of hearing Sermon at House or Field-conventicles, since the Indemnity 1679. Further, they were asked if they had kept their Parish-kirk during that Time, at least once in Three Sabbaths, with many other Questions. If they declared upon their Oath, that they had been regular, they were dismissed upon their signing the Bond; but it was few who were summoned could do so. Such as either would not swear, or who confessed any Thing, were fined by the Major in exorbitant Sums, some in Sums far above what they were really worth. After the Sentence, the Major had his own Ways of signifying, that if they gave the Clerk so much, Six Dollars was the ordinary Quota, and the poorer Sort less, for an Allowance to take the abovementioned Bond, they should have no more Trouble: But all who took not this Bond, or at least who paid not the said Sums, which were heightened in case the Bond was not complied with, were immediately sent to Prison; and such Multitudes were imprisoned, that they were in Hazard of stifling. Vast Quantities of Money were this way extorted from the poor Country, and that almost in every Parish. I have seen very large Accounts of the Sums in some Parishes of the Shire of Air.

In the small Parish of Dalmellington, at one of Major White’s Courts this Year, the following Persons were fined in the after Sums, for being present at one Sermon preached by Mr. George Barclay, at the Chapel in Straitoun Parish. Roger Dun in McColmstoun, actually paid an Hundred Merks, besides Thirty Pounds to Drumfry, to bring his Fine so low. John Edgar in Dabarro paid Fifty Merks. Robert Dun in Lassie-hill paid an Hundred Merks, and Thirty Pounds to Drumfry, to bring it so low. Peter Mcwhitter in Waterside paid an Hundred Merks, and some time after this an Hundred Pounds for his Wife’s not keeping the Church. David McGill in Drumgrange paid Fifty Merks. John Wright in Barclaystoun paid Fifty Merks. James Dun in Bluewhet paid an Hundred Merks. Ronald Rob paid Twenty five Merks, and was imprisoned Four Days. John Cunningham in Keirhill compeared not, and his Family was obliged to disperse, and all left in his House was plundered. Anthony Bizzard in Dynasken, was fined in an Hundred Pounds. John Bizzard in Laight paid Twenty five Merks, and was imprisoned Four Days. From such Multitudes in so small a Parish for one Sermon out of the Parish, of which I have an attested Account, the Reader will guess what was uplifted in other Places.

Auchinleck and Cummock.

This same Year, the Earl of Dumfries charged all Persons in the Parishes of Auchinleck and Cummock, to appear before him, and fined all who had baptized Children with any other than the Incumbent, in Fifty Pounds each, poiding and driving their Cattle and Goods till they paid it. My Information bears, that one Andrew Pathe, in the Parish of Auchinleck, was forced to pay his Fifty Pounds, because he kept his Child unbaptized Six Weeks, tho’ afterward he carried it to the Incumbent. Another in the same Parish, Hary Stopton, was fined in Sixty Pounds, because he refused to tell who baptized his Child. Such who did not compear before these iniquous Courts, were in Absence most rigorously and severely fined.

Thus David Moody, in the same Parish, for not appearing before Major White’s Court, was fined in an Hundred and eighty Merks, and was forced to displenish his House, and wander up and down, where for many Weeks he lay in the open Fields. But these Oppressions and arbitrary Finings are in such Multitudes in this and the following Years, that I can name but a very few of them. It may be, I shall essay in some Place or other in this History to give a general Estimate of them.

I come eastward to the Shire of Lanerk. In the Town of Rutherglen the Provost was very severe in his Finings, as I find by an attested Account. He sent his Officers to a Widow

Lanerk, Rutherglen.

1682.

Widow Woman's House there, to seize her only Son, who did not hear the Curate. The Youth did not incline to appear, and with a Struggle got out of the Officers Hands; whereupon the Provost, with his Officers, came and seized his Sister, alledging she was accessory to her Brother's Escape, and fined her in Thirty Pounds. The old Woman mean while, through Sorrow, Fear, and Concern, sickned, and had no Body to look after her, and yet so cruel was the Provost, that he would not allow her Daughter to come out on Bail, and minister to her in her seemingly dying Case. Instead of this, in a few Days, December. 27. 1682. after Ten at Night, he came with his Officers, assaulted the House with Sword in Hand. The poor Woman calmly opened unto him, and seeing his Sword drawn, said, Dear Provost, sober your self, what are you seeking? He answered with Oaths, he was seeking her Son, who, he was sure, was in the House praying. He searched the House, and found him not, but left not the poor Woman till she paid him Twenty Merks. The People in that Place could not but observe, that his Wife in a few Days died in Child-birth, and Three Children in a very little Time died of the King's Evil, and a Fourth not long after, and himself fell under the Scandal of Adultery, and died childless.

A great deal of this Severity was owing to the Incumbent of this Place. Upon every Turn I have Occasion to observe, that the Clergy not only instigate to this rigorous Procedure against such who could not in Conscience submit to them, but were the prime Informers against poor People. In their visiting of Families they were very careful to examine, and generally took a Note of such who did not keep the Church. Without Breach of Charity, I may say, this was one of the main Views some of them had in Visiting; and at most of their Courts the Rolls of Delinquents were formed out of the Incumbent's Roll. I have a well vouched Account of that profligate Man Mr. Hugh Blair, Incumbent at Rutherglen, to this Purpose. This Year he was visiting in that Town, and challenged a Woman very hard upon her not keeping the Church. She began to give her Reasons, and among other Things spoke of the Obligation of the Covenants: This put the poor Man into a terrible Rage, and among other opprobrious and abominable Discourse, he called her very openly a covenanted Whore. The Woman had not so learned Religion as to render Railing for Railing, tho' she had good enough Ground to have told him, he was at that Timelying in Whoredom with one of his own Servants, as within a while came publickly to be known.

In the Parish of Kilbride, in the same Shire, Captain Inglis harassed many Families, under Pretext of searching for Wanderers and such who had been at Bothwell, especially John Nisbet, who had been at Drumclog and Bothwell. He seized Three Country Men, Andrew Mack, John Carnduff, and Thomas Miller. Those Men either would not, or could not give him the Information he was desirous of, and therefore he put them to their Oath super inquirendis, but they peremptorily refused to give it; whereupon he caused bind them, and put fiery Matches twixt their Fingers, which put them to terrible Torment, and perfectly maimed their Hands. One of them in the Extremity of his Torment, confessed somewhat or other he knew, which, afterward upon his Reflection, well nigh distracted him. This Power of Torture lodged in every Commander of a Party of Soldiers, I am of Opinion can scarce be paralleled in any other Christian or civilized Nation.

The same Captain came a little after this to a Widow Woman's House in the same Parish, with a Design to apprehend her Son. He was happily from home that Day. The Captain missing him, and being told he was really from home, called all the Neighbours together, and obliged them with the Family it self to swear in this Form, By the eternal God, and as I am content to lose my Part in Heaven, I know not where John Mack is. One of them refusing to swear this irreligious Oath, the Captain with his Soldiers beat him with Guns and Staves, till they left him for dead. This Power to every Soldier to impose horrid and unaccountable Oaths upon the Lieges, is another Peculiarity of these Times, which I leave to their Advocates to vindicate.

Much about the same Time, the Laird of Hallyards, with a Party of Soldiers, made terrible Havock in the Parish of East-monkland, and neighbouring Places in the same Shire. He and his Party came upon Seventeen or Eighteen Families in that Parish, and seized upon their whole Crops and Substance, for no other Reason but mere Nonconformity, and proven only by the verbal Information of the Incumbent. He would allow them the Use of nothing which was their own, until they paid a Fine as large as he pleased, besides Fourteen Pence for each Day he and his Men had been eating their Meat, and his Horses their Straw and Corn. Some paid an Hundred Pounds Scots, some an Hundred Merks, some Fifty, together with the former daily Quota for Riding-money; and the Consumption and Destruction made upon their Houses, came very near to as much as their Fine. They used to fettle Corn for their Horses, much more than they could consume, and then would abuse and cast out the rest; they were sure to spoil every Thing they did not destroy, and such who would not compound with them, and pay their Fine, had every Thing that was theirs destroyed.

And to give the Whole of this Barbarity on this Parish together, next Summer Meldrum came after Hallyards upon the very same Families, and drove their Cattle and Goods, and took

Methods of the Clergy to help on this Persecution.

Kilbride.

East-monkland.

took Four of the Men Prisoners, and forced them to pay an Hundred Merks apiece, and the rest were obliged to compound. Eastfield, a Feuair there, would enter into no Agreement with them, and they robbed him of Goods and Victual, moderately speaking, to the Value of a Thousand six hundred Merks. 1682.

And to complete their Ruin, in Winter that same Year, Archibald Inglis, a Commander under Hallyards, came upon them, and seized upon their Crop for their continuing in Nonconformity. He alledged that the Persons who had bought their Crop last Year, had suffered them to possess it and their Goods; and their Ground was sown with Corn bought from the Soldiers, and the Increase was theirs, and they had a Title to seize it, unless they could produce Testimonials, that they, their Wives and Children had kept the Church. Presbyterians have been most groundlessly and foolishly charged with asserting, that Dominion and Property are founded upon Grace; but according to this Reasoning Dominion and Property are indeed founded on Conformity to Prelacy.

The poor People were forced to compound a Second or Third Time, for what was their own, and such as did not, were cast out of House and Holding. And if any of their compassionate Neighbours offered to save any Thing that belonged to them, or harboured them, the Soldiers dealt the same way with them.

One Piece of Barbarity at this Time I cannot omit. The same Inglis came with a Party to the Western Arnbuckles in the same Parish; the Man they were searching for was fled, or was not at home. The Soldiers alledged that some Part of that Year's Crop was disposed of, and forced the Women of the House to swear if it was so, when they saw the Goodman, or if they knew where he was. After this they found a Boy of about Fifteen Years or under, and would have him to swear as above, and upon Oath declare where his Master was: The Youth refusing, they struck him with Swords till he was all running down in Blood; in this Pickle they dragged him by the Hair of the Head to the Fire, and after they had wrung about his Nose till it was gushing out in Blood, they held his Face to the Fire till his Eyes were like to leap out of his Head. The poor Women not able to help him, prayed him with Tears to tell any Thing he could, before he were burnt to Death. When in this Torment, they held drawn Swords to his Breast, cursing and swearing they would immediately send him to Eternity; and then struck and beat him upon the Head, till he fell down dead among their Hands, as they thought, and so left him as such, and the House. However, he recovered, but was distracted for some Time, after this barbarous Usage.

A terrible Barbarity in the Western Arnbuckles.

This was the Treatment of the West Country this Year, and all this is but some few Gleanings of what might be gathered, but those Instances may help the Reader to form some Notion of the Iniquity of this Time. I shall only add a Passage or Two from the East and North of Scotland, for the same Spirit was raging every where, tho' the great Scene of the Persecution was in the West and South.

I have an attested Account of a Sermon this Year, at Eyoncraig, in the Parish of Pennycook, or near by, which brought no small Trouble to the People about. Some officious Person or other went and informed the Master of the Ground, Sir Alexander Gibson, who presently got a Party of Soldiers, and came to the Place; but the Sermon was over, and the People dismissed before they came. Two Prisoners were taken into Edinburgh, and severely fined. Some Days after the Sheriff came and held Courts upon the Place, and called in all the Inhabitants about, Men and Women, and obliged them to swear whether they had been at that Sermon. Some through Fear swore falsely, and afterward fell under Terror, and died miserably. Many were fined, some in Fifty, some in an Hundred Pounds, and several fled and quit their Houses and Lands.

To step over to Fife, I find in July this Year, the abovementioned John Archer, then living in Stramiglo, with several others in that Town, fined in Three hundred Pounds Scots each, for mere Nonconformity. This Sum they were not able to pay, and so had Soldiers quartered upon them: Twenty Dragoons were ordered to ly in their Houses, while they and most of their Family were forced to flee and leave the House to the new Guests. The Dragoons took them up, and did as they pleased in them, till the Feuars of that little Town gave Bond to the Superior, and he to that Sheriff or his Depute, that they should never after be reset or harboured in that Place, under the Pain of the hail fore-said Fines. Besides this, before they could get rid of these unhappy Neighbours, the Riding-money, as above, of the Dragoons was laid upon the Feuars, altho' they had plundered the Houses, and taken away every Thing that was left, by which their Charges was much more than paid.

Fife.

Stramiglo.

By this Severity the said John Archer, his Wife, and Family of five small Children, were forced to hide and wander from July to November this Year. In November Two of Mr. Archer's Children fell sick of a dangerous Fever, and when lying in a House they were discovered, and the poor People who took a Care of them were threatned, and in Hazard to be brought to Trouble, for this Act of Humanity to Two Infants in Distress: Yea, so far was the Malice and Barbarity carried, that the poor innocent Babes behoved to be removed, to the great Hazard of their Lives; and after many had refused to lodge them for Money, their Father got a retired House for them in the Path-head of Kirkaldy, where the other 1682.

John Archer.

Three

Innerkeithing.
Andrew Adamson.

Three sickned, and there this pious Man fell under new Persecution in February next Year, as I shall notice.

About this Time, not a few in the Town of Innerkeithing were brought to no small Trouble. I have an attested Account of some Severities used against Andrew Adamson Chirurgeon there, who was chargeable with nothing but Nonconformity. Before Bothwell, several Parties came to apprehend him at his House; he still escaped, but every Time his House and Family escaped not Damage. This Year Alexander Malcom, Sheriff-depute of Fife, put in by the Earl of Balcarras, when the Sheriffship was lodged in his Hands, upon my Lady Roths and the Earl of Haddingtoun their refusing the Test, rigorously pressed Conformity; and there was no escaping sore Oppression without taking the Test. Mr. Adamson was forced to hide for some Months, at length returning privately to his own Family, he was imprisoned by the Magistrates for not hearing the Incumbent; but after paying a considerable Fine, he was let out. Within a little the Sheriff-depute attacked him, but he getting Notice, left the Place with his whole Family, and lived as hiddenly as he could in Edinburgh, till the Revolution.

Mean while the Dragoons came to his House, and finding him gone, went to the House of James Fergusson, and quartered upon him Twenty Days, together with their Horses. Under the Prospect of this, Mr. Adamson had caused his Victual that Harvest to be stacked with the Victual of others in the Place, who could not be reached by Law. Mr. Alexander Irvine, the Episcopal Incumbent there, who was indeed the Author of all the Severities honest People in Innerkeithing met with at this Time, had got Notice of this by his Spies and Informers whom he entertained and paid, and came himself with the Dragoons to the Stackyard, and caused all the Stacks be cast, and as much as came to Mr. Adamson's Share, was taken out and put into a large Barn, where they put the Dragoons Horses loose, till the whole of it was rendred useless. And the Magistrates of the Town uplifted the Rents of several Houses and Lands in that Place belonging to Mr. Adamson, till near the Revolution.

Yea, such was the Virulence of Mr. Irvine, that after Mr. Adamson's Family was removed, he went to the Magistrates and threatned them with a Council Process, and more than once formerly he had got them summoned before the Council, because they would not go into every severe Prosecution he proposed, if they did not make a Proclamation through their Town, discharging Mr. Adamson, or any in his Family, to be seen in the Streets, and ordering them to be apprehended, under the highest Pains; which, for Peace sake, they did. And yet Mr. Adamson was not only useful in his Business in that Place, but universally known for his Moderation and harmless Carriage, and lived in very much Friendship with Dr. Scot, while Episcopal Minister there, tho' he differed as much in his Principles from him, as from Mrs. Lawder and Irvine his violent Successors. I have given this Account more largely, being vouched by Mr. Adamson's Son, a reverend Minister of this Church.

By Mr. Irvine's Influence, many other worthy Persons in the same Town were brought to no small Trouble for their not hearing. Thomas Thomson elder, a Master of a Ship, Thomas Thomson younger his Son, William Brown Baxter, Robert Stuart Master of a Ship, who was a long Time Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, with Mr. Forrest of Three-acres, near Stirling: Those, with several others, for mere Nonconformity, were obliged to remove with their Families, and sustained great Loss.

I shall end this general Account of the Severities of this Year, with an Instance or Two from the North, where there were not many to persecute.

Mr. Alexander
Pitcairn turned out of Dron.

This Year the reverend Mr. Alexander Pitcairn, who, by good Providence had been Minister at Dron near Perth for many Years, was forced to leave his Charge. He was indeed an Eye-sore to the Episcopal Clergy in that Country. After he had sitted many Citations and Summons to remove, the Marquis of Athole, as we have seen, came and turned him out. I have no further Accounts of this worthy and learned Minister, who is known through the Reformed Churches by his Writings. Only I find Holland was the Place of his Shelter, where he continued until the Liberty, when he, with many worthy Ministers, ventured home from their Exile. And after the happy Revolution, Mr. Pitcairn was made Provost of the old College in St. Andrews by King William.

Lawrence Gibson.

Lawrence Gibson, in the neighbouring Parish of Arngask, who used to be a daily Hearer of Mr. Pitcairn while at Dron, was about the same Time brought into the Tolbooth of Perth. This Man was married to a Servant of that excellent Family of Ruthven, who did what they could for his Liberation, nothing being to be laid to his Charge but hearing a Presbyterian Minister not turned out of his Church. Several Ladies went into Perth, and most earnestly besought his Liberation; and when that was not allowed, they offered sufficient Caution, and craved he might be bailed till he answered his Indictment, but nothing could be heard; yet those Persons of Honour had no Weight in so reasonable a Request. The poor Man was sent into Edinburgh, and there, upon no other Head than what is above, was sentenced to be a Recruit to one of the Scots Regiments, in the Service of the States. The Sentence was executed, and he went over, and continued in that Service till his Father in Law, John Ruthven, advanced a considerable Sum of Money to Captain, afterward Major Henry

Henry Balfour of Dunbog, who procured his Pass, and so he got home, and continued a Servant in the Family of Ruthven, till the Revolution. This remarkable Severity I have attested by a Person of Honour, nearly related to that noble Family, who knew him and all the Steps of this Matter.

1682.

A few more Instances offer, from an attested Account, of some Sufferings in Perth and Angus, before me.

David Peter and James Proctor were attacked by the Sheriff of Forfar, for not hearing the Incumbent, and imprisoned, and all their Goods seized without any Process or Trial, whereby they were brought to great Hardships, and put from their Residence. The same Sheriff apprehended Thomas Clepan, in the Parish of Kerrimuir, for mere Nonconformity, and kept him in Prison till he paid a considerable Fine, tho' he was aged and infirm through the Wounds he had received in his Youth, in the King's Service, at Innerkeithing; but nothing of this Kind was now minded.

David Peter,
James Proctor of Forfar, and Thomas Clepan
in Kerrimuir.

Mrs. Minniman, a Presbyterian Minister's Widow, was apprehended by the Magistrates of Perth, for mere Nonconformity, while her only Son was dangerously sick: And the poor Child took a violent Crying for his Mother, and continued so till he died, and this religious Gentlewoman offered to bind her self under all she was worth in the World, to re-enter Prison after a Day or Two's Attendance on her dying Son; yet such was the Inhumanity of this Period, that she could not be allowed once to see her Child. In a little Time after, this good Woman died also of Grief.

Mrs. Minniman
in Perth.

Those Things may suffice to give a general View of the State of Presbyterians Sufferings this Year, and I have put them together, wanting the particular Dates of them. I come now to give a Narrative of some Sufferings of particular Ministers and Gentlemen this Year, of which I have more full and distinct Accounts.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Sufferings of the reverend Mr. Patrick Warner, Mr. Henry Erskine, and some other Presbyterian Ministers and Gentlemen, this Year 1682.

I Have of design deferred the more particular Accounts of the Sufferings of the worthy Persons I am to mention in this Section, to this Place, both because the Importance of the attested Narratives of their Sufferings deserves a Room by themselves, and also that the former Section is sufficiently swelled already, so I give them just in the Order of Time they happened. It needs scarce be remarked, that the Government had nothing to charge them with, but their Non-subjection to Prelacy.

Contents of this Section.

Upon the former Year, I promised to give an Account here, of the rest of the heavy Sufferings of that good Man James Gray of Chrystoun; and that the Reader may have the Thread of the Story together, as likewise that my Work afterwards, where particular Instances will grow upon my Hand, may be shortned, I shall give all his Sufferings after this together, as also those of some of the rest I am to mention, tho' several Branches of them were in the following Years.

The remaining Sufferings of James Gray of Chrystoun.

I left Strachan's Dragoons last Year, eating up all this Gentleman's Substance, till the End of December, when they went off. In January this Year, Mr. Gray ventured Home to see his Family; and, upon a Sabbath Evening, a Party of Dragoons, who by this Time knew his House well, having got Intelligence of him, came out of Glasgow, seized him, and brought him in Prisoner to that Place, without giving any Reason, or shewing any Warrant. He was that Night examined by the Lord Ross, and some other Officers of the Army there, and by them committed to Prison, whence, after Three or Four Weeks, he was carried in to Edinburgh.

He is seized at his own House,
Jan. this Year.

There he lay a long Time in Prison, without being called for by any Court or Judge: His Friends represented, That Mr. Gray had formerly been purged in Law, relaxed from the Horn, and restored to the Peace, and that now he was imprisoned without any Libel or Charge against him, and therefore begged he might be liberate; but all was in vain, unless he would engage to conform in all Points with the present Church-establishment, which he could not in Conscience do.

He continues
long in Prison
at Edinburgh.

After about a Year's Imprisonment, he was brought before the Council, who attacked him with their captious Questions, in order to ensnare him. He declined answering at first, and

His Examination
before the Council.

com-

1682. complained of his Seizure contrary to Law, and wrongous Imprisonment now upwards of a Year; but they would not enter upon these Heads, and, having him now in their Clutches, began to press him to declare his Thoughts and Opinion anent the Bishop of St. Andrews's Death, whether Murder or not; the Rising at Bothwell, whether Rebellion or not; yea, King Charles I's. Death, whether Murder or not; and many other Questions of that Nature.

Unto several of their Questions he answered, That he did not reckon himself obliged peremptorily to judge of the Actions of others. As to King Charles I's. Death, after he had signified how much he was surprized at their going so far back, he told them, he was of the same Mind with the then Church and State of Scotland, who did highly resent it.

In short, upon his owning it as his Opinion, that the Matter of the Covenant was lawful, and its Obligation binding, and his declaring the Principle of Self-defence, upon just Grounds, to be what he took to be natural to every Man, and highly rational; and upon his refusing to assent or swear to their slavish Position, That it is unlawful for Subjects, upon any Pretext whatsoever, to take up Arms against the King, or any commissionate by him, or to meet, treat, or consult about any thing, Civil or Ecclesiastical, without his Warrant; and his refusing to give any Engagement to subject himself to the present Church-establishment, he was sent back to Prison.

Where he lay for more than Two Years. Now and then, when they were at Leisure, they would call him before the Council, or its Committees, and interrogate him upon the foresaid and other Heads they proposed to him, with the same Success.

In the Month of July or August, 1684. he was again sifted before the Council, and had the Test, and other Things then pressed, tendered to him, which he refusing, the Council past a Sentence of Banishment upon him, and he was again returned unto Prison. And, August 1685. after Three Years and a Half's close Imprisonment, he was, without the least previous Notice given him, carried from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and hurried aboard a Ship, Captain Love Maister, and, with about 140 others, as we may afterwards notice, was transported to Jamaica.

In their Voyage, as Mr. Gray gives Account, they were most barbarously used, and had scarce so much Food allowed them as was sufficient to keep them from starving, and what they had was very coarse. They were shut up in such a Throng, under Deck, as occasioned a sore Fever among them; and, in their Sickness, they had no Refreshment allowed them. Many of them died merely for Thirst; some of them offered a Crown for one Drink of Water, whereof there was Abundance in the Ship, but it was still denied them. The Hardships they suffered were truly inexpressible, and can hardly be believed to have been what human Creatures would be capable of exercising one upon another.

After a Voyage of Three Months, they arrived at Jamaica, where they were sold. Mr. Gray was now near Sixty, and not very saleable, and had a Cast by common. They who had the Disposal of him would neither sell him with the rest, nor would they take the highest Rates they got for the strongest in the Company, and would not part with him but for a vast Sum, knowing he had an Estate; and therefore he was for some Time kept close Prisoner in Jamaica. While in Prison, he fell very sick, and was near unto Death; and then, rather than lose all, they liberate him for Fifteen Pounds Sterling. It pleased the Lord he recovered, and got Home to his native Country, where he was singularly useful in the Parish of Calder, after the Liberty and the Revolution; and he died in the Lord in Peace and full Age, some Years ago, leaving his Estate to his worthy Son, who, as he had some Share in his Father's Sufferings, desires to adhere to the Covenant of his Father, and essays to follow his religious Pattern. To him the Reader is indebted for some very valuable Hints in this History. I could add here several very remarkable providential Deliveries and Preservations Mr. Gray and his Family met with in their Suffering; but this Work is growing upon my Hand far beyond my Expectation.

Another Gentleman's Sufferings begin likewise this same Month of January this Year. We shall meet with him in the following Section, from the Justiciary Records, in Company with many others; but having a signed Account of some Branches of the Trouble he met with, I insert an Abbreviate of it here. Thomas Fergusson of Finnarts, a very sensible knowing Gentleman, in the Parish of Ballantree, upon the Borders of Galloway, was, with several others, forfeited, as we shall hear, and forced to flee for his Life to the Kingdom of Ireland, which was a Shelter to many worthy Sufferers upon that Side, as Holland was to a great many in the Eastern Parts of Scotland.

He was now aged Sixty one, and never had been in Arms in opposition to the Government, neither had he been actively accessory to the Rising at Bothwell; his only Crime was his not falling in with the Courses of this Period, and his having an Estate. The only Shadow of Ground for this Gentleman's Persecution and Forfeiture, was the Deposition of Two Men, for any thing I know, suborned, That a little before Bothwell, a Boy came out of a House in Ballantree, where Finnarts was, and warned all the Neighbourhood who had Sent back to Prison, where he continued some Years.

Banished 1684. and, 1685. sent off in a Ship to Jamaica.

Hardships in the Voyage.

In Jamaica, he fell sick, he is imprisoned, and there, sickening, is liberated.

Thomas Fergusson of Finnarts his Sufferings had a mind to joyn the Party in Arms about Glasgow, to repair to the said House, to receive Money and Arms. The Story indeed does not tell, and, except in this Instance, I have not met with any such Methods used to gather People to the West-country Army: But more than this the Prosecutors of his Forfeiture had not against him, nor any Proof of his Concern in that Boy's Actings, or Consent unto them; and I am assured no more was libelled against him than is above.

1682.

This was found sufficient to forfeit his Life and Estate. Upon his Forfeiture, Captain William Seton, one of the Guards, got a Gift of his Estate heritable and moveable; and when Finnarts was fled to Ireland, in May this Year, the Captain came South, and took Possession of all; yea, such was the Equity of this Time, that Seton, after some Pains, having got Notice of Mr. Fergusson's Debtors, pursued them at Law, and got paid him of Sums owing to Finnarts, upwards of Four thousand Merks. For Six Years the Captain possessed the Estate, lifted the Rents, and mean while, forced his Wife and Six Children out of their own House. For some Time they were obliged to lodge in the open Field, in a Glen near by, where they had a Fire for readying their Meat; at length, with great Difficulty, the Captain was prevailed with to suffer the Gentlewoman to return to her own House, and to have a small Bit of Land, upon her paying Twenty Pounds more of Rent, than ever had been before paid for them, when set in Tack.

I come now to give some Account of the Sufferings of a venerable and worthy Minister, yet alive, now, since his Brother's Death, last Year, 1716. the eldest Minister at present in the Church of Scotland, which began in February 1682. the Reverend Mr. Patrick Warner, who, since the Revolution, was Minister of Irwin about Twenty Years, till, by Age and Infirmary, finding himself unequal for so great a Charge, of late he hath demitted his pastoral Relation to that People. His own Modesty, and my near Relation to him, will not permit me to say what I could, as to his personal and ministerial Character, Piety, Learning, and Usefulness; his Character indeed is so savoury and well known in this Church, that I need say nothing of it.

Sufferings of Mr. Patrick Warner.

There are but a very few of these old suffering Ministers now alive, to give distinct Accounts of their own heavy Troubles, which is no small Loss to me in writing this History; and therefore, having the Advantage of a few Hints of his from himself, I shall give the Reader a fuller Account of the Severities he met with from the Government and Managers, and his Carriage under them.

And we may easily form a Judgment from their Procedure with him and some others formerly hinted at, of the Methods now used with many other excellent and worthy Presbyterian Ministers, who were heavily prosecuted in this Period, and some of them about this Time forced to flee their native Country; of whom it is Matter of Regret to me, that no particular Accounts have come to my Hands.

From the Methods used with him, we may have some View of the Sufferings of others about this Time, of whom I have no particular Accounts, as

Such as the very learned, singularly modest and excellent Mr. George Campbell, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh since the Revolution, that truly extraordinary Person, Mr. Thomas Hog, Minister at Kiltairn in the Shire of Ross, Mr. James Veitch Minister at Mauchlin, Mr. Alexander Pitcairn at Dron, Mr. James Kirkcoun, since the Revolution Minister at Edinburgh, of whom some Hints have been given, but very far short of what they suffered, Mr. Alexander Hasty Minister at Glasgow, Mr. Robert Langlands Minister first at the Barony of Glasgow, and then at Elgin of Murray, a Scholar of the first Rate, and fully Master of most part of the Branches of polite Learning, Mr. William Archbald, Mr. John Harroway, and Mr. Patrick Cowpar, and others who may not have come to my Knowledge, all of whom I think were Refugees in Holland: With several others whose singular Hardships forced them to take on a voluntary Banishment; which was likewise the Case of many Noblemen and Gentlemen, such as the Earl of Lowdon, the Lord Strathnaver, afterward Earl of Sutherland, my Lord Stair, the Accounts of whom I am sorry I cannot transmit to Posterity.

Mr. George Campbell.
Mr. Thomas Hog.
Mr. James Veitch.
Mr. Alexander Pitcairn.
Mr. James Kirkcoun.
Mr. Alexander Hasty.
Mr. Robert Langlands.
Mr. Archb.
Mr. John Harroway.
Mr. Patrick Cowpar.
Earl of Lowdon.
Lord Strathnaver, Lord Stair.
Mr. Warner licensed 1669.

Mr. Warner was licensed, some time after Pentland, to preach the Gospel, and very amply recommended by the Presbyterian Ministers in and about Edinburgh, when his Trials were over, to their Brethren the Dissenting Ministers at London, where after some Stay about the 1669. he was pitched upon by them to be recommended to the East India Company, who were then very willing to make use of Presbyterian Ministers in their Settlements, and was ordained at London with this View. Accordingly after various Providences, and his being taken at Sea by the Dutch Fleet when in an English Ship, he got safe to the East Indies, and was for about three Years Minister of Fort St. George upon the Coast of Cormandel.

Ordained at London, and Minister at Fort St. George in the East Indies.

There he was very kindly dealt with, and much importuned to stay longer by the East India Company, but longing to be home, he returned to his native Air about the 1677. when he preached sometimes with Mr. John Welsh, and sometimes with others in the Fields as Providence opened a Door, and sometimes with the Presbyterian Ministers who were indulged. During the whole Summer, 1677 or 1678. he and Mr. Welsh frequently preached together in Galloway, Carrick, and other Places.

Returns to Scotland and preaches with Mr. John Welsh and others, 1677 and 1678.

Thus he continued till the Defeat at Bothwell, which Day he was preaching to a large Meeting 1682.

Meeting in Galloway, and wanted not Impressions of the Disaster befallen the West-country Army, tho' he could have no Accounts of it. As soon as these reached him, he went straight for London, where, and in Holland, he continued till he ventured Home again last Year, and, as he had Opportunity, now and then preached in Houses. In the Middle of December 1681. he was married to one of the Daughters of the Reverend Mr. William Guthrie, that burning and shining Light, of whom in the first Book.

February this Year he is taken at his Mother in Law's House.

I should not have remarked this, had it not been accented to his Sufferings, which I now come to. Towards the End of February this Year, when living peaceably in the House of his Mother in Law at Edinburgh, some two Months after he was so comfortably settled, without any Citation or Summons, a Party of the Guards commanded by then Captain, and since deservedly Major-general Maitland, joyned with some of the Town Company commanded by Major Johnstoun, came and beset the House in the Middle of the Night; and having with Fore-hammers violently broken open the Doors (the first Account Mr. Warner got) which would have been opened to them had they thought good to have demanded it, they took him out of his Bed, ransacked the whole House, and took away upwards of Twenty Copies of Calderwood's History, lately printed mostly upon his Charges, with some Hundreds of the Second Book of Discipline lately reprinted, and several other valuable Books out of his Closet, with a considerable Number of more valuable Manuscripts, some of them his, but mostly belonging to his Mother in Law Mistress Guthrie, which had been her Husband's. So rude were they, that they searched his very Pockets, and took what Money they found, and a good Watch; but Captain Maitland was so kind and just, as, when he heard of this, to cause the Watch to be returned to Mistress Warner. Johnstoun and his Men were not so discreet, for they carried off Mr. Warner's wearing Clothes and Linens, and several other Things in the Rooms; the Books and Manuscripts were taken to the Council-house, to be looked over, but were never restored.

Carried to the Abbey Guard.

Straightway he was carried, in the Middle of the Night, through almost the whole City of Edinburgh and Canongate, to the Abbey, where the Duke of York was then lodging, and committed to his Guards, where he continued till the Morning. That same Night Mr. William Livingstone, as we shall hear, was seized. Next Day at 10 of the Clock Mr. Warner was carried up the Street to the Parliament-house, under a Guard of a whole Company of Musketeers, as if he had been some remarkable Malefactor.

Next Day is examined before a Committee of Council.

There a Committee of Council were met to examine him. He remembers, upon the one Side of the Table were the Marquis of Montrose, the Earl of Queensberry, Sir George Mackenzie, and some other Noblemen whom he knew not; and upon the other side the Archbishop of St. Andrews, Bishop Paterfon, and some more. By the particular Account of his Examination, the Reader will best understand what they had to lay to his Charge, and perceive the Grounds of his Sufferings, and therefore I shall set it down in the precise Words, as far as at this Distance of Time he can remember.

His Examination.

The Archbishop began with asking his Name, which he told: Then he enquired if he was a Minister. Mr. Warner, without giving him his Titles, owned he was: Next he was interrogate where he was ordained; he answered, at London. The Primate questioned him how he came to preach in Scotland being ordained at London: The other replied, he reckoned being ordained he might preach any where upon a Call. The Archbishop replied, he ought not to preach unless he were fixed to a particular Congregation; to which it was answered, that he always thought that a Minister's first Relation was to the universal Church, and a Relation to a particular Charge only secondary. The Bishop told him, the Laws did not allow him to preach unless fixed to a particular Congregation; to which the Prisoner answered, he was heartily sorry the Laws did not allow him to fix in a particular Congregation, which he inclined to if a Door were open.

As to his Preaching in the Fields.

Then the Marquis of Montrose asked Mr. Warner, if he had not sometimes preached in the Fields: The Prisoner answered with a due Respect, he humbly hoped his Lordship would not put such Questions to him as might oblige him to accuse himself; yet for his Lordship's Satisfaction he did declare, that since the Act of Indemnity he had not preached in the Fields. The Marquis insisted, and enquired if he had not preached in Houses where there were many without Doors. Mr. Warner asking his Lordship Pardon, as above, replied, he would neither say nor gainsay what he had asked; yet acknowledged candidly, that wherever he came to a House, if the People desired it, and their Case needed it, he had not refused, as the Lord enabled him, to preach to them, tho' in the mean time it was not improbable, there might be some at the Doors and Windows, which he could neither foresee nor prevent.

Upon this the Archbishop asked the Prisoner, how he came formerly to say he had not kept any Field-meetings since the Indemnity: He answered, when he said so, he understood by Field-meetings, such as are properly and absolutely so called, and not interpretatively. The Bishop replied, but these are Field-meetings absolutely, because the Law condemns them. The Prisoner replied, if he was in any Error by using that Distinction, it was his Majesty and Council had led him into it, because in their Proclamation they used a Distinction in Field-meetings, and such as were by Law interpreted to be Field-meetings.

Then

Then the Marquis resumed the Enquiry, and asked, what a Field-meeting was that he had kept near Monnigaff in Galloway. He put him again in Mind, that he did not expect to be put to answer such Questions; yet he would own he had kept several Field-meetings at or near to Monnigaff, before the Indemnity, but did not know which of them his Lordship meant. Next, he was asked, what a Presbytery it was he had kept in Galloway, with his Brother Mr. George Barclay, and some other Presbyterian Ministers. The Pannel insisted upon his former Request, not to be urged with such Questions, since his Lordship knew in what Circumstances Mr. Barclay was, (we have before heard he was intercommuned and fugitive) adding, for him to confess Converse with one in Mr. Barclay's Circumstances, would lay him open to Punishment by the present Laws. Well then, said the Marquis, abstracting from Mr. Barclay, What Presbytery was it you kept with your own Brother, and some other Ministers? To which he answered, he had indeed been in Company with his Brother, and one or Two Ministers more at most, but he never kept Presbyteries with them; for they had never constitute in a Judicatory, or chosen either Moderator or Clerk.

Again that Lord asked him, What he thought of the Bishop of St. Andrews's Death. Mr. Warner replied, he could not help thinking it a very great Hardship, to be questioned upon his Thoughts and inward Sentiments, yet, in hopes his Lordship would not pose him with any more such Queries, he would freely tell him he did not approve it. But, said the Marquis, it may be, that is because you think they went not wisely enough to Work. No, My Lord, said he, it is because they were but private Men, and not clothed with Authority: But, added the Marquis, do not you think it an abominable Murder? The Prisoner replied, My Lord, I have said as much already, as to those Questions, as I humbly conceive may satisfy, and am not willing further to be imposed upon; I am none of these Mens Judges, nor do I desire to be a rigid Censurer of others, especially being now a Prisoner, and not knowing what Measure I my self shall meet with.

The Advocate next took him up, and said, You are very moderate, Mr. Warner. He replied, I hope your Lordship does not condemn Moderation: No, said the other, but you are not so moderate to the late Marquis of Montrose, but call him James Graham, by way of Contempt, in a Paper here found among your Papers. He replied, I know of no such Paper, neither is there any such belongs to me. Then, said the Advocate, it must belong to Mr. Livingston, (who, we heard, was likewise seized with all his Papers last Night.) I know not, answered the other, to whom it may belong, but I know it is none of mine.

Next, the Advocate questioned him, here are a great many Copies of the Second Book of Discipline, which, it seems, you have spread through the Country; are you the Printer of them? No, answered he. How came you by them then? said the other. It was answered, they had been sent him from Holland: But, said Sir George, you should not spread such seditious Books. The Prisoner replied, it was a Book had been printed and reprinted many Years ago, and he had never heard of any Index prohibitorius or expurgatorius against it.

By this Time, the Earl of Strathmore, with whom Mr. Warner had the Honour to be acquainted at the University, came in to the House. As far as was understood, he was not a Member of the Committee, at least he did not take his Place with the rest, but stood at the Foot of the Council-table, with the Prisoner. When he perceived the Members were over with their Questions, he asked Mr. Warner, if he had not been educated at the University of St. Andrews. Yes, my Lord, answered he, as your Lordship also was. Then, said the Earl, I know you very well, and was pleased to add some Things to his Commendation, more than Mr. Warner thinks he deserved. The Bishop of Edinburgh said to him, I believe you have been at that College when I was there; he answered, he was. The Advocate added, there was one of your Name there when I was there, but I know not whether it was you or your Brother; what Time was your Brother at the University? He answered, he did not distinctly remember; but it was some Four or Five Years before he was at it. The Advocate asked, when he was there, and the Earl was pleased to say, he was there about the 1658 or 1659. Then, said the Advocate, Mr. Warner, your Brother was the Person that was my Condisciple, and was my very intimate Acquaintance, and I would very gladly know what is become of him. This the Prisoner thought convenient to answer by Silence, not being willing to awaken sleeping Dogs, remembering his Brother, by a Process at the Advocate's Instance, had been declared Fugitive. Whether the Advocate knew it, his Name being mixed with many others, or would not now appear to mind it, he could not determine, and reckoned it safest to hold his Peace. These little Incidents, tho' not very material, discover to us the Forms, if not the Fetches used by these examining Committees.

Mr. Warner began now to conceive some Hopes, he would not meet with very great Severity, since so many did him the Honour as to scrape Acquaintance with him, and, as he thought, spoke kindly and favourably to him; and the Advocate was pleased to tell him, he was acquainted with several of his and his Wife's Relations.

However, he was sent to the Tolbooth, where he had not been a Quarter of an Hour, till he was called for again by the Committee; and when brought in, the Advocate told him, 1682.

As to the Prisoner's Death

Upon some Papers where in the M. of Montrose is termed James Graham.

Upon the Second Book of Discipline.

Mr. Warner sent to Prison

1682.

and from brought back and examined upon a Translation of Buchanan de jure regni

him, we have found here among your Papers, a Translation of Buchanan de jure regni apud Scotos, and desired to know if he was the Translator of it. He answered, he was not. Translate it who will, said the Advocate, it is a very bad Translation : That may be, said the other, but I am not to answer for it. But are you not the Writer ? said the Advocate. The Prisoner denied. Then he was desired to come and look upon it, and consider if it was not his own Hand Writ. To satisfy you, my Lord, said he, I come; and when he looked upon it, he assured him it was not. But, insisted the Advocate, is not this your Paper ? It is none of mine, said he, I never saw it before. Sure, said the other, it must be yours, and now you are not dealing ingenuously, for it is declared here, that it was brought from your House, with many other Papers, for which he attested the rest of the Counsellors. The Prisoner still averred what he had said, but told them, that Captain Maitland, who by this Time was at the Bar, had been so exact in seizing all Papers, that he had carried away a whole Trunk-ful of Manuscripts, belonging formerly to Mr. William Guthrie, Yesterday in Possession of his Mother in Law, Mrs. Guthrie, which he himself had never seen; which Fact Captain Maitland assented to; and, added he, it is possible that Paper may have been amongst them.

*Haltoun's Exposition about
him.*

By this Time Haltoun came into the Committee, and asked the rest what the Prisoner said of the Bishop's Death; one of them answered, He doth not approve of it, but will not call it Murder. Then said Haltoun, he shall be hanged, which the Prisoner answered with a Smile.

He is challenged upon some Letters found in his Pocket.

Sir William Paterfon, being all this while perusing some missive Letters sent to Mr. Warner, found in his Pockets, began to pose him concerning one of them sent from Edinburgh to Mr. Warner, when he was at London, bearing, That his Friend had sent him the Notes he had writ for from Edinburgh, but found not his own Bond among them. Now, says the Clerk, this must certainly be some Bonds you have been employed in, and Collections you have been carrying on for some treasonable Design or other.

Terrible Stretches at this Time put upon Peoples Letters and Words.

By the way, we may notice, what perverse Meanings and terrible Stretches they put upon Matters, and how much they inclined to find such as came before them, guilty. Mr. Warner gave them a very candid and true Account of these Letters they were pleased to find such a Mystery in; that they were some Notes and Receipts he had from Persons to whom he had delivered some Tokens, and other Things of Value committed to his Care, when he came home from the East Indies, for which he had given his Bond safely to deliver them, and accordingly he took their Receipts. He had likewise the Writer's Bond for some Money, which, it seems, his Friend missed, and that he directed him also to it.

He is blamed for the Place where his Letters are directed to be left.

So nice were the Committee in their Inquiries, that looking on the Direction of some of Mr. Warner's Letters, they further challenged him, because they were directed to be left at Dorman Newman, Bookseller at London, his Shop. Now, says the Clerk, this Newman prints all the seditious Libels and Pamphlets against the Government. The Prisoner replied, That Mr. Newman was a known Bookseller at London, from whom he had bought several Books, and whose Shop he frequented, which, being better known than his Chamber, he had ordered his Letters to be directed to be left there; that he was a Printer of seditious Papers against the Government, was what he did not know before.

The Clerk's Brother, Bishop Paterfon, further acquainted the Committee, that he had found among the Papers brought from Mr. Warner's House, a great many Debates 'twixt the publick Resolutioners and Protesters, which the Committee very little regarded.

When thus, after all their Search and Examination, nothing material was found, Mr. Warner again was sent back to the Tolbooth, where he remained full Sixteen Weeks, hardly enough used, being put into a common Room there with Five or Six other Prisoners.

Mean while, great Endeavours were used to find Matter of an Indictment against him, for which end Claverhouse in the West Country and South, and Meldrum in the East, were employed to search if Mr. Warner had been at Bothwel-bridge, or if in his Sermons he had preached any Thing that might be made Sedition or Rebellion. Both of them were very forward in the Inquiry, and travelled among the conformable Clergy, who were very willing to be Informers; yet such was his Innocence, that the most malicious could find nothing of this Nature against him.

Claverhouse indeed brought in an Account, that Mr. Warner had preached the same Day upon which the Engagement was at Bothwel, about Forty Miles distant from it, upon these Words, as he repeated them, Sorrow be to him that withholdeth his Sword from shedding of Blood. This Claverhouse told to a Gentleman of Mr. Warner's Acquaintance, one Day on the Street of Edinburgh. The Gentleman acquainted him there was no such Expression in the Scripture: Upon which an Appeal was made to a Curate in the West Country, who was standing near by; he told them the Expression he supposed Claverhouse pointed at, was, Cursed is he who withholdeth, &c. In a little Time the Gentleman came to the Prison, and gave Mr. Warner an Account of what had passed, who desired him to assure Claverhouse, that he never preached upon these Words, and his Information was false; which he did, and there was no more of this Matter.

When

When this failed them, the Managers applied to some Gentlemen of the Name of Gordon, who were of Mr. Warner's Acquaintance, now at Edinburgh, and in Hopes, by the Marquis of Huntley's Interest, to get an Indemnity for being at Bothwell, and likewise to McClellan of Barscob, who was now getting his Remission; but none of them could serve them in this Point. It would be endless to set down all the Pains they were at, to fix Guilt upon this good and innocent Man. I add but one Instance more, of which Mr. Warner had an Account at that Time, from a Friend of his, to whom the Gentleman told the Story.

1682.

Dunbar of Baldoon, a very considerable Gentleman in Galloway, who had been at home in his House during the Rising at Bothwell, and with whom Mr. Warner had several Times lodged, was dealt with in private with a great deal of Earnestness, to declare what he knew about the Prisoner: This Person of Honour told them, he had nothing to say to his Disadvantage, that he had known him well, and found him a very worthy Person; adding, in a Jest, that he heard now that some People said he was a Jesuit.

In a little Time Baldoon was severely threatened by Bishop Paterfon, and told, if he did not witness against Mr. Warner, he himself would be cited for Converse with, and harbouring of an intercommuned Person; mean while, Mr. Warner had never been intercommuned. The Thing this Gentleman was so much importuned and threatened about, was, some Words alleged to have been spoken by the Prisoner at Baldoon's Table, for the Lawfulness of defensive Arms, which they interpreted to have been said in Vindication of the Rising at Bothwell, the Conversation, as they pretended, having been either in the Time of, or a little after the Rising. When thus threatened, the Gentleman plainly told them, they might deal with himself as they saw good, but he could not be distinct in what had passed 'twixt the Prisoner and him, in private Conversation in his own House, upon these nice Heads, and would not serve them in that Affair.

What Treatment Baldoon would have met with for this Refusal, I shall not say, had he lived; but that worthy Gentleman died very soon, much regreted. Thus after all their Efforts, Mr. Warner continued in Prison without receiving an Indictment, not for want of Inclination or Pains, but Matter.

But nothing found.

When the Party who seized him, as hath been narrated, took him away Prisoner, his Books and Papers were left in the House that Night, but under a Guard: And in the Morning, Sir William Paterfon and Hugh Stevenson of Montgremar, Clerks to the Council, were sent to bring them to the Parliament-house. The Manuscripts, and among them several little Pocket-books, containing Notes of his Sermons, were put into Bishop Paterfon's Hands, to search for Matter of Indictment against him, but none was found.

Yea, so strict were the Seizers of his Papers, that they spared nothing. His very civil Rights and Bonds for Money he had lent out, were carried away with the rest, so that he could not command any Thing of his own for his Sustenance and Charges in Prison, which were not small. Whereupon he petitioned the Council, that his Books, Manuscripts, and Papers might be restored to him; but that Justice could not be granted, only they allowed him to get back his Rights and Bonds.

During his Imprisonment, he lectured and preached twice every Lord's Day to the Prisoners, and a few others, who, by their Acquaintance with, and giving Money to the Keepers, got in. He petitioned the Council for his Liberation, since nothing worthy of Bonds or Imprisonment was laid to his Charge, but in vain. When the Advocate was dealt with by his Friends for this End, in a huffing Way he told them, he had Orders to draw an Indictment. Mr. Warner sent again to him, begging of him that he might hasten it; but he heard no more of it.

He lectured and preached twice every Day to the Prisoners in the Tolbooth.

Upon repeated Applications from Mr. Warner's Friends to the Counsellors, it was signified, that since he had acknowledged he had preached contrary to Law, he behoved to reckon upon one of Three; either to give his Bond to preach no more unless he conformed, or remain in perpetual Prison, or remove out of the Kingdom, finding Caution not to return without Leave, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks. One of these, he was told, they were resolved on, and tho' any of them was severe enough, yet of the Three Evils he chose that which appeared to him to be the least, to go off the Kingdom, and wait till Providence should open a Door for his Return; yet when they passed their Act for his Liberation, as they allowed him but Ten Days to order his Affairs, before he removed off the Kingdom, so they clogged it with this Condition, that he should oblige himself not to preach during these Ten Days. This he had not Freedom to do, and so continued still in the Tolbooth.

Three Things proposed to him.

About a Fourthnight after, as Montgremar afterwards told Mr. Warner, one Day when the Council had gone through their Work, and were just a rising, the Clerk asked the Chancellor, My Lord, What will you do with Mr. Warner? adding, You have ordered him to oblige himself not to preach during the Ten Days allowed him for ordering his Affairs, but if you knew him as well as I, you would as well order him to go to the Grass-market to be hanged, for he will do the one as soon as the other. What shall we do with him then, Hugh? said the Chancellor. My Lord, said the other, If you would take my Advice, instead of taking him obliged

His Liberation!

1682.

Act for Lay Liberation, June 7. 1682.

not to preach, I would take his Engagement to preach Thrice a Day, while he stays in the Kingdom, and so you will burst him, and be quit of his Din. The Matter was laughed over, and the Clerk allowed to draw his Liberation without that Clog. A good well-timed Jest, both in Lawderdale's Administration, and now, sometimes went further than Law or Justice.

I find a Copy of the Act for his Liberation in the Council-register for Acts and Decrets, and being but short, it follows. 'June 7. 1682. ancient a Petition by Mr. Patrick Warner, Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, shewing, That whereas the Petitioner was apprehended in his own House, upon the 22 of February last, and incarcerated in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and having formerly resolved to depart this Kingdom, and withal having several Affairs calling him forth from it, which, during his Restraint, he has no Access to attend, and therefore humbly supplicating, that the Council would ordain the Petitioner to be set at Liberty, he finding Caution not to return without Licence, and to grant a competent Time for settling his Affairs here. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having heard this Petition, wherein the Petitioner offers to take Banishment on him, give Warrant to set him at Liberty, he giving Caution to depart in Fifteen Days, and never to return without Licence, under the Pain of Five thousand Merks.'

Mr. Warner removes to Berwick, where he continues to be persecuted.

At the Time appointed Mr. Warner removed towards Berwick, and stayed some Time in Tweedmouth, upon the English Side, till he could conveniently get his Family removed, and hired a small House near a Village called Spittle, and preached there to a very small Auditory, sometimes in his own, and sometimes in a neighbouring House. His Enemies in Scotland hoped he would have gone further off, and were dissatisfied when they heard he was so near them; and, upon an Information given of this to the Council, they wrote to the King, and an Order came down from his Majesty and the English Council, to apprehend Mr. Warner. And several Parties of Horse in Northumberland, commanded by Colonel Struthers, were very busy in searching for him and others; and here a new Period of his Sufferings began at the Heels of the former.

When sought after by Colonel Struthers, he retires to Newcastle.

Once and again some Parties of Struthers's Men came to his House, and as oft very providentially mislead him. Being daily thus in Hazard of being seized, tho' he had obtempered the Council of Scotland's Sentence, and had committed no new Fault, Mr. Warner found himself obliged to retire a little further into England, leaving still his Family at Spittle. Accordingly he stayed some Time near Arwick; but finding no Convenience there, he went to Newcastle, and, having hired a House, brought his Family thither.

Near to which he is seized.

By this Time, it seems, Colonel Struthers had repeated Orders to seize Mr. Warner; so invidious and importunate were the Bishops and their Managers at Edinburgh in their Informations. And Mr. Warner having gone up the River Tyne, about two Miles, to visit a Friend, thither, a Party having got previous Notice, came, and apprehended him, tho' neither at a Conventicle, neither could they prove he had broken the Laws since he came to England. That Night he was carried five or Six Miles off to a private House, and kept Prisoner there. The Party pretending to do him a Kindness, offered to send one of their Number to Newcastle to acquaint his Wife, and bring him Linens or what he needed, he yielded, suspecting no Evil; but the Persons sent rifled his House, and brought off what Papers they could find. And next Day he and his Papers were brought to Colonel Struthers, who was a Justice of the Peace, as well as Commander of the Troops.

What passed between Colonel Struthers and
him.

When Mr. Warner was brought to the Colonel, he shewed him his Act of Liberation and Banishment from Scotland, and civilly asked him what he had to lay to his Charge since he came to England, and the Cause of his being made Prisoner. The Colonel told him, that upon a Letter of the Council of Scotland, bearing, that since his Banishment he had returned and preached on the Scots Side, the King and Council at London had ordered him to apprehend him, and send him back to Edinburgh. Mr. Warner assured the Colonel, that the Scots Council had been misinformed, and the Accusation was most false and invidious; that since his coming from Scotland at the Time of his Liberation, he had never returned, or been nearer the Border than Tweedmouth or Spittle where he resided; that the Council already had Security under a great Sum in case of his Failure, in that Point, which undoubtedly they would exact from his Sureties if they could prove him guilty, and offered immediately to find Bail to answer to any Indictment should be given him on that Head.

The Oath of Allegiance put to him.

This seemed very surprizing to the Colonel, who said no more to him that Night, but ordered him a Room in his own House, with a Soldier to guard him. To Morrow he called for the Prisoner, and asked if he was willing to take the Oath of Allegiance: This was as surprizing to Mr. Warner, who modestly answered, he was very ill acquainted with the Laws of England, and knew not whether they obliged him who was a Stranger and mere Sojourner, to swear that Oath; nor was he willing to take any Oath without an evident Necessity, and therefore desired Time to consider of it. The Colonel seemed now to be afraid from the Assurances given him Yesternight, that some Time or other he might be questioned for a wrongous Imprisonment, and therefore fell into this Method, to save his own Bacon in case of after Enquiries, to tender the Oath of Allegiance.

Mr.

Mr. Warner upon this was carried Prisoner straight to the Goal of Newcastle, his Mittimus bearing only he had refused the Oath of Allegiance. Here he continued seven or eight Weeks, until one of the Judges came to that Town in his Circuit for a Goal-delivery. At this Time, upon Alexander Gordon of Earlstoun's being seized near by Newcastle, with several of the Papers and Letters from the Societies for Correspondence, strict Orders came to the Mayor and Aldermen of Newcastle, to apprehend all Scotsmen Strangers there, and seize all their Papers and Books; by virtue of which Twenty of Calderwood's Histories, and some other Books were taken from him, which were faithfully given back after the Revolution, by one of the Aldermen to whom he applied. But the like Favour as to the Copies taken from him at Edinburgh, and the far more valuable Manuscripts, he could not obtain from Bishop Pater-son, to whom they were committed, tho' several Times he was promised it.

At the Goal-delivery, the Oath of Allegiance was to be put to him, and he, being informed of this, endeavoured to consider its Import, and satisfy himself about it, as far as he could, against that Time. The Oath of Allegiance in England, is distinct and quite different from the Oath of Supremacy. And considering it had nothing of the Supremacy in it, Mr. Warner had no Scruple as to its Lawfulness, considered absolutely in it self. But when he considered how much Guilt the Land had contracted by taking and breaking so many publick Oaths, he was a little doubtful as to the Expediency of such Oaths publickly and universally imposed, and for some Time entertained a Reluctancy against it, till he upon the other Hand considered, that the Practices of some of our Nation, had given the English, and other Foreigners, Occasion to apprehend, that Presbyterians were against all lawfull Power and Government, and denied all Allegiance and Obedience, and if he, while in England, would state his Sufferings upon that Head, it would undoubtedly be so constructed of by many; so after a full pondering of all Sides, he came to a Resolution to take it, and that with such Caution as he judged might afford him full Peace and solid Quiet afterwards.

When the Day came, he was called upon to take the Allegiance. Mr. Warner, with all due Submission, in open Court acquainted the Judge, that seeing an Oath ought to be taken in Judgment as well as Righteousness, before he swore, he humbly desired to be satisfied in a few Things. The Judge allowing, he asked, 1<sup>mo</sup>. 'Whether this Oath did bind him to Allegiance to the King's Successors de facto, as well as these de jure? The Judge answered, It did not. 2<sup>do</sup>. Whereas the Oath binds him to be obedient to the King and Laws, he desired to be satisfied, 'Whether in case any of the Laws should be such, as he could not in Conscience give active Obedience to, if in that Case he was bound by this Oath any further than either to obey or suffer according to Law? The Judge declared, He was bound no further. 3<sup>mo</sup>. Seeing he was a Stranger in England, and not probably to continue long there, but to remove to some other Nation or Kingdom, he desired to know, 'whether he was, by the Oath offered just now, bound to give the Obedience formerly mentioned any longer than he was in England, seeing when he comes to live in another Nation or Kingdom, it may be supposed he must be obedient to the Laws thereof, and yet these several Things may be different from these of England.' The Judge told him, His Obedience was no longer due than while he continued in England.

And Mr. Warner having, in open Court, declared it was with these Cautions he was content to take the Oath, and no otherwise, the Judge tendred it to him, and he took it, and thereupon was liberate from Prison.

Upon the whole, the Reader cannot but observe, that this Trouble and Persecution this worthy Minister met with, was without either Accusation, Proof, or Libel, but entirely on Whispers and calumnious Information. It was likewise no small Charge to him: His Jayl- fees at Edinburgh and Newcastle, and his Petitions again and again to the Council, amounted to a considerable Sum. Besides, having engaged in the Printing of that useful Book Calderwood's History, and lent a great deal of Money to help it on, he was obliged to take for his Payment, some Hundreds of the Books in Quires; and besides his Loss of the bound Copies at Edinburgh, those which were unbound, by his frequent Removes, were many of them put in Disorder and Confusion, and so on the Matter lost to him, and many of them seized, which, after he had redeemed, were sometimes taken a second Time. At a very moderate Computation, his Loss was upwards of an Hundred Pounds Sterling. Meanwhile, there is neither Act of Parliament or Council against that Book, neither did the Committee before whom he appeared, blame him for having so many of them as were seized, and yet they would not order them back to him, when desired.

After all this Trouble and Expence, Mr. Warner saw there was no Safety for him in England, as long as there were any base malicious Informers, to forge a Story about him, and the Council at Edinburgh were willing to believe it. In a very little Time, new Orders might come down from Londn, and he be brought into new Trouble. Therefore, in a few Days after his Liberation, he went over to Rotterdam, and when he had hired a House there, brought over his Wife and Family not long after. There he staid mostly until the Liberty 1687. and he and other worthy Ministers were not, even in that Place of Refuge, free from the Malice, and restless Endeavours of the Party in Scotland.

1682.

Upon his taking Time to consider this, he is sent to the Goal of Newcastle, &c.

At the Goal-delivery, he heard the Oath is to be required of him, he is allowed on both Sides.

His Queries to the Judge when required to take it.

He takes it in open Court.

Reflections upon Mr. Warner's Sufferings.

Goes over to Holland, and remains till 1687.

1682.

Mr. William
Livingstone imprisoned, but soon liberate.

We have formerly heard, that Mr. William Livingstone, Son to that shining Light, Mr. John Livingstone of Ancrum, of whom in the First Book, was, with all his Papers, seized the very Night wherein Mr. Warner was apprehended. I find by the Registers, March 21. a Petition to the Council, bearing, 'That Mr. William Livingstone having been seized February 22 last, and sifted before a Committee of Council, was questioned upon collecting and distributing Money to Rebels, and corresponding with them, and importing and vending several seditious Books, to which the Petitioner answered negatively, acknowledging, before the late Indemnity, he had got some Money to be distributed among the Prisoners that were starving.' His Petition is granted, and he is ordered to be liberate, upon his finding Caution to appear when called.

Thomas Greg his Sufferings.

Upon the 4 of April this Year, Thomas Greg, Merchant in Carrick, fell under very hard Treatment. This good Man is lately deceas'd, and I have this and other Branches of his Sufferings, more than once from himself. Nothing was to be laid to his Charge but mere Nonconformity; he was upon the high Road with his Pack, following his Calling, when Claverhouse seized him. Immediately they took all his Money and Goods from him, and carried him forward, whither the Party was going, to the Newtown of Galloway, and from thence to Dumfries, next Day, on a bare-backed Horse: And tho' they had taken his Pack and Money from him, and had nothing to lay to his Charge, they would neither allow him Meat nor Drink all that Time; and he had fainted, yea, starved for them, had not the Country People upon the Road, and where they lodged, given him some little Thing.

At Dumfries, he and some others they took at this Time, were put in Prison, and the good People in that Town provided them in Meat and Drink, else they had starved; and even this the Soldiers did sometimes cast on the Ground and destroy, because they said it was not brought from some Persons they would have employed for providing such of the Prisoners who maintained themselves. After Eleven Days Imprisonment, without any Trial or Sentence, he was carried to Leith, and, with some others, put aboard a Ship going to Holland, and gifted to be Recruits there. I need make no Reflections upon this hard Measure this honest Man met with, as well as many others, in this Time of sad Oppression.

Sufferings of
Mr. Henry
Erskine.

I come forward to give the Reader some Account of the Sufferings of that worthy, faithful, and singularly successful Minister of the Gospel, Mr. Henry Erskine. These, with some very remarkable Providences relative to this excellent Man, I have from his Sons, Two reverent Ministers of this Church, to whom the Reader owes this distinct Account. I must omit several singular Providences, and shall only give a brief Detail of what relates to his Sufferings, and put it all together in this Place.

Mr. Henry Erskine was Son to Ralph Erskine of Shielsfield, who had his ordinary Residence in Dryburgh, upon the Border of England. About the 1649. he was ordained Minister at Cornhill, about Ten Miles distant from Dryburgh, upon the English Side. There he was ejected by the Act of Uniformity, after he had been much owned of God in his Work, among that ignorant and almost barbarous People. Having received no Stipend when he was ejected, he was advised to go up to London, and apply his Majesty for a Warrant to uplift what was his justly, and by Law; which he did: And after presenting his Petition, and long and expensive Onwaitings, he was told for Answer, That he could have no Warrant for Bygones, unless he would for Time to come conform to the established Church; and some of the Scots Noblemen at Court made him Offers of very considerable Benefices if he would do so: But he had not so learned Christ.

In his Return from London by Sea, he met with very remarkable Interpositions of Providence, for his Provision and Relief, having spent any little Money he had at London, which I want Room for here. When he got to Scotland, he transported his Family from Cornhill to Dryburgh, and lived in an House of his Brother's there, preaching sometimes in the Fields, and frequently in his own House, till this Year 1682.

When, April 23. the Laird of Meldrum came upon him with a Party of Soldiers on the Lord's Day, when he was at Family-worship, and carried him Prisoner to Melroth, Two Miles from Dryburgh: To Morrow, a Bond of Five thousand Merks was given for his Compearance when called, his Nephew James Erskine of Shielsfield being Cautioner.

Upon the 8 of May following, Meldrum being returned from some persecuting Work he had been employed about in the West Country, called for Mr. Erskine and his Cautioner, and having given up the Bond, he carried him Prisoner with him to Fedburgh, where he was a second Time liberate, upon Bond and Caution to appear at Edinburgh the 12 of May.

By that Time a violent Ague had seized Mr. Erskine, yet he behaved to be at Edinburgh by that Day, and was brought before a Committee of the Council; where, after some previous Examination, the King's Advocate asked him, if he would give his Bond to preach no more at Conventicles. Mr. Erskine positively refused this, and said, My Lord, I have my Commission from Christ, and tho' I were within an Hour of my Death, I durst not lay it down at at any mortal Man's Foot. The Advocate having made a Report to the Council, his Affair was delayed till the 6 of June, and he gave Bail, under Four Thousand Merks, to appear at that Time. 1682.

Upon the 6 of June, he appeared before the Council, where a Libel was read, charging him with Preaching at Conventicles, disorderly Baptizing and Marrying. The Chancellor asked him, what he had to say to the Libel. Mr. Erskine answered, he denied the Whole; adding, that it was well known to all who lived about him, that from September 1681. to January last, the Lord's Hand was on him by a violent Flux, so far as he was not in Case to bow a Knee before God in his Family, or ask a Blessing on his Meat; and that after February, he had been seized with a violent Ague, which had laid him under an Incapacity for his ministerial Work. The Chancellor, according to the ordinary Method, tho' contrary to the known Maxim in Criminals, Nemo tenetur jurare in suam injuriam, asked him, if he would depone he had not preached, baptized, or married, from September last, till June instant; he answered, he was not free to give his Oath for the Whole of that Time.

The Council, tho' nothing was proven against him, immediately sentenced him to pay Five thousand Merks of Fine, and to go to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh that Night, and to Morrow to be carried to the Bass, there to ly till the Fine was paid, and Bond given that he should preach no more.

To prevent, if possible, his going to the Bass, which would have gone far to have killed him in his present weakly Condition, in the Afternoon he petitioned the Council, that the Sentence might be altered, and Liberty granted to go off the Kingdom, promising to find Caution so to do. Through the Interest of some Friends this was allowed, and Mr. Erskine's Nephew, John Brown of Park, bound himself with him in 5000 Merks, that in Fourteen Days Mr. Erskine should leave the Kingdom. These Appearances and Petitions still stood Ministers Money; and I find Mr. Erskine had 21 Dollars to pay to the Clerks, and 4 Dollars to the Jaylor and his Servant.

Within the Time appointed, he removed off the Kingdom, not knowing whither he went, but Providence ordered better for him than he could foresee; and he fixed in Parkridge about Ten Miles from Carlisle, and brought his Family there, and lived pretty free of Trouble for Two Years and an Half; when he was invited by Mr. Philip Gray of Presson, to be under him in an obscure Place called Monnilaus, about a Mile from Cornhil his old Charge: But he was not long in Safety there, for, July 2. 1682. he was apprehended by Eight of the Militia Horsemen, and carried first to Woolter, and next Day to Forberry, to Colonel Struthers, who acquainted him he must go to Newcastle to Sir John Finwick, by virtue of an Order from the King, and so was returned that Night to Woolter Prison, where he met with the Reverend Mr. Luke Ogle a Fellow-prisoner. July 4. both of them were carried under a Guard to Eglingham, to a Justice of Peace his House; and upon Munday, July 6. for it seems the English were a little more careful of the Lord's Day than our Scots Persecutors, they were taken to Newcastle. Tho' Mr. Erskine was suddenly taken that Morning with a violent Cholick, so that he expected his Death every Moment, yet no Pity was shewn him, he behaved to take Journey, tho' scarce able to sit on his Horse.

At Night, they came to Sir John Finwick's Gate, who not only immediately ordered them to Prison, but took both their Horses from them, which were never restored; there Mr. Erskine's Pain and Sickness continuing, he got out by the Jaylor's Kindness, for a Fourtnight, to a private House, Mrs. Man's, who took Care of his Health, and would take nothing for his Entertainment. Upon the 22 of July, they were liberate by the Indemnity which came out.

Mr. Erskine continued preaching every Lord's Day at Monnilaus, until the Liberation 1687. when he got an unanimous Call from the Parish of Whitson, on the Scots Side, where he preached in a Meeting-house, from September 1687. till the happy Revolution, when he was called to be Minister of Churnside, and continued there till his Death, August 10. 1696. the 72 Year of his Age. His Life was full of singular and sweet Appearances of Providence in all his Straits, which were not few, and his Death was most pleasant and edifying. There are Thousands yet alive in the Places where he preached, to whom his Name and Memory is most savoury, for his affectionate, close, and faithful Preaching of the Gospel. As he was very bold in his Master's Work, so he was singularly blessed with remarkable Success.

By the Council-registers, I find, June 9. Mr. Thomas Archer had been a long Time in the Canongate Tolbooth, for being at a House-conventicle, and Nonconformity. He was an excellent Youth, Brother to the forementioned John Archer, a good Scholar, and close Student. While he was in the Canongate Tolbooth, I am informed, he made himself Master of the Hebrew Tongue, the Chaldaick, Syriack, and some other of the Oriental Languages. Upon the 9 of June, he petitions the Council, signifying his Design to leave the Kingdom, and begging the Council may liberate him. There was nothing to be proven against him, and he had lien long in Prison, so his Petition is granted; and the good Youth went over to Holland, and continued there, very much improving himself in all valuable Branches of human Learning, as well as solid Religion. There he was ordained by Mr. Fleming, and the rest of the Scots Ministers then at Rotterdam, Mr. Alexander Hastie having preached the Ordination Sermon. Mr. Archer had been licensed in the excellent Lady Riddel's Family, before he was taken, which was at the Time when Mr. Scoble was seized, of which before. He came over with Argyle, 1685. when we shall meet with him.

Mr. Thomas Archer liberate from Prison, and goes to Holland.

1682.

Mrs. James Rymer, Rob. Gillespie, Thomas Arnot, John Harroway, John Fergusson, John Gillespie, John Moncrief, denounced.

At the same Diet of Council, June 9. a Process is intended against some very worthy Presbyterian Ministers, Mr. James Rymer at Lethom in Fife, Mr. Robert Gillespie at Auchtermuchty, Mr. Thomas Arnot, Mr. John Harroway in Kirkaldy, Mr. John Fergusson of Parthead, and Mr. John Gillespie and Mr. John Moncrief. They are libelled for keeping Conventicles in Houses, since 1679. and, upon Noncompearance, these worthy Persons are all denounced and put to the Horn. I can give no more upon them, than what offers from the Records, and regret I have so small and confused Accounts of them.

Robert Nairn in Bonhill his Sufferings.

July 7. this Year, Robert Nairn in the Parish of Bonhill, in the Shire of Dumbarton, fell under no small Trouble, for nothing else but his not hearing of the Episcopal Incumbent. Last Year, he had been fined, for Nonconformity, in Twenty Pounds Scots, at the Regality Court at the Ferry of Bellach, and now it is wholly exacted. He was a Shoemaker in Napierstown, and was obliged, notwithstanding of his paying his Fine, to leave his House and Family, and dismiss his Servants, and give over his Employment. The Sheriff-officers frequently came and searched his House for him, and they seldom came without carrying away somewhat or other with them. February 1685. the Depute of the Regality came at Midnight to his House, with Two Officers. His Wife with a sucking Child was forced to flee to the open Fields; the Depute found none in the House but Three Children and a Servant Maid. Having, with their Swords drawn, searched the House, they took the eldest Boy, not Fourteen Years of Age, and, with their Swords over his Head, threatened him to tell where his Father was; but he could not. They inventoried all that was in the House, except the Cradle, which in their great Mercy they left for the Child, and arrested all in the Hand of the Landlord of the House, and gave him Summons of Forthcoming for them. The Two Infants, the eldest not above Five Years old, they turned out of their Beds, and carried away the Bed-clothes. The Maid they would carry with them to Prison, till she found Bail to answer when called.

In April thereafter, being informed of some Things belonging to Robert Nairn, in a Neighbour's House, they seized upon them, and that Night they searched Robert's House, took his Wife out of her Bed, and carried her to Prison, where she lay till she found Bail to keep the Kirk. In the Beginning of Winter, Robert ventured Home to his own House, but was not long there till his Persecutors got Notice, and one Night, he hearing Two Men were near the House, made his Escape; the Men followed him, and both shot at him, and narrowly missed him: He got into a Wood about a Mile from his House, and escaped them.

But contracted such a Cold by lying there, after his running, that shortly after he fell very sick, and came again to his House, that he might have some little Accommodation under his Illness. Notice was quickly got of this, and, Saturday, December 26. Two Officers came to carry him Prisoner to Dumbarton, with Orders to bring him on Horse, if he was so sick as he could not go. His Landlord John Macallaster, who had done him many Kindnesses, hearing of this, found Means to detain the Officers, till Robert was carried that Night to a Barn, where he lay till the Morrow, when he was carried to a Friend's House, about a Mile's Distance, where that Night he got to his everlasting Rest, beyond the Persecutors Malice, except as to his Body, which, it seems, they ceased not to shew their Malice at.

Upon Monday, to prevent Trouble to the Family where he died, his Corps was carried to his own House. His Friends designing him a decent Burial, which became them, he being a judicious Christian and Saint of God, sent for the Parish Mort-cloth, but the Curate having that in his Custody, refused it; and when on Tuesday the Beadle came to make his Grave in his Burial-place in the Church-yard of Bonhill, the Incumbent came out upon him and hindered him, and locked the Gate, as if this good Man had been unworthy of a Christian Burial. However, his Friends afterwards prevailed to have the Grave made, and he was buried. But the Defunct's Relict and Son were summoned for Breach of the Arrestment laid upon all that was in the House, and that immediately after the Interment, before the Company were dismissed, which Process cost them Twenty Pounds Scots before they got rid of it.

John Bredin there.

About the same Time, John Bredin in the same Parish, and at present one of the Elders of Bonhill, fell under much the same Steps of Persecution. His House was frequently searched, his Goods taken away to a considerable Value, himself narrowly escaped, and forced to flee and hide himself, and all this merely for not keeping the Kirk.

John Flockhart.

About this Time, John Flockhart in the Hole of Kippen, for his alledged Presence at Conventicles, had Seventy Troopers of Clackmanan's Dragoons quartered upon him, who spoiled his House and Cattle, to the Value of Two hundred Pounds. He was imprisoned several veral Months, and paid a considerable Fine ere he got out; and afterwards, for his Marriage by Mr. William Somerwel Minister at Crawford-john, Thirty six Dragoons were quartered on him, who damaged him One hundred and fifty Pounds, and afterward he paid an Hundred Pounds Fine for his irregular Marriage.

I have before me an Account of the Sufferings of Thomas Thomson in Easter-couchland, in Falkland, about this Time, from his worthy Son a Minister of this Church. For mere Nonconformity, he was fined in an Hundred Pounds Sterling, the one Half to the Earl of Balcarras, and the other to A. Malcolm Sheriff-clerk; and till Payment Soldiers were quartered on him, who threshed out his Corn, and did eat it up. And, besides their Maintenance for some Months, he was forced to give each of the Dragoons a Shilling per Day. In some Time he was ordered to be apprehended, and his House frequently plundered, when the Parties missed him; yea, so barbarous were they, that one of his sucking Children was torn from the Mother's Breast, and cast on the Floor, whereby his Life was much endangered. These Severities forced him from his Farm, and brought his Wife and Children to great Difficulties, and he himself was obliged to hide and wander, till the Liberty 1687.

1682.

Thomas Thomson in Falkland.

John Key in the Parish of Biggar, now in Walstoun, this Year, merely because he went not to Church, had his whole Cattle driven from him by Meldrum, who sold them at pretty high Rates to his Neighbours, from whom he again bought them afterwards. He was at different Times fined in near an Hundred Merks, merely for not hearing. Instances of particular Persons would be endless.

John Key in Biggar.

November 16. I find that excellent Person, Dame Katharine Rig Lady Cavers, after Citation, appearing before the Council. This Lady is libelled for keeping Conventicles, and being present at them from 1679. to this Time; that she heard Mr. Donald Cargil, Mr. Samuel Arnot, and Mr. Gabriel Semple, declared Traitors, and Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Archibald Riddel, Mr. James Osburn. No Probation being offered, the Libel is referred to her Oath, and she refusing to depone, is held as confess, and the Council fine her in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, and send her to Prison till she pay it, and find Bail to be present at no Conventicles. She is first sent to Edinburgh Tolbooth, and then carried to Stirling Castle, where she continued a good Part of Two Years, till her Son, the present Cavers, came home from his Travels, and made some Transaction in her Favours. We shall meet with her afterwards.

Lady Cavers' fined in 500 Pounds Sterling for Conventicles, and imprisoned a long Time.

At the same Diet of Council, Mr. William Erskine is ordered to be taken from Stirling Castle to Blackness. I am sorry I can give no more Account of him, he was many Years in Prison for preaching the Gospel. It escaped me to observe upon Mr. Henry Erskine's Sufferings, that June 6. Mr. John Linlithgow in Redpath, was joyntly proccessed with him for preaching at Conventicles, and came under the same Sentence. Whether he was sent off the Kingdom, or to the Bass, I know not.

Mr. William Erskine, and Mr. John Linlithgow.

Upon the last of November, the Council pass an Act, obliging the Presbyterian Ministers connived at in their preaching, to take the Test. Whether this was the first Bell to the turning out of the Indulged, or did comprehend them, I cannot say; but the Words of the Act follow, and with it I shall end this Section. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council being informed, that several of these nonconformist Ministers, who, for these several Years, pretend to be connived at to preach, have since the first of January last, continued to preach and exerce other ministerial Functions, without taking the Test, in manifest Contempt of the Sixth Act of his Majesty's current Parliament, recommend to the Bishops and Archbishops forthwith to silence them, and to plant their Parishes with regular Men, and report; and recommend to the Lords of Exchequer, to grant Gifts of the Escheats of those Ministers, according to Law.'

Act of Council Nov. 30. requiring the Bishops to silence nonconformist Ministers connived at, unless they take the Test.

S E C T. V.

Of the criminal Prosecutions before the Justiciary, and publick Executions of the Sufferers, this Year 1682.

HAVING given a pretty large Narrative of the general Oppression of the Country, and the particular Sufferings of Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, not unto Death; this Year; I come now to end this Chapter with the criminal Proceses for Life and Fortune, and some publick Deaths and Executions, just in the Order of Time as they happened.

1682.

Heritors in Linlithgow,
Stirling, and Air Shires, proceeded before the Justices.

In November last, the Council received a List of Heritors in Linlithgow, Stirling, and Air Shires, who had been at Bothwell; they order them to be proceeded before the Justices, by their Act following.

‘ His Royal Highness his Majesty’s high Commissioner, and Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council, having considered the List underwritten, of Persons alledged guilty of having Accession, or being in the late Rebellion, viz. James Hunter Heritor in Linlithgow, Robert Hergin Heritor there, James Burkney Heritor and Litter there, James Carmichael younger of little Blackburn, Patrick Marshal of Crochill, Edward Marshal Heritor in Kaemuir, George Arthur Portioner of Balquhatstoun, Thomas Houstoun of Middlerig, Robert Gibson Portioner of Balcastle, James Forrest in Greenhill, John Hastie Feuar of Boghaugh, John Paterfon of Peatbridge, David Forrest in Kilmore, in Kippen Parish, Alexander Buchanan Fiar of Bucklyvie, Donald Connel Portioner of Bucklyvie, Ure of Shargartoun, Walter Lerkie of May, John Key in Glennis, Arthur Dougal in Arncamuel, John Dougal his Son, John Mackenzie there, Thomas Miller in May there, John Gardner Wadsetter in Holhouse, John Auld Heritor in Balmitchel, John Taylor elder Heritor in Holhouse, John Taylor younger Heritor there, John and James Schaw, Sons to John Schaw Heritor in Easter Greenhill, George Mochrie Fiar of Stonridge, Robert Howie Seaman there, James Boyd Tenant to George Arthur, Heritor and Portioner of Balquhatstoun, Zachary Neil, Son to Thomas Neil in Dalwherne, George Hastie Webster there, Patrick Russel Servitor to Margaret Miln in Dalwherne, John Allan Webster there, William Robertson Carrier, Thomas Marshall in Waterdykehead, Patrick Salmond, Brother to Robert Salmond in Balquhatstoun, Steil Smith at East-bridge, James Falconar Servitor to Middleridge, Thomas Ure in Glens, James Galbreath there, William Young Cordner in Gargunnoch, Andrew Miller Smith there, James Macarcher there, and Thomas Fergusson of Finnarts, do hereby give Order and Warrant to his Majesty’s Advocate, to pursue a Process of Forfeiture before the Commissioners of Justiciary, against the said Persons, for the foresaid Crime.’

‘ His Royal Highness his Majesty’s high Commissioner, and Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council, do hereby give Warrant to General Latzel, to cause apprehend, and bring in Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, such Persons as his Majesty’s Advocate or Solicitor shall give up to him in List, as necessary Witnesses in the Process pursued before the Justices, against several Persons in Linlithgow, Stirling, and Air Shires, for being in the Rebellion, provided that any of these Witnesses, who in all find Caution for their Appearance before the Justices at the Diet, be free of Imprisonment or any Trouble upon that account.’

Jan. 9. Shargartoun and several others forfeited.

Accordingly, January 9. they are tabled before the Justiciary, but the Advocate at this Time insists only against a few of them. The Witnesses adduced prove, as before, that they were seen in Arms travelling from one Place to another, about the Time of the Rebellion, and some of them wanted Arms. The Assize brings them in guilty just in the Terms of the Depositions of Witnesses, some proven to be in Arms, and some not. Some, after Probation is led, make a Renunciation of their Estates to the Lords of the Treasury, as in the Processes above, and the Diet is deferred simpliciter as to them. The Sentence of Forfeiture is pronounced in common Form upon George Arthur of Bunnahill, Portioner of Balquhatstoun, James Ure of Shargartoun, Donald Connel Portioner in Bucklyvie. Those are Stirling Shire Heritors, Thomas Russel of Middleridge, Edward Marshal Heritor of Kaemuir, John Taylor elder in Holehouse, John Schaw, Son to John Schaw of Easter Greenhill, George Mochrie Fiar of Stonrig, Thomas Fergusson of Finnarts, in the Shire of Air, of whom before.

Sufferings of the Family of Shargartoun.

Some well attested Accounts of the Sufferings of the Family of Shargartoun, are come to my Hand, of which I shall here give an Abbreviate. This Gentleman, James Ure of Shargartoun, having left hearing the Episcopal Ministers, joyned himself to the persecuted Presbyterian Ministers in Stirling Shire and Monteith, and heard them, and had his Children baptized with them; upon this he was many Times searched for, and his House frequently spoiled by Parties of Soldiers before Bothwell. Mr. Robert Young, Curate in Kippen, was the great Informer against him and others in that Neighbourhood. In short, after great Losses, he was forced to leave his House and Family, and wander the best way he could. In this Case, for his own Safety, he joyned the People in Arms at Bothwell. Such as came from Kippen, Gargunnoch, and that Country, joyned themselves to him as their Captain, and he and they were placed at the Bridge to defend it, which he did with a great deal of Bravery, till his Ammunition failed, and the Army fled, and several of his Men were killed, and he got off himself with very great Hazard.

For nine Years Time he and his Family underwent inexpressible Sufferings, and till the Liberty 1687. for that Space he was not Three Nights in his own House. When he was forfeited his Rents and Moveables were all seized, and Parties of Soldiers came to his House, upwards of Thirty Times in Quest of him, and often did continue there and among his Tenants for several Weeks.

About this Time there was a Sermon at the Gribloch, where many were apprehended, among others the old Lady Shargartoun his Mother, a Gentlewoman above Seventy Years. They

They were carried Sixteen Miles Prisoners, with great Severity, to Glasgow Tolbooth. There by the Crowd, and Want of Accommodation, this aged Lady fell very ill, and petitioned the commanding Officers that she might be liberate upon sufficient Bond, or, if that might not be, that she might be taken out of the Crowd to another Room, or a House in Town, being in Hazard of her Life: But no Favour could be allowed her, and in a few Days she died among the Throng of other Prisoners.

1682.

Mean while, the Fury continues against this worthy Gentleman, and an Hundred Pounds Sterling were offered to any who would bring him in dead or alive; whereupon he was obliged to flee to Ireland. Notice being got of this, Mr. Young at Kippen procured one Mathew, who knew him, clothed as a Soldier, to be sent with a Party of Soldiers to Cartfaike and Greenock, to search the Ships going for Ireland. Providentially Shargartoun was not aboard at the Time, and so got to Ireland, where he continued about Half a Year, when he turned anxious to see his Lady and Family, and ventured home, and for some time was undiscovered; but his Persecutors got Notice at length, and he was forced to the Fields. During the Winter 1684. for several Weeks he was obliged to ly in the Wood of Balquhan all Night, the Frost was so great, that when he awoke, his Clothes would have been frozen to the Ground. As soon as Day broke, he retired to a Tenant's House, Duncan Chrystal's, at the Muir-end, where he had a Hiding-place in a Barn behind some Corn.

His Lady was apprehended in a little Time for conversing with her Husband, and was taken in Prisoner to Stirling, with a sucking Child on her Breast; there she was some Weeks Prisoner, and thence carried into Edinburgh, and put in the Canongate Tolbooth. After she had been there some time, her Friends got her out on Bail, to answer when called, under Two thousand Merks. In a little Time she was called, and went to the Council-house with her Infant on her Breast: But some of the more moderate being ashamed of this Barbarity, she was dismissed, and got home again. Her Husband continued hiding till the Liberty, and under his long Tract of Sufferings he met with very providential Deliverances.

At the Revolution he came in with some of his Tenants, and joyned with others, who were a Guard to the Convention of Estates. Afterward he was Captain-lieutenant in Argyle's Regiment, where he was very useful against the Highlanders: For which Reaton, Cannon and Buchan sent down a Party upon his Lands, they attacked the House of Shargartoun likewise; but his Lady, with the Servants, and some Tenants she got in, very courageously kept out the House against them. This good Man had his Forfeiture taken off at the Revolution, and outlived the unnatural Rebellion 1715. and observed the Righteousness of Providence, in making some of his Persecutors taste of the Cup he had drunk so deep of; and after all his sore Sufferings died in Peace at his own House.

February 20. William Harvey, Weaver in Lanerk, is before the Justiciary. He is indicted for being at the late Rebellion, and being present at publishing the treasonable Declaration at Lanerk, May 29. 1679. The Witnesses prove him present at the publishing of the Declaration plainly, and the Assize bring him in guilty of being at the late Rebellion, and publishing the late treasonable Declaration at Lanerk. Whether this relates to the Declaration January 12. last Year, or, as he says in his Speech to the People, for proclaiming Mr. Welsh's Declaration, and he is now executed upon his being at Bothwell, I cannot say; but the Justiciary delay pronouncing Sentence till the Council ordain them to pronounce Sentence of Death on him, and appoint a Party of Guards to carry him West, and be present at his Execution, March 3.

William Harvey sentenced to be hanged at Lanerk, March 3.

Accordingly, by his original Testimony and other Papers writ at that Time, I find he was hanged at Lanerk, March 3. this Year. The Collectors of the Cloud of Witnesses have no Account of this Man, it may be because he owns the King's Authority. His Testimony is very short, and he got Liberty to deliver it, tho' Two Drums were ready on each Hand to ruffle as Major White should order them. 'He declares himself a Presbyterian, and that in his Judgment People should obey the King in his lawful Authority. He says, the Law has condemned him to die in that Place for proclaiming a Paper over the Cross, which they called Mr. Welsh's Declaration, because there was something in it against Prelacy; that he did this in the Integrity of his Heart, and when he had done, said in Sincerity, God save the King; and that this was all he was condemned for. He declares, he believed what was in the Scriptures, and adhered to the Confession of Faith, national and solemn League and Covenant, our Catechisms, and all the faithful Testimonies since the Year 1660. He declares he is for kingly Government, according to God's Word.'

His Testimony, and what passed at his Execution.

After he had prayed fervently upon the Scaffold, he went up the Ladder, and spoke to the People a little, pressed them to make their Peace with God sure, and serve God and obey the King so far as the Word alloweth, and no further. He prayed again on the Ladder, and committed himself to the Lord's Mercy, declared his Willingness to die, and his forgiving all who had a Share in his Death, and died with a great deal of Composure. In short, he seems to have been made a Sacrifice to the Managers Resentment, for the last Declaration at Lanerk, tho' I cannot find he was concerned in that, but only in proclaiming the West Country Declaration before Bothwell Engagement.

U u u

Another

1682.

Process against Christian Fyfe,
March 27.

Another Process against a poor ignorant simple Woman, I find before the same Court. March 27. Christian Fyfe, late Indweller in Fife, is indicted for invading a Minister, and Treason. The Probation adduced against her is her own Confession, before the Committee for publick Affairs. ' Edinburgh, 21 March, Christian Fyfe confelleth, that on Sabbath last, she did beat Mr. Ramsay in the Old Kirk, at the ending of the Sermon, and the Reason was, she thought he was profaning the Sabbath. She declares she thinks the King is not lawful King, nor the Judges lawful Judges, otherwise they would never have murdered Mr. Donald Cargil and Rathillet. Since Mr. Cargil's Death she thinks there was not an honest Minister in Scotland: That she thinks it very good Service to kill all the Bishops present, and all of them that are in Scotland; declares the Reason why she went to the Church, was to beat and not to hear the Minister. '

When before the Justiciary, she judicially adheres to all she had formerly confessed, and declines them as her Judges; and adds, she went not to the Kirk to beat a lawful Minister, but one whom she thought a Judas and a Devil. That these who killed the Archbishop were at their Duty. Without any Difficulty the Assize bring her in guilty, and the Lords sentence her to be hanged at the Grass-market, upon the 7 of April.

When ever any of the forfeited Persons were caught in their Wandrings, the old Sentence in Absence took Effect on them, and the Lords of the Justiciary named a Day for their Execution. Thus April 7. I find four Gentlemen before the Justiciary, and a Day named for their Execution; and it seems, in these Cases a Warrant was necessary from the Council, who at this Time assumed the Powers of Parliament, Justiciary, and every Thing which made for the carrying on of the Persecution. Their Sentence runs.

Fleming of Auchinfin, M'leuraith of Auchinfloor, Barscob, and
M. Learmond have the Day of their Execution named
April 7.

' By Virtue of a Warrant from the Lords of Council, the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, having considered the Dooms of forfeiture already passed on Robert Fleming of Auchinfin, Hugh Mackleuraith of Auchinfin, Major Joseph Learmond, and Robert McClellan of Barscob, for Crimes of Treason and Rebellion; and having examined them, they acknowledged they were the same Persons forfeited in Absence, and against whom the Sentence is pronounced, by which they are ordered to be executed to Death, and demeaned as Traitors when apprehended: Ordain Robert Fleming, and Hugh M'leuraith to be hanged at the Grass-market, Wednesday next the 12 Instant, and Major Learmond and Barscob to be hanged on the 28 Instant, and the Heads of Major Learmond and Robert Fleming to be affixed upon the Nether-bow Port, and that the Magistrates of Edinburgh see to the Execution.

Afterwards they are reprieved, and some of them got Remissions.

None of these Four were executed, as far as I hear. Interest was made for them, and some of them got Remissions, and Barscob made Compliances, and was of some Use to the Managers afterwards. April 20. I find a Petition presented to the Council, by Robert McClellan of Barscob, Robert Fleming some time of Auchinfin, Hugh M'leuraith sometime of Auchinfloor, and Major Learmond, Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and under Sentence for Treason and Rebellion, for a Reprieve. And the Council reprieve and continue the Execution of the Sentence till May 19. May 13. Major Learmond is sent to the Bass, and reprieved till further Orders. Barscob and Auchinfloor appear at the Council-bar. The Duke of Tork declares his Majesty hath pardoned them.

Further
Account of
Major Learmond.

By an attested Account under his Son's Hand, I find that Major Joseph Learmond was under a continued Tract of Hardships since his Forfeiture after Pentland, and was sometimes obliged to go to Ireland, and other Times was under Hiding at his own House, which was frequently riddled and spoiled. This Year he was taken Prisoner. By Interest made for him, at this Time near eighty Years of Age, his Sentence of Death was turned to a perpetual Imprisonment in the Bass, though, if he would have taken the Test, he might have prevented this. There he was close Prisoner five Years, till falling indisposed, upon the Declaration of Physicians that he was in a dying Condition, he was let out on Bail. Next Year the happy Revolution came about, and he returned to his own House of New-holm, where in a little Time he died in Peace, in the Eighty eighth Year of his Age.

Process against
Robert Gray
Englishman,
May 17.

In May, one Robert Gray was brought before the Justiciary. I can give but a very short Account of him. He was an Englishman who lived in Northumberland, and had been taken, I know not upon what Pretext, about Ten Months before, and lay all this Time in Prison in hard enough Circumstances. After he had been examined before a Committee of Council, I find him before the Justiciary May 17. The Matter of his Indictment was precisely a Letter he had writ to John Anderson Prisoner in Dumfries, wherein he disowns the King's Authority, and before the Justiciary he owned the Letter, and the Expressions in it to be his Opinion; upon which he was sentenced to be hanged at the Grass-market upon the 19 of May. His Testimony is in Print already, and therein he declares, Men had unjustly taken away his Life, merely for adhering to his Principles, tho' they had no Matters of Fact to charge him with. When he was carried from the Prison to the Place of Execution, some of the Magistrates of Edinburgh, as was ordinary, were ordered to see him executed. He told them, he was very apprehensive, that the much innocent Blood shed in that City, would draw down heavy Judgments on it. Amongst his last Words, he expressed his firm Hope, that the Lord would yet send very glorious Times to Scotland.

Mr.

Mr. Gray's original Indictment is in my Hand, and being but short I shall insert it here, as another Instance of the Severity of this Time.

1682.

Robert Gray Prisoner in the Tolbooth of the Canongate, you are indicted and accused, that albeit by the Laws of this and all other well govern'd Nations, the Crime of Treason is punishable by Death, and Confiscation of all Estate, heritable and moveable, and particularly by the 12 Act, Parl. 8. Jam. VI. the Declining of the King's Authority and Royal Power in any Case whatsoever, either Spiritual or Temporal, is Treason, but much more the calling him a Tyrant, and declaring that his Subjects ought not to obey him, and that he ought not to be owned as King, is the highest Degree of Treason and Lese-majesty. And by 2 Act, 2 Sess. 1 Parl. Char. II. Whoever shall contrive any bodily Harm against the King, or endeavour to put any Restraint upon his Person, or to deprive, depose, or suspend him from the Stile, Honour or Kingly Name of the Imperial Crown of this Realm, and shall by Writing, Printing, or any advised Speaking, declare such their treasonable Intentions, they shall be adjudged as Traitors. And by 43 Act, Parl. 2. Jam. I. and the 83 Act, Parl. 6. Jam. V. the Crime of Leasing-making against the King, and his People, and his Parliament, is punishable by Death. And by the 10 Act, 10 Parl. Jam. VI. to declaim, or speak, or write any Purpose of Reproach or Slander of his Majesty's Person, State, or Government, or to deprave his Laws and Acts of Parliament, is punishable by Death. Yet true it is, that you the said Robert Gray, having shaken off all Fear of God and Respect to his Majesty's Laws, did most treasonably write a Letter upon the 18 of April last, to John Anderson Prisoner also for Treason in the Tolbooth of Dumfries, wherein you did declare our present Sovereign, the best and most merciful of Kings, to be a Tyrant, and that therefore he ought not to be owned as King. Likewise you did by that Letter incite his Majesty's Subjects not to obey him, and did deprave the late Act of Parliament made for taking the Test, calling it the black Test, and destructive of all the Work of Reformation. And you being called before the Lord Chancellor, and a Committee of Council, upon the 13 of May Instant, you did of new again not only adhere to the said Letter, and all that was in it, but did of new commit the foregoing Crimes, by declaring that you owned all these Principles, and that it was a Duty upon you to write so to your Brother who was in Prison. Of the which treasonable Crimes you the said Robert Gray are guilty, and Actor, which being found by an Assize, you ought to be punished with the Forfeiture of Life, Lands and Goods, to the Terror of others to commit the like hereafter.

Follows a Double of the Letter mentioned in your Dittay.

Dear Friend,

I Received yours, and am very much refreshed to hear of any one, at this Day, that is holding by the Truth, and is helped to witness against the Wrongs done to our Lord and Master, which is the main Thing we are called to be at in this Time, by which God is glorified, and it shall bring Peace to us in the End. As for Answer to that of owning this Tyrant in Ecclesiastical Matters, I hope it is beyond all Doubt and Debate, with all zealous exercised Christians in Scotland, that he should not be owned at all in it, whatever the Fine-servers who will sail with any Wind that blows, do, who, like Esau, sold his Birth-right for a Mess of Portage, we are not concerned. And as for owning him in Civil Things, to me it is very clear, now as Matters are stated, he should not be owned: In a Word, for his Breach of the Civil Law, in pardoning and setting free Murderers and Buggerers, and murdering poor Innocents, and making his Will a Law, and placing none in publick Trust but such as have taken the black Test, utterly disowning the whole Work of Reformation, with which Way I cannot meddle directly nor indirectly, without saying, A Confederacy, with them. I cannot tell how much more might be said on this Head, if Time would permit; but this, I think, with what our late Worthies did in casting this Tyrant off, and out of the Church, might give full Satisfaction not to own them in any thing, seeing they have acted for the Devil more than ever, and their Work has prospered in their Hand more than formerly. Indeed, if we consult Men at this Time, in the Matters of Godliness, no Wonder we be in the Dark: But, O! beware of that, and flee to the holy Word of God; beware of looking out at any Back-door, or halting twixt Two Opinions, for of a Truth there is a Halting that will not be approven of by God; and I think those will not be approven of God, in meddling with this malignant Party, directly or indirectly; 'tis a Thousand to one if they see it.

P. S. Barfcob and Major Learmond got their Sentence on Friday last, to die on the 28. and Hugh M-lewraith and Robert Fleming had their Sentence that Day too, and should have died this last Wednesday, but they got a Remission to the 28. and it is reported that Barfcob and the rest have offered to take the Test, and they have sent up to the Tyrant upon that 1682.

His Letter to John Anderson

' account, to save their Life. As for John M'lurg and Robert N. there is no Word yet what is to be done with them. I shall give you Account afterward. My Soul is grieved to see the Treachery in the Matters of God, that is used among the Prisoners, and their seeking sinful Shifts to be free of the Cross of Christ. O! dear Friend, seek to be kept steadfast in the Day of Trial. Now I can say no more, but leave you in his Hand who has brought you to the Trial, and can carry you clearly through it. I rest,

Your Fellow-prisoner and Friend,

Robert Gray.

His Confession
May 13.

' Edinburgh, May 13. I Robert Gray acknowledge I did write this Letter, but am not acquainted with the Man to whom it is directed, only I wrote this, having received one from him.'

Robert Gray.

' Follows your Examination before the Committee, Edinburgh, May 13. 1682. Robert Gray being called before the Lord Chancellor, and Committee of Council appointed for publick Affairs, and interrogate, if he knew John Anderson Prisoner in Dumfries, he declared he did not know him, but had writ a Letter to him, and that Letter being produced, he owned the same, as he hath testified by his Subscription at the End of it. Being asked, if he thought of the King and Government, as is express in that Letter, he said he did, and he owned that as his Judgment; and being asked, if he thought the King a Tyrant, he said, he had written so, and owned he had writ this Letter to John Anderson, as his Duty to his Brother.'

Geo. Gordon Cancel

He is executed,
May 19.

This is all the Managers had to lay to the Charge of this knowing and sensible Person, a Stranger, and not a Scots Subject, who had done nothing worthy of Imprisonment; and, when in Prison, had only writ this Letter, in answer to one he had from a Fellow-sufferer; and, upon this score precisely, they indict him on the 17. and execute him on the 19.

Thomas Lauchlan
in Lanark.

In August this Year, I find Thomas Lauchlan before the Justiciary. I have nothing further about him than what is in the Registers. It seems he had formerly been forfeited in Absence, and was now taken, and the old Sentence took effect. August 3. he is brought before the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, who are now the Earl of Perth Justice-general, Forsyth, Lord Collingtoun, Bayfour, Lord Forret, Esq Lord Harcourt; and this Day Seton Lord Pitmedden is admitted one of the Lords of Justiciary.

His Sentence,
August 13.

The Prisoner's Sentence is, ' The Lord Justice-general, and Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, having considered the Verdict of the Assize returned against Thomas Lauchlan in Lanark, now Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, upon the 21 of March 1681. whereby he was found guilty of being at the Rebellion 1679. together with the Doom then pronounced against him, to be executed to Death, and denominated as a Traitor when apprehended, at such Time and Place as they should appoint; and he being called before them, and owning himself to be the Person designed in the Verdict and Doom, they ordain him to be hanged on Wednesday next, the 16 Instant, at the Market-cross of Edinburgh.' I have no more about him, nothing was laid to his Charge but his being in the Rising at Bothwell, for which great Numbers had been already executed; and, after Three Years, it seems, they inclined to give a new Proof of their Virulence this way.

Mr. Robert Kennedy proceeded criminally.

No more Executions offer till December, when we shall have them in Plenty. September 29. I find the Council order the Advocate to process Mr. Robert Kennedy Prisoner, criminally, for being at the Rebellion 1679. and Field-conventicles since the Indemnity. If any thing was done further about him, I have not observed it in the Registers of Council or Justiciary. I notice, that now the Journals and Proceedings of the Committee for publick Affairs, are read in Council, and approved, but not insert in the Registers. The most Part of Matters relative to the Persecution, came first before this Committee, and since I want its Minutes, I must necessarily omit many remarkable Parts of the present Sufferings.

Process Criminal
against Gentlemen in
Galloway.

November 14. the Council appoint the Advocate to prosecute criminally, about thirty Persons, mostly Galloway Gentlemen. Accordingly in the Justiciary Records December 11. I find Process King's Advocate contra Galloway Rebels. Criminal Letters had been raised against them for being at Bothwell, where I know several, and probably most of them were not. That Day the Advocate produces a Commission to pursue the following Persons before the Justice Court, Hay of Arrioland, Alexander Hunter of Colquhassen, Andrew Martin of Little-Elton

Ellies, James Welsh of Little Clowdon, Mculloch of Barholm, Gordon second Son to the deceased Laird of Holm, Mr. Samuel Arnot late Minister at Tongland, Mr. Thomas Warner late Minister at Balmaclellan, Haliday of Mayfield, William Thomson younger of Mon-craig, Kennedy younger of Knock-nallonie, Macnaught younger of Overtoun, Thomas Crichtoun of Hole of Balquhassie, Brown Smith and Heritor of Newtoun. Several others had been ordered to be prosecuted by the Council, but Interest had been made for them, and these only I find in this Day's Process.

Those Persons being cited to this Day, did not compare to answer for the Crimes of rising in, and being at Bothwell-bridge, harbouring, converting, aiding and assisting Rebels : The Commissioners of Justiciary adjudge the said Persons named, to be our Sovereign Lord's Rebels, to be put to the Horn, and their moveable Goods and Gear to be brought in to the King's Use, they being Outlaws, and Fugitives from the Law.

It seems this Sentence was found too soft ; and therefore, December 18. I find many of the same Persons and others are proceeded upon Treason, that their heritable Estates might fall into the Managers Hands. For Room's sake the Depositions of some Witnesses are taken ; and some of them were seen in Arms in different Places of the Country before the Rising at Bothwell. The Witnesses depone they saw others of them at Hamiltoun-muir ; yet 'tis but few that were seen there. The Assize bring them in guilty, and the Lords of Justiciary, considering the Verdict of the Assize returned against the deceased Samuel Grierson of Dalgonar, William Grierson of Kitchuber, James Welsh of Little Clowdon, John Brown Heritor in Newtoun, Henry Mculloch of Bornholm, Haliday of Mayfield, Mr. Thomas Warner sometime Minister at Balmaclellan, George Gordon second Son to the Laird of Holm, Alexander Macnaught younger of Overtoun, Anthony McKie of Glencard, Mr. Samuel Arnot late Minister at Tongland, James Crichtoun of Hole of Balquhassie, Hay of Arrioland, Alexander Hunter of Colquhassie, Andrew Martin of Little Elies, Alexander McKie of Drumbuy, and Fullarton of Sennick, whereby they were found guilty of Treason and Rebellion. The said Lords therefore adjudge the said Alexander McKie of Drumbuy, and Anthony McKie of Glencard, Prisoners, to be executed at the Cross of Edinburgh, the first Wednesday of July next ; and the rest, except Grierson of Dalgonar deceased, to be executed to Death, deemed as Traitors, and under the Pains of Treason when apprehended, at the Places and Times the Lords shall appoint. And appoint their Names, Fame and Memory to be extinct. However, sovereign Providence appointed otherwise, and I think none of them were executed.

Upon the same 11 of December I find another Process, which took more Effect, before the Criminal Court, against James Robertson ordinary Residenter in the Parish of Stone-house, William Cochran in Carnduff, and John Finlay in the Parish of Kilmarnock. I shall give some Account of these three Sufferers unto Death, from the Justiciary Registers, and some other Papers before me.

James Robertson was a Merchant in Stone-house in the Shire of Lanerk. This serious and religious Person used to travel up and down the Country with a Pack ; and in October this Year, when in the Town of Kilmarnock about his Business, he went in to see a Prisoner there of his Acquaintance, and when with him, without the least Offence or Provocation, he was seized and carried to the Guard-house ; his Pack and his Goods were taken from him, and never restored, and himself kept close Prisoner in the Guard-house Ten or twelve Days.

During this Time he was brought before Major White, who would have him give his Oath super inquirendis, which the Prisoner absolutely refused to do, whereupon he was very barbarously used. My Accounts bear that the Major himself pulled him by the Nose, and wrung it about, till he gushed out in Blood. After this Treatment he was sent to Prison, and when there, whilst he and his Fellow-prisoners offered to worship God together, the Captain of the Guard getting Notice, came in with great Rage, and pulling the Bible out of James Robertson's Hand, swore bloodily he would burn it if he offered to go about that Work again.

In a few Weeks he was carried into Edinburgh under a Guard. At Linlithgow he was pressed to drink the King's Health, which he refusing, the Soldiers treated him very rudely, and tied his Head and Feet together with Cords, and left him in that Posture upon the cold Earth all Night. To morrow, when on Horseback, they tied his Feet together very hard under the Horse's Belly, and in that Posture carried him into Edinburgh. There he was several Times examined by the Committee for publick Affairs, and his Interrogatories being very ensnaring, and his Answers pretty cautious and pointed for one of his Education, I have insert his Examination as it was brought as the only Evidence they had against him.

James Robertson being interrogate, Whether or not it was lawful for these at Pentland and Bothwell, to rise in Arms against the King : He answered, that it was lawful as they rose, in their own Defence, and that of the Gospel, and this, says he, is acknowledged by the Confession of Faith, whereupon the Test it self is founded, which owns it lawful to resist Tyranny. And being asked if the King be a Tyrant. He answers, he desires that the Obligations in his Coronation Oath, and his present Practice may be considered, and his 1682.

X x x

: Usurpation

Their Sentence.

December 18 it is made more severe, and some others added.

James Robertson William Cochran John Finlay tried December 21.

Circumstances of James Robertson, his being taken

His Confession

1682.

‘ Usurpation upon the Privileges of the Church of God, and the Prerogatives of Jesus Christ, and his being made absolutely Supreme in Ecclesiastical Matters, from which let it be considered by Persons at home, and Nations abroad. As to the Archbishop’s Death he answers, he is not a Judge to cognosce upon it, and refuses to answer otherwise: And being desired to say God save the King, he answers, he is not in Composure for such an Action, adding, Prayer ought to be gone about in Deliberation.’ When what is above is read, he confesseth it is as he said, but refuses to subscribe, and the Lords sign the Confession.

His Answers are set down in the Cloud of Witnesses, as he remembred them, and contain some Things, which, it seems, the Clerk of the Committee did not think worthy the setting down. When the President of the Committee asked him, Is the King your lawful Prince, yea, or not? He answered, ‘ Since you make your Questions and my Answers Matter of Life or Death, it were reasonable to give me Time to think upon what I say; but since I am put to it, I answer, as he is a Terror to evil Doers, and a Praise to them that do well, he is, or he is not.’ He was interrogate, if he was at Bothwell-bridge; and answered, you count that an Act of Rebellion which is criminal, bear Witness of it, and so make it evident against me. Then he was ordered to purge himself upon Oath from that, and he should be liberate. He answered, I will say no more upon that Point. When I told some of you the Truth upon that Head, I was not believed. One of them said, now I will try you if you be a Man of Parts, jesting him, there was an Act of Parliament standing when the Confession of Faith was made, declaring the King was Supreme, which all the Presbyterians of that Time owned. The Prisoner returned, how could that be owned, since the Confession, which declares otherwise, was owned? and desired the Act might be read, for he knew it not; but it was not produced. At the Close the President said, now after all, as a Test of your Loyalty, will you say God save the King? He answered as above; whereupon one of them replied, would you ask a Blessing to your Meat? He answered, if you were present you should know, but the Case differs. Another of them said, these Principles of yours will condemn you. James calmly answered, if I be absolved of God, the less Matter tho’ Men condemn me.

These Examinations at this Time were Preliminaries to an Indictment, and generally speaking, the Advocate formed his Indictments against Country People out of their Answers, having for the most part no other Proofs. Accordingly, he was indicted for denying Pentland and Bothwell to be Rebellion, denying the King’s Authority, which, mean while, he did not do; but the great Matter they took his Life for, tho’ they could have no Probation for it, was a Surmise they had that James Robertson was the Person who affixed a Protestation against the Test upon the Church Door of Stonehouse, containing several pointed Reasons against it.

William Cochran (the Cloud of Witnesses names him Mungo Cochran) was next indicted much upon the same Heads: His Answers to the Interrogatories before the Committee, were all the Proof they had against him, and are in short. ‘ William Cochran being interrogate, if it be lawful for Subjects to rise in Arms against the King, refuses to answer. Being interrogate, whether the King be lawful King, answers these are kittle Questions, and will say nothing of them, being a Prisoner. Being desired to say God save the King, refuses to say any Thing. Can write, but refuses to sign his Answers.’

John Finlay was the last of the Three, and held much on the Reserve likewise. ‘ Being interrogate, whether it be lawful to rise in Arms against the King, refuses to answer, these being kittle Questions, and he a poor Prisoner. Refuses to say God save the King, but says he loves the King as well as any Person. Confesseth he was present at Drumclog, but without Arms. Being asked, if he conversed with Mr. Donald Cargil within these Two Years, refuses to answer otherwise, than that a Man is neither by the Law of God nor Man, bound to have a Hand in shedding his own Blood. Declares he cannot write.’

All the Three own judicially before the Criminal Court, that these were the Answers they gave before the Committee of Council. And Two Soldiers are adduced as Witnesses against them, who depone that the Two last took their Arms from them, and left them bound in the Fields. The Assize bring them all in guilty of Treason, tho’ the Reader may see their Answers are mostly negative, and the Court sentence them to be hanged at the Grass-market, on Friday next, being the 15 of December.

This harsh and iniquous Sentence was accordingly executed. When James Robertson offered to speak upon the Scaffold, he was interrupted by the Ruffling of the Drums, and when complaining of this, Johnstoun the Town Major beat him with his Cane, at the Foot of the Ladder, in a most barbarous Manner. This abominable Rudeness to a dying Man, and the Patience and Cheerfulness of this good Man in suffering all this, I know was the Occasion of a deep Conviction to some who were present, of the Evil of Persecution and Prelacy; and there are severals yet alive, who can date their first serious Impressions of Religion, from their seeing some of the persecuted Party suffer, as they themselves have informed me.

They are executed December 15.

John

John Finlay was a dear Comrade of James Robertson's, and, if I mistake not, his visiting him was the Occasion of his being taken; and William Cochran lived in the same Neighbourhood, in the Parish of Evandale. This last says, in his Paper he left behind him printed in the Cloud of Witnesses, that the main Article upon which he received his Indictment, was his refusing to say God save the King. Somewhat hath been said of this above, and it may not be out of the Road to drop a Word further here upon it, since this was put to all these Three.

1682.

This and the like seeming Condescensions are mightily insisted upon, in some of the Pamphlets which defend the Reign I am now describing, and it is said with a vast deal of Triumph, that those Persons might have had their Lives upon the easy and fair Condition of praying for the King, and this is mightily magnified as an Instance of the Lenity of this Period. This plain honest Country Man gives a very distinct Answer to this: 'When I was bid say God save the King, I could not comply with this, when they had set him up as an Idol in the Mediator's room, without being guilty of saying Amen to all they had done against the Church and People of God, the true Subjects of the Kingdom, and the fundamental Laws thereof; neither could I bid him God speed, lest I should be Partaker of his evil Deeds: Yea, adds he, they said before our Face he was King over all Persons, and in all Causes, which is a putting him in God's room; they sentenced me because I (they said) disowned Authority, which was a Diving into the Thoughts of my Heart.'

Remarks upon the Sufferers refusing to say! God save the King.

These were the Sentiments of the poor serious Country People who suffered, and when they had this View, that praying for the King was really an Approbation of all now done; it will not appear so narrow a Point on which they stated their Sufferings, as at the first it may seem, and the Prelatists represent it; especially, considering the poor Country People's Ignorance and Education. And these blood-thirsty Men were so far from endeavouring to instruct and convince the Pannels, that they essayed to ensnare them; and proposed their Queries so, as the poor Men could scarce miss concluding, that their saying God save the King was an Approbation of what was done in his Name. They required this as a Testimony of their Loyalty, as we saw in James Robertson's Case; so this Piece of Reproach may very justly be turned over upon the Managers, who had no Matter of Fact, no Act of Rebellion or Treason to charge many of them with, but endeavoured to ensnare them with captious and double-fac'd Questions, and then took away their Lives upon the poor People's being unwilling to approve the Wickedness of this Time.

I come now to end this Year with one of the most flaming Instances of the Rigour of this Period, in the Execution of that excellent and worthy Gentleman Alexander Hume of Hume, toward the Close of this Year. This good Man had been apprehended, and in his taking sore wounded, by a Brother of the Earl of Hume, and was brought in Prisoner to Edinburgh. The Ground of his Sentence was only Converse with some of the Party who took the Castle of Hawick, in the Year 1679. and every Body owned that the Probation of that small Crime was not clear, and the Verdict of the Assize was evidently different from the Oaths of the Witnesses: Yea, he was at his first Trial assailed, and the Diet plainly deserted, his Innocence appeared so plain to the Criminal Court: But afterwards a new Process was begun, when these People who thirsted after his Blood, and resolved to have his Estate, had got some more Pretexts against him. I shall give an Abstract of his Process from the Registers.

Alexander Hume of Hume.

November 15. Alexander Hume Portioner of Hume, Prisoner, is indicted before the Justice-court. Because Indictments are so numerous now, and it would take up much Room to insert the whole of them, and they all run much in the same Strain, excepting some few Particulars in the Application to particular Persons, I do not insert them, but observe here, that they generally begin with a large Enumeration of the Laws they alledged were broken, as Act 5. Sess. 1. Parl. 1. Jam. I. Act 129. Parl. 6. Jam. VI. Act 10. Parl. 10. Jam. VI. Act 4. Parl. 16. Jam. VI. Act 2. Sess. 2. Parl. 1. Char. II. And the Indictment goes on with, 'Nevertheless it is of Verity, that the Pannel hath committed, and is guilty of the same Crimes, in so far as John Balfour of Kinloch, the deceased David Hackfoun of Rathillet, and others, having on the Third Day of May, 1679. murdered his Grace the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, they, to escape Justice, and involve others, fled to the western Shires, and there joyned in a desperate and avowed Rebellion.' And then follows an Enumeration of the different Steps, Drumclog, the Attack upon Glasgow, Bothwell-bridge, according to the different Pannels. And tho', as in this Case before us, and many others, the Pannel was no way concerned in what was done either in Fife or the West Country, yet still the Narrative is much the same, so I only consider what is peculiar to the Prisoner, and the Depositions of Witnesses.

His Process.

Mr. Hume is particularly indicted, 'Of rising in Rebellion against the King's Majesty, with in the Shires of Roxburgh, Berwick, Selkirk, and Peebles, in marching up and down in Arms, rendezvousing with the Rebels in Bewly-edge, resisting and fighting a Party of his Majesty's Forces, under the Command of the Master of Ross, besieging the Castle of Lauswick, robbing the Arms therein, and marching towards Bothwell-bridge.' The Lords for several

His Indictments.

1682.

several Causes desert the Diet simpliciter. In short, the Process was perfectly invidious, no Probation appeared, and had there been any Justice and Righteousness in the present Procedure, the Gentleman ought to have been liberated: But by no Means could he obtain that without taking the Test, which in Conscience he could not do; and so he continued in Prison till December 20. when new Occasions are sought against him.

December 20. he is again accused and indicted by the Advocate, 'That in June 1679. he rose in Rebellion, as above; that he came to the House of Sir Henry M'Doual of Muckerstoun, besieged it, and called for Horse and Arms; and being bolted out, came armed to Kelfo, Selkirk, and Hawick, and searched and sought for Horses and Armour, and carried away Militia Colours, Drums, &c. and wounded Mr. John Purden Schoolmaster at Hawick, and did resist his Majesty's Forces at Bewly-bridge, (or Boig) under the Command of the Master of Ross, and marched forward to Bothwell-bridge.' None of these Matters of Fact are at all proven.

Sir Patrick Hume, Advocate for the Defender, offers presently to prove, that he came only accidentally to Muckerstoun's House, being only in his Way to his own, having no Body with him but one Servant; and when challenged by Muckerstoun where he was going, told him he was riding home, and accordingly he and his Servant went home most peaceably. The Advocate opposes the Dittay, and the Lords repel the Defence, and remit the Libel to Probation, without allowing this Exculpation, tho' most reasonable.

The Witnesses are called, none of them are ad idem, and all of them most lame. The Matter, as far as I can gather, seems to have been this: There had been a Sermon at Bewly-bridge, and Lilius Leif-muir, where Mr. Hume had been with his Sword and Pistols, as Muckerstoun had likewise been; and as he was returning from one of them, he, with his Servant, called on Munday at Muckerstoun's House, and offered to buy his Bay Horse. However, the Advocate, December 21. 'bring him in guilty of commanding a Party of the Rebels Horse, in besieging the Castle of Hawick, tho', as far as I could notice in the Depositions of the Witnesses, there is no Probation of this. Whereupon he is sentenced to be hanged at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, upon Friday December 29. 'twixt Two and Four of the Clock after Noon.'

His Sentence
to be executed,
Dec. 29.

Mr. Hume earnestly begged so much Time as his Case might be laid before his Majesty, but this was peremptorily refused, and the Day hastened in order to prevent it. By a written Account before me, I find, that Interest being made at Court, under the Prospect of what Mr. Hume's Friends saw was designed against him, for a Remission, it actually came down to Edinburgh some Days before his Execution, and was kept up by the Earl of Perth; and that on the Day of his Execution, his Spouse Isobel Hume, came in the most moving Manner to the Lady Perth, begging she might interpose for her Husband's Life, urging she had Five small Children. The Lady's Answer was so inhumane, that I shall not put it in Writing, tho' I have these Accounts under the Hand of a reverend Minister yet alive, who was well acquainted with this Gentleman and his Family.

I cannot but remark here, that the Managers at this Time were so full of Rage, that not only, as in the former Instances, by their ensnaring Examinations and Questions, they brought poor ignorant Country People to do before them, what they made a denying of the King's Authority; but even when the King's Authority was owned, and no Act of Rebellion proven, merely upon Converse with Rebels, and Presence at a Field-meeting, and that alledged only and not proven, they shed the Blood of the Lord's Saints.

His last Words upon the Scaffold, are so full of the primitive Spirit of the first Christians, in their Martyrdoms, so agreeable to our own first Three Worthies, and those after Pentland, and contain so much of the Temper and Sense of the Body of Presbyterians in Scotland, that I could not but insert them here.

His last Words
at his Execution.

The last Words of Alexander Hume Portioner of Hume, when he suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh, upon the 29 of December, 1682.

Men and Brethren,

There is a great Confluence of People here at this Time, and I would fain hope there are some amongst you that desire to be edified by the last Words of a dying Man, which shall be but few, because I do not think or judge my self so qualified, to enlarge upon any thing I have to say, as Need requires, and some might expect; and moreover, the Time allowed is but short. And now I am come here to lay down my Life, and I bless the Lord that I am not to lay it down as an evil Doer, and albeit I be a sinful Man, as others are by Nature, yet, through his Grace, I hope I am planted in Jesus Christ, in whom I have Redemption and Remission of Sins, through his Blood, and am separated from the Generation of Unbelievers: Free Love only hath made the Difference, and happily hath ordered it so, that I have been born within the Church, where the blessed Device of the Gospel hath been discovered, and the Means of Salvation made effectual for converting and building me up in Grace, and begetting in me the Hope of that Glory and Redemption which I am now going to possess.

The Ground of my Sentence is the alledged Converse I had with that Party that took in the Castle of Hawick, in the Year 1679. the Probation whereof was not clear, and from which the Verdict of the Assize did materially differ; as is evident from the Witnesses subscribed Depositions, and the recorded Verdict of the said Assize, the Equity and Justice whereof I leave to God and all unbiassed Persons to judge.

I need not be ashamed to live, (as through his Grace I am not ashamed to die) and here I dare say, it has been my Study to keep a Conscience void of Offence towards God, and also towards Man. The World represents me as seditious and disloyal, but God is my Witness, and my own Conscience, of my Innocency in this Matter; I am loyal, and did ever judge Obedience unto lawful Authority, my Duty, and the Duty of all Christians. I was never against the King's just Power and Greatness, and this I commend to all that hear me this Day; but all a Christian doth must be of Faith, for what clatheth with the Command of God cannot be our Duty, and I wish the Lord may help the King to do his Duty to the People, and the People to do their Duty to the King.

It doth minister no small Peace and Joy to me this Day, that the Lord hath set his Love upon me, one of Adam's unworthy Posterity, and has given me the blest Experience of his Grace working in my Heart, whereby he hath inclined me to look towards himself, and make Choice of him for my Soul's everlasting Portion. It is the Lord Jesus, and he alone, who is my Rock, and the Strength and Stay of my Soul: All my own Righteousness I do utterly renounce, as a Garment too short for me, yea, as filthy Rags. I die a Protestant and Presbyterian this Day, adhering unto the holy Scriptures, and Work of Reformation from Popery and Prelacy, according to the Engagements, personal or national, lying on me; and I do leave my Testimony against all the Steps of Defection therefrom, either in Doctrine, Worship, or Government, and all the Encroachments made upon the Kingdom and Privileges of Jesus Christ, and whatever is against the Life and Power of Godliness.

It was the Glory and Happiness of our Land, that the Lord Jesus Christ made Choice of us, to dwell in the Midst of us by his Gospel, and the Ordinances thereof, the precious Symbols of his Presence, by which we had the Advantage of many, if not of all the Churches about us. But ah and alas! how far are we degenerate, and what Contempt of this precious Gospel are we become guilty of? We have not received the Love of God in our Hearts, nor improven him for Growth and Progress in Holiness; in place whereof, all Manner of Impiety and Naughtiness does abound, which I fear shall provoke the holy and jealous God, to send many heavy Judgments on the whole Land, whereby it may be laid utterly desolate, without an Inhabitant. 'Tis to be feared, that these Things may turn this Church into a Den of Idolatry, and provoke the Beloved to put a Bill of final Divorce into our Harlot Mother's Hand. O! what Cause is there to fear, that this People, partly through their own Ignorance, and partly through the Unfaithfulness and Delusion of their pretended Teachers, shall return again in Multitudes, into the Darkness and Superstition of Popery, from which the Lord in his Mercy delivered our Fathers. O! that the Lord would give Repentance to this Generation, that the evil Day might be prevented. Be exhorted to turn from your Sins, and make your Acquaintance and Peace with God in Time, which is not so easy a Work as many apprehend; and who wants his own Challenge for Negligence in this Matter? People love to defer this great Concernment until it be too late, unhappily preferring the Pleasures of Sin to the Favour of God, and all the Expectation of the Saints, within or beyond Time. Was there ever a Generation wherein so many sad Prognosticks of divine Wrath, upon its near Approach, did so much abound amongst Men of all Ranks and Capacities, of whom far other Things were expected, and I am sure, solemnly thereunto obliged, no less than these who have suffered at their Hands, upon that account? which cannot but highly aggravate Sin, heighten and hasten Judgment beyond ordinary, which I pray the Lord may prevent. He knows, I desire not the evil Day, I would exhort the Lord's People to study much Nearness to God, and Oneness among themselves, that being of one Mind and one Spirit, they may stand fast for the Faith of the Gospel, which is in such palpable Hazard this Day, as all who have but Half an Eye may see. I cannot but be sensible of the Sharpness and Severity of my Sentence, which, after strict Enquiry, will be found to be as hard Measure as any have met with before me; which seems to flow from some other Thing than what Law and Justice could allow. I wish I may be the last that may be thus dealt with; I question not but if competent Time had been given, that Application might have been made unto his Majesty, his Clemency would not have been wanting in this Case. Nevertheless, I bless the Lord, I find it in my Heart to forgive all Men, even as I desire to be forgiven, and obtain Mercy in that Day; and if there be any at whose Door my Blood may more directly ly than others, I pray the Lord 1682.

Lord forgive them; and now I wish it may be well with the Land when I am gone. My Conscience bears me Witness, I ever studied the Good of my Country. I hope I shall be no Loser, that I have gone so young a Man off the Stage of this World, seeing I am to make so blest an Exchange, as to receive eternal Life, the Crown of Glory, the near and immediate Fruition of the blessed Father, Son, and holy Ghost, in place of a short, frail, and miserable Life here below. I bless his Name he made me willing to take Share with his persecuted People, for I hope I shall also share with them in their Consolations, when he shall wipe all Tears from their Eyes, and they shall suffer no more, but reign with him in his Kingdom. I am shortly to be clothed upon with my House from above, and that City that hath Foundations; I shall sin no more. O desirable Condition! when, beyond all Hazard of offending God any more, I shall be capable both of serving God, and enjoying him more: I shall wander and toil no more, having reached that Harbour of eternal Rest. I now contentedly take my Leave of the World. Farewel all Enjoyments, earthly Pleasures and Contentments: Farewel Friends and Relations, in whom I had much Satisfaction: Farewel my dear Wife and Children, dear indeed unto me, tho' not so dear as Christ, for whom I now willingly suffer the Loss of all Things, and yet am no Loser; I leave them on the tender Mercies of Christ. Now welcome blessed Father, Son and holy Ghost; welcome innumerable Company of Angels, and Spirits of just Men made perfect; welcome celestial City; welcome endless Joy: And now, O Father, into thy Hand I commend my Spirit, Lord Jesus receive my Soul.

Alexander Hume.

I am of Opinion the Collectors of the Cloud of Witnesses, have done their Collection no Service, by leaving out this Testimony, if, as I doubt not, it hath come to their Hands, and shewn themselves not a little partial in leaving out so valuable a Paper, unless they are of the same Sentiments with relation to Mr. Hume, which they own themselves to have as to the Earl of Argyle, to whom they allow the Honour of dying a Martyr for the Protestant Religion, but not for the Presbyterian Establishment of it.

Mr. Hume, when the Rope was about his Neck, and immediately before his being turned over, concluded his Life with singing the last Verse of the 17 Psalms. His Estate was forfeited, his Wife and Five Children exposed to very great Hardships till the happy Revolution, but the Lord carried them through; and since the Revolution, his eldest Son enjoys, by divine Retribution, double more Estate than was forfeited, while these who enjoyed the Forfeiture were not able to repay their vicious Intromissions.

At the End of this Year, the Laird of Blackwood's Prosecution before the Council and Justiciary begins; but I shall leave it till it come in all together next Year, which I now go to.

C H A P. VII.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1683.

Persecution grows heavier the longer it lasts.

Contents of this Chapter.

THE Circumstances of the persecuted Party grew worse the longer the Persecution continued; the harassed People came to be known, their Haunts discovered, and the Persecutors, by Continuance, improved in their Acts and Methods against the poor Sufferers: So that this Year and the two following open a blacker Scene than we have yet had.

Nonconformity to Prelacy is now more directly and universally levelled at, and every Body is oppressed, who wanted Freedom to partake of Ordinances dispensed by a Set of Men who were at the Bottom of all the Troubles of Presbyterians. New Methods are taken, and the former Ones were continued, and more generally extended.

We

We shall meet with very exorbitant and excessive Finings this Year, and most diligent Searches accomplished, many Lives taken, together with the ordinary and yearly Oppressions by Courts and Commissions, and the Severities of the Soldiers, and likewise an itinerant Circuit at Glasgow, Air, and Dumfries, whereof I cannot give so large Accounts as I wish, but they are fuller than I expected, some of the Procelles being insert in the Criminal Books at Edinburgh, which is seldom done in this Period.

All which Hardships are the more aggravated, that the Prelates had now no Field-meetings to grate them, and the Government had no Risings of armed Persons to term Rebellion, and to be a Pretext to their Severities; but when they wanted this, they look back to Bothwell, yea, even to Pentland.

The Test was violently pressed at the Circuits, upon Persons who were not obliged by Law to it, and the alledged Plot broke out this Summer, was a good Handle to fall foul upon Multitudes of worthy Persons no ways concerned in it, but their Troubles come mostly in next Year.

I shall then confine my self very much to the Multitude of Facts and Instances I meet with this Year, in the Council and criminal Books, adding now and then an Instance from remoter Parts, which could not be in the publick Registers, and begin with the Commissions and Proclamations, which are the Foundation of what follows: Then I'll go through the particular Sufferings of Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, mostly from the Records of Council; then give some Account of such who were prosecuted for their Lives before the Justiciary Court, and next, a more particular Detail of the Circuits this Year, and shut up all with but some Hints at the Plot, and some other incidental Things, which I would not mix with what directly related to the Sufferings.

S E C T. I.

Of the Proclamations, Commissions, and Instructions, given in order to the further persecuting of Presbyterians this Year.

What I have in mine Eye here, is mostly from the Council-register, to give Account of the publick Warrants granted, and Steps more generally taken, to continue and help on the Persecution: And the Particulars which follow in the second Section, will be a Commentary on this Text. I shall give them just in the Order they offer, throughout this Year.

We heard before of Skene of Hallyards his Severities in several Places of the West Country; and as a Reward of what he had done, and to enable him further to harass the Country, January 4. he receives a new Power from the Council, as follows. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, considering that John Skene of Hallyards, is commissioned by the Lord High Treasurer of this Kingdom, for to uplift the Rents of the forfeited Heritors, in the Sherifdoms of Lanerk, Stirling, and Linlithgow, and Burghs within the same Shires, and also for intromitting with the moveable Goods of these who were at the late Rebellion 1679. or who had Accession to the late Rebellion, who are living within the said Shires, with Power to call before him any Person he thinks can give him Information of these who were present at the said Rebellion, or had Accession thereunto, the said Lords have thought fit, for the better Execution of the said Commission, hereby to give and grant Power to the said John Skene, to call any Person before him, who he thinks can give him Information of those who were in the said Rebellion, or had Accession thereunto, within the said Shires, and examine them upon Oath; and if he shall find any sufficient Probation against any Persons, for being present at or having Accession to the late Rebellion, or Resettlers of those who have been at it, then to secure and sequestrate their Goods, ay and while he find a Merchant to buy them, with Power to the said John Skene, if the Witnesses refuse to depone, and find Caution for appearing to bear Witness before the Lords of Justiciary, against these Persons who were at the late Rebellion, or had Access thereunto, to imprison them in the next Tolbooth.'

New Powers granted to
John Skene of Hallyards.

I shall make no Reflections upon this or many of the following Commissions; a great deal of Power is put in the Hands of the Persons commissioned, they may attack any Body they think fit, high or low, and that upon very large Heads, Accession to Bothwell, &c. and such as can give Information thereanent. No Body was safe when such extensive Powers were granted granted to such naughty Men. Indeed it was generally Country People of the most substantial Sort, who were attacked, and from them prodigious Sums were exacted, merely to be free of these unaccountable Powers given to him and others. How exact he was in this Commission, may be guessed from what hath been narrated, and some further Instances may afterwards be given.

Remarks

1683.

Scarce any thing in the Management of this Period, was less accountable, than the attacking of Husbands for the Nonconformity of their Wives, and Fathers for conversing with their own Children; and therefore it may be worth while to insert here the Council's Procedure upon these Heads.

Queries about fining of Husbands and Parents, Jan. 11.

The Magistrates of Edinburgh, in their prosecuting of Nonconformists, frequently had this Case before them, of the Nonconformity of the Wives of Conformists, and they drew up the following Queries, which were presented to the Council, and a Committee was appointed to consider them, and Answers were brought in, formed mostly by the Advocate, which were approved, January 11. They are but short, and I insert them both.

Queries anent Fines.

1. HOW shall they fine Women whose Husbands are also fined? and whether these Women be finable only in the Half of their Husbands Fines? since the Act against Conventicles appoints only the Wife to be fined in the Half of her Husband's Fines; and the Act against Separation specifies no Fines or Proportions as to any Women.
2. If the Wives of regular Men should be fined, and to what Proportion, and if their Husbands should be liable for these Fines?
3. To what Proportion should Relicts be fined, who are not Liferenters, or have not Liferents suitable to their Husbands Estate?
4. In what Proportion should unmarried Women be fined, who want their Fathers?
5. After what Age should young Persons be fined who have Parents, and to what Proportions, and if the Parents, especially the regular, should be liable?

Answers to these Queries.

Answers.

THE Committee, having considered the abovementioned Queries, are of Opinion.

As to the First, that seeing Withdrawing from the Church is in it self a Crime and by the 7 Act, Sess. 2. Parl. 2. Charles II. it is declared to be seditious and dangerous to the Government, tho' the Act anent Withdrawing do not proportion the Fines as to married Women their withdrawing, yet that the Wives ought to be fined in the Half of their Husbands Fines, as in the Matter of Conventicles, and that the Husbands are liable, it being a Debt of the Wife, and that the Husbands are to have Defalcations off the Wife's Joynture.

As to the Second, 'tis the Committee's Opinion, that if regular Husbands produce their Wives to the Magistrate, they are not further answerable.

As to the Third, 'tis the Committee's Opinion, that Relicts be fined according to the Condition of their late Husband, viz. in the Half of the Husband's Fines.

As to the Fourth, it is the Opinion of the Committee, that such unmarried Women shall be fined according to the Condition of their deceased Parent, and their own Condition as to their Fortunes.

As to the Fifth, it is the Committee's Opinion, that Parents be answerable for their Childrens keeping the Church, after they arrive at Seven Years of Age, and be fit to be catechized.

And further, it being propounded what is to be done in the Case, when the Husband is a regular Person, and the Wife irregular, and the Husband being with the Wife convened before the Judge ordinary, and produceth her.

The said Lords declare, that the Husband producing her, he has done what was incumbent on him; and if the Wife persist contumaciously in the said Disorder, the Judge ordinary is to report the Case to the Council, that they may give Order, as the Speciality of the Case will allow, for the Wife's Punishment, and freeing the Husband.

Herron of Ker
querries, Process

Upon the same Council-day, they have the Case of Mr. Herron before them, for Conversing with his own Son; and tho' it be most favourable, yet all they do is to interpose for a Remission, mission; and being as it were ashamed, the Law should oblige them to find Persons in such Cases, guilty of what infers the Pains of Death, they write up for new Powers to fine at Pleasure; which as the King could not legally give, having no Power to repeal an Act of Parliament, so it was convenient for them to have, because they could make a better Hand of a Fine than a Man's dead Carcase, and the King did grant them this Power. The Chancellor's Letter to the Secretary, upon this Subject, follows, dated January 11.

1683. for Converse with his own Son.

My Lord,

There being one Andrew Herron of Kerrochtree, pursued before his Majesty's Privy Council, for harbouring, resetting, entertaining, and intercommuning with Patrick Herron his Second Son, Anthony M'gbie late of Glencard, and other Rebels; and the said Andrew having come voluntarily to the Lord High Treasurer, before any Citation given, how soon he understood the Hazard he was liable to by Law, and confessed, that out of Ignorance of the Laws of the Kingdom, and on the account of his near Relation to his said Son, and his Wife's Nephew, he had sometimes seen and conversed with them, and palliate a small Trade of Cattle, which his Son brought from England: Having confessed his Crime humbly, and begged his Majesty and the Council's Mercy; the Council having considered the Specialities in his Case, do recommend to your Lordship, to interpose for a Remission both as to his Life and Estate.

Letter to the Secretary on this Head.

But that others may be deterred from harbouring and resetting Rebels, tho' never so nearly related, the Council desire that your Lordship may procure a Letter under his Majesty's Royal Hand, empowering and authorizing them in this Case, (even tho' the Crime be capital in itself) to impose such a Fine as they think fit and just. This, in the Council's Name, is signified by,

Your Lordship's, &c.

Aberdeen Cancel. I. P. D.

Thus Matters went at this Time at Edinburgh. That the Persecution might have its full Swing in the West, Major White's Commission is enlarged upon a very trivial Pretext, and chiefly with an Eye to some particular Persons whom he would have been at, and could not reach, being out of the Shire of Air. His Commission is of the first of March this Year, and the Reader will be satisfied to have the Tenor of it, which is as follows.

M White's
Commission
enlarged.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that by their Act and Commission of the Third Day of August last, upon the Considerations therein expressed, they did grant Commission to Major Andrew White, to call, convene, pursue, and punish all Persons guilty or suspect to be guilty of Conventions, disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, withdrawing from publick Ordinances, and other Disorders therein specified, within the Sheriffdom of Air, Bailiary of Cunningham, and other Places expressed, and of holding Justice-courts, &c. The said Lords being informed, that several of those disorderly Persons, as they are pursued within the said Shire and Bounds foresaid, flee to, and are sheltered in other adjacent Shires, and particularly in the Parishes of Eglisham, Merns, Carmunnock, and Kilbride, in which there are dwelling also divers Persons guilty of the same Disorders, the Lords extend his Commission to those Parishes in all Points.

And in regard of the Distance of Places in the said principal, and this additional Commission, the said Major White cannot at all Times be personally present at those Places for doing of Justice, the said Lords do give and grant full Power and Authority to him to nominate and appoint Deputes in the said Shires and Parishes, for whom he is to be answerable; and recommend it to General Dalziel, General of his Majesty's Forces, to order such Parties of the Forces as Major White shall desire for his Assistance, in putting the Laws in Execution against disorderly Persons, conform to his Commission, and to order them to obey the Major's Commands in that Service.

Remarks upon this are needless. It is evident, that it was with some particular Views to some Persons that the Major got his Powers extended, otherwise that same Reason would have called for the same Powers in all neighbouring Parishes to the Shire; and this Power of naming Deputes was a terrible Addition to the Burden of the former; and the lower Deputations came, poor Country People were the worse dealt by. The Privy Council, tho' mere Executors of the Law, and consequently had little of that Power they daily exerted, were worse to come before than the Parliament. Major White, for Instance, was more severe than the Council in many Things, and his Deputes were yet worse than himself, if worse could be: And this way the Oppression turned very general, and few Parishes wanted the Major or his Deputes.

Remarks

1683.

Instructions to Claverhouse, Jr.,
Major White,
and Meldrum,
in prosecution of their Commissions.

At that same Diet, March 1. the Council agree upon the following Instructions to such as were sent out by them, with a Justiciary Power to harass the poor Country with their Courts and Deputes, for Nonconformity and Church Irregularities, which I insert before I come to any Particulars of the Carriage of Major White, and some others, in pursuance of these Commissions and Instructions.

Instructions to the Lairds of Claverhouse, Meldrum, and Major White, in Prosecution of their Commissions.

- 1<sup>mo</sup>. When you discover any Person or Persons within the Bounds of your respective Commissions, that have been in the late Rebellion, and are neither in the portable nor fugitive Rolls, in case you can have Two deponing Witnesses thereupon, you are to send them Prisoners to Edinburgh, with the Probation against them.
- 2<sup>do</sup>. Upon Information given you that any Heritors have harboured, reset, or inter-communed with any of the Rebels, you are immediately to send their Names to the Chancellor, and the Deposition of Witnesses that can prove the same, that the Council may give Directions, either for putting them under Caution to appear, or securing them as they find Cause.
- 3<sup>io</sup>. Where inconsiderable and petty Heritors, who are Tenants also, are guilty of Disorders, you are to fine them in that Capacity which will bear the greatest Fines.
- 4<sup>to</sup>. In case you find any of the indulged Ministers, who have more commonly and contemptuously transgressed the Instructions, you are to send Accounts to the Chancellor with Probation.
- 5<sup>to</sup>. If any others who were in the late Rebellion, shall humbly, and in the great Sense of their Guilt, supplicate, and throw themselves on the King's Mercy, you shall receive their Petitions, and grant them safe Conduct, not exceeding Fourteen Days at a Time, that they may come in and apply to the Council. This Power of safe Conduct is only to last till the First of May next.
- 6<sup>to</sup>. Upon Information that Noblemen or Gentlemen do entertain in their Families, Chaplains and Pedagogues that are not licensed, you are to send in to the Chancellor, Archbishop of St. Andrews, or Bishop of Edinburgh, Lists of the Names of Chaplains, and their Entertainers, that the Fines imposed by Law may be exacted.
- 7<sup>mo</sup>. You are to call for the Books and Records of Sheriffs, Bailies of Regalities and Royalties, within your Bounds, and examine what Fines have been imposed in Cases of Church Disorders; and in case you find any not fined who were guilty, or that Fines have been taken up without Sentence, or by Collusion given down or rebated, and not adequate and according to Law, you are to pursue such Persons, and to fine either such Persons as have been pursued and not sentenced, or such as being fined their Fines have not been exacted within the Space of a Month, by Payment or Security; and such whose Fines have been inadequately imposed, in as much more as will make the same correspond with Law: And you are to have no Regard to any Receipts but such as are particular, bearing the Crimes and Fines imposed, and the Money truly paid, relating to a Sentence, which you are to allow pro tanto. And you are to give Account of any of these Magistrates guilty of such Negligence, Connivance and Collusion.

Such Instructions so rigorously followed by those Persons, and others we shall hear of, opened the Door to a fearful Scene of Persecution, this Year and afterwards, for the Commissions endured till they were recalled. In short, no Body against whom any Information could be had, escaped; and Multitudes who formerly had been sufficiently squeezed, were brought on the File again, and prodigious Sums were exacted.

Instances are innumerable. I can only give the Reader a Taste as to Major White, who lost no Time in executing his Commission and Instructions. Upon the Eighth and Ninth Days of March he held his Courts in the Church of Carmunnock, and vast Numbers were brought before him, they were all Inhabitants of that and the neighbouring Parishes, and whomsoever he was pleased to pitch upon. The Pretext of Fugitives from other Places, in his Commission was a mere Sham. The Country People were kept hanging on from one Court Day to another, to their great Loss in this Time of Labour. Such as came did not had Soldiers sent upon their Houses and Families, and were besides reserved for further Prosecution; and these who came and would not swear they were at the Church, at least every Third Sabbath, were fined in what the Major was pleased to impose.

Mr. Robert Boyd, Curate at Carmunnock, waited closely on the Major, and used to sit with him on the Bench, and instigate and direct him in his Procedure against the Country People. By his Instigation the Reverend Mr. Andrew Mortoun, the Presbyterian Minister before him in that Parish, of whom before, was cited for alledged baptizing and preaching in that Parish. Mr. Mortoun's Friends getting Notice of the Design, took Care he should rather Instance of the Execution of these Instructions

in Carmunnock.

Mr. Andrew Mortoun fined in 30000
Merks.

rather fall into the Hands of the Sheriff of the Shire of Lanerk, than into the Major's; and he was first cited before the Sheriff, and in Absence fined in Four thousand Merks. The Major disregarded this, and went on in his Process, and upon what Law and Grounds I know not, but I have good Information of the Fact, fined him in Thirty thousand Merks. 1683.

This, and the Severity of the Times, obliged this worthy Minister, Mr. Mortoun, to abscond; and his Family removed from the Haggs beforementioned, to Edinburgh, where he lurked the best way he might, until the Liberty 1687. at which Time he returned to his Parish of Carmunnock, and preached in a House belonging to Sir William Stuart of Castlemilk, till he had Access to his Church; and after all his Tossings and Toils, he died Minister there in a good old Age, and under much Serenity, July 1691.

A List of the Fines imposed by Major White in the Parish of Carmunnock, is before me, Many others fined. too long to be insert here. From Eight or Nine Persons he exacted Two hundred and seventy seven Pounds, merely for Absence from the Church, or rather because they would not swear they kept it in Terms of Law; all of them were poor Country People. One of them, William Warnock in Busby, was fined in Twenty three Pounds, a great Sum for him; the poor Man not having it all to pay, tho' he paid a good Part of it, the Major caused the Clerk to search his Pockets, and finding there Three Shillings Scots more than what he paid, took that also.

Besides these, at another Court Day there were Five and twenty Men fined, precisely for not hearing, some in Fifty Pounds, some in Twenty five Pounds, and about Twelve married Women in Six Dollars per piece. William Alexander, and William Baird in Drips, which lies in Carmunnock, but pays Tiend to the neighbouring Parish of Cathcart, because they refused to be Elders in the Parish of Cathcart, to Mr. Robert Finnick Curate there, were remitted to the Sheriff of Lanerk, and each of them fined in an Hundred Pounds.

And to give the Account of the Oppression of this Parish all together; upon the 14 of this same Month of March, Somerwel of Spittle, as Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, held another Court in Carmunnock, and fined some of the former a Second Time, as well as a great many others. Thus we see the miserable Circumstances of the Country, Claverhouse and his Deputes in the South, Major White in the West, Hallyards and Meldrum in the East held their Courts, and particular Sheriffs and under Magistrates would attack the very same Persons, and the Circuit Courts heightned all, so no Body almost could escape.

Major White pursued his Commission in other Parts of the Bounds committed to him, and held new Courts at Kilmarnock, and pressed the Bond of Regularity, as we heard last Year, and oppressed either by his Deputes or himself, all the particular Parishes within his Reach. The Major's Severities in the Shire of Ayr.

I shall only give one Instance out of many which ly before me, attested under the Gentleman's Hand, who is yet alive. Jasper Touch, Chirurgeon in Kilmarnock, was at this Time about Twenty four Years, but entring upon his Business, and had lately set up his Shop. Nothing could be charged upon him but Nonconformity. When called before the Major, because he would not depone that he had been at Church at least every third Sabbath, he is fined in Nineteen Pounds Sterling. He did own he had not heard the Incumbent Mr. Pollock, since his Settlement there, which was about the Space of a Year. When fined, the Bond of Regularity was tendred to him; and because he could not sign it, he was sent to Prison with several others. Jasper Touch in Kilmarnock, his Case.

Many of them paid the Whole of their Fines, and got out; but Mr. Touch and Seven others more were kept in close Prison Fifteen Days. He got out at length upon paying 27 Rix-dollars, which was pretended to be a peculiar Favour; and the rest got out upon paying different Sums, as they could best agree. They had Receipts of what they paid, as Part of their Fine, and were liberate without taking the Bond: But within a little, Mr. Touch was again attacked by Mr. Arthur Hamilton, for not hearing Mr. Pollock, and paid to him Five Dollars, and Half a Dollar to the Fiscal of the Court; and in Harvest this Year, because he deserted another Court then held for pressing Regularity, no sooner did he appear again about his Business, but he was imprisoned till he gave Bond and Caution, under Five hundred Merks Penalty, to compear when called; and he had a Dollar to give to the Clerk for writing it, and Fourteen Shillings Scots to the Keeper of the Prison, for about Six Hours Imprisonment. These minute Things are set down to give some View of the great incidental Charges Sufferers were put to, besides their Finings and Imprisonment. And to put this Person's Sufferings all together in this Place,

Some Time after this, Lieutenant Colonel Buchan held a Court at Kilmarnock, and Mr. Touch not being personally apprehended when cited, did not appear, but was forced to abscond, and to leave his House and Shop to the Care of his Apprentice, for Six Weeks. In Absence, he was fined in 50 Pounds for Noncompearance, and in a vast Sum for Absence every Lord's Day, since Mr. Pollock's coming to Kilmarnock. His Servant was imprisoned, and an Inventory taken of all his Household Furniture, which yet was not very great, and all that was in his Shop. The Colonel with his Regiment was suddenly called to Glasgow, and the Gentleman returned to his Business for about Five Months. When the Regiment returned to Kilmarnock, he was immediately seized and imprisoned: No small Interest was made for him, him, there being few of his Employment in that Country. The Colonel refused to liberate him till he paid his Fine for Noncompearance, and his Nonconformity, and until he took the Test; and plainly told his Friends, that one great Thing he had to charge upon Mr. Touch, was his dressing some of the Rebels after they were sore wounded, when the Garison of Newmills was deforced. However, afterwards, upon new Application, he allowed him, upon sufficient Caution, under the Penalty of a Thousand Merks, to appear before him or the Council in Six Days Warning, to be liberate: And in a little the Times growing easier, he was never called.

1683.

Further Accounts of Major White's Severities in the Shire of Ayr.

In short, Major White was most rigorous in his Exactions throughout all the Shire of Ayr. A Person of Honour, a Sufferer himself, and a Witness to what was done at this Time, writing to me on this Head, says, 'What the Major's Commission and Instructions from the Council were, I will not determine, or whether he exceeded his Warrant; but the Method he followed with poor People, I well remember. When he or his Deputes came to a Parish, a Roll was made up of all the Heads of Families, which the Curate, if he had it, was not unwilling to furnish. Then all the Men and Women in every Family, were interrogate upon Oath, whether they heard their Ordinary duly, what House or Field-conventicles they had been at since Bothwell, &c. And then, according to their Confession, they were fined ad libitum. Next, as to the Time to come, the Bond of Regularity was put to them, and such as refused it were deeply fined, such as did not compear were declared Fugitives, and Quarterings were ordered, if the Person had a House and Lands, and in those Quarterings the Soldiers committed great Barbarities. These Courses brought a vast deal of Money in to the Soldiers Hands, and forced many to hear the Incumbents against their Inclinations, and increased the Aversion of the Country to those Men, who were more rigorous than the Soldiers themselves.'

Commission to Hallyards March 6.

To return again to the Commissions granted by the Council: Upon the 6 of March, they grant a Commission to Skene of Hallyards just in the Terms of the Act mentioned last Year, and of the same Nature with that given to Meldrum and White; and so I need not insert it here. It extends to the Sherifdoms of Stirling, Lanerk, and Linlithgow, and the Burghs within those Shires.

Meldrum's Severities in Mid and West-calders.

Meldrum mean while was very busy in executing his Commission within the Limits appointed him. I have an attested Account of his Carriage in the Parishes of Mid and West-calders in March this Year. He and a great Friend and Servant of his, Thomas Kennoway, held Courts. All the Men in the Parishes were summoned to appear under the Penalty of Five Hundred Pounds, which was severely exacted in case of Absence. All who appeared were solemnly sworn to tell what they knew as to themselves and others. Then they were asked, if they were at Bothwell-bridge or Airs-moss, if they heard Mr. Cargil since the 1662. if they heard Mr. Cameron or any other nonconformist Ministers, or were at any Field-conventicles, if they reser or conversed with any of the Rebels, or had any of them or their Children to be Servants, or if they had furnished any Horse or Arms to Bothwell-rising, if they had baptized any of their Children with Presbyterian Ministers, if they knew any who were Rebels, and at Bothwell, or any who furnished them with Horse, Arms, or Provision, or reser any of them. I have before me a List of Fines, uplifted at this Time in those two Parishes, too large to be insert here. Upon their Refusal to answer upon those Heads, or own Guilt in points of Nonconformity, some are fined in 333 Pounds 13 Shillings 4 Penies, others in 120 Pounds, others in 100 Merks.

Commission to Ardmillan for Carricks.

March 20. the Council give a Commission, in the Terms of the former Act, to James Crawford of Ardmillan, for the Bailyary of Carrick, and insert Instructions for him in the Registers. They agree intirely with these to Meldrum, and Major White above, save that the fifth and the seventh Act of these Instructions are not given him, for what Reasons I do not determine, so I need not resume here what is above.

March 27. the Council add the Shire of Nairn to the Commission formerly granted to Captain Mckenzie of Suddie, with full Powers as aforesaid. I have before remarked that a few of these Persons who had got Good of the Gospel preached by Presbyterian Ministers in those remote Corners, remained and kept up their Testimony against the Removal of their faithful Pastors, by refusing to joyn with the Intruders upon their Flocks; and the fewer they were, the more they were observed and harassed. We shall meet with the Laird of Fowls attacked by the Council this Year.

Letter appointing Circuit Courts in June.

In April the King's Letter comes down appointing Circuit Courts, and thanking the Council for their former Procedure; but I shall leave the Account of those Circuits in June, with the Papers relative to them, to a Section by it self.

Proclamation about Pedagogues and Chaplains June 4.

June 4. the Council issue out a Proclamation about Pedagogues and Chaplains. We find that it was an Instruction to Major White and the rest of them, to enquire where any unlicensed Chaplains or Pedagogues were to be found. Very probably they sent in many Informations, since Abundance of such were in the West and South. And it was a very good Outgate to Presbyterian Ministers and Preachers, to get into a religious Gentleman or Nobleman's House under such Hardships as were at this Time laid on them. However this was Crime Crime enough, now to have any such in a Family, without the Bishop's Licence. Accordingly the Proclamation is annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 84.

The Proclamation notices, that whereas notwithstanding of former Laws, several not licenced by the Bishop, are maintained for Education of Children, under other Designations, as Physicians, &c. The Council discharges all to perform the Offices of teaching and instructing Children, or to do the Work of Pedagogues and Chaplains, under other Designations, except such as swear and subscribe the Test before their Ordinary, and have his Licence. Noblemen, if they contravene, to be fined in 3000 Merks, Gentlemen in 1200 Merks, Burghesses and others in 600 Merks. I shall make no Remarks upon this Proclamation.

When the Circuit is over, and they had carved out more Work for the Council, by admitting such as they had no Probation against, and could not overtake, to be tried at Edinburgh, the Council July 28. give a new Commission to the underwritten Persons to make enquiry about them, viz. To John Boyl of Kelburn, Armillan, Colonel Buchan and Captain Inglis, for Air-shire, to Charles Maitland Governor of the East, Adam Urquhart of Meldrum, and Halyburton of Eagles, for East-lothian, to Sir John Whitford of Miltoun, John Skene of Hallyards, and Captain William Clelland of Fosnan, for Clydsdale, to Ezekiel Montgomery Sheriff-depute of Renfrew, and Captain James Maitland, for the Shire of Renfrew.

The Design and Powers of these Commissioners, will best appear from their Commission: They run all the same way; and I have inserted that for the Shire of Air, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 85.

Remarks upon this Commission are needless. Every Thing the Managers do, proves a new Handle to themselves for further harassing the Country, and they are every Month making new Work for themselves; and every new Commission they give contains some new oppressive Clause, and all their Commissioners are still impowered to make new Discoveries. One would think, that after four Years Work up and down the Country, such as we have heard, and so many Circuits and Commissions, any Body, but a Set of People who delight in Oppression, might have been at the Bottom of the alledged Rebellion; but it was their Element to be continually finding out new Vexations to the poor Country. And we shall find them just now seeking more Occasions against poor People, and apply the King for Liberty to fall upon more extensive and general Methods of reaching all who take not the Test, and come not in wholly to their Measures.

I find a Letter of Thanks from the King, read and recorded August 16. where the Reader will notice how acceptable these severe Methods were to the Bishops and Clergy, and it seems the Primate was the King's Informer, and no doubt took a Care that the new Assurances of his Majesty's good Intentions to the Clergy, and gratifying them in further prosecuting Courses, should be insert. The Letter follows.

1683.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 84.

Commissions
for Air, East-lothian, Clydsdale and Renfrew

Form of that for Air
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 85.

Remarks on it.

King's Letter
of Thanks Aug.
16. for the Council's Care of the Clergy

CHARLES R.

‘HAVING lately received an Account, from the Lord Archbishop of St. Andrews, of your great Zeal and Prudence in managing the Concerns of this Church, whereof the happy Effects are now very evident, We are therewith so well satisfied, that We cannot but return you Our hearty Thanks for the same, as most acceptable Service done to Us. And as We have upon all Occasions been ready to give all due Encouragement to the orthodox Clergy in the faithful Discharge of their Duty, so it is still Our Will and Pleasure you follow the same wholsom Methods you have used for their Support and Protection, wherein you may rest fully assured, We will interpose Our Royal Authority, if needful, for rendring such Methods effectual, so, not doubting of the Continuance of your Zeal, We bid you heartily Farewel.’

By this Letter and their Success so much boasted of against the persecuted Party, the Managers are encouraged to make new Demands upon the King, and crave a Prolongation of the Time for taking the Test, that so there might be further Occasion to gain their Ends up and down the Country: This at first View may appear favourable to the Sufferers, but it proved not so; for all that could comply with that Oath were already come in, and by this Proposal they had Room to extend it to a great many whom by the Act of Parliament they could not reach, and to go on to their Banishment and other Severities. The best View of this Matter will be had from the Council's Letter, the King's Answer, and Proclamation following thereupon.

The Council's Letter bears the Date August 21. and contains some other Things anent the Modelling of the Justices of the Peace, but I insert the whole of it as it stands.

Council's Letter
to the King,
August 21.

May it please your Majesty,

‘BY the 38 Act of your Majesty's first Parliament, it is declared and appointed, that the Justices of the Peace within this your ancient Kingdom, shall be from Time to Time named and appointed by your Majesty and your Royal Successors: And there being Vacancies

A a a a

1683.

'cancies in several Shires,' by the Death of several Persons formerly appointed, it is our humble Opinion, that your Majesty will please to ratify and approve all the Nominations of the Justices of the Peace in any of the Shires of the Kingdom, heretofore made by your Council, and to impower them to nominate and appoint Justices of the Peace, in any of the Shires of the Kingdom, from Time to Time, as Occasion shall offer, and as the Council shall see Need.'

'Your Majesty's late Act of Indemnity to the Commoners who were engaged in the Rebellion, and guilty of Refet and Intercommuning with Rebels who were in the Rebellion, having had great and good Effects in reclaiming many to their Duty and Allegiance; yet several Persons have lost the Opportunity and Benefit of the same, in neglecting to take the Test before the First of August. And albeit such Persons may be justly proceeded against before the Criminal Court, to the Forfeiture of Life and Goods, yet seeing that Neglect in some of them, might be occasioned through Ignorance or Inadvertency, or Want of frequent Meetings of these appointed by your Majesty's Proclamation for administering the Test, and that the Mitigation of deserved Punishment is suitable to your Majesty's great Clemency, it is our humble Opinion, your Majesty may authorize your Council, to call before them such Persons as they shall see Cause, and, upon sufficient Probation, to proceed against them by Sentence of Banishment, or Transportation to some of your Majesty's Plantations, or continued Imprisonment, as the Circumstances of the Person, or Case shall deserve, if they or any of them shall make further Delay in taking the Test: And as to such who shall be delinquent yet to take the Test, that we, or these to be appointed by your Majesty's Council, be authorized to administer the same to them; tho' not to have the Benefit of an Indemnity, yet to stop and sit criminal Process against them, to the end that such of them as your Majesty's Council shall think fit, may be convened before them, in order to the inflicting of lesser Punishments, by Fining or Imprisonment, as they shall see Cause.'

'And in regard the taking the Test is to be looked upon as a great Evidence of Loyalty and good Principles in those who take the same, that your Majesty would graciously be pleased to declare your Royal Will and Pleasure, that all Persons, whether Heritors, or others, who have heretofore taken, or shall hereafter take the Test, before the Day of next, shall not be pursued before your Council, Justice-court, or any other Court or Judicatory whatsoever, for the Crimes of Harboursing, Refet, Intercommuning, or Converse with, or doing Favours to any Rebels forfeited, or declared, or registered at the Horn, or other notour Rebels, excepting those who are intercommuned, with the Attainders of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, and those likewise against whom there are any criminal Processes already depending for the said Crimes, who have already refused the Test, and such who have withdrawn to other Countries. And in respect that the daily calling up of Witnesses to this Place, doth occasion considerable Charges to your Majesty, we have commissioned several fit Persons to examine Witnesses in the Country upon Oath, in the Case of such Persons as are suspected of the Rebellion, or guilty of Refet and Converse, as hath been done before.' The Council conclude with asking his Majesty's Approbation.

King's Answer.

'To this Letter an Answer comes from the King, which needs not be insert here at large, since 'tis just a Resumption of the Words of the above Letter. He remits it to the Council to choose Justices of the Peace, and grants Power to administrate the Test until the First of March ensuing, and orders strict Prosecution of the Refusers after that, and approves the Commissions and Instructions granted for taking Declarations of Witnesses.

Proclamations Sept. 20 concerning the Diet for taking the Test.

And next Day, September 20, the Council emit a Proclamation, continuing the Diet for taking the Test, until the First of March next, which being short I insert. 'Forasmuch as it being represented unto Us, that some of Our Commons have, through Ignorance, or Want of frequent Meetings of those appointed by Our late Proclamation, for administering the Test, lost the Benefit of Our Indemnity, and considering that the Time formerly allowed unto them was very short, We have thought fit, as a further Evidence of Our Clemency, with Advice of Our Privy Council, to continue the Diet for their taking the Test, until the First of March next, for indemnifying them for ever, as to their refetting and intercommuning with such as were in the Rebellion 1679. excepting such as have refet and intercommuned with the Attainders of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, or seditious Field-preachers, or such who were any way accessory to the late Conspiracy; requiring all Sheriffs, Magistrates, Stewarts, and others in Office, strictly to search for, after the said Day, and to punish with all Rigour that Our Law will allow, all such as will refuse this Our last Offer of Mercy. But if any are or shall be apprehended before their making Application for obtaining this Our Favour, We declare they shall have no Benefit thereof. And further, We declare, that the Heritors who have taken the Test at the late Justice-airs, are thereby secured as to their Lives, if they have only been guilty of Refet and Intercommuning: But yet nevertheless, they shall, after the First of November next, be liable to be convened before Our Privy Council, and to such arbitrary Punishment as they shall think think fit to appoint, according to the Specialities of their Cases and Guilt: Declaring hereby, that their Sentences being inflicted by them, shall indemnify them as effectually as if they had a special Pardon and Remission from Us under Our great Seal. And We do allow those intrusted by Our Privy Council, to take the Declarations of Witnesses, against those who have been suspected of being in the late Rebellion, or guilty of Relet and Intercommuning; providing always, that there be no Process intended on these or any other Declarations and Depositions, until Our Advocate find sufficient Matter of Dittay therein. OUR WILL is therefore, that these Our Letters, &c.'

1683.

This Proclamation gives new Occasion of a general pressing of the Test upon all suspect Persons, and every Clause in it almost secures the arbitrary Power of the Council and Managers, and gives them plain enough Footing to enrich themselves with the Spoils of Heritors and others; and the very taking of the Test, secures only the Lives of the Heritors, but does not save them from Council-processes. Thus this Proclamation was a new Handle for Persecution.

Remarks on it,

There is not much further offers this Year, upon the Subject of this Section, and it is high Time to draw to an End of it. Among other Infringements made at this Time upon the Law and the Liberty of the Subject, the Royal Burghs were very badly used through much of this Period I am giving the History of; and their Privileges, ratified in Parliament many a Time, were now enervated and overturned by the Council at Pleasure.

Infringements on the Royal Burghs

I only give one Instance in the Town of Linlithgow, one of the ancientest Burghs in the Kingdom: The Magistrates were not so forward, as the Clergy and some others inclined, to violent poor People; and therefore a Commission is granted to the Earl of Linlithgow by the Council, with ampler Powers, I may say, than the Magistrates themselves had; and indeed his Power did, upon the Matter, vacate theirs. I shall give an Account of this Infringement, as it stands in the Registers. 'September 11. the Council renew their Commission, granted November 1682. to the Earl of Linlithgow, because the Provost and Magistrates of Linlithgow have connived at and neglected Persons guilty of Disorders, and authorize the Earl of Linlithgow, Lord Livingstone, and their Deputies, to have a cumulative Jurisdiction within the said Burgh, for putting the Laws in Execution.'

The Case of the Town of Linlithgow.

When, in a little Time, those People named by the Council, were engrossing all the Power belonging to the Magistrates, and some Debates arose about Persons who had been attacked first by the Magistrates, the Council declare, September 25. 'That the Lord Livingstone, as having a Commission of cumulative Jurisdiction, as likewise his Deputies, have undoubted Power to judge solely all Persons, when they are the first Attackers, and also such Persons who have been judged and tried inadequately by the ordinary Magistrate, or omitted to be judged by them, when the ordinary Magistrate hath done first Diligence.' So that these Commissioners of Council were quite everfive of the Power of the Royal Burghs.

And to complete all, and take off the Odium of this Imposition upon the Burgh, December 7. 'The Council appoint the Lord Livingstone Provost of Linlithgow, in regard the former Magistrates did not exercise their Jurisdiction against Ecclesiastical Disorders, and that there are now wanting in that Town a Provost, Bailie, and Six Counsellors; and the Earl of Linlithgow and Lord Livingstone, are appointed to proceed vigorously in the Exercise of their Commission.'

That I may give all come to my Hand anent the Oppression of this Town; by some Extracts from their Registers, I find, that in October 1681. the whole Town-council took the Test to Advise, only Alexander Muir Provost, the Earl of Linlithgow, and Lord Livingstone Counsellors, and James Glen Bailie, took the Test upon their knees; and it would seem this was the Occasion of these Methods afterwards taken. At Michaelmas 1683. Provost Muir refusing to accept of being Provost, the Council appointed as above. And from this Time to the Revolution, the Liberties of the Burgh seem to be quite taken away: At least I find, September 18. 1686. there is no Election as usual, but a Letter from the Privy Council produced, shewing, That his Majesty had prohibited all Elections in Royal Burghs at this Time, and authorized the present Magistrates and Council to continue in their Office. And upon October 16. that same Year, a Letter comes from the Privy Council, naming both Magistrates and Town-council, and the Lord Livingstone is named Provost. And September 22. 1687. another Letter is produced from the Privy Council, renewing the Prohibition of any new Election, conform, as they say, to a new Letter from his Majesty for this effect.

Thus we see, that the Foundations were laying for many Years, under the Duke of Tork's Management, for the total Subversion of our Liberty and Religion under his Reign, which was very near to be fully accomplished, had not a signal Providence brought about the happy Revolution: And I do not question but the same Methods were taken with other Royal Burghs through the Kingdom, tho' the Particulars are not come so fully to my Hand as in this Instance.

1683.

Garifons appointed 25. 12.

About the same Time, to help on the Execution of those Commissions and Oppression, I find the Garifons are filled again with Soldiers. September 12. the Council recommend to General Dalziel, to order that Company of Foot, under the Command of Captain John Dalziel, and the Company of Dragoons now in Galloway, commanded by Captain Strachan, to be placed in Garifon in Dumfries, Ketchloch, Earlstoun, Baliagan, Lockerbean, and the House of Monnigaff, or such of them as shall be found most convenient, and to continue till further Order. Those effectually carried on the Persecution, and were most severe against all Nonconformists.

In November a Commission is given to Colonel John Buchan for Air Shire, much in the Terms of the Act of Council last Year for Commissions, insert above. And November 29. Commissions are given to Gentlemen in several Shires in the South and East, to attack Heritors who had not given Satisfaction at the Justiciary-courts, for their Converse with Rebels. Their Commission follows. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that several Heritors and others within the Shires of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Berwick, Stirling, and Stewartries of Kirkcudbright and Annandale, and Jurisdiction within the same Precincts, were indicted before the Justices for Crimes of high Treason, and Refet and Converse with Rebels; and the Diets from the several Circuit Courts, being continued from the Places where the Justice-airs were held, to Edinburgh, in order to the Delinquents their Trial, and the Witnesses ordained to attend, yet, through the Witnesses Absence the Diets are delayed: The said Lords having resolved, that the Delinquents shall be brought to a speedy Trial, have thought fit to give and grant full Power to the Persons underwritten, in their respective Jurisdictions, viz. for the Shires of Roxburgh, Peebles, Selkirk, and Berwick, to the Sheriffs of the respective Shires, Mr. Charles Holm, Adam Urquhart of Meldrum, Riddel of Hayning, Henry Ker of Gredin, or any Two of them: For the Shire of Stirling, to the Sheriff of Stirling, Mr. Archibald Stuart Lieutenant-governor of Stirling Castle, Mr. Colin Mackenzie Brother to the Earl of Seaforth, and John Erskine Ensign of the said Castle: For the Shire of Dumfries, and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright and Annandale, to the respective Sheriff-deputes and Stewarts, Captain Inglis and Captain Dalziel, and the Laird of Lagg, to call before them, &c. as in the Commission App. N<sup>o</sup>. 85.'

Town of Edinburgh's Act against Con-
venticles.

App. No. 86.

Thus we see how active the Council were this Year in granting Powers, and the Commissioners and Soldiers were no less vigorous on their Part. There were no Field-conventicles now till Mr. Renwick came from Holland, and the few House-conventicles were severely searched after, and punished. Accordingly, the Magistrates of Edinburgh, December 19. emit an Act of theirs against Conventicles, wherein they promise sixty Pounds to such as discover any Conventicle, and Twelve Pounds to such who discover any Person who keeps not the Church. The Act is singular, and I have insert it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 86. How far they were followed at Glasgow and other Burghs I do not know, but it is probable others took the same Way. I come now to more particular Instances of Hardships this Year.

S E C T. II.

Of the Sufferings of some particular Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, this Year 1683.

Contents of
this Section.

AS I have done in some of the former Years, so here it is proper to distinguish between these who suffered only in their Liberty and Goods before the Council, and such who suffered in their Life, or at least were staged for their Lives before the Justiciary. I shall leave the last to the following Section, and here give some Account of the Hardships some Ladies, Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, came under this Year, just in the Order of Time as they offer; many of which I shall give from the Books of Council. But I must observe here, that this Year the Council is so throng, that a great many of the particular Persons before them, unless it be People of some Rank, are remitted to the Committee for publick Affairs, and they are approven next Day upon their verbal Report, at least their Proceedings are but very rarely inserted in the Council-register; and this, as it makes some Accounts of Persons before the Council shorter and darker, so it altogether deprives me of a good many Narratives of worthy Persons brought to no small Trouble at this Time.

January

January 4. the Reverend Mr. Michael Potter is before the Council, and they send him to the Bass. This excellent Person was after the Revolution Minister at Dumblain, and died there lately in a good old Age, after all his sore Sufferings. It is only a short Hint about him I meet with in the Registers, and therefore I shall here insert a larger Account of the Troubles he underwent in this Period, from a Narrative sent me from his worthy Son Minister at Kippen. 1683.

Jan. 4. Mr. Michael Potter sent to the Bass.

The Episcopal Clergy did early discover their persecuting Spirit against him. In the Year 1664. when Governor to the Laird of Dundas his Children, the Presbytery of Linlithgow caused summon him once and again before them, because he had not taken the Oath of Alegiance. And it appears by Extracts from their Presbytery-registers, that in the Year 1665. he was summoned again before them, because he did not attend the Meetings of their Presbytery. Larger Account of his Sufferings.

He passed his Trials 1673. before some Presbyterian Ministers, and sometime thereafter he was privately ordained, upon a Call from a great Body of People of the Presbyterian Perswasion, in the Parish of St. Ninians. Upon this afore Persecution arose against him, at the Instigation of Bishop Ramsay of Dumblain, and he was hunted as a Partridge in the Wilderness; but he still continued preaching as he could have Access, till the Year 1677. when scarce finding Shelter any where, he went over to Holland for some Months. When he returned the Storm broke out against him with double Fury; yet having obtained Help of the Lord, he continued preaching in the midst of Hazard, till the Beginning of the 1679. and then he again retired to Holland. When he returned next Year, fresh Orders were issued out against him, and Parties were daily in quest of him, yet he was still preserved from their Hands, till, November 1681. he was apprehended at his own House in Borrowstounness, by the Laird of Bedlormie Governor of Blackness, and carried Prisoner to Edinburgh, where he continued Prisoner a good while. Nothing could be laid to his Charge save his preaching the Gospel, and fulfilling the Ministry he received from Christ Jesus.

By the Registers I find him before the Council, January 4. this Year, where he acknowledged he had kept House-conventicles, and refused to engage to forbear preaching the Gospel in Time to come, and thereupon the Council send him to the Bass, where he continued Two Years. In the Year 1685. his Friends prevailed to get his Confinement in the Bass altered into an Act of Banishment, under Caution of Ten thousand Merks not to return without Licence. He had Three Months allowed him to prepare for his Removal. At that Juncture the Earl of Argyle landed, and an Embargo was laid on all Ships, and he could not get off. Thus his going again to Holland was prevented, and by the Advice of his Cautioners he continued as secretly as he could, till the Liberty 1687.

That same Day, January 4. John Row, Chamberlain to Sir William Primrose of Carring, being delated for frequenting many Conventicles, and not compearing, is denounced and put to the Horn. And because, as the Register has it, he is notour in his Disorders, and a Debaucher of People from their Duty, the Council recommend it to the General to bring him in Prisoner, and to send out a Party in quest of him, and if they miss him, that they secure his Goods for the King's Use.

John Row Chamberlain to Carring

January 27. Sir John Harper, Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, is imprisoned in the Castle of Edinburgh, upon Suspicion of Treason, that is, Correspondence with some of the persecuted Party. I know no more about it, but what offers in the Registers. It seems he continued in Prison till April 6. when no Proof could be found against him, and then I find the Council-minute run, 'Sir John Harper of Cambusnethan, Prisoner in the Castle of Edinburgh for corresponding with several intercommuned Persons, who were in the late Rebellion, upon his Petition to be liberate, his Petition is granted under a Bond of Ten thousand Pounds Sterling, to answer, when called, to the Premissis, or any other Crime laid to his Charge.' This Gentleman, for any Thing I hear, was abundantly regular, only was not so violent in prosecuting the poor suffering People, as some Persons would have had him.

Sir John Harper imprisoned in the Castle of Edinburgh some Months, but alledge to converse with Rebels, and liberate under Bond of 10000 lls. Sterling.

The Council write up a Letter to the Secretary, that a Remission may be sent down to Thomas Cunningham of Montgrenan, in the Shire of Air. This Gentleman had been seized by Ardmillan, a little after Bothwell; and if his Declaration may bear Weight, vile Methods were taken with him, to witness against the Lord Bargeny, Duke Hamilton, and others. By the Registers, December 4. 1679. I find a Letter from the King to the Council, declaring, 'That Ardmillan's Diligence in taking Montgrenan is very acceptable, and he will reward it. And Ardmillan having delivered him to be examined by the Privy Council, the King exoner the said Ardmillan, and approves his taking of Montgrenan, and keeping him Prisoner in his House.' I know no further in this Affair, save what is in Montgrenan's Declaration before the Council, August 13. 1681. which hath been more than once printed, and contains in Substance, 'That Ardmillan used various Ways to bring him to accuse my Lord Bargeny, as having corresponded with Cunningham of Bedlane, was at Bothwell, and of a Letter to Mr. John Welsh, with one from Duke Hamilton inclosed in my Lord Bargeny's, inciting them to that Rising. And after he was instructed what to say, and how to support it, he came before the Earl of Murray, Lord Haltoun, and others, and declared, as Ardmillan instructed him, that he had Officers of his own Lite and Estate, the Gift of a forfeited Estate worth Forty Pounds Sterling a Year, or as much out of Earlsfoun's Estate, if he would himself swear and get his Servant to joyn; that my Lord Bargeny sent the above Letter with one from Duke Hamilton to Mr. Welsh, while in the mean time all this was absolute Untruth, and he had never spoken to Bargeny, nor seen his Writ; for which he declares his hearty Sorrow, as the Paper it self more fully bears. For any Thing I know, Monigrenan continued in Prison till this Year, and got a Remission.

A Remission sent down to Cunningham of Montgrenan 1683.

Cautioners of Calnefs, Monk-land, Mr. Osburn and Crawford, troubled.

Upon the 31 of the same Month, I find some Gentlemen and Minifters attacked. The Council order Citation againft the Cautioners of Stuart of Cultnefs, Hamilton of Monkland, Mr. John Osburn, and Mr. Hugh Crawford, to exhibit them conform to their Bond. We have heard, that worthy Gentleman Sir Thomas Stuart of Cultnefs took on him a voluntary Banishment, and now the Managers resolve to have his Estate. We shall meet with the Laird of Monkland afterwards. As to the other Two, I have no more about them, save a Hint juft now to be insert as to Mr. Osburn.

Mr. John McGilligen sent to the Bafs.

About the same Time, the Reverend Mr. John McGilligen is sent to the Bafs, and a new Train of his Sufferings begins, and I shall here give all I have further concerning this excellent Person. We left him liberate after Bothwell upon a Bond, wherein Sir Hugh Campbell of Calder was Cautioner. Towards the End of the last Year he was cited before the Council, and appeared at this Time. I shall give what passed from a Narrative extracted out of his own Diary, in his worthy Son's Hands.

What passed when before
the Council.

When before the Council, there was a long Libel read by the Clerk, wherein he was charged with keeping Conventicles, irregular Marriages and Baptisms; and being desired to answer for himself, he began a Discourse, but was very soon interrupted. The Reason, as he was afterwards informed, was, that the worthy Mr. Frazer of Braes, some time before, in the Presence of the Duke of York and Council, had born Testimony to the Truth in a Discourse, with so much Advantage to the Cause, and Applause to himself, that the Prelates and their Party were afraid, if Mr. McGilligen and others of his Abilities should be allowed to speak publicly, Byftanders would be undeceived, and even Members would see Ground to lay by their harsh Thoughts of Presbyterian Ministers, and the Aspersions of their Want of Parts, Dilloyalty and Tenaciousness, would be found to be like the Beasts Skins, wherein the primitive Christians were sewed up, that they might be worried.

The Council having stopped him, required him to answer simply to the Libel, either by owning or disowning what was therein contained, and because they had no Probation, remitted it to his Oath. A great many Falshoods were in the Indictment, such as, his keeping Field-conventicles, his baptizing Children to David Monro in Obsdale, and others who never had any; yet he observed many Truths in it, such as his baptizing, preaching, (tho' not at Field-conventicles, whereof there was no Need in the Shire of Ross) and finding no Man obliged to accuse himself in Matters which the Law had made criminal, he refused to depone on that Libel, and so was holden as confest, and fined in Five thousand Merks, and sent to the Tolbooth till he should pay it, and find Bail that he should not do as formerly, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks, or enact himself to remove out of the Kingdom, never to return till he obtain his Majesty's Licence: And the Cashkeeper was ordered to raise an Adjudication against his Lands in Ross.

His Sentence.

Further Designs against
him.

And yet some High-fliers, who were absent from the Council that Meeting, thought their Measures were too smooth against Mr. McGilligen, and attempted a Sentence of another Nature, under which View Sir William Paterson was sent to the Prison, to examine any Prisoners who heard Mr. McGilligen preach, and were acquainted with him, and to expiscate any Thing in publick or private he had let fall, which might be reckoned or stretched to Treason; yea, Liberty was promised to such as would testify any Thing of that Nature: But after all the Trial he could make, Sir William had the Candor to shew his Employers, that Mr. McGilligen was intirely loyal in his Principles, and that upon all publick Occasions he still prayed most fervently for the King.

He continued some time in Edinburgh Prison, and was a true Barnabas, the Son of Consolation to many there, yea, the Jaylors themselves appeared grieved when he was removed to the Bafs, where he continued some Years, I think till the 1686.

Some Extracts out of his Diary.

His Diary, of which I have but short Hints sent me, by which, if I might be allowed to judge, the Church appears at a Loss that more of it is not published, discovers many sweet Days of Communion with his Master, he had in that barren Rock. During his former Imprisonment, in the Year 1678. he records great Enlargement he had in Wrestling and Prayer. The pious Reader will make a Hint or Two, under his Second Confinement, welcome, in his own Words.

'Bafs, October 15. 1683. this hath been a Day of Gladness of Heart to me, the Lord was pleased to let out abundantly of his holy Spirit, convincing of Sin, confirming me in the Assurance of Pardon, comforting me in the Hopes of Mercy, and Deliverance to my self and Family, and to his oppressed People and Interest.'

Bafs.

• Baſt, October 19. the felt Joy and Senſe of the former Day hath continued ſince with me, my Soul dwelt at Eaſe without any Burden or Weight. This Day was a Brother and Friend to the former, wherein the Lord did communicate himſelf by enlarging my Heart, melting my Spirit, and breathing upon me with a full Gale. My Graces were in Exerciſe, his Faith and Hope, and Meekneſs of Spirit acted their Parts. My Heart with Cheertulneſs ſaid unto the Lord, Thou art my holy One, my only One, my fair and pleaſant One, thy overcoming Love hath maſtered me. My Hope and Expectation of Deliverance for my ſelf and others was confirmed, in the Mount of the Lord it ſhall be ſeen. This Top of the Rock was to me a Peniel, where the Lord's Face in ſome Meaſure was ſeen.

• Baſt, November — 1683. this was a Day of ſweet and great Outpouring of the Spirit, I hope Good will follow. Many ſweet and appoſite Places of Scripture, both in reading and Prayer, was I tryſted with, concerning my ſelf, Children, the People and Work of God, and Enemies. The Daughter of Babylon will come down and ſit in the Duſt, there will be no Throne for her. Her Nakedneſs will be uncovered, Vengeance will overtake her. He will not meet her as a Man. She truſts in her Wickedneſs, Deſolation will ſuddenly come upon her; but the Lord will place Salvation in Zion for Iſrael his Glory.

• Baſt, September 23. 1684. this Day I got my Heart poured out before the Lord, for the Diſtreſs, Deſtruction, and Deſolation of the Land, and for the Ruin and Overthrow of his Intereſt. The Lord will have Mercy and heal, recover his own Glory, reform his Church, reſtore his Ordinances, purge his Servants, and cauſe Sacrifices to be offered in Righteouſneſs to himſelf. The Lord will ſend the Rod of his Strength out of Zion, he will rule in the Miſt of his Enemies, he hath drunk of the Brook in the Way, and therefore hath liſt up his Head, and is exalted far above all Principalities and Powers. He will ſtrike with his right Hand, and with it bring back the Ark and the Glory, and cauſe the Days of Joy and Gladneſs to be according to the Days of Sorrow and Sadneſs we have ſeen.

Such were the Comforts, the Hopes, Expectations and Exerciſes of this Saint of God, upon whom the Spirit of God and Glory reſted. Multitudes of Paſſages might be added, but theſe may ſuffice to let us in to ſee, that the Church of Chriſt, and in this Land in particular, is in the Debt of theſe worthy Sufferers I am doing ſome Juſtice to in this Work, not only for their Teſtimony to the common Faith and Truth, not only for their Pattern and Example, but, which is leſs obſerved, for the many Suits and Prayers they tabled, and left in the Bank of Heaven. And I make no queſtion but the Revolution, and the wonderful Providences ſince, and the Good done by this Goſpel, and to be done, are in part the Fruits of the many Days of Prayer, Wreſtling, ſolitary Faſtings, yea, of ſecret Thankſgiving and Praise, by the Perſons I am now accounting for, in Priſons, in Rocks, Irons, Mountains, and their Hidings and Wandrings.

But to return, while Mr. McGilligen is thus employed, and in the Baſt, Summons of Adjudication was raiſed againſt the ſmall Intereſt he had in Roſs, 24 Bolls of Rent, for his Fine. This obliged his Wife to come South, and petition the Privy Council. She repreſented, 'he was the only Miniſter of the Kingdom whoſe Fine had been exacted, that ſhe had a numerous Family, and little to maintain them, that the Affairs of her Family were exceedingly impaired by the long Imprisonment of her Husband; and that therefore, out of Compaſſion, they would put a Stop to the Summons.' The Lords, by the Intereſt of the Laird of Tarbet, ſince Earl of Cromarty, who had a great Regard for Mr. McGilligen, recommended her Caſe to the Lord Treasuſer, and a Stop was put to the Fine.

Mr. McGilligen continued in the Baſt, until he fell dangerously ſick, whereupon he petitioned for Liberty to come to a Chamber in Edinburgh, till he ſhould recover; which was granted by the Intereſt of the forementioned Perſon. Afterwards they were applied to for liberating him from his Confinement, which was granted: But that Day the Council was in ſuch a Hurry that the Act was not ſubſcribed; whereupon a ſecond Petition was offered, and Biſhop Paterſon being that Day Preſident of the Committee, all that could be obtained was the following Act.

• At Edinburgh, July 27. 1686. The Lords of the Committee of his Maſteſty's Privy Council for publick Affairs, having conſidered an Addreſs made by Mr. John McGilligen Priſoner, confined in his Chamber at Edinburgh, ſupplicating, that in regard a former Order of Council for his Liberation had not taken Effect, and that he ſtill continues under great Sickneſs, Orders might be granted for his Liberty, do hereby take off the ſaid Reſtraint and Confinement, in regard he has found Caution to appear before the Council, the firſt Council Day in November, or to enter again to his Confinement as formerly, under the Penalty of 5000 Merks. Extracted, &c.

Upon this he ventured Home, to the unſpeakable Joy of his old Hearers, who ſlocked to him from all Corners. And his ſore Gravel continuing with him, upon a Declaration of Phyſicians, his Liberty was enlarged to another Day, and before that Day elapſed, the King's Liberty 1687. was granted. During that Time, a Meeting-houſe was built on his own Ground, and his Hearers gave him a competent Maintenance. He had an Invitation to the Town of Elgin at this Time, but reſuſed it. At the Revolution he was invited to Inverneſs, and with the Conſent of his People, and,

1683.

and, that he might have the Benefit of Physicians, he went thither, and preached a little, but his Gravel increasing, he was confined to his Bed, and was under full Assurance of Faith, but in his dying Hours spoke but little, having been so publickly useful in his Life, and entred into the Joy of his Lord June 8. 1689. and was buried there, the War then remaining in the Country he could not be transported to Alves.

Thus he got cleanly off the Stage. He was the only Minister in the Province of Ross, who at the first Assault opposed himself to Prelacy. Mr. Hog of Kiltairn was of the same Sentiments with him, but had been laid aside some time before, and Mr. Thomas Ross, Minister at Kincardine, having continued at his Charge some time after the Establishment of Prelacy, owed his leaving them to a Meeting with Mr. McGilligen: And Mr. Hugh Anderson kept his Kirk at Cremarty for some Years before he broke off. In short, it was in Mr. McGilligen's House at his last Release, that that worthy Man Mr. Angus Mcbean, formerly Episcopal Minister at Inverness, did preach his Recantation Sermon to a numerous and splendid Auditory, from Job 34. 31, 32. Surely it is meet to be said to God, I have born Chastisement, I will not offend any more. That which I see not, teach thou me; if I have done Iniquity, I will do so no more. This is all the Account I can give of this excellent Man.

Clerks: laugh fined for his Lady's being at Conventicles.

February 8. John Hamilton of Gilkerfcleugh is fined by the Council in 2000 Merks, for his Lady's being present at House-conventicles, tho' nothing was to be laid to the Gentleman's Charge. Only, it seems, in a former Process raised against her, he had become Caution for her good Behaviour.

*Sir John Dalrymple
ple of Stair, deprived of the Bailiary of Glenluce, and fined in 500
Pounds Sterling,
on a Complaint
by Claverhouse.*

Upon the 12 of the same Month, the Council deprive that known great Man, Sir John Dalrymple of Stair, of his Bailiary of the Regality of Glenluce, and fine him in 500 Pounds Sterling, and order him to the Castle of Edinburgh till he pay it. This Act is made upon a Complaint tabled against him by Claverhouse, but the Reasons of the Act and the Complaint are not recorded.

Mrs John Osburn.

And next Council Day, Mr. John Osburn, late Minister at Kirkcudall, appears before the Council, and is libelled for keeping House-conventicles. He acknowledges his Preaching in Houses; and the Council allow him his Choice, either immediately to remove off the Kingdom, or to enact himself not to keep Conventicles under the Pain of 5000 Merks, and he chooses the last.

Further Sufferings of John Archer.

This Month of February the Sufferings of John Archer, formerly mentioned, begin afresh. We left him lurking, his Children ill, and he scarce having the Liberty of seeing them. I now come to give what further relates to him. Before his Children fully recovered, he himself at this Time fell ill of the Gravel, and when in this Case, and unable to flee, a Party of Balcarras's Troop came and made him Prisoner. After they had searched the House for Arms, and found none, one of the Soldiers said to John, I think it strange that you who seem to be a sober peaceable Man, put your self and us to so much Trouble, and all for not hearing the present Ministers, adding, That he could have Peace and Quiet to hear a Jesuit for some little Time. Mr. Archer with his usual Modesty replied, I know not what it is to you, but to me this is Matter of Conscience.

When they were leaving the House, the Soldiers were not for carrying away John Archer's Wife and the sickly Children, but only himself; but the Messenger who came with the Party, one Wylie, was positive to have the Mother likewise to Prison, and she could not leave the Children behind her, having no Body to look after them. When he insisted on it, one of the Dragoons said to him in his rough Way, The Devil ding your Back in Two, Sir, have you a Coach and Six Horses for her and the Children? The other answered with Cursing, If she should be trailed on a Sledge, she should go; which was the Fellow's ordinary Byword, when taking honest People to Prison, and very soon came to be his own Case.

Some time after, Wylie having taken a Gentleman Prisoner, went with him to a publick House near by, in Clunie in the Parish of Kinglassie, to see the civil Business on which he was apprehended accommodated with the Parties concerned. When they were not like to agree the Matter, Wylie threatened him, and made a great Sputter, and among other Expressions had this, The Devil take me, if I carry him not to the Tolbooth of Cowpar this Night. The Gentleman's Servant, a young hardy Fellow, told him very roundly, He should not take his Master there; whereupon the other gave him a Blow: The Servant runs straight to a Smith's Shop near by, and getting a Cut of Iron, made at Wylie, and a Scuffle ensued wherein Wylie's Back was broken, and they were obliged to get Two Sledges, tie them together, and lay him across them, and carry him to his own House not far off, where in a little Time he died. This Retribution both of Persecution and profane Swearing, I have well attested by living Witnesses, otherwise I had not insert it so particularly.

To return, Mr. Archer, his Wife, and Five small Children, the eldest not Ten Years of Age, were carried to Kirkaldy Prison. Next Day, the Provost of the Town hearing of this Severity, liberate the Mother and the Infants; yet not till Caution was found, by Two spon- sible Persons, she should present her self to the Sheriff when called, under the Penalty of 2000 Merks.

John

John Archer lay in Prison about Three Weeks, and then was carried into the Tolbooth of Edinburgh or Canongate, and was next Day brought before a Committee of Council, where nothing could be laid to his Charge but mere Nonconformity. In a Day or Two he was brought to the Council-house, and tho' the Council was sitting, yet without any further Examination, or any Ground given, he was sent to the Iron-house in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and laid in the Irons Seventeen Days. This Severity he was surprized at, being without Libel or Sentence intimate to him; and when he caused his Friends enquire into it, no Reason could be found, but his not giving Bishop Burnet his Titles, who was Preses of the Committee. He continued in Prison full Five Months, after he was, through Moyes used by his Friends, liberate from the Irons: After this he was, without any Condition, liberate, by means of a South Country Gentleman, whom he had no Acquaintance of; but it seems he was one who had a great Value for Mr. Archer's Brother, Mr. Thomas Archer, whom we shall just now meet with.

1683.

After this, this good Man had some Respite, and set up to follow his Trade at Lesly; but in a few Months his Persecution began again, and for a whole Winter, he lay but Two Nights at his own House. Sometimes in the Night he would come to his House, and work a little at his Employment, the making of Candles, and earn somewhat for his Family, but in the Morning he behoved to retire, and hide himself. Thus he continued till the Rigour of the Persecution slackned.

March 8. I find a Process intended before the Council, against Andrew Herron of Kerrochtree, mentioned before. No more offers to me but what is in the Registers; and, by comparing what is above with this I am going to insert, it seems, that when Intercession had been made in his very favourable Case, for a Remission as to his Life and Estate, the Magistrates wanted a Fine from him before he is dismissed. Accordingly, 'Andrew Herron of Kerrochtree in Galloway, compears, and is libelled for being at House and Field-conventicles, and intercommuning with, and resetting his Son Patrick Herron, a Ringleader at Bothwell-bridge, and his Son in Law, who had been likewise there. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council fine him in 5000 Merks, and appoint him to ly in Prison till he pay it.' And March 17. the Cashkeeper reports he has paid his Fine.'

Andrew Herron of Kerrochtree, after a Remission, is fined in 5000 Merks

Upon the 15 of the said Month, Mr. John Philip, late Episcopal Minister of Queensferry, turned out for refusing the Test, appears before the Council. He is libelled, 'That in February last, publicly in the Parliament-house, he asserted, That the Duke of Albany was a bloody Man, and a great Tyrant, and was distasteful to the Subjects; that the King's Advocate and Bishop of Edinburgh were bloody and cruel Men, and he hoped ere long to see them suffer for it; as also, that the Earl of Argyle was unjustly forfeited, and that there was no Law for forfeiting him. By all which, the said Mr. Philip hath most maliciously endeavoured to raise Fears and Jealousies in the Minds of his Majesty's Subjects.'

Mr. John Philip, Episcopal Minister at Queensferry, proccelled for Speeches against the D. of York.

Witnesses were adduced to prove the Facts, and the Lords of Council fine the Defender in 2000 Pounds Sterling, and ordain him to be carried to the Prison of the Bass, during his Life; and declare if he do not pay the said Sum, within the Space of Fifteen Days, that they hereby ordain the Advocate to pursue him before the Justices for his Life. I know no more about him, but next Council-day, Hugh Wallace Cashkeeper gets an Order to seize all his Books and Papers.

Fined in 2000 L. Sterl. and sent to the Bass.

March 22. 'The Council being informed, that the Lady Caldwell and her Daughter are imprisoned for keeping of Conventicles, they ordain them to be transported to Blackness.' And December 6. this Year, the Council have a Petition presented from Jean Muir Daughter to the late Laird of Caldwell, craving, 'That Liberty may be granted her to abide out of the Castle of Blackness, till the First Tuesday of February next.' Her Petition is granted upon Caution, under the Penalty of 1000 Merks, that she shall enter Blackness that Day, or appear before the Council.

Lady Caldwell and her Daughter sent to Blackness.

This is what I have observed in the Registers, relative to these Two excellent Gentlemen; but I have a further Account of the Sufferings of that singularly religious Gentlewoman, the Lady Caldwell, from a Person of Honour, and a near Relation of that worthy Family, which comes in properly here, tho' it be but a very small Part of the Hardships this pious Lady and her Family underwent.

Larger Account of the Lady Caldwell's Sufferings.

We have already heard, how her Husband, the Laird of Caldwell, was forfeited in Absence, as being accessory to the Rising at Pentland, tho' might he have adventured to appear, he could easily, before equal Judges, have vindicated himself; but the open Iniquity of the Times made him rather abscond, and so Sentence passed, and his Lands were given to General Dalziel. This honourable and excellent Gentleman died in Exile under this unjust Sentence, and left his Lady and Four Orphans, with no Subsistence suitable to their Quality.

The Lady, whose Sufferings began at this Time, was Barbara Cuninghame, Daughter to that singularly religious Gentleman, Sir William Cuninghame of Cuninghamehead, in the Shire of Air. She had a Dowry allotted her out of the Lands of Caldwell, suited to her Rank; but

having

1683.

having unhappily neglected to take Infeftment before the Forfeiture, she was moft cruelly, with her Four Children, turned out of her Right, and forced to live without any viable Maintenance, except what her own and her virtuous Childrens Industry procured, and yet none of them were ever troublefom to any.

When ſhe was living peaceably in her Widowhood at Glaſgow, in the Beginning of this Year, ſhe fell under a Piece of moſt malicious Violence and unjuſt Perſecution. The Circumſtances of her Lodgings muſt be narrated, to make the Story intelligible. Her Houſe was upon the Eaſt-side of the Salt-market, towards the Foot of it, in a Timber Fore-land, with Windows called Shots, or Shutters of Timber, and a few Inches of Glaſs above them. One Night, as the Provost and Biſhop tell the Story, a Perſon in an Houſe oppoſite, on the Weſt-side of the Street, pretended to ſee, through the Breadth of the Street, and the few Inches of Glaſs in the Lady Caldwell's Lodgings, a Miniſter preaching there.

Whereupon the Informer went ſtraight to Provost Barns, a zealous Perſecutor of Preſbyterians, to pleaſe his Patron the Archbiſhop. The Provost immediately, upon the lame and ſeemingly falſe Information, ſends for and cauſes imprifon the Lady, with Three young Gentlewomen her Daughters, in the Tolbooth of Glaſgow, without any Probation or Conviction of a Fault, and only upon the ſingle Information of the abovesaid Perſon, which might have been juſtly ſuſpected of Malice and Falſhood, ſince the Matter of Fact above narrated, was next to impoſſible, and the Lady ſtill denied it, tho' ſhe neither did nor would reſuſe ſhe had Preſbyterian Miniſters in her Family, and ſometimes preaching, yet not at that Time.

However, ſuch was the Fury of this Period, in perſecuting innocent People, merely for Conſcience ſake, that when Notice was given, probably by the Archbiſhop, to the Council, as we have ſeen, they not only approved this illegal Procedure, but ordered the Lady and her eldeſt Daughter Mrs. Jean Muir, to be brought Priſoners under a ſtrong Guard to Blackneſs, without any Proof ſave the improbable Surmiſe of a ſingle Perſon: Yea, tho' there had been a full Probation, ſure there was no Law to make the young Lady her Daughter, ſcarce Twenty Years, liable to ſuch barbarous Treatment.

She was indeed in her Mother's Houſe, but even the then Laws required it ſhould have been made evident, that, ſuppoſing a Miniſter had preached, there were Five Perſons more preſent than the Family, which was never ſo much as pretended. The Law had not prohibited Family-worſhip, and the Lawgivers openly connived at Popiſh Maſſes in Families: But Prelatick Fury vents it ſelf almoſt only againſt Preſbyterians, and others are ſafe.

This Treatment of the Lady Caldwell and her Daughter, was not only illegal, but really inhumane and tyrannical. They had left them nothing elſe to live upon, but what they wrought for with their Hands, and no Crime could be advanced againſt them, but That, after the Way now called Herceſy, they worſhipped the God of their Fathers.

At Blackneſs they remained in cloſe Priſon for near a Year's Time, ſave that the Governor ſometimes permitted them, at his Peril, to viſit his Lady, whoſe Chamber was juſt below theirs. When, by this cloſe Confinement, the young Gentlewoman's Health was much impaired, Application was made to the Council, for at leaſt her Liberation. After much Pains, and not a little Money given to ſome Perſons, Mrs. Jean, as we have ſeen, was liberate, and, as a mighty Favour, her Mother allowed to go up by ſome Steps to the Head of the Caſtle to take the Air now and then.

While the Lady remains thus a Priſoner, her Couſin-german, Mr. Sandilands of Hilderſtoun, living at Linlithgow, fell ill of a Fever: Her Two eldeſt Daughters went to ſee him, and in a few Hours her ſecond Daughter Mrs. Anne ſickned, and fell ill of the Fever, which at length carried her off. The Council was petitioned for Liberty to the Lady to come out of Blackneſs a few Miles, to ſee her Daughter now dying, yea, ſhe offered to take a Guard with her, yea, to maintain the whole Garifon as a Guard, if they pleaſed, while ſhe was doing her laſt Duty to her dying Child; yet ſuch was the unnatural Cruelty of this Time, that ſo reaſonable a Requeſt could not be granted.

Thus this excellent Lady never ſaw her Daughter, and continued Priſoner ſeveral Years, unconvict of any Crime, and never accused but by one Witneſs. The Advocates of this Reign may try their Skill in vindicating ſuch Procedure as this. At length, when King James, in order to advance his Popiſh Deſigns and arbitrary Government, thought fit to aſſume a diſpenſing Power, and a pretended Kindneſs to Proteſtant Diſſenters, the Lady Caldwell was voluntarily diſmiſſed, without any Petition for her Liberation.

Another Inſtance pretty near, tho' not ſo cruel, offers in the Caſe of the Lady Kaitloch, who met with very extraordinary Hardſhips. Informations before me bear, that it was this Year ſhe was forced from her Houſe; and, it may be, it was toward the End of it, when, we have heard, Garifons were appointed for the South. Her Husband had been forfeited, and yet ſhe and her Children got Liberty, for ſome Years, to ſtay in her own Houſe, in the Pariſh of Glencairn in Niſdale: But now a Garifon comes and poſſeſſes the Houſe of Kaitloch, and moſt unmercifully turn her and her ſmall Family to the Fields; and it was reckoned reckoned a Favour done them that they were suffered to lodge in a cold Barn. This pious Lady, with her Children, went through many inexpressible Hardships, and at length was obliged with them to go off the Kingdom, and died abroad.

1683.

This rude Garison affords me another Instance of the tender Mercy of this Time, which being in mine Eye with the former, I subjoyn it. There was an old Man who lived not far from the Garison, most peaceably and religiously. His Life was much spent in Prayer, and he used to take retired Places in the Fields for this Exercise. One Day when some of the Soldiers were ranging up and down, he was overheard and seized, and carried to the Garison, tho' he was chargeable with no Crime, unless Prayer was one. He was kept Three Days in the Guard-house, where he was wounded in Spirit with their Blasphemies, Oaths, and other Wickednesses. The pious Man told afterwards, that for Two Days, tho' hardly enough used, and scarce allowed any Thing to sustain Nature, he was free of all Pain or Uneasiness, but his Soul was in a Kind of Hell while in their Company, and vexed to hear the Lord's Name profaned. At length, through Grief and harsh Treatment, the aged Man fell into a violent Cholick. Lieutenant Livingstone's Lady, who was in the Garison, hearing of it, sent him a Glass of Brandy by one of the Soldiers. The Fellow who brought it told him, he must drink the King's Health; the other answered modestly, that he had drunk no Healths these Forty Years, whereupon the Soldier took the Brandy, tho' he saw the poor Man in Agony. At length, he was brought before Stonehouse, who tendred him the Test, which he refusing, he was turned out of his House, and forced to wander for several Years.

Great Severity toward a Man found at Prayer.

In the former Section, I have hinted at the Sufferings of several particular Persons, March and April this Year, from Major White's Courts; and at the same Time Claverhouse is exerting his Powers to the utmost in the South. That Country was extremely harassed by Searches. The Persons sought for were such as had been Mr. Cameron's Followers, such who had been at Bothwell, all in the fugitive Roll, all who had not compeared at Courts; and indeed Multitudes of such were hiding and wandring in Mountains and Caves, and not a few from other Places of the Kingdom had retired to the mountainous Parts in Galloway and Niddale. These Searches created an inexpressible Terror and Confusion upon the Country People. In the Night Time a Party would suddenly come upon a House, and if any Stranger or suspect Person was found, or observed to retire, then the House was rifled; and tho' no Body was found, yet generally they did not escape without Loss. The Parties who ranged up and down were most active this way, and afterwards Detachments from the Garisons were constantly going up and down.

Hardships from Searches in Galloway.

There were also Spies and Informers who were maintained and bribed by the Soldiers, if possible, to discover the Haunts of the Wanderers. I find one John Gib was at this Time made Use of in the Parish of Carsphairn, and the Neighbourhood, who was very useful to Claverhouse; he pretended Friendship to the Sufferers, and went about the Country with little Books and Sermons to sell, but at length was discovered to be a Rogue.

From Informers.

The Papists likewise in the South were most diligent and active to discover and inform against the Wanderers, and the Houses where any of them came at any Time; and they themselves were not only overlooked, but very much encouraged at this Time, as being of the Successor's Religion. Multitudes of remarkable Deliverances did the persecuted Party meet with under all this Violence, several Instances of which I have seen, too large here to be inserted.

By the Council-registers I find Three Prisoners, Walter Thomson, Walter Atkin, and Turnbul, sent in by Meldrum, petition the Council, April 18. shewing, That they had been fined by the Sheriff of Roxburgh, for withdrawing from the Church, in the Terms of the Act of Parliament, of which they produced Receipts: Yet notwithstanding, they were fallen upon by the Laird of Meldrum, and because they would not pay the same Fines over again, he made them Prisoners, and they were brought into Edinburgh. This appears so plain to the Council, that they are ordered to be liberate but Notice taken of Meldrum.

Persons fined twice for the same alleged Fault.

May 8. the Council confine Sir John Monro of Fowles elder, to his own House in the Shire of Ross, and a Mile round it, for his alledged withdrawing from his Parish-church. This excellent Gentleman was now old, and his Friends procured him this Favour.

Sir John Monro of Fowles confined to his own House.

This same Month I find several Searches in the City of Glasgow, not only for Ministers and Preachers, but for all Nonconformists. At one of them Ninian Paterfon there, upon his hiding for Nonconformity, was taken and imprisoned, and very soon sent to the Plantations, tho' nothing was alledged against him, but mere Nonconformity. Thus no Methods were left untried in City or Country, to harass Presbyterians. When by Searchings and Courts, they were forced from their Retirements and Haunts, some of them ventured into Towns; and the least Hint of any of them, was Ground enough to make a general Search, to the Disturbance of all the Families in Town.

Ninian Paterfon sent to the Plantations.

July 28. the Council appoint Mr. John McGilligen, Mr. John Philip, and Mr. John Spreul, to be sent from Edinburgh Tolbooth to the Bast. I know not the Occasion of their being called 1683.

Instructions to the Governor, of the Bass.

called for to Edinburgh, all of them had been in the Bass for some Time; and the same Day they agree upon the following Instructions to the Governor of the Bass, which deserve a Room in this Collection, and are as follows.

'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council ordain the Governor and Deputy-governor of the Bass, to observe the following Instructions as to the Prisoners there, or that shall come. 1st. That they allow no Men-servants to the Prisoners, but only such Women-servants as the Governor-depute shall appoint and allow. 2<sup>dly</sup>. That the Prisoners receive no Letters or Papers, nor send any to any Person whatsoever, but what shall be seen by the said Governor. 3<sup>dly</sup>. That the Governor may allow Two of the Prisoners at one Time to have the Liberty of the Island above the Walls, betwixt Sun-rising and Sun-setting, and these Two are to be shut up in their Chambers before other Two come out, providing this Liberty be not given to any who are or shall be ordered to be close Prisoners. 4<sup>thly</sup>. That there be Two Persons only permitted at one Time to come from Shore to see the Prisoners, and that there be always some Officer or Soldier of the Garrison present, to hear what Discourse shall pass betwixt them; and if they be suspected to have Letters or Papers for the Prisoners, that they be searched, and the said Letters or Papers seized upon. Those Instructions are to be observed till further Order.'

Mr. James Frazer's Troubles at London.

This same Month of July, a new Series of Sufferings befel that excellent Person Mr. James Frazer of Braes, at London, which I promised formerly to give an Account of; and tho' the Stage of them be in England, yet the Reader will be pleased to have them since they relate to a Scotsman, and Minister adhering to the Principles of this Church.

Upon the breaking out of the Plot he is seized, July 21.

The breaking out of the Plot at London, was the Occasion of this new Trouble to this worthy Minister. We left him in that City, and here I shall end my Accounts of his Sufferings. About the 21 of July, he had been expeding some of his private Business in Cheapside, and being observed to be a Stranger, he was seized by one of the King's Messengers, who was at this Time searching for suspect Persons upon the Plot; and in a few Hours was brought before the King and Duke of Tork, some of the Courtiers being with them.

His Examination
before
the King.

After some frivolous Questions, he was asked, if he had heard or known any Thing of a Plot against the King's Majesty at any Time. Mr. Frazer answered, he knew nothing of a Plot, but what every Body heard of since it broke out; that he was no publick Person, nor Haunter of Cabals and Coffee-houses, and he knew not one of the Persons accused, or Accusers in that Plot; that he lived always peaceably, and never was accessory to any Plot or Insurrection; that in his Answers before the Council of Scotland, he had declared himself fully against all violent Attempts against his Majesty and Government; and that being so publickly done, it was not probable any who had such Designs would communicate them with him, yea, he had still shunned Discourse upon that Subject.

The King's Conversation with him.

The King then asked him, what he thought of the Archbishop of St. Andrews's Murder, and if he reckoned it a Murder or not. He answered, he had no Hand in it, or Accession thereto, yea, he was grieved when he heard of it; and as he would not justify, or have had a Hand in it for the whole World, so for him to condemn it or declare it Murder, was what he could not do, that he was a Doer of the Law, and not a Judge; and he humbly conceived, it was out of his Sphere to give Judgment of other Persons Actings, which, in his Opinion, belonged to his Majesty and other Officers of Justice, not to him, especially when he was a Stranger to the Fact, and legal Evidence of the Nature, Manner, and Circumstances of the same. As to his inward Sentiments of it, he told the King, God had appointed a solemn Court at the last Day, for judging Actions, Words, and Thoughts, before which alone it was competent to give Account of Thoughts, and he referred himself as to these thither intirely: Adding, that as to his Thoughts, he was not free to give Account of them to any human Judicatory, to whom nevertheless he heartily submitted his Expressions, Words, and Actions; and finally, he was not afraid, tho' his Majesty knew what were his inmost Sentiments in that Affair; nevertheless, he would not be a Precedent to any of his Subjects, in giving a judicial Account of his secret Thoughts, especially with Relation to other Persons, and humbly begged to be excused.

Next, the King was pleased to ask Braes, Whether he judged himself bound by the solemn League and Covenant, and if he thought there was any Thing of moral Obligation therein. Mr. Frazer answered, that he had never taken the solemn League and Covenant, neither had it been ever tendred to him; but as to all in it of a moral Import, he reckoned he was bound, and that by virtue of the Covenant thereunto, tho' he had never personally sworn it; and that however the Words of the Decalogue and Covenant were not the same, yet the Covenant was reducible to the Decalogue, as being materially the same with it: That he remembred Two of the chief Articles of the Covenant, one was Reformation of our Hearts and Lives, according to God's Word, and this he judged might easily be reduced to every Precept of the Decalogue, each of which ties us to Reformation and Repentance: Another Article he minded, was, that we should defend the King's just Privileges, his Person and Government, which likewise he thought easily reducible to the Decalogue; so upon the whole, he judged himself by the Word of God, Laws of the Land, yea, and the Covenant itself, tho' never personally taken by him, bound thereunto.

After this he was asked as to his Acquaintance with several Persons, as Mr. Fergusson, the Lairds of Cesnock, Mr. Monro, Mr. Bailie, General Monro, and some others; to all which he gave a true and ingenuous Answer, and was removed. The King and these present seemed to be satisfied as to his Ingenuity, and that he was no way concerned in the Plot: However, he was remitted to the Lord Mayor, who was ordered to put the Oxford Oath to him, with the Allegiance and Supremacy.

To morrow he appeared before the Lord Mayor. Mr. Frazer takes Notice in this Part of his Life; from which I am giving this Account, that he was exceedingly grieved, that his Sufferings were to be stated upon the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, since he was never very fond of Oaths, and had no Clearness as to the Supremacy especially; and yet he found not himself so very willing to suffer upon this, as being a dark Case: But he adds, that when the Messenger signified to him he was to take all the Three Oaths, it was very acceptable News to him, as being at a Point, and ready cheerfully to suffer before he would take the Oxford Oath, since thereby he was bound, among other Things, never to endeavour any Alteration in the Government, either of Church or State.

The Lord Mayor asked him, Whether he would take the Oaths: Mr. Frazer desired Queen Elizabeth's Explication might be read to him, and afterwards proposed some Reasons why he conceived he was not bound in Law to swear any of these Oaths; but he was overruled in all. At length he came to give this precisely for his Answer, that as to the Oath of Allegiance, he was willing to take it, providing it would end the Strife and Controversy about him. The Oath of Supremacy he demurred upon it, till he had more ripely advised it; and as to the Oxford Oath, he peremptorily refused it, adding, That if he could have no Benefit by taking the Oath of Allegiance, he declined swearing of it, and humbly begged, if he were committed to Prison, his Commitment might run upon his refusing the Oxford Oath. The common Serjeant pressed hard he should be committed upon his Refusal of all the Oaths; but the Mayor granted his Desire, and the Order was accordingly drawn, and he sent to Newgate.

1683.

Remitted to the Lord Mayor.

What passed before the Lord Mayor; he is sent to Newgate.

He continued there six Months, but had such kind Entertainment, and good Company and Conversation, that, he says, he can scarce call it Suffering. When this Time, which, it seems, was contained in the Commitment, was expired, Mr. Frazer was liberate, all his Charges being within Twenty Pounds Sterling. From this Branch of Sufferings out of Scotland, the Reader must observe the vast Difference of Sufferings in England for Conscience sake, even at this Time, and the Barbarity of our Scots Managers.

After 6 Months he is liberate.

Several Gentlemen were attacked by the Council this Year, Blackwood, Earlstoun and Monkland; but their Processes coming in before the Justiciary, I shall leave them to the following Section. There is one Passage follows, with Relation to the Escape of the Prisoners in the Tolbooth at Edinburgh, which made no small Noise at this Time, and will fall in afterward in some of their Criminal Processes, of which it may not be improper to give a Hint here from a Gentleman then in Prison, and yet able to attest the Circumstances of it.

It was upon the 16 of September that Mr. John Dick, and upwards of 24 other Prisoners, none of whom almost could ever have expected to have come out of Prison, but for Execution, found Means to cut a Window, and get out. The Circumstances accompanying their Escape were such as were truly remarkable, and the more to be observed, that not one of them save Mr. Dick, fell again to the Enemies Hands. There was a Centinel in the Street just below the Window at which they got out, whether for the Security of the Prison, or because the Earl of Linlithgow Justice-general, and Colonel to the Red Regiment, had his Lodgings just opposite to the Tolbooth, my Informer cannot tell. The Window was cross-barr'd with Iron, and after they had cut one Bar, they found the Space not large enough to get out at, which cost them the cutting of three other Iron Bars, and this took them so much Time and Pains that the Matter was talked of among their Friends, not only in the Town of Edinburgh, but even at Glasgow, before they could get it accomplished; yet it came not to the Ears of their Enemies: But which is yet stranger, as my Author very well remembers, it so happened, that the first Bar they cut fell from the Window, which was in the third Story, upon the Street of the Town, about Nine of the Clock at Night, and continued lying there all Night, and next Morning, till about the same Hour, a Friend coming in to see them, was sent down to the Street, not so much to look after the Bar, for that they did not so much as expect, as to know if the Want of it was easily perceivable from the Street; and he found it just where it fell, and got it sent up to them, and they made a Shift to fix it again in its Place, till they had ended the rest of their Project.

Sept. 16. the Prisoners escape out of Edinburgh Tolbooth.

They could not but wonder that the Street being so narrow there, and the Earl of Linlithgow's Lodgings just opposite to, and on a Level with their Window, a Centinel at his Entry within a few Paces where the Bar fell, and the Bar being a missing for some Hours, and they putting it again in its Place, they could not but (I say) with Admiration remark that they were not observed and hindred. That Night likewise they had also cut the Beam of the 1683.

Floor above them, and made way for some of their Fellow-prisoners in that Room to get out with them.

When all was ready, and they just coming out, two Friends surprized the Centinel at the Entry foresaid, threatening him with present Death if he spoke one Word; and the Fellow was not only silent at the Time, but spoke nothing when he was relieved from his Post, which gave them full Time to shift for themselves. And several of them were Country People who knew not the Town, and had no Friend nor Acquaintance with them, to direct them how to dispose of themselves, yet they all escaped: Yea, it was then affirmed, that one Miller an Eglisbam Man, wandring up and down, and seeing a Light in an House, went to it, and knocking, a Servant opened to him, and he most ingenuously told his Circumstances: This happened to be the Bishop's Lodgings, but the Maid had the Generosity to hide the Man, till next Day she told some of her Acquaintance whom she knew to be Favourers of the Sufferers, and they came and took a Care of him. This Passage being fully vouched to me, I thought it deserved a Room here.

Steps taken by the Council
upon this Escape.

No small Noise was made about this Escape. The Council could not be got together till the 20 of September, when, I find by the Registers, a Committee of their Number was appointed to go to Prison, and call for the Magistrates of Edinburgh, and view it, and see what is needful to be done for its Security: They appoint likewise General Dalziel to call a Council of War, and examine the Behaviour of Captain, Lieutenant, Serjeants, Corporals, and Centinels that Night, and report.

And January 22. next Year, I find a Procefs before the Council, against the Magistrates and Town of Edinburgh. They are libelled for suffering Mr. John Dick, Adam Philip, George Atkin, Prisoners for High Treason, and about Two and twenty others, Criminal Prisoners, to escape. The Town's Lawiers are heard, and the Magistrates attolied as being a casual and fortuitous Escape. And the President is appointed to give them a Reprimand, and Admonition to take heed to their Prison in Time to come.

Procefs against the Laird of
Dundas and Trades of Glasgow, for a Conventicle
kept by Mr.
Renwick upon their Lands.
Act of Council
fining each of them in 50
Pounds Sterling.

By the Council Register of Acts, Decrees, &c. I find a Procefs October 8. this Year, against the Laird of Dundas and the Trades of Glasgow, for a Conventicle kept on their Ground. It seems Mr. James Renwick was now come from Holland, whither he had been sent by the Societies, to study Divinity, and to get Ordination. We shall meet with him frequently after this. I know no more of this Meeting than is in the Act of Council, which follows.

Edinburgh, October 8. 'Whereas Mr. James Renwick Traitor, and pretended Clerk to the treasonable Convention lately kept at Edinburgh, and to the treasonable Commission lately given to Gordon late of Earlstoun, Michael Shiels, and Cameron Brother to Mr. Richard Cameron, George Hill, Lieutenant to Captain Henry Hall, did flee forth off the Kingdom to Holland, to carry on their traiterous Designs, and are lately returned to the Kingdom with other Traitors and Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, did, October 3. last, accompanied with John Whitelaw Tenant to Roughscles, in Arms meet and convene at Brown-ridge in the Laird of Dundas his Land, and kept a numerous Field-conventicle, where the said Mr. James took upon him to preach, and baptize Ten or Twelve Children; and upon the 5 of October, another at Little Dumbreck in the Parish of New Monkland belonging to the Trades at Glasgow; the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, according to their Act April 26. 1676. fine the Laird of Dundas, and the Trades of the Town of Glasgow, in Fifty Pounds Sterling each, and allow them to have Relief off their Tenants and the Cottars on their Ground, in regard they did not timeously inform their Masters.'

Mr. Thomas Hog
fined in 5000
Merks.

At the same Diet I find Mr. Thomas Hog, formerly mentioned, present, and charged with House-conventicles, and the Libel referred to his Oath; and he refusing to swear, is held as confest, and fined in Five Thousand Merks. Whithin some little Time he got over to Holland. And the same Day, upon the same Grounds, they fine Mr. Thomas Wilkie, if I mistake not, Minister of the Canongate of Edinburgh since the Revolution, in Ten Thousand Merks. What was the Reason of doubling his Fine to what was the ordinary Quota of Presbyterian Ministers, I have not learned.

Mr. Thomas
Wilkie fined in 10000 Merks.

James Forrest, his Son, and
Robert Gourlay
banished.

Some time in October this Year, James Forrest in Old-yards, in the Parish of Cambusnethan, and his Son, with his Nephew Robert Gourlay, were seized by a Party of Soldiers. They had nothing to charge them with save an Alledgance, that the suffering People sometimes lodged in James his House. When they were taken, the House was spoiled of Goods to a considerable Value. After some Time's Imprisonment they were banished to West Flanders: Thence they made their Escape, and returned home the Close of the next Year. In a little Time he and his Son, and Daughter Margaret Forrest, were seized, and she was banished to Jersey, and they to Jamaica, after long Imprisonment. In October this Year, that worthy Person, the Lady Cavers Douglas, re-entred her Confinement in Stirling Castle, after a few Weeks Liberty, to go to some Wells for her Health; but I shall delay the Accounts of her till next Year, when her Son prevailed for her Release, after some Years Confinement.

Many Instances might be given of Country People, in every Parish almost, in the West and South, apprehended towards the End of this Year, upon Suspicion of their being at Bath-
well

well, or Pretext of Refet and Converse. The Prisons, especially at Edinburgh, were crowded, and many of them banished to the Plantations, and others lay some Years in Prison; but there is no End of Particulars of this kind. I shall only insert one Instance of the Soldiers Insolence, which I have attested from Two of the Prisoners yet alive, in the Parish of New-monkland.

1683.

Towards the Beginning of November this Year, a Party of Soldiers apprehended about Twelve Persons in that Parish, most of them merely for not keeping the Church, and carried them Prisoners to Hamiltoun, whence, in a few Days, with other Prisoners in neighbouring Parishes, they were increased to the Number of Thirty, and carried to Lanerk in the Night Time, and thrust into a nasty Dungeon, where they could neither sit nor ly, but were obliged to stand the rest of the Night, without the least Refreshment of Meat or Drink, Candle or Fire, tho' the Weather required the last very much. To morrow being to be carried in to Edinburgh, some Horses were provided for them, and a Guard of Dragoons. The Horses had all Sunks laid on them when brought, but the Commander, Bonshaw, caused remove them, and Two Men were put upon each of the Dragoons lean Horses, without any Thing under them; yea, the Men were first tied one to another by their Arms, and then had their Legs twilted with Cords, cross the Horse's Belly, so hard, that their Ancles were galled to the Effusion of their Blood.

Great Seventy upon Prisoners carried in to
Edinburgh.

In this Posture, they were driven at the Gallop for some Miles, and then obliged to halt at the publick Houses by the Way, while Bonshaw and their Guard took their Cups heartily: Mean while, the poor Prisoners were not allowed the least Refreshment, their Money which they had being violently taken from them by the Road; yea, such was their Inhumanity, that, to put the poor Men to the greater Torture, they carried them about several Miles off the direct Road: And one of them begging Liberty from his Keeper, to alight to ease Nature, the Soldier applied to their Commander for Allowance, in the most earnest Manner, but could not prevail; yea, he was severely threatened for his Compassion to the poor Man. It was confidently talked, that this very Commander of the Party, in a little Time after, was killed by a drunken Companion of his own, and run through the Body, when easing Nature upon a Dunghill, and died there. My Informer knows no more, but that this was reported at that Time, and if it held, 'tis a very remarkable Retribution of Providence. However, the poor Men, for many Days, after they came to Edinburgh, were able neither to walk, sit, or stand.

A very singular Instance of exorbitant Fining, I meet with, November 15. in the Council-books. Sir William Scot of Harden had been, I think, carried in Prisoner after the Justiciary-court at Fedburgh, upon what Occasion I know no further than I find in the Registers. The foresaid Diet, Sir William gives in to the Council, a Bill of Suspension of a Decreet pass against him, by the Laird of Meldrum, the Earl of Hume, and Hugh Wallace his Majesty's Cashkeeper, ordaining him to pay 46125 Pounds, for his Lady's withdrawing from the Church. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, repel the Reasons of Suspension; and, according to the Power committed to them by his Majesty's Letter, of the 19 of April last, to modify Delinquents Fines, do modify Sir William's Fine to 1500 Pounds Sterling; and if he pay not this within Fifteen Days, they order Execution for the Whole.

Sir William Scot of Harden fined in 1500 Pounds Sterling, for his Lady's withdrawing from Church.

And to put all I have noticed in the Records about this odd Process together, February 14. next Year, I find a Petition from Sir William Scot of Harden, presented, bearing, That he hath been imprisoned now near Six Months in the Tolbooth, and being a Man near Seventy Years, and the Prison like to destroy any small Health he enjoys, praying the Council may grant him that Enlargement they see Cause. The Council order him to be sent to the Castle of Edinburgh.

December 6. I find a Petition from one Margaret Garnock, shewing, She had been Prisoner these Twelve Months, for alledged Converse with Rebels, and that no Probation had been brought against her; and in regard she is now reduced to great Straits, and very poor, craving she may be liberate, they order her to be let out of Prison. These are some of the Hardships particular Persons were brought under this Year. We shall meet with many Gentlemen and others, sadly harassed by the Justice-courts, in the next Section save one, and a considerable Number proccessed for their Lives, and several executed, of which I come to give some Account from the Criminal Books.

Margaret Garnock, Prisoner a Year for alledged Converse, liberate.

1683.

S E C T. III.

Of the criminal Processes before the Justiciary, and the publick Executions this Year.

A Great Number of Persons, Noblemen, Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, come this Year before the Criminal Court, and are processed for their Lives and Fortunes, merely for Conscience sake, and their alledged Accession to the Rising at Bothwell, near Four Years ago; and we shall find the Proofs as to this very lame, and such Things as no Body almost could have kept themselves free of in a Time of Confusion.

All I can do in so large a Field, is to give the Reader a short Abstract of the Processes, in the Order of Time wherein they fell out, from the Books of the Justiciary, and add some Circumstances now and then from the Council-registers, and other Papers, come to my Hand, for clearing up Matters of Fact.

It may not be unfit to open this black Scene, with a Letter, procured by the Clergy and Managers, from the King to the Lords of Justiciary, to quicken them to their Work; and January 8. the Letter is read and recorded, the Tenor whereof follows.

King's Letter
to the Justiciary,
Jan. 8.
ordering them
to examine Witnesses before Process.

C H A R L E S R.

Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. It being always Our Care to prevent the Increase of Disorder and Rebellion, in that Our ancient Kingdom, not only by maintaining Our Forces to suppress the same, but likewise by imploying learned and able Judges, who may discourage any such Insurrections, by discovering and punishing such as are guilty thereof. And being informed of late, that such who are to be adduced Witnesses, being to be given in List to the Pannel, are oft-times practised upon after their Names are known, by the late Regulations, so that it cannot be clear who will be proving Witnesses, whereby the Guilty may escape: And thinking it most secure for Our People to trust the previous Examinations, either before or after Citation, to you the learned Judges, who of all others are the most unsuspected and indifferent. We do therefore recommend it to you, that if Our Privy Council shall find it necessary, previously to examine any who are to be adduced as Witnesses, you will examine them upon Oath accordingly, so that Our Advocate may be secure how to manage such Processes, wherein you will do Us acceptable Service, for which this shall be your Warrant. And so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitchhall, the 30 Day of December, 1682. and of Our Reign the Thirty fourth Year.

By his Majesty's Command,

M I D D L E T O N.

Remarks on it.

A Lawyer who understands Criminal Forms, and the Reasons of them, would be in Case to make ample Observes upon this Letter. As was customary in this Time, this Practice here had been tried by the Managers, before the King's Authority was interposed; and this was the Way now, first to do unreasonable Things, and then to engage the King to require them to be done. It is very evident, this Method was fallen on to expiscate Matter of Criminal Process against Gentlemen and others, to secure their Evidence, and keep it secret likewise, till it was past Time for the Pannels to get Defences. There is here much more than a Precognition, the Matter is by Oath fixed as far as it is possible to be; and it appears very hard this should be done, and Parties not present to give what Exceptions and Light they could for their own Defence; and when once the Witnesses had made their Declaration upon Oath, they could not refile without the Charge of Perjury, when they came to bear Evidence in causa, and before the Assize. By this Letter indeed the Lords of the Justiciary are to take the Witnesses Oaths, which how far it agrees with Judges before they come to judge directly, I must leave to others; but this is only when the Council lay this upon them, and the Council themselves had Power, or assumed it, to do this; yea, many Times it was left entirely to the Advocate to do it, who was evidently a Party in these Cases.

Montgrenan's Process before
the Justiciary.

But I come forward to the Procedure of the Lords of Justiciary this Year, after their Receipt of such a Commission from the King; and that same Day, January 8. I find Thomas Cuningham of Montgrenan before them, indicted for Treason and Rebellion. For Probation his own Confession is adduced, emitted before the Lords December 8. last. That he and the Laird Laird of Bedlane Cuninghame, James Edmonstoun, and others, came upon Saturday before the Engagement, to Hamiltoun Muir, and joyned the Rebels at Bothwell-bridge, that he had a Horse, Pistols, and a Sword, and that he fled with them; and begs the Lords may intercede with his Majesty for his Pardon, declares himself willing to take the Test. To all this he now judicially adheres before the Assize, and they bring him in guilty. The Lords delay his Doom till the 15. I suppose that they might advise with the Council anent the Day, and to allow Room for a Remission. On the 15. the Sentence is pronounced, that upon the First Wednesday of April next, he should be executed as a Traitor, and demeaned at the Cross of Edinburgh; and he is forfeited. We have heard before, upon the 18. the Council intercede for this Gentleman, and, I make no doubt, prevailed as to his Life.

1683.

Upon the same Day I find William Martin of Dullurg younger, indicted of Treason and Rebellion. The Matter, it seems, as to him had been compromised, as in the Case of some others mentioned in the former Years, by a Renunciation of Part of his Lands, however I shall set down the Form of this. The Pannel when his Libel is read, declares he is ready and willing to abide his Trial, as being altogether innocent, and dissented from all other further Continuation of it, and produceth a Renunciation before the Lords, the Tenor whereof follows. 'Be it kend to all Men, me William Martin, eldest Son to James Martin of Dullurg; forasmuch as I am pursued before the Lords of Justiciary, for alledged being in the Rebellion 1679. and seeing I am neither Heritor, nor guilty of the said Crime, therefore in their Presence I renounce and resign in favour of the King's most excellent Majesty, Lord High Treasurer, and Treasurer-depute, all Lands and Heritages befallen to me, wherein I was infested, or had a Right before the said Rebellion, or his Majesty's gracious Indemnity, and oblige me, my Heirs and Successors, to denude my self hereof omni habili modo, at Sight of the Lord Treasurer, or Treasurer-depute, and consent these Presents be registrated, &c.'

William Martin
younger of Dullurg renounceth his Heritage.

Form of Renunciation.

The Lords, in respect of the Pannel's Renunciation, and offering to abide a Trial, do defer the Diet simpliciter, and ordain him to enact himself to compear when cited; whereupon he takes Instruments. Upon January 15. William McClelland of Auchinguil, and Hugh Maxwell of Caith, are libelled as above, renounce, and the Diet is deserted simpliciter, and they engaged to appear when cited. And the same Day William McCulloch of Gleichenred, renounces as above, takes the Bond of Peace and the Test, and is set at Liberty.

Diet deserted
against him.

The Process against William Lawrie of Blackwood, hath been hinted at as illegal, and very hard, and therefore I shall give as short an Account of it as I can. Last Year, November 24. this Gentleman was brought before the Council, and they, upon hearing him as to his Libel, pass the following Act.

Process against
Will<sup>m</sup> Lawrie of Blackwood.

'Anent our Sovereign Lord's Letters in the Matter underwritten, mentioning, that albeit it be the Duty of all his Majesty's good Subjects, to detect, discover, apprehend, and present to Justice, any guilty of Treason and Rebellion, who have been their Tenants, and haunt upon their Ground; and that by the Laws of this Kingdom, the harbouring and retaining such Persons, the furnishing them with Meat, Drink, House, or Harbour, and the allowing them to labour, manure, or occupy their Lands, as if they were free Persons, is severely punishable as Crimes of an high Nature: Nevertheless, William Lawrie of Blackwood, being a Person who hath deeply shared in his Majesty's Bounty, by Acts of Indemnity emitted by his Majesty; albeit he was brought under the Compass of the Laws for negotiating with the Rebels 1666. yet the said William Lawrie continuing and persisting in his Disaffection to his Majesty's Government, hath ever since, by his aiding, abetting, assisting, and countenancing Rebels, given them too much Encouragement to persist and remain in their rebellious Courses. Which is manifest, in so far as the greatest Part of the Tenants of the Lands of Blackwood, were actually in the late Rebellion, and after the Defeat of the Rebels, were actually received back by him as Tenants of the said Lands, allowed to labour and manure the Ground, and did receive Mail and Duty from them; and particularly John Alstoun Son to John Alstoun Miller, who murdered Cornet Graham, Thomas Allan in Mungrie-hill, John Rae in Kirknurchal, John Rae his Son, and Thomas Watson in Chapel, who was afterwards killed at Ains-moss, and hath reset and corresponded with them as free Persons, albeit they had been by the Justices found guilty, or declared Outlaws; whereby the said William is guilty of an open and manifest Crime, for which he ought to be punished in his Person and Goods, to the Terror of others. Being called and compearing on the 7 of June last, he alledged he was no Heritor of these Lands, but only Administrator to his Children these Two Years past, and during that Space he did not live upon the Place. The Lords sustained the Libel to be proven by Witnesses, and repelled the Defence, in regard he hath intromitted with the Rents, and the Vicinity of the Place, and the Continuance of the Time, and so is presumed to know all the Tenants, except he will instruct that, in due Time, he hath done legal Diligence to apprehend the Rebels, or so to discover them, that they might be apprehended, or at least put them off the Ground before the intenting of this Process. This Day he being absent, the Witnesses are called, and it is found that these named, and some others, have been harboured and reset by the

Act of Council
about him,
Nov. 24. 1682.

Defender

1683.

His Indictment
before the Justiciary;
Jan. 31.

Defender upon the Lands of Blackwood, and some of them in his own Family. The Lords, in regard the Crimes are of so high a Nature, and the Probation so full, refer the whole Matter to the Justices, and ordain the Advocate to insist against him.

January 31. this Gentleman's Process before the Justiciary begins, and he is indicted, That after he had been brought under the Compass of Law, for negotiating with the Rebels at Pentland, and was indemnified, continued in his aiding, abetting, and encouraging Rebels, in as much as when many of the Tenants of the Lands of Blackwood had been at Bothwell-bridge, he received them back as Tenants, and received Mail and Duty from them, as if they had been his Majesty's free Lieges, therefore hath incurred the Pain of Treason, at least is Art and Part with them in the said Crimes. And by an additional Libel he is indicted, for commissioning, giving Order, or conniving at James Clelland and James Wilson, known Rebels, to come in the Month of May or June, 1679. to the House of Douglas, and take away Two Cannons, and several Horses belonging to the Marquis of Douglas, and a Horse of his own, which were employed by the said Rebels; and his setting, conversing with, and furnishing Tacks to the said James Wilson, and employing him in his Affairs after the Rebellion; and another additional Article, that he allowed the said James Wilson in Town-head of Douglas to stay in the Castle of Douglas, tho' a notorious Rebel.

Answers for him.

For the Pannel it was answered, That he concurred no further in the Business of Pentland with the Rebels, than as commissioned by General Dalziel, to go and intimate to them the Proclamation of Council to lay down their Arms, and submit to the King's Authority; that his Converse with Rebels till once intercommuned, which the abovementioned were not, infers not the Pains in the Libel; that the Persons named in the Libel were Tenants included in the Indemnity, and the Lieges consequently in bona fide to converse with them, and receive them in their Lands, tho' they had not taken the Bond of Peace, when they had not been intercommuned; And it was further urged by his Lawyers, That this Libel cannot go to an Assize, unless the Rebels were convicted; that a Person pursued for Refet and Converse cannot be put to the Knowledge of an Assize, all such Qualifications being but a Degree of Accession, unless the principal Party were first judicially convicted; and if this Order were inverted, it might fall out, that one might be condemned as accessory, and Accomplice of the alledged Crime of another, who, when he came to be tried, might be acquit of the same Crime, which, if it did fall out, must convince, that the Person first condemned was absolutely innocent.

And further, that when whole Tracts of Countries have been in a Rebellion, it can never be made appear, that Persons were ever pursued, much less found guilty of the Crime of Treason, upon the Qualifications libelled, except, by the highest Degree of Diligence and Execution, a publick Mark were put upon Rebels, and they intercommuned, which in other Countries is called Bannum. That the Tenants not taking the Bond upon the Indemnity is factum alicuius, wherein the Law presumes we may be ignorant; and however it may forfeit Rebels themselves of the Indemnity, yet their publick repairing to their Dwellings, publick Converse, and being put to no Trouble or Prosecution by his Majesty's Officers, was a good Ground to think they were not guilty; and lastly, that the Pannel was not Heritor of those Lands: And as to their being notoriously known to be Rebels, Notoriety in Terms of Law can only be founded upon Letters of Intercommuning, as appears from the very Nature of them; and though the Lords have in former Cases found, that notoriously known, held and repute Rebels, is sufficient in this Case, yet it appears a Matter of that Importance, as deserves their Lordships Reconsideration.

Advocate's
Answers.

In Answer, the Advocate insists upon the Notoriety facti, tho' not juris, and that this is already determined, the Judges having already declared Law in Cases of this Nature. The Lords repel the Defences, find the Indictment relevant, and remit the Probation to an Assize, and delay this Process until February 4. This is as short an Abbreviate of the Reasonings on both Sides, as I could give the Reader.

Further Reasonings.

That Day Blackwood's Lawyers insist, That the Libel ought not to be remitted to an Assize, and advance several Defences for the Pannel, as that the Libel is not special; that Blackwood was Tutor to his Grandchild, that he lived at Edinburgh where the porteous Rolls of Shires are not intimated; that all Persons named in the Libel, for many Years had conversed openly at Fairs, Markets, &c. without any Person to challenge them. The Advocate replies, that the Lords have already by their Interlocutor found, that it is Treason to converse with Persons denounced Fugitives, or open and notorious Rebels, tho' not intercommuned; and the Lords repel the Defences, and in particular that of Notoriety in Converse at Kirk, Markets, Fairs, &c. with Persons of all Conditions.

It is further argued for the Pannel, That he was no way accessory to the taking away of the Cannon from Douglas Castle; that he conversed not with James Clelland and James Wilson until October after, when they were openly at his Father's Burial; that the Horse libelled was the Marquis of Douglas's, not his; that James Wilson was a common and known Draver, and so he did employ him and deal with him, when the whole Country about him did so so openly. The Lords repel all the Defences, and remit the Matter to an Assize, and delay the Process till February 6. The Reader cannot but perceive the Iniquity and Severity of this Procedure, and that nothing is chargeable upon this Gentleman, but Converse with People whom all the Country conversed and openly dealt with.

1683.

With what Views, and whether to fright and involve the Gentleman, I know not, but upon the 6 of February, the Lords, before Probation is adduced, require the Pannel to declare, whether he was guilty of the Crime libelled; which Method I have not observed in other Procces that are criminal. And Blackwood declares, 'That as to the Probation he comes in the King's Will.'

William Lawrie.

Then for Probation the Advocate adduceth the porteous Roll, and Books of Adjournal, bearing, that the Persons with whom Blackwood conversed were in the Rebellion. Some of them compear, and declare upon Oath they paid Rent to Blackwood since 1679. tho' I do not find they declared they were in the Rebellion. It seems, the Rolls and Books of Adjournal were the Foot on which the Advocate would have that to stand; and other Witnesses are adduced, and depone they heard the former converse with Blackwood, then the Assize inclose.

February 7. the Assize return their Verdict, that they find the Pannel guilty of Harbouring and Conversing with declared Rebels and Fugitives, proven by the Deposition of Witnesses: And also find by his judicial Submission as to the Probation, that he comes in the King's Will. The Lords adjudge the said William Lawrie to be taken to the Market-cross of Edinburgh the last of February instant, there to have his Head severed from his Body, his Name, Memory, Fame, and Honours to be extinct, and his Lands forfeited to his Majesty for ever.

Assize bring him in guilty.

Sentence.

After Sentence was passed upon this Gentleman, the King was acquainted with the Process, and a Letter comes, dated February 24. bearing, He had lately received an Account of their Proceedings against William Lawrie of Blackwood, now Prisoner, and condemned to die for Treason, and is well pleased therewith, and particularly with their ordering the Advocate to pursue him criminally, and gives them Thanks. Thereupon he was reprieved till the End of March.

The King sh. proves of what is done.

March 22. I find the Committee, which had been appointed to consider the Case of William Lawrie of Blackwood, report, that the Marquis of Douglas hath not cleared his Accounts with the said William Lawrie, and that it very nearly imports the said Marquis to have them stated, and the Time whereat he is to die being at Hand, there is need of a further Reprieve. The Council reprieve him till the last Friday of November.

Blackwood is reprieved.

At this Time he is further reprieved, and January 12. 1684. upon a Petition from the Marquis of Douglas, the Council interceed with the King for a Remission, and the Reason is, because William Lawrie knows the Marquis's Affairs and Accounts best; and it comes down January 31.

And next Year he gets a Remission.

I go on to other Processes as they stand in the Criminal Books. I meet with a Process February 12. against John Menzies in Dalquharn, who is indicted for his Life, and condemned to die, merely for Converse with John Schaw of Greenhill, fugitive, and a Letter, he said when drunk, he recieved from John Balfour of Kinloch. The Probation is very confused in the Register, and Sentence is pronounced; but he offering to take the Test, being regular and attending upon the Curate, no doubt he was reprieved. They were not Persons of his Stamp who were now executed.

Process against John Menzies in Dalquharn.

February 26. John Gibson of Auchinchain, who had been condemned for his Accession to Bothwell, presents to the Lords the King's Remission for his being at the Rebellion, and he is set at Liberty. And March 6. Robert Fergusson, late of Letterpin, of whom before, produceth a Remission for his Concern in the Rebellion, and is liberate.

Auchinchain and Letterpin are liberate upon Remissions.

March 12. William McCulloch in Cleibred, before mentioned, makes a Renunciation of his Heritages in the Hands of the Treasurer and Treasurer-depute, as those above, January 8. and binds himself never to rise in Arms against the King or any commissioned by him, and enacts himself to compear when called, and so the Lords desert the Process against him for his Accession to Bothwell-bridge, simpliciter.

Process deserted against William McCulloch in Cleibred.

March 27. James Lawrie, Writer in Lanerk, presented himself before the Justiciary. It seems his Peace had been made, and a Remission secured; he had been found guilty in Absence, March 21. 1681. by an Assize, of Treason and Rebellion, and ordained to be executed to Death when apprehended: The Lords adjudge him to be carried to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, Wednesday April 4. and hanged; and the Magistrates of Edinburgh to see to the Execution.

James Lawrie Writer in Lanerk gets a Remission.

By the Council-registers, I find he petitions the Council for a Prorogation of his Reprieve, which they granted until the first Friday of November. These long Reprieves are generally a Preface to a Remission; and, April 1684. I find him recommended for a Remission to his Majesty, who no doubt granted it.

1683.

John Nisbet processed before Major White at Kilmarnock, according to his Commission,
March 22.

His Examination
on.

Indictment.

Sentence. And accordingly is executed at Kilomarnock, April 14.

On the 22 of March, as I noticed on the first Section, the Council granted a Justiciary Power to Major White, upon his apprehending John Nisbet, to prosecute him criminally, upon the Place, for having been at Bothwell; and William Crichton, Sheriff-depute of Air Shire, is adjoined to the Major in this Matter. I have not met with any further Accounts of his Trial there, but what is published in the Cloud of Witnesses, and his Speech which he left behind him. His Trial was at Kilmarnock, to frighten that Country, who were very much Strangers to Executions. At his Examination, he was posed hard to tell when or where he had seen John Nisbet of Hardhill, whom they were seeking for with great Violence. When he was positive in his Refusal to tell any thing anent him, the Major, in a Manner unworthy not only of a Judge, but of a Christian, scolded him, and said, He would make him tell what he knew; otherwise he would make him sit Three Hours in Hell. John answered, That was not in his Power. It was asked at him, If he was under any Oath of Secrecy not to tell of others. He answered, He was under no Oath as to these Things, except that of the Covenant, which binds him to the Duty the Scripture requires, with relation to his Christian Friends in their Sufferings. Being asked, if he preached or expounded Scripture. He answered, he was never a Minister, and none but Quakers expounded Scripture without a Mission, and their Principles he entirely disowned. Next he was asked, if he owned the King as Head of the Church. He answered, I acknowledge none to be Head of the Church but Christ.

After his Examination, he was indicted for Treason and Rebellion. I do not find any Witnesses adduced to prove him guilty. He says in his last Speech, which hath been printed, 'That he was indicted upon his owning the Lawfulness of the Rising at Bothwell-bridge, which he did with much Cheerfulness, as reckoning it Self-defence, and in Defence of the Gospel: Next, upon his disowning the Curates, which was interpreted disowning all Authority, yet he disowned them very boldly. 3dly. Upon his hearing Mr. Cargil, Mr. John King, and others; which he also confessed, and blessed God that ever he had heard them. 4thly. His refusing to pray for the King's Person, and Government and Authority, which, he says, he had no Clearness to do, he reckoning it to be owning him to be right in all that he had done in oppressing God's People.

Upon these Heads this good Man was sentenced to be hanged at Kilmarnock Cross, April 14. this Year. I have before me a large Account of his Carriage at his Execution that Day, and his last Words on the Ladder, too long to be insert here, taken from his Mouth in short Hand. He had a grave Courage and Stayedness when he came to the Place of Execution. After he had prayed, he sang the 16 Psalms, from the 5 Verse to the Close, with a great deal of Affection and Joy; and then read the 8 Chapter to the Romans, and prayed again. When he had delivered his Bible to his Uncle, he made himself ready for the Executioner, not expecting to get Leave to say any thing to the Spectators; but essaying to speak, and not being interrupted, he continued a good while in an extemporary Discourse, pressing them to Godliness, and recommending Religion to them, from his own Feeling and Experience. He notices, that this is the first Execution of this Kind at that Place, and is of the Opinion, it is not like to be the last; he tells them, Death is before them all, and it it were staring them in the Face, as nearly as it was him at present, he doubts not there would be many awakened Consciences among them; but as for himself, tho' Death be naturally terrible, and a violent Death yet more terrible, yet the Sting of it is taken away, and he can say, he reckons every Step of the Ladder to be a Step nearer Heaven. When going on to give some Account of the Cause of his Sufferings, and his Indictment, a Confusion was raised by the Soldiers. and he broke off, and drew the Napkin over his Face, and was turned off when commending his Soul into his Father's Hands. This Person lived in the Parish of Lowdon, and is generally named John Nisbet younger, to distinguish him from John Nisbet of Hardhill. Another James Nisbet in the same Parish, suffered next Year at Glasgow, as we shall hear.

Process of Forfeiture against John Balfour,
John Russel,
Robert Hamilton,
Mr. John Hog,
Mr. Robert Fleming,
Smith,
Mr. Robert Langlands,
Andrew Russel,
Factor,
John Russel,
Factor, and James Stuart Son to
Sir James Stuart

Upon the 2 of April, a Process of Forfeiture is raised before the Justiciary, against the underwritten Persons. I have a Copy before me, of the criminal Letters against them, of Three or Four Sheets, too long to be insert here or in the Appendix, and therefore I shall only give an Abstract of the most material Articles here. 'Anent criminal Letters raised by Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh his Majesty's Advocate, against John Balfour of Kinloch, called Captain Burleigh, John Russel Portioner of Kettle, Robert Hamilton Brother to Sir William Hamilton of Prestoun, Mr. John Hog Minister at Rotterdam, Mr. Robert Fleming there, Smith, Mr. Robert Langlands, Andrew Russel Factor, John Russel Factor, and James Stuart Son to Sir James Stuart Lord Provost of Edinburgh, making mention, that notwithstanding of many Acts of Parliament, against Treason, Rebellion, and rising in Arms, which they have broken; and whereas by Act 11. Seff. 1. Parl. 2. Char. II. the King's Advocate, warranted by the Privy Council, may and ought to insist against such Persons in Absence; and if cited and not compearing, the Lords are to proceed to Forfeiture, as if they were present: And it is so verily, that the said John Balfour, and John Russel, with the deceased David Hackstoun of Rathillet, and others, discharged several Shots in in the Coach of his Grace James Archbishop of St. Andrews, about Two Miles from the City of St. Andrews, in Magus-muir, when travelling, with his Daughter, most securely, and most sacrilegiously invaded him and his Daughter; and his Grace having opened the Door, and come forth, and fallen down on his Knees, begging Mercy, or Time to recommend his Soul to God, and to pray for his Murderers, so cruel and inhumane were they, that without pitying his gray Hairs, or the Shrieks of his weeping Daughter, or respecting his Character or Office, most cruelly and furiously gave him many bloody and mortal Wounds in his Head and other Places, and left him dead and murdered on the Place; and then went unto the West, and rose in Rebellion at Bothwell-bridge, under the Command of the said Robert Hamilton. And when, by the Diligence of his Majesty's Forces, they could no longer stay in the Nation, they fled to the united Provinces of Holland, where the said Mr. John Hog, Mr. Robert Fleming, Mr. Robert Langlands, &c. conversed with them, harboured, supplied, and furnished them with Money and Necessaries, in the Years 1679, 1680, 1681, or 1682. And the said Mrs. Hog, Fleming, Smith, and Langlands, did, in one of the Months of the Years fore said, imploy Mr. Donald Cargil, Mr. Richard Cameron, Mr. John Rae, Mr. David Hume, Mr. John King, Mr. John Kid, Mr. John Weir, Mr. Thomas Hog, Mr. Andrew Anderson, Mr. John Ross, Mr. Alexander Wilson, Mr. Alexander Bertram, Mr. Francis Irvine, Mr. John Wellwood, Mr. Thomas Macgil, Ministers, fled from their native Country, for their Hand in the Rebellion 1679. and who were intercommunicated. And the said Mrs. Hog, Fleming, Smith and Langlands, are arrived at that Height of Impiety, to own and maintain that treasonable and sacrilegious Covenant, (which occasioned so much Bloodshed, and the Loss of the Lives of so many good Subjects, and was the Engine of the whole Catastrophe of the rebellious, and unparallied, and accursed Murder of our Sovereign Lord Charles I. to the everlasting Reproach of the Protestant Religion) and, in an impious and insolent Manner, did take upon them to debar from the Lord's Table, such as owned his Majesty's Authority, or assisted and served him in the Government, as Enemies to Christ and his Kingdom; and consulted and treated for admitting the said John Balfour to the Table of the Lord; that during the Dutch War, they prayed publicly for the Success of the Forces of the States, against their Sovereign Lord the King; And the said James Stuart, being the Son of a Father whose disloyal Principles and Practices tended to the Destruction of his Majesty's Authority and Government, in the Time of the late Rebellion; and he no sooner arrived to any Height of Knowledge, than he used all Endeavours to disturb the Government, both in Church and State, and by his Writings and Practices to sow Sedition: And after he was forced to lurk and flee the Nation, when returned after the Indemnity, he wrote and drew a Representation of the late Earl of Argyle's Case, which Paper was designed to be printed, wherein he extremely reflected on the late Parliament, and Test, appointed to be a Bulwark to the Protestant Religion and his Majesty's Government; and drew and wrote Reasons against the said Test, treasonably asserting, that Subjects were bound by the Covenant and Confession of Faith, to oppose the civil Magistrate in defence of Religion; and hath assisted, supplied, and done Favours to the said John Balfour and Russel, and continues in a desperate State of Rebellion and Treason. Wherefore these Things being proven, the whole of the above named Persons ought to be punished with Forfeiture of Life, and Lands, and Goods.

1683.

The Advocate produces Warrants to pursue, and the Summons upon Sixty Days, as ordinary in Cases of Persons being out of the Kingdom; and at present insists against Robert Hamilton and John Balfour. The Lords find the Dittay relevant, and remit it to Probation before an Assize. Witnesses appear, and depone they saw Robert Hamilton General at Bothwell-bridge, and Balfour Captain of a Troop of Horse. Another Witness depones, That when Balfour was fleeing, he heard him say he had received a Shot, the Devil cut off the Hands that gave it. The Assize bring them in guilty of what is libelled, and the Lords adjudge them to be executed and demeaned as Traitors, when apprehended, and their Name, Fame and Memory to be extinct, and their Lands to fall to his Majesty, as in common Form.

Rob Hamilton
and John Balfour
were executed.

Upon Absence, after Citation, John Russel Portioner of Kettle, Mrs. John Hog, Langlands, and Smith, and James Stuart, are put to the Horn and forfeited. We shall meet with Mr. Stuart and Mr. Langlands afterward, in the Progress of this History.

A Representation was given in the same Diet, that Mr. Robert Fleming was in Scotland in the Time of the Dutch War, and that he raised John Balfour from the Table of the Lord; and the Representations of Merchants and others in favours of Andrew Russel and John Fleming, (it is Russel before, and either the former or this is wrong written) the Diet of all the Three is continued: And I find November 12. their Diet is further continued; and December 3. Mr. Robert Fleming is continued to the First Munday of April, 1684. And April 24. 1684. I find an Act of Council presented in favours of Mr. Robert Fleming and Andrew Russel. The Act anent Mr. Fleming I find in the Council-registers, dated April 8. 1684. which I insert here, that the Reader may have the whole of this together. 'Anent a Petition presented

John Russel,
Mrs. Hog, with Langlands, and
Mr. Stuart, put to the Horn
and forfeited.
Act of Council
anent Mr. Robert Fleming and
Andrew Russel.

1683.

presented from Mr. Robert Fleming, Minister at Rotterdam, shewing, That the Petitioner being indicted at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, for alledged resetting and inter-communing with Rebels in Holland, and allowing the bloody and sacrilegious Murderer John Balfour, to partake of the Sacrament, and for his alledged praying for Success to the Hollanders, against his Majesty's Navies during the Dutch War; and being valetudinary and languishing under the Difficulties of old Age, and so incapable to come to Scotland, therefore the Council have from Time to Time continued his Diet; and seeing he is altogether free and innocent of what is libelled, which he can make easily appear; for in the Time of the Dutch War, and several Years before and after, he lived peaceably and loyally in Scotland, and then, as ever since, prayed heartily for the Prosperity of his Majesty's Person, Government and Forces. And the Petitioner was so far from admitting the bloody Murderer named, to the Lord's Table, that he on the contrary caused raise and extrude him therefrom, as can be proven by all the People then present; and for which the Petitioner was upbraided and reprehended by the hot-headed Fanaticks, his Favourers: Therefore he humbly supplicates, that the Council may please to relieve him from further Trouble, by appointing the Justices to desert the Diet, at least to continue it some longer Time. The Council having heard the Petition, and an Account from Mr. Constable, Secretary to his Majesty's Envoy in Holland, by the Secretary of State his Warrant of the Petitioner's good Behaviour, do prorogate the Diet for the Petitioner's Compearance, for some competent Time, that he may be in Condition to appear; and April 17. the Council desert his Diet simpliciter. Mr. Russell had likewise very large Testimonials of his good and loyal Behaviour; and the above Day the Justiciary finding, by the Act of his Majesty's Council, the Pannels are freed from further Trouble, desert the Diet simpliciter.

The same Second of April, Sir William Denholm of Westfield, and Mr. Gabriel Cunningham, indulged Minister at Dunlop, are indicted for aiding, assisting, and corresponding with Mr. John Cunningham late of Bedlane, a notorious Traitor. Archibald Menzies younger of Culdairs, called Colonel Menzies, is at the same Time indicted for saying one Day in Prison, That Fools made the Test, and Knaves take it. All the Three are absent and denounced, and put to the Horn, and their moveable Goods are ordered to be escheat, and brought in to his Majesty's Use, as Outlaws and Fugitives. I know nothing of the last, but the Two former were excellent Persons, and whatever might be proven of their Converse with Bedlane, I am certain they were no ways concerned in the Rising, and I suppose this Process proceeded only from some malicious Informer.

May 4. David McMullan, and some others, were brought before the Justiciary. I have before me his own Account of his Examination before the Council, and his Speech he designed to have delivered at his Execution, and from these and the Justiciary-registers I shall give some Account of him, and the rather that he is quite overlooked in the Cloud of Witnesses, either because the Accounts of him came not to the Collectors Hand, or, it may be, because this sensible solid Country Man goes not to the Heights the People they have pickt out run to.

When he was brought before a Committee of the Council, their Queries and his Answers were. 'Do you keep the Kirk?' He answered, he was taken out of it, not when hiding, but when retired to it for reading the Scriptures. Being asked who took him, and for what. He answered, Claverhouse, for being at Bothwell. Then he was questioned, do you not count Bothwell Rebellion? No, answered he, it was in Defence of the Truth. Next, he was asked, do you acknowledge lawful Authority? He answered, he is not a Christian that does not so. But add they, do you acknowledge the present Authority? Answer, in so far as he hath kept his Engagements according to the Word of God. Then he was asked, will you take on to be a Soldier and go over Sea? for if you abide here you will be hanged. He answered, being under your Power now, I will not cut out mine own Lot.'

Before the Justiciary his Confession before the Council was adduced against him, upon which he alledged they had some Things there he had not spoken, particularly about the Bishop's Death. Well, said the Lord who presided, what say you to that now? He answered, he had no Judgment to judge such Heads. He adhered to what he had said as to Bothwell, and being asked if he had any Thing to say to the Assizers, he said, he knew none of them, but betwixt you and them, and God, be it. He was told, there was yet Room to renounce his ill Principles that took him to Bothwell, by taking the Test. He answered, if he took it, it would not be willingly, and his Heart would not come up, and so he thought it best to adhere to his Light.

The Assize brought him in guilty of being at Bothwell in Arms, and judicially owning the Lawfulness of joining with those who were there; and the Lords adjudge him to be hanged at the Grass-market, May 16. 'twixt Two and Four in the Afternoon. When the Dampster was reading his Sentence, he was stopt in the Middle, and David was told, if the Sentence was read out he would not get it recalled, and the Test was offered to him. His Answer was,

Sir William Denholm of Westfield, Mr. Gabriel Cunningham, and Archibald Menzies of Culdairs, denounced and put to the Horn.

David McMullan's Process, May 4.

His Examination before a Committee of Council.

What passed before the Justiciary.

His Sentence.

was, Go on; and when it was read out, one of them said, What think you of it now? David answered, it was very welcome.

He died with John Wilson, whom we shall meet with just now, in a great deal of Peace and Composure. His Paper he left behind him, not expecting the Liberty of speaking, is very short and pathetic. 'He blesses the Lord who had inclined him to joyn with the persecuted Party at Bothwell, where he quit his Horse after he had fled, and joyned the Body of Foot that stood when they were overpowered with the Soldiers; he desired Quarters, and one said, I'll give you Quarters, and knockt him down to the Ground. He observes a strange Preservation from a Ball an Highlander shot, which hit him, and yet hurt him not, and much of the Lord's Kindness in his getting safe home, when he had no Acquaintances in the Way. He earnestly wishes, that Love may continue among the Godly, notwithstanding of Differences in Judgment, and desires every one to look on their own Sins as the Cause of this undoing of Religion, and still remember the Church was purchased by Christ's Blood. He blesses God who hath honoured him with his Cross, and that ever he heard the Gospel preached in the Fields. And observes, when he was urged to quite his Principles, he durst not for that Word, Keep the Truth, and the Truth shall set you free, and names many other Scriptures, which prevented his sinful Compliances: And adds, I could not argument for the Truth as others, but I never had a Look to go back, nor one wrong Thought of God. He warns Christians against Idleness, when Enemies are undoing Religion; and regrets it, that some pretended Friends are the greatest Enemies the Church hath. He presses all to mourn for broken Vows and Promises, slighted Offers and Opportunities, and a broken Covenant, and wonder at God's Patience to the Land under a slighted Gospel; presseth all to plead for God's Return to the Land and Posterity: And declares, That tho' the World turn upside down, he hath the solid Faith of it, that it will be well with them who are at their Duty, and that he dies in the Faith of it, that God will return to Scotland, for he is infinitely wise, and knows no Difficulties; and yet he is apprehensive, the Lord, for innocent Blood and other Sins, will sweep away most Part of the Generation. He adheres to the Confession of Faith, Catechisms, and Covenants, and leaves his Testimony against hearing the Curates, paying Cess, and the Indulgence; and concludes, with blessing God, that made him see the Odiousness of his Sin, his Nakedness, and gave him white Raiment from himself, and made him close with himself on his own Terms. My Soul, adds he, shall bless him through all the Ages of Eternity. Amen.'

1683.

And Paper left behind him at his Death.

David Macmillan.

There were in the Pannel with this good Man, when before the Justiciary, James Brown, John Paterson, William Miller, James Gemble, who, upon their Petition, were allowed to take the Test, and were liberate; and George Lapsley and Robert Lawson, who refused the Test, were remitted to the 10 of June, but their Indictment was found relevant. We may afterwards hear of them. They escaped in September, with John Dick and others.

This same Day, May 4. John Wilson, Writer in Lanerk, is brought before them, and they name the Day of Execution upon their former Sentence.

Process against John Wilson Writer in Lanerk, May 4

'John Wilson, Writer in Lanerk, having been formerly condemned to die, and to be deemed as a Traitor when apprehended, and acknowledging himself that same Person who was formerly condemned, March 1. 1681. for Rebellion, the Lords adjudge him to be hanged at the Grass-market, May 9. 'twixt Two and four in the Afternoon.' I think it was the 16. before he was executed. But having this worthy Person's original Papers put in my Hands by his Sons now serving God in the Work of the Gospel in this Church, and they differing in some Things from what is published in the Cloud of Witnesses, from them I shall give some further Account of him, referring, for Shortness in some Things, to the Papers themselves there printed, when they agree with the Original.

The Publishers of the Cloud of Witnesses acquaint the Reader, that they have made some Alterations, and omitted some Things of lesser Moment. By comparing their printed Account with his own Papers, I find, that either their Copy hath been very mank, incorrect, or they have taken more Liberty in the Changes they have made, than can be justified, and therefore I shall give the larger Account of this excellent Person, who was far from running these lengths a good many went whom they have chosen to make up their Collection; and the rather, because the Reader will find in these Papers some Matters of Fact I have not elsewhere met with, which will give a new View of the Temper of Times I am describing.

Remark on the Cloud of Witnesses and the State of Mr. Wilson's sufferings from his original Papers.

Mr. Wilson had been at Bothwell, and does not deny but he was a Captain there; this was what he had Ground to expect would cost him his Life, as soon as he fell into the Managers Hands. The precise Time of his being seized at Lanerk, I know not, but when he is carrying in to Edinburgh, I find upon his Road he resolved upon the utmost Freedom before the Council, and says, he was determined to this by considering the Boldness of Stephen, Acts 7. 51, 52. and Peter, Acts 5. 30. and that Promise Philip. 1. 28, 29. and upon the other Hand, from the Knowledge he had, that the Managers used to pick such Quarrel with the Sufferers who came before them, as might, if possible, justify their harsh Dealing with them, and that Persons in his Circumstances were branded with Imprudence, yea, as having a Hand in their own Death, by some professed Friends, and that the publick Proclamations and Papers of this Time asserted, that the Design of the Rising at Bothwell was not Religion, but Ambition, and to possess themselves of the Government. From all this he resolved to be as cautious and prudent as he could, without Prejudice to the Truth, and to take his Defences for defensive Arms from the Test it self, their own Writers and the Deeds of the Privy Council in former Years, whereof some of them had been Members, and to hold by that Rule, 1 Pet. 3. 15. to be ready always to give a Reason of the Hope in him with Meekness and Fear.

1683.

Upon the 17 of April he appeared before a Committee of Council in the Albany. The first Paragraph of his Answers before them, as published in the Cloud of Witnesses, is so curt, that I could scarce understand it, till I consulted his own Papers. And in them it runs, 'There being a Letter written by me to James Lawrie, reproving him for calling Bothwell-bridge Rebellion, the Chancellor said, that having found a Double of that Letter upon me, he had called James before them, who declared, that that Letter had satisfied his Conscience, and that he was sorry for what he had spoke; adding, that they had produced another Letter found on me, which they alleged to be his Answer to me, which he denied, and produced another Letter, and asked me by whom it was writ. I refused to tell by whom it was writ. They asked, who the Lady was mentioned in the Close of it. I said, I durst not burden my Conscience to tell. Then they asked, if I owned Authority. I asked, what Authority. Then presently, without any Stop, they asked, what I thought of Bothwell, was it not unlawful to rise in Arms. I said, I durst not say it was unlawful, for the Confession contained in the Test says, that it is a good Work to defend the Life of the Harmless; and that however God had disposed of these People, yet I supposed the Lord would own those, who hearing their Neighbours had been worshipping God, and (for defending themselves against these that sought their Life) were in Jeopardy of their Lives, thought it their Duty to rise for their Relief. Then they asked, if Pentland was Rebellion. I answered, that the Oppression of that poor People was so great, that the then Rulers condemned Sir James Turner for his Cruelty. One of them said, that he knew Sir James went not the Length of his Commission. Then they asked, if the Bishop's Death was Murder. I desired to be excused, for I would not answer that Question; and being urged again and again, I told them, it being nothing concerning my Salvation, I did not pry into it. Then they said, how did Bothwell concern your Salvation. I answered, there was none who engaged themselves in Service to God, but they behoved to be at his Call; and it being for the saving of the harmless, I durst not sit God's Bidding. They asked, if I was a Minister. I said, No. Your Letters, say they, seem to import it, and they read somewhat about a Call to some Ministers, nothing relative thereto. They said, will you not condemn the Bishop's Death as Murder. I said, I dare not, for Fear God having justified some of those Actors, they should rise in Judgment and condemn me. Said one of them, is there no other Way but to rise in Arms against the King. I said, I supposed they had read Bishop Honyman's Answer to Nephtali, wherein he says, A King may be resisted, in case he should alienate the Kingdom to Strangers; and that being granted, Religion was as dear to us as our outward Interests. One answered, the Bishop got little Thanks for that. They asked, if I thought it lawful to rise against a State that are not of your Opinion, and would you go to Bothwell again. But because of the Confusion, and their hurrying me away, I got no Answer given to these. They asked, if I was at Bothwell, and a Captain there, which I owned.'

Mr. Wilson makes Reflections upon this first Examination, for which I refer to the Cloud of Witnesses, Page 188. He owns he was not dashed either with Shame or Fear. He regrets he could not get Liberty to answer the Two last Questions above, and sets down what he would have said, and regrets that upon the Question of Authority, he did not take Occasion to testify against the Ecclesiastical Headship. But he had another Opportunity for this.

April 17. he was brought before the Council, where again he was questioned. 'Was you at Bothwell, and a Captain there? I answered as formerly. Is Bothwell Rebellion? I answered, No, it being for Defence of the Life of the Harmless, they being set upon for their Lives, for hearing a Sermon, and defending themselves, were for that in Jeopardy to be cut off. They replied, the Preaching was done. I said, as before, the Confession of Faith in the Test, &c. O! say they, then you approve of the Test, will you take it? I answered, No, I am not speaking of the Test, but of the Confession contained in it. Then it was asked, Think you it lawful to rise against the Magistrate? Ans. Will you condemn the Reformation (carried on by John Knox) from Popery? One said, We came not here to answer but to ask Questions. I said, The answering of that Question to me, would be a full Answer by me to their Question. Then said Bishop Paterfon, The Reformation was good, but the Way of carrying it on was ill. I said, that is a marvellous Thing to think that the 17. April 17.

His Examination
before a Committee of Council.

His Examination
before
the Council,
April 17.

that God would approve the Actors in such Actions, and yet the Method ill, and they to have a most solid Peace before God in these Actions, and to have such a Mouth to defend it, as all the Wits in these Days could not be able to gainstand, as will be clear to any that hath read the History of the Reformation. O! says one, he has read the History of the Reformation; but you will not find it in Scripture, that People may resist the Prince; for then, they take the Magistrate's Part upon them, and therein declare themselves to be above the Prince. I answered, The People resisted Saul, and would not let him kill Jonathan. Yes, says the Bishop, and the People were there in the Wrong. I said, the Scripture did not condemn the Deed. Then they again urged, that Rising in Arms was unlawful. I told again, that Bishop Honyman granted, there might lawfully be a Rising in Arms, if the Kingdom were alienated to Strangers. The Bishop said, that would be a distracted Act. Then they asked, if the Bishop's Death was Murder. I answered, I would neither say it was, nor it was not. They asked, if I owned Authority. I answered, Authority might be taken several Ways. 1st. For the simple Command of the Prince. 2<sup>dly</sup>. For the more publick Command of the Prince and People. 3<sup>dly</sup>. For a Power a Prince may be clothed with by a People. 4<sup>thly</sup>. For a Prince's Right to govern the People. And in the Two first Senses, since many, both of the Prince's Edicts, and publick Acts of Parliament, are directly against Presbyterians, and Presbyterian Government, in owning it in these Senses, I should deny my self to be a Presbyterian: In the third Sense, since the People had clothed the King with the Headship of the Church, I added, I could not own that, because the 11 Article of the Confession of Faith contained in the Test, says, that Office pertains properly to Christ alone, and that it is not lawful for Man or Angel to presume to intrude therein. As for the last Sense of Authority, his Right to govern, I said I had not seen through the Denial of it.

I cannot but remark how this is printed in the Cloud of Witnesses, Page 187. I had not seen through it. In Charity, I shall suppose 'tis an Error in their Copy who published that Book, or the Printer; for this is an Alteration both of the Phrase and Matter of the Author, in a Matter of very great Importance. Mr. Wilson's plain Sense is, That he had not seen through the denying the King's Right to govern, notwithstanding of the ill Laws made by him and the Parliament, and would not deny his Right to govern; and if any shall from this Expression, as printed in that Book, gather, that this judicious and excellent Person denied the King's Authority in this Sense, I hope this Remark will set them right, and discover he was of other Sentiments, than many the Collectors have put together in this Book. He goes on.

Then they asked me, if I would venture my Life on these Things. I said, my Life was in God's Hands. Then they read what they had set down in Writ, that I was at Bothwell, and a Captain there, and other Words of mine imperfectly, and desired me to subscribe it; I refused, because of their imperfect setting down of my Words, tho' I did not tell them so.

Mr. Wilson makes Reflections upon this Appearance of his before the Council, for which I shall likewise refer the Reader to Cloud of Witnesses, Page 188-9. He is sorry he answered not the Bishop when he said, that were a distracted Act, &c. that it was an Act of more Distraction to destroy Religion. He explains his not seeing through the Denial of the King's Authority, and says he scunnered to own it, and that such Things had been done, as in a well guided Commonwealth would anul his Right; and yet he thought Authority should not be cast off, without a probable Power to support in this: And lastly, he gives the Reasons why he would not determine anent the Bishop's Death, and regrets that he forgot to tell them, as he really designed, That the Archbishop of Glasgow's laying down his Gown, upon the making of the Act explanatory, would be an Aggravation of his Sin, if he should own the King's Headship over the Church.

He came before the Justiciary, May 4. and I have inserted all that is in the Registers. The Lords take the short Cut, and only name the Day for the Execution of the former Sentence, past in Absence. In his Papers, he gives Account of what past 'twixt the Advocate and him. The Advocate represented the King's Mercy to the Four Men who had taken the Test in the Pannel, with David Macmillan, and told him there was Room for Mercy, if you do not obstinately persist in your Opinion. Where, by the by, we may observe, it was precisely his Matter of Opinion his Persecutors stuck at. He answered, I have neither done any Deed, nor given you any Opinion but what I have justified from the Confession of Faith, which you have sworn lately, from the ancient Reformation which you cannot condemn, and from the Concessions of your own Doctor. What, says Perth, will you justify your taking Arms at Bothwell? I said, your own Test justifies the Defence of the Life of the harmless. He was asked, if he would bond * before Sentence, for there was no Room for the King's Mercy after Sentence. He answered, he would not, and at another Day all Sentences will be canvassed before the great Judge of Heaven and Earth.

1683.

May 4. his Sentence by the Justiciary.

* i. e. take the Test.

1683.

Remarks upon the Account given in the Cloud of Witnesses, of his petitioning the Council.

After he had received his Sentence to be executed upon the Ninth, upon the Seventh he was prevailed with by his Friends to supplicate the Council for a Reprieve; and in his Papers follow Reasons, why I refused to petition, as some advised, with a Conference 'twixt Sir William Paterson and me. The Cloud of Witnesses gives these a Title of their own, Reasons why he refused at first to supplicate the Council for a Reprieve; and set down Three of them as they are in his Papers. 1. That he might be better advised anent his Answers. 2. Because of his Confusions since he came to Prison. 3. That he might have longer Time to prepare for Eternity. All these, as may be seen, Page 190. he justly rejects; the first, as a quitting what he had said; the second, as a Lie and Slander on Christ's Cross; and the Third, as what he could not do in Faith, since he had never doubted since he came to Prison, but God would finish the good Work he had begun; and he would not give Enemies Ground to say, If he believed his Salvation, he was their Debtor for it, as his Words are, and not as printed, as above. This Mistake in the Title and here, I should not have mentioned, had there not followed a palpable Untruth, Page 191. in what follows after these Words, The only best Way is to hold him when he is tottering.

The Compilers add, notwithstanding all these Reasonings against Petitioning, he regrets it, that his Relations induced him to petition twice. This is a Slur upon this worthy Man, that I must in Justice clear him of: A double Fault is committed here, with what Views the Authors know best. They suppose, after the Strain of their own Title, that these are Reasons against Petitioning; whereas he himself declares them only to be Reasons against petitioning in such a Manner as some advised. And in the Entry, they may see his Strait, that he could think upon no Arguments could be acceptable with them, without a receding; and therefore, as soon as the Reason from his Wife's Circumstances is given, he falls in with it: But 'tis yet worse to say, that he regrets this Matter, that he had been induced to supplicate; when he himself adds, he did it in Faith, and had solid Peace in what he did. This, if the Passage hath been in their Copy, I cannot account for, and must look on it as unfair Dealing.

To set all this in a fair Light, I shall insert his own Words, where they are pleased to stop in their Account, after the Sentence, The only best Way is to hold to him when he is tottering; and they are, 'When all this is done, they come saying, Will you not seek your Life? Yes, said I, if I might without Sin; so they desired me to consider in my Mind, and, after Consideration, to give in a Petition: So, after Consideration, finding nothing I could petition upon, but that which would rather raise than abate their Anger, and verily thinking my Wife should be as soon in her Grave as I, and that the Council would lay her Blood at my Door, as not willing to seek a Reprieve upon her account, I petitioned merely in respect of her Case, being big with Child; doing this lest they should pretend Ignorance, and my whole Strain being to justify my Sufferings to their Consciences and the Eyes of the unbiaſſed World; and for what I did herein, I bless the Lord I did it in Faith, and had solid Peace therein; that their Ridiculousness in taking away my Life, might occasion a Stop to the taking away that of others, if possible.' He adds an Account of some Circumstances of the first Application, and what followed, which I pass.

His Conference with Sir William Paterson.

And come forward to his Conference with Sir William Paterson, which I cannot easily imagine why the foresaid Authors left out; and I suppose there is somewhat more in it than their Study of Brevity, therefore I insert it here, as what gives us a further View of this good Man. 'Sir William, after some Compliments, advises Mr. Wilson to give in a Petition, requiring some Time to advise on his Principles. Think you, says he, your Principles so sure, and the Rising in Arms such a Business, and so clear, that you dare die therein? J. W. As to that Business of defensive Arms, I have long ere now canvassed it to and fro. Sir W. What say you to that of our Saviour, All that take the Sword shall perish by the Sword, and his reproving Peter in that Defence, it being a most abominable Murder to take away a Man's Life? J. W. I find our Saviour in another Place, saying, Sell your Coat to buy a Sword. Sir W. That is meant by the Sword of the Spirit. J. W. That were a Quakerish Tenet to deny all Defence. Sir W. But what say you to my Argument of Christ's reproving Peter at his Death? J. W. That Action of Christ's Passion was a determined Thing, wherefore he reproved Peter for desiring him to pity himself, and therefore he would suffer no Defence whatever therein; and he approves Defence in so far as he says, Suffer it thus far, thinkest not thou that I could call so many Angels, which to me, adds he, imports, if this were not a Thing I must lay my Account with, I need not want Defence. Sir W. Think you your self so well buckled therein, seeing there is so much Difference among Divines about it? J. W. What Divines? Sir W. Protestant Divines. J. W. That cannot be, for all the Protestants in Europe have wrestled from under the Yoke of Popery by the Sword; and I am sure, if there had been any Protestant Divines had so affirmed, Bishop Honyman, a Man among you of the greatest Learning, would have raked them up, but he is forced to confess them lawful in some Cases; and tho' your Brother said, that was a distracted Act, yet I assure you, to me the Act of undoing Religion 1683.

Religion is far more unwise; and, as I said to your Brother, if I should condemn defensive Arms, I would condemn most of the Protestants in Europe, and our worthy Reformers, to whom, under God, we are obliged for so great a Gospel Light. Sir W. Tho' the Reformation was good, the carrying of it on was treasonable. J. W. If I should say or think so, I should look on them all as damned Men, conform to the Apostle, He that does evil that Good may come of it, his Damnation is just. Sir W. You must not think it a small Matter to lay down your Life on trivial Things, and neglect your Family, whose Care lies on you, and your not providing for them makes you worse than an Infidel. J. W. It is not Trivials, but Truths that are solidly grounded; and as to the Care of my Family, since the Lord called me to Suffering, I am commanded to leave them, or be unworthy of Christ. Sir W. You never make it out to me, but your Blood and your Family's will ly at your Door. J. W. No, Sir William, for mine is not a naked Opinion, but grounded on that Confession of Faith you have sworn, my Catechism, to do all I can to save the Life of my Neighbour, and the Word of God, Do Judgment, and relieve the oppressed; and since it is so, I dare not act against my Conscience. Sir W. Will you approve of a Multitude of Men gathering, plundering, and robbing a Country? J. W. Sir, as for any such Commotion I was both grieved and angry at it, and I wish such had not been among us; but I hope that could not be charged upon the Generality, since they were known to be Men of Conscience; and as for my own Part, I used such disgracefully where I had any Power. Mr. McGuligen was brought in at Sir William's Desire, but said nothing. Sir William said, he was sure Mr. Kirkcoun would not say with me. I said, I knew the utmost Mr. Kirkcoun would go, was, that the Enterprize was foolishly carried on, but would never condemn defensive Arms. Sir William asked me, if Death was not a Terror to me. I said, no doubt once it would be a Terror to all Men, but whatever it had been I had got Submission to the Lord's Dispensations. This is the Sum of what past, omitting some needless Commendations of me. Sir W. added, think you all are damned that are of the Episcopal Church? J. W. I have learned the Protestant Doctrine better, than to think all are damned that are of the Popish Church. Sir W. Well then, may you not believe as we do, and be saved? J. W. No, for me to do but doubtingly is Damnation, let alone to do against my Conscience. Sir W. Conscience would be well informed. J. W. You see I have grounded it on what you have sworn, my Catechism and the Word of God. Sir W. Do not think the quitting of those Things is the quitting of Christ, since there is no Quarrel this Day about the fundamental Points of Doctrine. J. W. Yes, Sir, it is, for since I have taken Christ for a King and Prophet, if I contradict his Counsel or Command before Men, I deny him; and since I have evidenced the Truth of what I have spoken, I dare not contradict my Conscience.

This Conference had no Influence to alter any of the Sides; and so upon the 16 of May this solid judicious Christian was hanged at the Grass-market, with David Macmillan, of whom before. He left a Testimony behind him, which is published in the Cloud of Witnesses, Page 192-198. and thither I refer the Reader to it. This also offers upon this sensible Person's Trial. What is called his Testimony, differs in very little from his own Papers. Mr. Wilson left likewise some Advices to Sufferers, which are before me, and most proper to be insert: But this Process is swelled so much that I pass it, and come forward now to some more Instances from the Criminal Procedure this Year.

In June the Circuit sat at Glasgow and Air, &c. where several Persons were executed. and a good many forfeited, and many more remitted to Edinburgh; but the Accounts of those are so large, that they deserve a Section by themselves, especially when this is so much swelling; and indeed most Part that I am afterwards to account for in this Section, is with Relation to Persons discovered and attacked at the Circuits.

The Person who falls next in Order, comes in upon another Score, Andrew Guilan. He was the only Person I can hear of who suffered precisely upon the Archbishop's Death. Hackstoun of Rathillet, as we have heard, was taken actually resisting at Airs-moss, but neither he nor this Man were active in the Bishop's Murder. Andrew Guilan was a Weaver who lived near Magus-muir, and all his Share in the Action was, that being called out of his House, he held their Horses, and was Witness to what was done. After this he was obliged to abscond, and served the best way he might in Country Houses, at some Distance from the Place where he had lived formerly. I have some Letters under his Hand, writ by him after he was taken August this Year, whereby he appears to be a Country Man of some Knowledge and Seriousness. In one of them he gives Account to his Friend, that he was taken upon the 11 of June, when at his Work with a Country Man. The Curate of the Parish came by, and asked him where he was upon the Lord's Day, and if he kept the Church. Andrew told he did not own him, and would give him no Account of himself; whereupon the Curate called for some People thereabout, and seized him, and carried him to Cockpen, where he was pressed to drink the King's Health, which he refusing, saying he drank no Healths, he was carried to Dalkeith, and there put in Prison, and from thence taken into Edinburgh, where, after Examination, he was put into the Iron-house. All this Time nothing was known as to his being present at the Bishop's Death.

1683.

While he was at Edinburgh some Rumour of his being there, broke out; but they had not the least Probation, till, as I am informed, the Advocate trepanned him into a Confession. At one of his Examinations he was most pathetically aggravating the Crime as a horrid Murder, and directing himself to Andrew, he represented among other Things, that when the Bishop was upon his Knees praying, they should have killed him; this, it seems, touched the simple Country Man so, that he got up his Hands and cried out, O! dreadful! he would not pray one Word for all that could be said to him. Upon this, and what further they elicit from him, I find him staged before the Justiciary.

July 12. he is indicted.

July 12. Andrew Guilan Weaver in Balmerinoch indicted, that with others May 3. 1679. he stopped the Bishop's Coach, and shot at him, or that he was present when it was done, and was in Arms, and fled with the rest, and that Night gave Thanks to God for that execrable Murder. For Probation the Advocate adduceth his own Confession.

His Confession.

Edinburgh, July 10. Andrew Guilan confesseth judicially, that Morning when the Company came to the Muir, Rathillet came and took him out; declares he was present in the Company, concurring with the rest when the Archbishop was killed; that he had a Sword, that he was with them in the Evening when one prayed, he thinks it was James Russel, and blessed God for their Success; declares he cannot write. By his Letters under his Hand I am sure he could write, and in them I find he declines to own the Authority of the Chancellor, and his Judges, and I imagine this Confession of his is gathered up out of what they got him to say before them, which I do not think he would sign. However thus it stands in the Records.

His Sentence.

The Assize bring him in guilty of the Bishop's Death by his own Confession, and he is sentenced to be taken to the Cross of Edinburgh upon Friday July 20. and to have both his Hands cut off at the Foot of the Gallows, and then hanged, his Head to be cut off and fixed at Cowpar, and his Body to be carried to Magus-muir, and hung up in Chains.

His last Speech is published more than once, and therein he denies he dies as a Murderer, tho' it be laid to his Charge that he joyned with those who executed Justice upon a Judas, who sold the Kirk of Scotland for Fifty thousand Merks a Year, and vindicates their Deed. It was noticed that he endured the Torture he was put to with a great deal of Courage. In cutting off his Hands the Hangman, being drunk, or affecting to appear so, mangled him fearfully, and gave Nine Strokes before he got them off. He endured all with invincible Patience, and it is said, when his right Hand was cut off, he held up the Stump in the View of the Spectators, crying as one perfectly easy, My blessed Lord sealed my Salvation with his Blood, and I am honoured this Day to seal his Truths with my Blood.

After his Body had hung in Chains for some Time, some People came and took it down, for which the Country about was brought to no small Trouble. I find May 27. 1684. The Council grant a Commission to the Earl of Balcarras to pass a Sentence of Banishment on the Persons who took down Andrew Guilan's Body from Magus-muir, as being Owners of the horrid Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews.

Process against Edward Atkin.

The same Day, July 12. the Process of Edward Atkin was before the Justiciary. He lived in the Abbey-town of Crawford-john. He went out of Scotland with Earl'stoun as a Servant, and his Guide, and was taken with him at Newcastle. He is indicted for treasonable Converse with a Rebel. He confesseth he knew Gordon of Earl'stoun, and guided him through Clyde, and hath conversed with him sensyne, and blesses God for the Converse he hath had with him, tho' he be a declared Rebel, and comes in the King's Mercy. The Assize bring him in guilty by his own Confession of Converse with Alexander Gordon of Earl'stoun, and doing Favours to him, tho' he knew him to be a forfeited and condemned Traitor. The Lords sentence him to be hanged at the Grass-market, on Friday 20 of July instant. This is severe enough, which yet we see very common at this Time, to Persons of greater Rank than he.

Most part now of the Processes to the End of this Year, in the Criminal Books, are with relation to Gentlemen, who had been delated and put in the porteous Rolls before the Circuits, and were obliged to come in to Edinburgh, and appear before the Justiciary. Those of them who could swallow the Test, are dismissed, and others are bound over to after Appearances.

Gentlemen dismissed from Criminal Processes upon taking the Test.

July 18. Sir Thomas Hope of Craighall, Skene of Halyards elder, with many other Lothian Gentlemen, are indicted for Converse with Rebels, and resetting them on their Lands, of which, in some Measure, one way or other, the whole Gentry, East, West, and South, were chargeable. And upon their taking the Test they are dismissed. The same Day Holburn of Menstrie, and many other Gentlemen with him, are indicted the same way, and dismissed upon their taking the Test.

Process against the Laird of Monkland.

July 24. a very remarkable Process comes on as to the Laird of Monkland, wherein he was dealt with very harshly, and I shall give an Abstract of it as it stands in the Records. This Gentleman is indicted, for being with four Servants at Schaw-muir, June 1679. keeping a Council of War with the Murderers of the Bishop of St. Andrews, that he conversed with them, entertained them at his House; that he entertained and received Rent from Tenants after ter they had been at Bothwell. ' After the reading of his Indictment, Monkland made a most ingenuous Acknowledgment of Matters as they stood, and declared, ' that all his Life he lived as a peaceable and loyal Subject, that he never had been at Conventicles, that he had obeyed his Majesty's Laws, that he never designed to rise in Arms or Rebellion; but the Rebels being in great Numbers near his House, and hearing that one of his Children of seven Years of Age had strayed towards them, he went out to bring back his Child, which he did, thinking it no Crime, and if it be, he comes in the King's Will. ' The Process continued till to morrow.

Next Day the Advocate declares, ' that he insists against the Pannel that he was at Schaw-head-muir and Hamiltoun with the Rebels who were in Arms, that he stayed with them a whole Day, that severals of them rode in Company with him, that he conversed familiarly with them, particularly with two of his own Servants, one of them now a Captain, that after the Defeat he conversed with those Rebels whom he saw in the Rebellion, and so to him were notour Rebels. ' His Process is yet delayed till next Day. Every Body must see how invidious this Process was. Monkland lived within a very little to Bothwell, and the West-country Army were all about him; unless he had left his own House and that Country, it was impossible for him to escape Converse, and he did no more than all the Gentlemen in his Circumstances behoved to do, and upon this score only he is proceeded for his Life, when nothing else contrary to the present Laws could be laid to his Charge.

July 26. the Advocate for Monkland protests, that the Pannel had come in the King's Mercy, and whatever be the Event of the Process, he still offers his Life and Estate to be disposed as his Majesty thinks fit; that always denying the Libel, his going to Schaw-head-muir was altogether accidental; that he had still been orderly and loyal, that he kept his Parish Church, paid Cess, fled his House when the Rebels came, and retired till the Rebels were decamped from Schaw-head-muir; when coming to his House about 5 at Night on Tuesday, and calling for his only Son, a Boy of seven Years of Age, was told he was a missing for some Hours, and that they had been seeking him without finding him, he concluded some Herds had carried him to Schaw-head-muir, where there was a Crowd of Spectators upon the Rebels; that he went thither and found him, and put him behind his Servant, and did not, when there, mix, march, nor rendezvous with the Rebels, but remained at Distance from them, and in half an Hour returned, and so cautious was he, that next Morning he left his own House, went secretly into Hamiltoun, where he lay hid for three Days, and found Means there to send earnest Desires to his Brother in Law, who was with the Rebels, to leave them, as an Enterprize which would be ruining: And all this is offered to be proven as sufficient to elide the Libel.

Debates upon
Monk and's
Case.

The Advocate replies, that the Act libelled was treasonable, and the Circumstances could never palliate nor alter it; that the Circumstances prove only quo animo he went, which he was not at all obliged to enquire into; that he was held and reputed to be with the Rebels, and went to them to make his Servant a Captain, and reset his Servants afterwards, which is a greater indicium animi than the Circumstances pretended, which might have been done dolose.

It is answered by the Pannel's Lawiers, that it is offered to be proven he only made Enquiry after his Son, and did not converse with Rebels, and perswaded others to relinquish them, and that, as soon as he got his Son, he removed; that as to his Converse with Rebels afterward, they were not convict in Law, nor denounced at the Head-burgh of the Shire, and by Act 126. Parl. 12. Jam. VI. though Rebels be denounced upon Act of Adjournal at the Cross of Edinburgh, and this operate against the Person himself, yet without its being done at the Head-burgh of the Shire, the Subjects are in bona fide. Lastly, that the Rebels condescended on, embrace the King's Indemnity, and so Converse with them is not Treason.

After these Reasonings the Lords, by their Interlocutor, ' sustain the Dittay relevant as it declares the Pannel was at Schaw-muir with the Rebels when in Arms, and was riding and walking amongst them; that his seeing them he conversed with in the Rebellion was sufficient to make them notorious Rebels as to him, tho' not denounced at the Head-burgh of the Shire. ' How far this is flatly in face of the Act of Parliament last cited, I must leave to Lawyers: But this I am sure of, the first Part of the Interlocutor would have reached Thousands as well as this Gentleman. However, the Matter is remitted to an Assize.

Before the Probation is led, the Pannel confesseth he was at Schaw-head-muir, riding and walking with the Rebels; that he saw Two at the Rebellion, with whom he afterward conversed, and from whom he received Rent; declares his Penitence, and comes in the King's Will. The Advocate declares, that he is commanded by the Council not to receive the Pannel in Will, after he hath debated.

And so Probation is adduced, and Witnesses depone they saw him at Schaw-head-muir conversing with the Rebels; and one of them depones he saw a Cup in his Hand. One of the Witnesses, Thomas Forrest, when posed, declared he was not worth the King's Unlaw, and yet the Lords receive him as a Witness. It was July 30. when the Assize find him guilty, and

Probation:

Sentence:

H h h h

1683. the Lords adjudge him to be beheaded at the Cross of Edinburgh, August 10. next, and he is forfeited in common Form.

When this Gentleman's Estate is taken from him, and his Life brought in Hazard by a Sentence, Interest is made for him before the Council, and they reprieve him; and, August 21. the Chancellor writes the following Letter to the Secretary.

Right Honourable,

‘THere being a Petition addressed to his Majesty's Privy Council, by Robert Hamilton late of Monkland, and the Council being informed by the Justices, that all alongst his Trial, he offered to come in his Majesty's Will, and pass from any legal Defences, and offered to take the Test, they thought fit to recommend him to his sacred Majesty for a Remission, and to desire your Lordship in their Name to interpose.’

How this came to be delayed, I know not, but, December 6. I find Robert Hamilton of Monkland reprieved until the last Friday of April next, in order to the expeding of his Remission. April 3. Robert Hamilton petitions to be liberate, in regard of his valctudinary Condition, and Gravel. The Lords reprieve the Sentence of Death he is under, till the second Friday of November. After that I meet with no more about him in the Registers.

Remarks on this Gentleman's Treatment.

This Gentleman was as hardly dealt with as many; nothing was proven but necessary Converse with the West-country Army. He was defrauded of Eight Years Rent of his Estate, which amounted to 16000 Pounds; he was imprisoned Seventeen Weeks, and left his Business at Edinburgh, which was better than his Estate. Mean while, he was regular, and had not given the least Evidences of what was reckoned Disloyalty. This Oppression and hard Dealing afflicted him so, that he sickned and died, and his Son, at the Revolution, was obliged to sell the Half of his Estate.

Multitudes forced to take the Test.

I go on to give what I meet with further in the Justiciary Registers. July 24. a great Number of Persons, indicted by the porteous Rolls for the Rebellion and Refet of Rebels, about Fourteen Gentlemen, and near a Hundred Commoners take the Test, and are dismissed. We shall have a great deal of this, this Year and the following.

A great many refused, and are brought to much Trouble.

The same Day, another Set of Gentlemen and others, remitted by the Justiciary Courts in the Country, appear before the Lords, and are committed to Prison, being indicted, by the porteous Rolls, for Rebellion, Refet of Rebels, and other treasonable Crimes. The Reader will easily perceive, that in such Numbers I cannot give particular Accounts. Some of them we shall afterwards meet with, others of them lay a considerable Time in Prison, and at length, by paying great Sums of Money, made Interest, and got out upon Bond; and all I can do, is to set down their Names, and the Hints I meet with about them, in the Council and Criminal Books. And indeed, very few Gentlemen on the South-side of Forth, of any Virtue and Sobriety, escaped this and the following Year: Such who had Friends in the Government and Army got easier off, and others were brought to a vast deal of Trouble and Charges.

Douchal, Aikenhead, and many others imprisoned.

Their Names who this Day were imprisoned, are, John Porterfield of Douchal, of whom before, and whom we shall afterward meet with, James Hamilton of Aikenhead, tho' I find him urged to be an Assizer at some of their Courts, Mr. Andrew Hay of Craignethan, William Bredin of Whelpshill, John Gilkers Heritor in Biggar, James Paterson in Shields, James Dunlop of Houshill, George Muirhead of Stevenson, Mr. John Banantyne of Corehouse, since the Revolution, a good many Years Minister of the Gospel at Lanerk, George Housloun of Johnstoun, John Pirrie in Nuik, Gabriel Hamilton of Westburn, Aian Wat in Kirktown, Andrew Mack in Harestocks, Donald Richmond in Harestocks, James Bruce in Nethertoun of Hamiltoun, Thomas Astoun of Aynes, James Strang, Archibald Roxburgh Shoemakers in Hamiltoun, John Muir, John Robertson, Robert Wilson, Andrew Ross, John Allan, William Paterson, John Alexander, Thomas Bows, Thomas Dinning, William Smelly, James Brown, all of them in Hamiltoun, James Muirhead of Bradisholm, James Murray Portioner of Auchinreath, John Murray there, Patrick Park Writer in Glasgow, Marcus Marshal Merchant there, Mr. Andrew Kennedy, alias Weir, of Clowburn.

Others imprisoned, July 25.

July 25. I find another good large Company sent to Prison, as indicted in the porteous Rolls, in the same Circumstances with the last named Gentlemen. John Young in Lintank, Eliezer Allan, John Allan his Son, Thomas Allan younger of Coldstream, James Young Chamberlain of Evandale, James Stuart of Hartwood, John Fisher in Covington-mill, James Creichtoun Merchant in Biggar, James Gilkerson in Side, Matthew Hamilton Son to Gavin Hamilton in Hawes, Alexander Cuninghame of Craigends, William Muir of Glanderstoun, John Anderson of Dowhill, of whom before, Alexander Muir in Pentland, Thomas Young in Cothill, John Meikle in Nuikfoot, Gavin Semple in Overtoun, John Steil elder in Brakenridge, John Cochran in Cairnduff, William Thomson in Waterhead, Alexander Hamilton in Hawes, Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock, whom we shall meet with afterward, Sir John Schaw of Greenock.
John

John Chisly of Carswell, Gavin Muirhead of Lauchop, Sir Alexander Hamilton of Hages, James Chancellor of Steilhill, Mr. John Hamilton of Halleraig, William Forrest of Mafchoch-mill, Matthew Thomson in Bothwel, John Nasmith in Allartoun, Robert Hamilton of Burnbrae, James Lowdon Littler in Hamiltoun. John Muirhead, Andrew Little, John Wright, Robert Aftoun, James Mack, William Matthei thefe, William Cook, John Lowdon in Carphin-bridgend, Mr. William Russel Chamberlain to Sir Daniel Carmichael, Sir Robert Sinclair of Stevenfon, William Baily of Lammingtoun, Alexander Durham of Duntervie, Mr. William Douglas of Bads, David Oswald of Eastbarn, Sir Patrick Hepburn of Blackcastle, Adam Cockburn of Oranstoun, Mr. James Mitchel Son to Owletson, John Flint in Breichmill, John Wallace in Clough-head, Andrew Rob in Wailfley, Mr. Patrick Inglis Portioner in Eastearns.

1683.

At the same Diet of the Justiciary Court, the following Persons are denounced. William Thomson Procurator in Lanerk, Gideon Crawford Merchant in Biggar, James Muirhead younger in Lanerk, Alexander Brown Merchant there, John Clelland Portioner of Stane, James Tompson in Harestocks, John Browning there, David Gilkerson Tenant to Mauldsley, Umphrey Stevenson in Kilmairn, John Forrest in Threppwood, Alexander Smith in Harestocks, John Scot in Cleldans, John Nasmith there, John Nasmith Shoemaker in Hamiltoun, William Bell there, John Simpson Maltman in Glasgow, Archibald Scot Smith in Gorbals, John Marshal of Chapel, Robert Murray in Overtoun, Thomas Allan Portioner in Forrest, and John Marshal in Killyth. The abovenamed Persons having been often called, to have compeared to underly the Law, for the Crimes of Treason, Rebellion, Harbour and Refet, &c. lawfully cited, and not compearing, the Lords denounce them Outlaws and Fugitives, and appoint them to be put to the Horn, and all their moveable Goods to be brought in for his Majesty's Use.

Persons denounced the same Day.

The same Day, John Hamilton of Stonehall, Thomas and James Aftouns of Mayns, James Muirhead of Bradisholm, James Hamilton of Hallside, John Hamilton of Bogs, offered themselves to abide their Trial; and no Witnesses being adduced against them, they protested against further Continuation. The Lords desert the Diet simpliciter, and yet we shall find some of them brought afterwards to no small Trouble. This Day likewise, a great many took the Test, and were dismissed.

Several offer to abide their Trial, and then Diet is deferred, and yet afterwards they are brought to Trouble.

July 30. Good Numbers of Gentlemen and others, appear, as indicted in the porteous Rolls, as formerly mentioned, and are sent to Prison. John Peltin in Whitehill of Lismahago, Archibald Crawford of Auchinmains, John Cannon of Headmark, James Gallaway of Shields, Mr. William Rankin late Schoolmaster at Air, Thomas Macneillay, John Ochiltree, John Speir there, John Forrest in Langhouse in Carlouk, Andrew Prentice, David Dykes, Andrew Hutchison of Sorn, Dunlop of that Ilk, Fergus Macrubben of Knockdallen, Fullertoun of that Ilk, David Boswel of Auchinleck, George Fullertoun of Dreghorn, Andrew Ramsay Baxter in Air, David Blair of Adamtoun, John Smith of Roddindykes, John Ramsay, Sir Daniel Carmichael of Mauldsley, and Walter Lockhart of Kirkcoun; and at this Sederunt, I find upwards of an Hundred, who had been cited, took the Test, most of them common People.

Persons imprisoned, July 30.

Some of the indulged Ministers come next on the Field. They had been insert in the porteous Rolls, and remitted by the Circuit to Edinburgh, and I shall give all I meet with concerning them here. August 2. Mr. Robert Miller indulged at Ochiltree, Mr. John Campbell, Mr. Anthony Schaw, Mr. John Veitch, Mr. Robert Boyd, Mr. William Baily of Hardingtoun and Mr. James Veitch, indulged Ministers, appear, and are indicted of the treasonable Crimes contained in their Dittays respective, in the porteous Rolls. The Lords ordain Mr. Anthony Schaw, and Mr. John Veitch, to be carried to Prison in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and continue the Diet against the rest, until the Second Munday of November. We shall find Mr. Anthony Schaw let out in a fews Days.

Aug. 2. the indulged Ministers with in writ out, appear and are indicted and are to meet.

I meet not with them again till December 10. when I find that Mr. Veitch's Diet is deferred on Caution, that he compear when called, and the rest are continued till December 17. when Mr. Robert Miller appears, and hath his Indictment read, charging him of Converse with such as had been at Bothwel, and he offers himself to abide Trial. The King's Advocate declares he is not ready to insist, and was well informed the Pannel had behaved himself dutifully and loyally, in reading his Majesty's Proclamation and Declaration anent the Plot, which, as we shall hear, all the indulged Ministers did, and preaching against it. The Lords ordain him to find Caution under Three thousand Merks, to appear when called.

In December, the indulged Ministers appear again, and are variously dealt with.

Mr. Robert Boyd is known to have been notoriously loyal, and that he refused to read the Rebels Declaration, and there being no Probation against him, the Lords desert the Diet simpliciter. The other Two are continued till the 19. This same Day the Lords find, that Mr. William Baily of Hardingtoun hath departed this mortal Life, and his Diet is deferred. December 19. Mr. James Veitch, and Mr. John Campbell, indulged Ministers, are remitted by the Lords of Justiciary to the Privy Council, and the Advocate is ordered to pursue them, and they find Caution to appear, and we shall meet with several others of them next Year.

1683.

Gentlemen
and others imprisoned,
Dec. 19.

That same Day the following Persons were sent to Prison, in the Manner, and upon the Accounts foresaid. James McEwen in Stewartoun, Robert Johnstoun, Robert Murray, and Alexander Hume of Abbey, are ordered to be carried Prisoners to Haddingtoun. William Her Uncle to Greenhead, John Scot of Wool, Mr. Francis Gladstones of Whitelaw, George Douglas of Bonjedburgh, Gideon Scot of Waterside, George Ramsay of Idington, John Douglas of Stonehouse, John Grierson of Barjard, William Glendonning of Partan: Some of those were Papists, if I mistake not, who were so honest as to refuse the Test, and as to them there was no Hazard under this Administration. These were ordered to Edinburgh Prison, with Sir John Riddel of that ilk, John Maxwell of Gribtoun, Robert Carlisle, James Lindsay, James Hume Brother to Bassinden, Hugh Dunbar of Knockshinnoch, and Robert Nisbet of Greenholm.

Others declared Fugitives.

That same Day, about Thirty Persons, mostly Tradesmen and Country People, were declared Fugitives. I need not insert their Names, since in a little Time the fugitive Rolls were printed, and they will have a Room in the Appendix; only I find in the same Day's Records Burnet of Carlops, Turnbul of Know, and Six or Seven meaner Persons, are denounced and fugitate upon Noncompearance.

And Thomas Riddel Brother to Sir John Riddel, Mr. James Daes of Coldingknows, Walter Scot of Harwood, Sir John Scot of Ancrum, and Mr. George Scot of Pitlochrie, indicted from the porteous Rolls, for Treason, Rebellion, and Reset and Converse, being out of the Kingdom at the Circuit, their Absence is excused, and the Lords desert the Diet. At each of those Sederunts great Numbers take the Test, and are dismissed.

Lamington, Ormiston, &c. are liberate, nothing being proven against them.
Cite of William Muir of Glander-stoun.

August 7. after some Days Imprisonment, the Lairds of Lamington, Ormiston, Stevenson, Stonehouse, Shieldhill, Adamtoun, Mr. Hugh Gray of Dalruff, indicted as above, they are brought into the Pannel, and the Advocate declares, that upon a Precognition taken, he finds nothing proven against them, and therefore the Lords desert their Diet simpliciter.

We heard, upon the 25 of July, the Laird of Glanderstoun, with many others, was imprisoned. This worthy Gentleman, now Laird of Caldwell, was liberate upon the Eighth of August. His Case deserves particularly to be observed, and I am able to give it from authentic Papers he was pleased to communicate with me. That excellent Family had been by Principle Presbyterian, and remarkable for Virtue, Religion, and Usefulness; but withal managed themselves at this Time with that Caution, that they could not be reached even by the present Laws. And when a legal Footing failed, a Libel was trumped up against this Gentleman, because, in the Extremity of a Fever, Mr. Spreul an Apothecary, who was a Nonconformist, had been called to let Blood of Glanderstoun. Had I as particular Accounts of many of the Multitudes I have been naming as imprisoned just now, I can assure the Reader, they were almost all as ill founded and malicious as this Gentleman's I am now upon, and those of them I know were no ways concerned in any Thing illegal or disloyal.

His Petition to the Council.

This Gentleman's Case will best appear from his Petition to the Council, and the Act of the Justiciary, and both being short, I insert them. His Petition to the Chancellor and Council bears, 'That whereas he being indicted before the Lords of his Majesty's Justiciary, for intercommuning with James Spreul Chirurgion in Paisly, and imprisoned, yet the Petitioner is in this singular Case, that though the Libel were true and proven, yet it could not infer any Crime and Guilt against him, since he is able instantly to prove these relevant Defences, viz. 1<sup>mo</sup>. By the Books of Adjournal, that the said James Spreul was not Rebel denounced, or any Procedure against him, that could put the Lieges in mala fide. 2<sup>do</sup>. By Witnesses in Town, that the said James Spreul was so far from being held and reputed to have been at the Rebellion, that he kept at the Time libelled a publick Shop at Paisly, and was employed as Chirurgion by Persons of all Qualities, Officers of his Majesty's Army, Privy Counsellors, and particularly by the late Lord Ross in a long Sickness before the pretended Imployment by the Petitioner: And further, when he was called to me, I was in extremis under a violent Fever, so that I was neither capable to call, nor sensible to know or converse with any that was called. And de facto he was called in that extreme Necessity by your Petitioner's Wife, a Stranger in the Country, some few Months after she came thither, or by his Domesticks. In respect whereof, may it please your Lordships to recommend his Case to the Justiciary, that so innocent a Person may be liberate.'

This Petition, which was plain Fact, may give us a View how invidiously and groundlessly Gentlemen were processed for their Lives and Estates at this Time. It lets us see the Justice of the Council. Tho' they received this Petition, and some of them knew the Matters of Fact, July 26. yet the Gentleman must ly in Prison so many Days. In fine we see that the Justiciary, tho' a supreme Court at this Time, were intirely under the Direction of the Council, and Gentlemen behaved first to make the Council their Friends, and then sooner or later they would be safe before the Justiciary.

Act of Justici-
ary about him.

Whether he got a direct Recommendation to the Justiciary I know not, but his Business was done, as appears by the original Act. 'Edinburgh, August 8. 1683. which Day William Muir of Glanderstoun, entred upon Pannel, indicted and accused for resetting Rebels, in so 1683.

so far as James Spreul, Apothecary in Paisly, a notorious Rebel, was actually in the Rebellion 1679. and having thereafter returned, was harboured, entertained, assisted, aided, supplied, and done Favours to, and had Lodging, Meat, and Drink from him, and also conversed with William Cunningham of Bootsoun, in Manner mentioned in his Dittay. Compeared Sir George Mackenzie his Majesty's Advocate, as Pursuer, and the said William Muir of Glanderstoun, with Mr. Archibald Hope of Rankeilor, Advocate, his Procurator, and declared he was altogether innocent of the Libel led, and offered to abide a legal Trial for clearing hereof. And as to the Reset of William Cunningham of Bootsoun, the same was no Crime, the said William being a most loyal Subject, and a Person who was actually in his Majesty's Service against the said Rebels, which he hath proven in Presence of the Lords of Justiciary. And as to the Reset of James Spreul, that the Time when he came to his House, he was in an high Fever, and in the Hazard of his Life, and was sent to without his Knowledge by his Lady, and how soon he let Blood of the Defender, he immediately returned Home. And for proving of this, adduced several famous Witnesses, who being solemnly sworn, and the Lord Justice Clerk and Commissioners of the Justiciary having considered all, find the said William Muir of Glanderstoun his Defence sufficiently proven, and therefore deserted, and by thir Presents desert the Diet simpliciter, and declare his Cautioneer free. Whereupon he asked and took Instruments. Extracted out of the Books of Adjournal by me Mr. Thomas Gordon Clerk to the Justice Court.

Thomas Gordon.

By the Registers I find, the same Day the Laird of West-burn is liberate upon his Petition to be tried, nothing being found against him in the Precognition. Chiefly of Carfswell and the Laird of Aiken-head are set at Liberty, upon their giving Bond and Caution, under large Sums, to compear in November. Alexander Dunlop of that ilk is liberate upon his Resignation of those Lands upon which he had reset Rebels, and a Bond of Ten Thousand Pounds to appear in November next. There were a great many Instances of this iniquous and oppressive Resignation of Lands into the Managers Hands, in this Period. The Laird of Clofburn, being ill of the Gravel, was let out of Prison upon his giving Bond under Ten Thousand Merks to compear in November. William Ker, Lauchop, Haggs, and Gribtoun are liberate on Bonds to appear in November. The same Day the Lairds of Johnstoun, Hume of Abbey, Sir John Riddell, Fullartoun and his Brother are likewise liberate.

West-burn, Carfswell, Aiken head, Dunlop, and others liberate, Aug. 8.

August 9. Many others, who were before imprisoned, as we have heard, Sir John Maxwell, the Laird of Hartwood, Houshill, Mr. Anthony Schaw, and about Sixty others are liberate by the Lords of the Justiciary, upon the Production of an Act of Council, before whom, it seems, they had found Caution to compear when called. The Reason the Council give, is that the Probation against them is not ready, and the Prisons are throng. Some others whom they designed shortly to be at, were confined to their Chambers in Edinburgh.

Sir John Maxwell, Hartwood, Houshill, and others liberate upon Caution August 9.

August 21. Sir Daniel Carmichael of Mauldsley is liberate from Prison, upon Bond of Twenty thousand Pounds to appear when called, and Lockhart of Kirkstoun is liberate upon Bond to compear the second Wednesday of December next, under Penalty of Four thousand Merks.

August 21 Sir Daniel Carmichael and Lockhart of Kirkstoun liberate.

Earlstoun's Process before the Justiciary is very short, upon the same Day. They proceed upon the former Sentence, and only name the Day for Execution. The Lords find the Pannel, Alexander Gordon of Earlstoun, was found guilty of Treason by an Assize, February 19. 1680. and adjudged to be executed and demeaned as a Traitor, when taken; being now apprehended, he is sentenced to be beheaded at the Cross of Edinburgh, September 28. next. This is all I find about this Gentleman in the Criminal Records.

Alexander Gordon of Earlstoun sentenced to die upon Sep. 28.

In the Council Registers there is much about him, but I shall not enter into any larger Detail of his Affair. He was taken going to Holland the last of May, or first of June this Year, which made a mighty Noise, and People thought a great Discovery would have been made; every Body was upon the Scent and Chase as to the Plot against the King's Life, and the Council and Bishops hoped for Wonders out of Earlstoun's Papers, but there was nothing of that Kind to be found in them. The real Account of that Matter in short stands thus.

The State of his Case.

Earlstoun had been abroad very much since Bothwell; he came Home this Spring, and joyned himself to the Society People, where he was safest from falling into the Managers Hands. In April or May, at one of their general Meetings at Edinburgh, I find, by the original Records of the Societies, that he was pitched upon by the general Meeting to go again to Holland, and joyned in a Commission with Robert Hamilton Brother to the Laird of Preston, his Brother in Law, for representing the true Condition of these People and their Principles to the Reformed Churches abroad. I have before me the Copies of their Commission and Instructions, and several Letters and Representations they sent with him, too long to be insert here, but they have no Relation at all to the English Plot.

He is sent to Holland by the Society People.

I find by an original Letter in my Hands from Earlstoun to the Societies, dated New-gate, June 9. this Year, that when he had got safe to Newcastle with Edward Atkin his Servant, formerly

And taken at New-gate.

1683.

formerly spoke of, and was aboard a Ship for Holland, some Waiters came and challenged them being Strangers. Earlstoun fearing the Seizure of the Papers he had with him, dropt them into the Sea, where they were noticed, and taken up, and both of them seized and sent up to Newgate, whence they with the Papers were sent down to Scotiana to be tried.

Council's Letter about him June 2. to the Mayor of Newcastle.

June 2. the Council write a Letter to the Mayor of Newcastle upon this Affair. ' Sir, We received your Express, wherein you acquaint us with two Persons apprehended and committed to his Majesty's Goal in your Town, with whom are found several seditious Papers and Letters, and that these Persons were going beyond Sea, under the Names of Alexander Pringle and Edward Livingstone, but were by your Care prevented, and their Papers, which they attempted to destroy, preserved. Colonel Struthers also hath sent us Copies of some of these seditious Papers, the Originals whereof you have done well to send to his Majesty. We are very sensible of your Care and Zeal in his Majesty's Service, and return you Thanks for acquainting us therewith, and desire you may be pleased to detain them in separate Prisons, and continue your Care in searching for suspect Persons, guilty of pursuing seditious Courses in this Kingdom; for we have reason to believe that several Rebel-preachers, and other Fugitives from Justice, do lurk concealed in and about your Town. We shall not be wanting to inform his Majesty of your Zeal in his Service. Yours, &c.

ABERDEEN.

At the same Time they write another Letter to Colonel Struthers, signifying, ' They received his of the first Instant with the Copies of some of the Papers, thank him for it, and desire him to continue his Diligence in discovering seditious and suspect Persons in the North of England.

His Examination by the Scots Council.

The Council were very exact in the Examination of all the Papers, when sent down to them. They drew up their Queries and written Answers from Earlstoun; he was most ingenuous in giving Accounts of all he knew with respect to the Papers, as I find by a Copy of his Answers to the Council Queries, and there was indeed nothing in them save Commissions and Instructions to him and Mr. Hamilton, with Letters to some Dutch Ministers and Scotsmen in Holland, and Papers on civil Business. And after all their Endeavours to find somewhat relative to the Plot, they could fix upon nothing, for nothing was to be found of that Nature.

After the Sentence of Death is pronounced by the Justiciary, 'tis moved that Earlstoun be put to the Torture. Council's Letter to the Secretary on this, Aug. 21.

Nevertheless the Managers, after the Justiciary had renewed their former Sentence of Death upon him, resolve to put him to the Torture. And being straitened in point of Law to torture a Person under Sentence of Death, the Council write the following Letter to the Secretary, dated August 21. ' Right Honourable, Alexander Gordon late of Earlstoun having been frequently brought before, and examined by the Council, and in Committees by some of their Number, and from whom, it seems, nothing more can be had from all the Interrogatories they could propose to him, than what hath been already put in Writ, and sent to his royal Highness and your Lordship, and the Council having had under their Consideration what is further to be done anent him, he being a Person under the Sentence of Death for high Treason, thought fit, in regard there are only in Town Three of the Justices, the rest not being to be here till November, to desire your Lordship to take Advice of his Majesty's Advocate, (now at London) if by the Laws of this Kingdom, and in the Circumstances he is now in, being under the Sentence of Death, he may be put to the Question by Torture, upon such pertinent Questions as your Lordship and he shall think fit to draw up. And if he find that he may, by the Laws of this Kingdom, be now put to the Torture, that the Advocate, as soon as may be, come down himself and answer any Thing that shall happen to be objected against it by the said Earlstoun, or send a Commission to some fit Person to do it for him in Absence, against the next Council Day, September 11. with such Interrogatories as shall be thought fit to be proposed, that the Council may do Justice in that Matter. The Justices having met this Day have given us an Account, that they have appointed the 28 Day of September for putting the Sentence of Death in execution against Earlstoun. I am, &c.

Aberdeen Cancel. I. P. D.

The Secretary's Answer, Sept. 14.

An Answer came not to this Letter until September 20. when a Letter from Middleton Secretary, dated September 14. to the Chancellor, is read, and follows. ' My Lord, In answer to yours of the 21. of August, I am now by the King's Command to acquaint your Lordship, that his Majesty in a full Quorum of his Privy Council of Scotland now here, proposed to his Advocate, whether Alexander Gordon late of Earlstoun, notwithstanding of his being condemned to die, might be put to the Question by Torture. His Answer was, That tho' no Man can be put to Torture upon Interrogatories only relating to the Cause for which he was condemned, yet he may be tortured with relation to Plots, Conspiracies, and Combinations that have happened after the Time when the Crimes were committed for which he was condemned. And since 'tis undeniable that the said Alexander Gordon did accept a reasonable sonable Commission from Rebels, and it doth appear by a Letter direct to him from J. N. dated at London, March 20. last, that he was privy to the late horrid Conspiracy against his Majesty's Person and Government, and yet refuseth to give an Account either of those from whom he received the said Commission, or such as he knows were accessory to the said Conspiracy, and both these Points being of so great Consequence for the future Security of his Majesty's Person and Government, it was therefore resolved by his Majesty, that the said Alexander Gordon shall be put to the Torture, and interrogate on what may pertinently relate to these Two Heads, to wit, as to those who have had Accession to the granting the said Commission, or the said Conspiracy, of which it is his Majesty's Pleasure you acquaint the Lords of his Privy Council. I am, &c.

1683.

MIDDLETON.

In pursuance of the above Letter, the Council that same Day nominate the Marquis of Douglas, Earls of Tweddale, Wintoun, and Linlithgow, the Lord Livingstone, General Dalziel, the President, Lord Collingtoun and Castlehill, or any Five of them, as a Committee to meet Tuesday next, at Ten of the Clock Forenoon in the ordinary Place, and consider the Interrogatories to be put to the said Alexander Gordon, and see him questioned in the Torture upon them, and others arising from them, and generally with Power to them to do all Things requisite to that Purpose, as they shall see fitting; and ordain all the Members of the Justice Court to be present, and Mr. George Bannerman, as having Commission from the Advocate, to draw Interrogatories pertinent relating to the said two Heads, and to be present with the Committee.

Committed named to draw Interrogatories, and put them to him in Torture.

Accordingly, September 25. the foresaid Counsellors examine Earlstoun, with the Instrument of Torture standing by, but did not apply it, he protesting he would be as ingenuous and more full than he could be in Torture. The Interrogatories and his Answers are already printed in Doctor Sprat, late Bishop of Worcester, his Account of the Rye-house Plot, tho' with some Mistakes; and so I shall not say any Thing of them here, but that neither the Plot against the King's Life, nor the Design of Rising could be fixed on this Gentleman, or the People who sent him, who really knew nothing of the Matter.

Sept 25. the Interrogatories put to him, but Torture not applied.

All I find further in the Registers upon this Gentleman's Case is, November 23. 'Upon a new Letter from the King, the Council order Earlstoun yet to be put to the Torture: But when he is brought in, he appears to be in Distraction, and Physicians were called to consider his Case. November 27. the Physicians report he is affected with that Distemper called alienatio mentis, and advise he may be sent to the Castle, that by the Change of the Air his Case may be better known. December 7. Earlstoun petitions for pious Divines to be sent to him, that he may have their Benefit before his Death, and as a dying Man declares his Innocence of any Plot against his Majesty, prays for the King, and adheres to the Answers he gave to the Interrogatories. He is reprieved till the last Friday of January. January 17. Earlstoun's Reprieve is continued till the last Friday of April, and his Petition for Pardon transmitted to the Secretary. April 11. he is reprieved again till December. And in May he is sent to the Bast for his Health. In September following he is made close Prisoner. Thus he continued confined sometimes with more Liberty, and sometimes less, with his excellent Lady, until he was liberate by the Revolution. And all the Endeavours of the Bishops and Managers, to fix the Plot against the King's Person upon Scots Presbyterians, came to nothing.

He continues in Prison till the Revolution.

To return again to the Proceedings of the Justiciary, the same Day that Earlstoun received Sentence, they order 'the Lady Moristoun, a pious and sensible Gentlewoman, to go forth out of the Kingdom before the First of November, and appoint this to be intimate to her.' No more is to be found about her in the Registers. She appears not to have been cited, or any Probation led against her, but summarily is banished for her Respect to the Gospel and Sufferers.

Lady Moristoun ordered to leave the Country without any Label.

Upon the last of August the Council grant Commission to Mr. George Bannerman Advocate, in Absence of his Majesty's Advocate, to pursue a Process of Forfeiture before the Justiciary against Mr. John Dick and George Lapsley. And September 4. I find them both indicted before the Criminal Court, and Mr. John Dick condemned to be hanged at the Grass-market, September 28. But the Escape of the Prisoners, spoken of before, September 16. prevented the Execution for some Time, and I shall delay the Account of Mr. Dick's Process till next Year, when he again falls into their Hands.

Mr. John Dick and George Lapsley, before the Justiciary.

It seems, at this Diet the Court had not Time to come to a Sentence against George Lapsley, and I find no more about him in the Registers. He escaped with the rest of the Prisoners, and was not again caught. From an attested Account of his Sufferings, I give what follows. He was for some considerable Time Miller in Linlithgow Mill, and, among Multitudes of others, had a real Change wrought on him by the Gospel preached in the Fields. At Bothwell he was shot through the Leg, and made Prisoner. When before a Committee of the Council, he was very bold in his Answers to their Interrogatories. Bishop Paterson attacked him first, and when he asked, if he thought Bothwell-bridge Rebellion, he answered,

Some further Account of George Lapsley.

1683.

His Examination before a Committee of the Council.

swered, Sir, you are a perjured Prelate, I'll answer you no Questions. He did not refuse to answer the other Lords of the Committee, as appears by the following Hint of what passed.

Question. Wherefore are you in Prison? Answer. For hearing the Gospel. Quest. Do you go to Church? Ans. No. Quest. Wherefore? Ans. Because they are not the sent Ministers of Christ, and because of their Perjury. Quest. Will you own the King's Authority? Ans. According to the Word of God and Covenants, and no otherwise, which you have broken and burnt, for which the Lord will be avenged. Quest. Did you write to Mr. Dick? Ans. Yes. Quest. Who wrote the Letter? Ans. I will give no Account. Quest. Was the Bishop's Death Murder? Ans. I am not concerned with his Life or Death either. Quest. Was Hackstoun's Death a Murder? Ans. Yes, and all those whose Lives you have taken these Two and twenty Years. Quest. Was you at Bothwell-bridge? Ans. I will not accuse my self. Quest. What thought you of it? Ans. I thought it Duty and not Rebellion, and all that were on the contrary Party were in Rebellion against God, and that ye will find. Quest. Did you converse with Mr. Welsh? Ans. Yes, and I bless God for it. Quest. What Book is that under your Arm? (he had been brought in suddenly before the Committee, when he had been reading the Bible in Prison, and he had it with him.) Ans. It is the Acts of the Parliament of Heaven, and I charge you as ye shall answer at the great Day, when ye and I shall stand in equal Terms, that you judge me according to what is contained in it. Quest. Is it lawful to resist the King's Forces at the Field-meetings? Ans. Yes, the Law of Nature allows Self-defence, and the Word of God and our Covenants, to stand to the Defence of one another.

It was much, after such bold Answers, that he was not condemned, and had not the breaking of Prison prevented it, no doubt Sentence would have been pronounced; but he escaped, and lived a Merchant in Edinburgh for many Years after the Revolution.

By this Time the Justices seem wearied of their long and close Attendance, and the Multitudes they had before them, and therefore, September 19. they empower the Clerk to take Caution of the meaner Commons in the fugitive Roll, or Bonds, if they cannot find Caution for their Appearance, of an Hundred Merks each, and thereupon to relax them. And November 12. an Act of Council is produced of that Day's Date, empowering the Justices to prorogate the Diets of such as were liberate in July, and yet enacted to appear at this Time, until such Diets as they find best, with respect to such Persons as the Advocate declares he is not in a Readiness to prosecute; and that Day Diets are deserted in a great many Processes for Sodomy, Adultery, Murder, Theft, &c. and Multitudes of Gentlemen and Heritors, referred to this Diet for Accession to the Rebellion, Reset, and Converse, are continued, and some deserted simpliciter, just as they procured Interest with the Managers, and paid Sums of Money to the Advocate and others, to get favourable Sentences.

November 28: Three Country Men are indicted before the Justiciary, for Treason, and being at Bothwell. I know no further about them, but what is in the Records of the Criminal Court. They had been before the Council November 26. and no Probation is adduced, but their own Answers there to the Interrogatories propounded, and all the Three are hurried into Eternity, November 30. for their Accession to that Rising, now near Five Years ago. They were Persons from whom the Government had nothing to fear, and their Blood was shed, for what I can see, merely out of Love to Blood. Their Process stands thus in short.

John Whitelaw, some time in Stand, in New-monkland in the Shire of Lanerk, is indicted as above. For Probation his Confession is read to him, and is in short, 'John Whitelaw declares he thinks Bothwell-bridge lawful, that Rising being in Defence of the Gospel. He thinks himself and these Three Nations bound by the Covenants. That it is above his Reach to tell whether the King be lawful King or not. Confesseth he was some time with the Rebels at Bothwell, but not at the Battle, and that he had a Sword. Refuses to say God save the King, this not being a proper Place for Prayer, and if it mean his owning his Authority, he has spoken as to that already. Declares he can write, but will not sign what is above. Being interrogate if his Judges were lawful Judges, and if the Archbishop's Death was Murder, he answers, those Questions are above his Reach.'

Arthur Bruce in Dalserf, in the same Shire of Lanerk, is next indicted, and his Confession adduced as Probation. 'Arthur Bruce confesseth he was at Bothwell, and had a Sword; that he was with the Party who took away one of Dalziel's Horses; refuses to say God save the King, but said, God save all the Election of Grace; declares he cannot say whether the Archbishop's Death was Murder or not.'

John Cochran, Shoemaker in Lesmabago, sisted as above, confesseth, 'That he was at Drumclog and Bothwell-bridge, and had a Fork; refuses to pray for the King, or own him as his lawful King, will not tell what he thinks of the Bishop's Death.' The Affize bring them all Three in guilty, by their own Confession, of being in the Rebellion, and they are sentenced to be executed at the Cross Friday next, November last.

The Sentence was executed, their Speeches at their Death are remaining, and that of the last published in the Cloud of Witnesses, and therein he acknowledges the King's Authority, in

The Clerk of the Justiciary empowered to take Caution of the meaner Sort, and others, against whom the Advocate is not ready to insist, are delisted.

Process against Three Country Men for being at Bothwell, Nov. 28.

John Whitelaw in Stand.

Arthur Bruce in Dalserf.

John Cochran in Lesmabago.

They are executed, Nov. 30.

in as far as, according to the Word of God, he observes, to the Support of all in a suffering Lot, that when the Storm blew hardest, the Smiles of God were sweetest, and died, leaving his Wife and Six Children, with much Confidence, on the Lord, in much Peace and Comfort, as likewise did the other Two.

I find the Lairds of Partan and Barjarg, the first is a Papist, what the other is I know not, appear before the Justiciary for refusing the Test, and Converse with Fugitives. The Lords, December 3. find their Fathers were useful to his Majesty's Service, and they order them to be liberate, and desert the Diet simpliciter.

December 10. a good many Gentlemen and others, mostly from the West Country, appear before the Justiciary, Sir John Schaw of Greenock, in the Shire of Renfrew, John Anderson of Dovehill, Mr. George Skirvin, Chamberlain of Kinniel, James Young Chamberlain of Evandale, and about Sixteen others, and are itaged for Treason, Rebellion, and doing Favours to Rebels. The Advocate declares he is not ready to insist against them. The Lords oblige them to find Caution to appear when called, and liberate them.

The same Day Mr. Andrew Hay, George Ramsay of Idington, John Porterfield of Douchall, Sir Patrick Hepburn of Blackcastle, Sir Daniel Carmichael, and several others, are continued to several Diets in March and April next, and we shall meet with several of those next Year, under new and severe Sufferings; and with those Gentlemen Twelve other Country People, upon their giving Bond under Five hundred Merks, to compear when called, are liberate.

At the same Diet it is represented to the Justiciary, in the Petitions of a great many Country People, from all Quarters of the Country, that merely out of Malice they were put into the porteous Rolls, as guilty of Reset and Converse with Rebels: The Lords find it is so with relation to severals, and the Diets of such are deserted, and the Diets of others of them continued; but I remark no Rule is laid down to prevent this in after porteous Rolls. That same Day about Twenty, who being cited to this Diet, and yet compeared not, were declared Fugitives and put to the Horn.

December 17. as to Mr. Matthew Campbel in Air, the Lords desert the Diet simpliciter, because no Probation. Mr. Anthony Schaw is continued till January next. Multitudes this Day are continued, and as many have the Diet deserted. I find some Persons assailed by the Lords, upon their representing, that at one Circuit they were assailed by an Assize, and notwithstanding called to the next that came about, upon nothing new, and thus sadly harassed, and not compearing again, after being once or twice assailed, they have been fugitate and persecuted; the Lords order them to be liberate. A vast many Instances of this and the like Treatment might be given, and this insensibly brings me to the following Section, where an Account of the Circuits must be given.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Circuit Courts held up and down the Country, with some other Severities following them, this Year 1683.

I Have already given some general Account of those itinerary Justiciary-courts or Circuits, and shall add very little further upon this. Any Thing remaining this Year relative to the Circuits, comes best in after the Proceedings of the Justiciary at Edinburgh, and had all their Proceedings in the Country been recorded in the Registers, as a few of them this Year are, I should have been able to give a full Account of them; but it is only a few Hints are there, and therefore I am obliged to give any Accounts I have from other Informations, still taking in all that offers from the Registers themselves.

One would think, there was never less Need of Circuit-courts than at this Juncture; No Need of Field-conventicles were at present quite given over, and there were but few House-preachers. Major White, Claverhouse, and others, were clothed with a Justiciary Power in their several Jurisdictions; but the Managers resolved to have the whole Country, who were not actively involved with themselves, some way or other made obnoxious, and brought within their Reach.

Accordingly, after the Scheme is formed at Edinburgh, and transmitted to London, a Letter from the King comes down, and is read April 10. bearing, 'That the King was glad to learn, from the Accounts lately sent him of the State of Affairs in his ancient Kingdom, how successful Methods the Council had fallen upon for settling the Peace, and reducing People to Order and Conformity; and could not but signify how much he was satisfied with their Procedure.' And then goes on in the Terms of the printed Proclamation just now to be named.

1683.

Papists dissuaded, Dec. 3.

The Lairds of Creech, Dovehill, and others delayed upon Caution to compear.

Others delayed till March and April next.

The Lords find severals put in the porteous Rolls from Malice.

Dec. 17. others have their Diets deserted, and others are continued till next Year, and thus assailed upon their Maltreatment before the Circuits.

What is done in the Circuits through the Country, is very seldom recorded.

No Need of Circuits this Year.

King's Letter April 10. about Circuits.

1683.

Proclamation
April 13 appointing Circuit Courts.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 87.
Observes upon
it.

Upon the Receipt of this, April 13. the Council publish the Proclamation appointing Circuit-courts, which being every way remarkable, and some of the After-persecution depending upon it, I have insert it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 87. and it may be some way necessary to make some Observes upon it.

Were that Account of the State of Affairs the King declares himself so much pleased with, before me, I doubt not but it would let us into some Things that are now Secrets; and it is not improbable, that the Return to the Injunctions, and Things to be done by each Minister, we shall just now hear of, gave Ground to the Managers to propose this new Inquisition of Circuits to the King. However, the Penners of this Proclamation make the King say, on the Matter, peccavi, and endeavour to cast a Slur on the Duke of Lawderdale, Monmouth, and others formerly in the Ministry, when 'tis said, the King had been too often induced to grant Indulgences, Indemnities, and other Favours; and that, in this Exigence it was fit to declare this. What made such a Declaration necessary at this juncture I know not, unless it were, that some Papists about Court found such a Confession from his Majesty, a proper Preface to a new sham Plot, or at least a violent perverting of some People's honest Struggles against the present, severe, arbitrary and oppressive Courses: But this I am sure of, Lenity was none of the Vices of this Period; and if the King had any Inclinations this way, his Brother and Servants took Care effectually to quell them. The King is made further to add, That his Favours to the fanatick [i. e. Presbyterian] and disaffected Party, had encouraged Disorders, whatever fair Hopes were given [by the Dukes of Lawderdale and Monmouth] at the granting of them. Such Thrusts come now in course in these publick Papers, and have been more than once answered. The moderate Presbyterians, yea, the Body and almost the Whole of them, could never be justly charged with any Disorder, except their Nonconformity, and refusing Subjection to Prelacy. The Rising in Arms, as hath been noticed, was forced, and what the Generality of them were not engaged in; and these who were, by this Time were sufficiently persecuted therefore, without the least Shadow of Favour, yea, with the utmost Rigour: And the Indulgences Presbyterians got, were so palpably clogged, that they fell evidently short of the good Ends they might otherwise have brought about, and few or none of them reaped any Benefit by the last Indemnity about Four Years ago; so that so great a Sputter needed not have been made about these Favours to Presbyterians; but this Part of the Proclamation speaks out the Inclinations and Language of the Prelates, who were grated and uneasy at the least Intermission of the highest Severities.

In their Stile, and agreeably to their bloody and violent Desires, the King is made further to add, It was and is now more than ever our Royal Inclination and firm Resolution, to extirpate and root out all seditious and rebellious Principles. Here is Root and Branch-work in View, no doubt in order to extirpate the Northern Heresy, which lay so near the Duke of York's Heart. The King is next brought in, as fully perswaded, that it is neither Difference in Religion, nor Tenderness of Conscience, but Principles of Disloyalty and Disaffection, that move Presbyterians; therefore the Council, Judges and Magistrates, are ordered to execute the Laws. What the Framers of this Paper mean by Difference in Religion, I know not, unless it be the Duke of York's Religion; but every Body might see, it was merely for Conscience sake that Presbyterians were suffering, and they have been abundantly vindicated from the Charge of Disloyalty.

After this bitter Satyr palmed upon the King, the Laws are appointed to be executed against all who are guilty of any fanatical Disorders and Irregularities. These are comprehensive Words, to be explained, with a Vengeance, by the Bishops and Army. Then follows a particular Clause against Refetters, Harbourers, and Conversers with forfeited Persons for Rebellion, yea, all who are put to the Horn, which was the Case of Multitudes never in the Rising, nor Refetters, &c. of such; but they were denounced precisely because they answered not at Courts, where they were almost sure to be ruined, or because they refused the Oaths now pressed.

I want that Knowledge of the Scots Law, necessary to determine whether what follows is agreeable thereto; but to me there appears, in the next Article of the Proclamation, a cunning enough Fetch in the Drawers thereof, for a further and more extensive Imposition of the Test; and this and other Letters from the King, to tender the Test to all suspect Persons, and the Proclamations following upon them, were improved that way; whereas the Act of Parliament imposes it only on those in Places and Offices of Trust: Thus again the Duke of York's Prediction, that the Test should fall upon others than Catholicks, was fulfilled. And because some of the King's Subjects may have, by Mistake, conversed with Rebels, in great Clemency it is recommended to the Council, to cite before them all suspect Persons of Reset and Converse with Rebels, and judge them; and in case they appear not, to hold them as confest, and to restrict the ordinary Pains of Treason to Banishment, Fining, and arbitrary Punishment; and upon an Absoluture, or satisfying the Council's Sentence, the said Persons are indemnified. Further, the Council are empowered to appoint whom they see good in the different Shires, for judging of Persons whom they have not Time to examine, with as much Power

Power as the Council have. Here is a vast Power, under pretext of Kindness, for an universal Oppression of the Country, by committing the Council's Power, yea, many Times a Judicial Power, to single Persons, the Sheriffs, Officers of the Army, &c. and a wide Door for pressing the Test.

1683.

Thus it follows. And because several Commons, I know not if Feuars and Heritors could be reached by this, and yet they were attacked, through Ignorance have lost the Benefit of the Indemnity, by not taking the Bond, it is statute, That their taking the Test before the Council, or any commissioned by them, shall indemnify them. Thus it generally holds, one Imposition opens the Door to another, and they get the Test in room of the Bond. It would be observed here, that most who have been concerned in Bothwell, were gone off the Country, or executed, or at least were not known to the Persecutors; and the Persecution now ran most upon Reset and Converse, and upon such as had been denounced Rebels, for not appearing at their Courts. This was a Ground of Oppression some of themselves were almost ashamed of; therefore they give it a new Turn, and make a pretended Favour this way, become a Handle for an almost general Imposition of the Test, beyond the Parliament's Design, under the Pretext of Favour, and to clear People from Suspicion: The Test, they knew well, would be a new and effectual Foot for a general Persecution of all Presbyterians.

And to force the Country to fall in with this new Imposition, as well as to make it the more general, Circuits are appointed, much in the Terms of the last Proclamation about them, where Remarks were made, which are applicable here. These were to meet at Stirling the Fifth of June, at Glasgow the Twelfth, at Air the Nineteenth, at Dumfries the Twenty sixth, &c. as in the Proclamation. Next, the Commons, in taking the Test, are ordered to do it on their Knees, and to sign it by themselves or a Notar, in presence of the Persons named in the Proclamation, who are to certify the Subscription, which is declared to be a full Indemnity. The Pretext for this new Addition, is, that some false Names were subscribed to the Bond formerly annexed to the Indemnity. The Persons thus impowered, are all Privy Counsellors, Officers of the Army, Magistrates, with a long List of others, whom the Reader will see in the Proclamation; and many of them were the great Instruments of the Persecution till it ceased. I have insisted the longer upon this Proclamation, because it appears to me to have been the great Foundation of the Persecution, till the next Parliament meet.

In order to the carrying on the Ends of these Circuits thus appointed, the Council pass this Act, April 18. which is another Specimen of the Methods used at this Time, and a Proof that it was not the King's Honour, and the Safety of the Government, which was before them, but quite other Views. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that all Persons, of whatsoever Quality or Station they be, if delated upon Oath to the Clerks of the Criminal Court, in their taking up of Dittays in order to Justice-airs, ought to be insert in the ordinary porteous Rolls. Notwithstanding, in this present Conjunction, the said Lords have thought fit to give Order and Warrant to the Clerk, not to insert in the ordinary porteous Rolls, any Noblemen, or Sheriff-principals, or Provosts of Burghs, where the said Circuit sits, as also any Persons who are already under Process before the Privy Council, or Justice-court, for Rebellion or Reset of Rebels; but that the Clerk and his Deputes shall take up all Information they can have against all Persons whatsoever. And in case any Noblemen, or Persons foresaid, be delated and given up to the said Clerks, that they keep a particular and private Roll for such Persons, which Roll the said Clerks are to keep secret, as they will be answerable, and send in those private Rolls to the Council; for all which this shall be their Warrant.' Reflections upon this are needless, the Design is plain enough.

Council's Act, April 18. about private porteous Rolls.

Next Day, April 19. a Draught of Instructions, with respect to the Circuit-courts, is produced from a Committee ordered to draw them up; and I give them just as they stand in the Council-books.

Instructions to the Commissioners of the Justiciary, at the Circuit-courts, and their Clerk, in taking up Dittays.

THAT the Sheriffs be commanded to cite some of the most intelligent Gentry, as well as Commons, and indemnified Rebels, to give up Dittay, and that the Clerk be authorized to take the Sheriff-depute's Oath that he hath done so. When any Person is given up for Rebellion, or resetting Rebels, and the Advocate is not ready to insist, or the Justices have not pregnant Presumptions of the Party's Guilt, that the Justices be instructed to take Caution of such Persons, for their Appearance, under such Penalties as they see fit.

Instructions by the Council to the Circuit-courts, April 19.

1683. ' That the Justices proceed against Preachers at Field-conventicles, and those that have accompanied them in Arms, and are reputed to be their Guards, according to Law. ' ' When Persons are cited to give up Dittay, and refuse to depone, that they be immediately secured. ' ' If the Clerk get Notice that notorious Rogues are lurking where he is taking up the Dittay, he is to require the Magistrate of the Place, or these commisionate by the Council, that they be surprized and secured. ' ' That the Lieutenant General send out Forces to attend at the Places where Dittay is taken up, that they attend the Clerk in his Progress from Place to Place, for that effect; that the Officers, in the several Places where they quarter in the Country, give all the Information to the Clerk they can; and that the Persons commisionate by the Council, make exact Enquiry of absent Persons guilty of the late Rebellion, and their Refettters, and that they be present with the Clerk at the respective Places, for giving up of Dittay, and be cited to give up Dittay to these Crimes. ' ' That the Sheriffs uplift the Fines imposed upon the Absents, for not giving up Dittay, according to the old Custom, and count at the Justice-air for the same. ' ' Since the Sheriffs are to be at great Charges and Trouble, in summoning Persons to give Dittay, Parties, Witnesses, and Assizers, and constant Attendance upon the Court of Justice-airs, it is recommended to the Lord Treasurer, to pay punctually their Depursements, and that they be authorized to uplift the Fines, and be countable therefor, being paid of their Expences off the first End. ' ' Since, by Act of Parliament, the Clerk is to keep secret the porteous Roll, and, after the taking up thereof, he must deliver the just Double thereof to the respective Sheriffs, it is fit he be authorized to administer an Oath of Secrecy to the Sheriffs and their Clerks, and that they give no Double, but imploy such Persons as are trusty, for executing the same, who are to execute the same upon Oath. ' ' That absent Sheriffs, Noblemen, Gentlemen and Freeholders, be warned to attend, and, if absent, fined according to Custom, and the Fines punctually uplifted without Excuse. ' ' That no Sheriff-deputes or Bailie-deputes sit with the Justices, but only the Principals. ' ' That the Clerk take alongst with him to the Courts, exact Rolls of Persons forfeited, denounced, and put to the Horn for Rebellion, and likewise exact Rolls of all such as have either taken the Bond before the Council or Justices, or have special Remission for the Rebellion. ' ' The Council approve these Instructions, and order Extracts to be given to all whom they may concern. ' ' We may easily guess what vast Trouble and Charges the Country was put to, by these preparatory Steps to the Circuits. Most of these Instructions were carefully executed by the Persons to whom they are given, and the porteous Rolls were drawn. I have taken an overly View of some of these Rolls, and had it been possible to have gone through them narrowly, and compared them with other Accounts I have from the respective Shires, no doubt very black Discoveries might have been made; but that was impracticable. The porteous Roll for the Shire of Air this Year, as far as I could guess when I folded it out, consists of upwards of Three hundred Sheets of Paper. That of the Shire of Lanerk is upwards of 200 Sheets. I observed evidently Sheets taken out here and there, and others, written in a different Hand from the rest of the Roll, put in their Room, and that with very little Nicety, this probably having been done in haste. And Multitudes of Names are razed out, and others put in their Place, sometimes by one Hand, sometimes another. Those Rolls consist of three Columns; the first contains the Persons Names, where there are a vast many Changes and Alterations made, different Hands, different Inks, and evident Rasings of one Name, and writing in another for it; and that those were done privately, and no doubt brought in vast Sums of Money to some, appears from this, that what was found judicially by the Court, is still added to every Person's Name in the Roll by the Clerk's Hand, that he is deleted, that he is delayed, remitted to Edinburgh, remitted to the Judge Ordinary, fined, or the like; and generally in those Rasings the Persons are absent or deleted. In the next Column the Person's Crime is inserted, being at Bothwell, Refet and Converse, not keeping the Church, Absence from Courts, &c. and in the Third Column the Names of Witnesses, to prove the Charge, are inserted. In Persons of Note the Charge is very distinct and particular, and in meaner Persons it is but shortly expressed. It may not be out of the Road to give one Instance, whereby the Reader may understand the Method of these Rolls. In that of Renfrew Shire scarce any of the Gentlemen are overlooked, the Article relative to the present Lord Pollock, whom we shall afterwards meet with, follows. ' Sir John Maxwell of Nether Pollock, you are indicted and accused of Refetting of Rebels in so far as Stevenson Shoe-maker in Pollocktoun, Robert Jackson in Carnwatherrick, Arthur

Remarks on them and upon the porteous Rolls.

Great Alterations and Razures in them.

The Form of the Rolls.

Instance in Sir John Maxwell's Case.

Arthur Cuninghame there, Robert Taylor there, Archibald Barr in Pollock-town, and several other of your Servants and Tenants being actually in the Rebellion 1679. were upon the first, second, or remanent Days of the Months of July, August, September, October, November or December 1679. or January, February, or the remanent Months of the Years 1680. 81, 82, 83. or upon some of the Days of the Months foresaid, reset, harboured, intercommuned, aided, assisted, and did Favours, or had Favours done to them by you, or you otherwise supplied them. Of the which Crimes you are Actor, Art and Part. As also the said Sir John Maxwell is guilty of high Treason, as upon one of the foresaid Days the said Rebels and Traitors, who were actually in Rebellion, were supplied and furnished with Meat, Drink and other Provisions, reset and entertained in his House, by Order of him, his Lady, or other Persons. Then overagainst this follows the List of Witnesses, John Luke in Pollock-town, John Breadie Hammer-man there, John Wallace in Pollock-shaws, John Park in Arden-head, David Kennedy Gardiner in Pollock, David Kincaid his Servant, Andrew Martin Groom, John Paton Cook.

1683.

In a cursory View of the porteous Roll of this Shire of Renfrew, which is the shortest of any I looked at, I find from the Parishes of Cathcart, East-wood, Eaglisham, Merns, Neilstoun, and Lochwinnoch 105 common People, how the rest of the Parishes escaped, I do not know, Nineteen considerable Gentlemen, and three Ladies. In the Roll for the Shire of Lanerk, I noticed the whole Gentry of that Shire, almost without Exception. And the Commons and Gentlemen are pretty much classed by their Parishes. In Monkland 46. Bothwell 64. more in both of these 52. Douglas 24. Lesmahago 60. Carmichael, Pittenweem, Carstairs, &c. 50. Carlouk 19. Lanerk 59. more 16. more in Carlouk 25. Stonehouse 19. more 10. Cambusnethan 35. Kilbride 103. Hamiltoun 84. Carmonock 19. Blantyre 14. Rugland 13. Dalserf 30. more of Gentlemen 5. Glasgow 100. more Gentlemen 19. Barony 18. Govan 39. Evandale 80.

Further Remarks on the Rolls in Renfrew and Lanerk.

Only let me further observe upon these Rolls, that the most Part of the Commoners are charged with Reset and Converse, and not keeping the Church, some Fathers for resetting their Children and Brothers who had been at Bothwell. A good many of the Gentlemen in both Shires are remitted to Edinburgh in July, where we have met with them; some of them are excused simpliciter. And lastly I notice, that the Witnesses cited in every Parish are oft-times more than the Persons charged; and when any of them are absent, they are noted and remitted ordinarily to the Magistrate of the Place. From those cursory Remarks the Reader may guess somewhat of the sad Circumstances of the West and South of Scotland, at this Time. But the vast Trouble every Body was put to, and the extraordinary Sums of Money uplifted, what upon one Score, what upon another, cannot be narrated.

To prepare Matters for the Circuits, and make the Persecution as extensive as might be, the Clergy are engaged, and were most ready to give their utmost Assistance. I have before me a Paper dispersed among them, and Copies sent to every Congregation: What Time it was given the Curates, I cannot say; but 'tis probable, that it was spread in the Time of the forming of the Rolls. Whether it was spread by the Bishops Orders, or came from the Council, I know not; but the Episcopal Ministers were very willing to fulfil it in all its Parts, and were most useful to the Clerks in making up the Rolls. The Title of the Paper is

Share of the Episcopal Clergy in Informations at this Time.

List of Things to be done by the Minister in each Parish, 1683.

- That the Ministers give in upon Oath a List of their Sessioners, their Clerks and Bellmen, of Withdrawers from the Church, and Noncommunicants.
- That to their Knowledge they give Account of all Disorders and Rebellions, and who are guilty of them, Heritors or others.
- That they give a full and complete Roll of all within the Parish.
- That they give a particular List of all the Heritors.
- That all Women who are Delinquents, be given up as well as Men.
- That they give Account of all Persons who have gone out of their Parishes, and the Reasons of this withdrawing.
- That they give up particular Accounts of Fugitives, their Wives or Widows within the Parish, and all Resetters of them, and of Chapmen and Travellers.
- That they declare who are the People in their Parishes who can give the best Account of all these Particulars, besides their Sessioners, that such may be brought in and examined.

List of Things to be done by the Minister in every Parish.

This last Clause seems plainly to refer to the Examination of the Circuit Clerks, when they came about, according to the Council's Instructions, to receive Information and make up the Rolls. No Remarks need be made upon these Demands made upon every Curate in every Parish; they are plain enough, as also their Design. One Thing is observable, that their Sessioners, as they are called, Members of their Sessions, are here just made Use of as Informers against honest People; and therefore it is no Wonder, a good many Gentlemen and others,

Remarks on it.

1683.

others, when named to joyn with them in Session, peremptorily refused this invidious Office, and chose rather to undergo considerable Fines, than to concur in this malicious Work, and horrid Profanation of the Office of ruling Elders, whose Work is to oversee Peoples Manners, and joyn in judging them, not in informing the civil Government against them. This Paper confirms the general Remark so many Times made and proven, that the Clergy were at Bottom of all the Persecution I am describing, and the Curates extremely useful, as in the lesser oppressive Courts, so likewise in the more extensive Circuits.

Lagg Stewart-depute of Kirkcudbright, Bannerman Advocate at the Circuits.

Before I come to the particular Procedure of those Courts, I only further notice, that April 23. Sir Robert Grierson of Lagg, a most violent Persecutor, is continued Stewart-depute of Kirkcudbright, till the Justice-airs be over; and May last, Mr. George Bannerman Advocate, is appointed as Advocate-depute to attend the Justice-airs. The King's Advocate, we have heard, was otherwise employed.

Claverhouse, Meldrum, Haymag, Graden, Major White, Milltown, and Hallyards, to wait on the Circuits.

And June 4. just before the Justices go upon their Circuit, the Council appoint the Laird of Claverhouse, Meldrum, Riddel of Hayning, Ker of Graden, Major White, Sir John Whiteford of Milltown, and John Skene of Hallyards, who received Commission from the Council or Treasurer, anent the Discovery of Rebels or their Refetters, and for securing and sequestrating their Goods, with their Deputes and Clerks, to attend the Justices with their Books, Papers, Depositions, and Informations they can give, and that they be in Readiness to depone on Oath, anent any Persons guilty of Treason, or Refet of Rebels, or whatever shall be enquired of them by the Justices.

Instructions to the Circuits, June 4.

That same Day the Council agree upon the following Instructions to be given to the Circuits, which deserve a Room here.

Instructions given by the Council to the Commissioners of Justiciary.

THAT the Commissioners of Justiciary, conform to his Majesty's Letter, take Precognition, and consider the Probation, and distinguish the Delinquents into Classes.'

1. The Class of Absents from the Host be in cumulo deserted, and remitted to the Council.'

2. That the Class of Commons, and those that are not Heritors, either Rebels or Refetters, on their taking the Test, be deserted, and such of them as do not take the Test be either secured, or put under Caution.'

3. That the Diet be deserted against all Refetters, they taking the Test, and such as will not, if by the Precognition it appear that they have refet or intercommuned with Rebels who were forfeited, denounced, and registrate, or notour, that these be put under Caution under great Sums effecting to their Condition and Rank, and Quality of their Crimes, to appear before the Justices at particular Diets.'

4. That rebel Heritors of whatsoever Quality, applying for taking the Test, presenting themselves, and confessing the Crimes, and disposing their Estates, the Justices shall allow them to take the Test, and promise that the Council shall recommend them, as to their Lives allenarly, to his Majesty's Mercy.'

5. That Absents, who are accused for Rebellion and Refet, be declared Fugitives, and the Witnesses against them exactly examined, in order to a Process against them, either before the Justice-court or Council, as effects.'

6. That the Justices be exact in observing the Form of Process in the Justice-air, and if any Delinquent refuse to enact and find Caution, that they be seized.'

The Council approve these, and appoint they be given to the Justices, that they act accordingly.'

With those Instructions, the Persons appointed by the Council apply themselves to their Work. Only Two or Three Processes at Glasgow and Air are insert in the criminal Books, and these I shall give as briefly as I can, and add some other Accounts not recorded, because not brought to a Sentence and full Issue, from other Informations, which may be depended upon, and then subjoyn some particular Oppressions, at particular Courts held by the Persons named in the Proclamation for Circuits this Year.

June 5. the Circuit at Stirling.

By the Proclamation they are to be at Stirling, June 5. where they began their Circuit. I have before me a very surprising Instance of Inhumanity before the Circuit at Stirling, in the Pursuers or Judges, if they knew the poor Man's Case.

Their Severity to William Johnston.

One William Johnston, a Stirling Shire Man, had been in the Engagement at Bothwell, where he was sore wounded, and carried Prisoner into Hamiltoun. There, through Negligence, and not allowing him a Surgeon, he lost so much Blood at his many Wounds, that for Three Days he was speechless, and every Body gave him over for dead; and so he was not carried away with the rest of the Prisoners, yet he gradually recovered; but by reason of the extraordinary Loss of Blood, and Strokes he had got, he did not recover the Exercise of his Reason fully, but was silly, and next to an Idiot. When his Wounds were healed, and the Keepers had got any thing he had, he was overlooked and let go, and got Home to his Friends.

Friends, and lived with them till this Circuit; and to it he was cited, tho' all the Country knew he had very much lost his Reason. Accordingly he appears with many others, and upon his Knees he and they sware the Test, and subscribed it. When he came out, he asked what Paper that was they had caused him put his Name to. Some of his Acquaintances told him, it was a renouncing of that Work he had owned at Bothwell. When he heard this, he was mightily affected, and his Dittemper increased upon him till his Death, which was in a few Days. This melancholy Account needs no Reflections.

1683.

The Circuit was to sit at Glasgow, by the Proclamation, June 13. and that Day Two Persons were executed at the Cross, for alledged killing of a Soldier, as we shall just now hear. The Circuit did not sit till that Day they were executed, and they appear to have been condemned a little before. Whether Major White, by his Justiciary Power, or the Baron Bailie passed the Sentence, I cannot learn. However, they were executed, and that very suddenly, for the more awful opening of the Circuit; and the fullest Account I can give of this Matter, from several Relations of it before me, is as follows.

Circuit at Glasgow, June 13.

Towards the Beginning of June, a very few Days before their Execution, a Party of Soldiers who had seized one Alexander Smith an outlawed Country Man, and were carrying him, I think, to Edinburgh, were attacked by some few Country People, Friends to the said Alexander, in Arms at Inchbelly-bridge, Six Miles from Glasgow, in the Road to Edinburgh, and the Prisoner was by Force taken from them. In the Rencontre some were wounded on both Sides, and one of the Soldiers was killed. The Country People retired with their Friend in good Order, and went off. The Soldiers rallied in a little Time, and in great Rage and Fury, fell a searching the Places near by, tho' by this Time the Party who had attacked them were retired a good Way from them; and in a Wood, not far off from the Place of Action, they found John Wharry, or Macwharry, and James Smith, sitting without any Arms, having only Two walking Staves in their Hands. The Soldiers alledged, these Two belonged to the Company who had rescued the Prisoner, and brought them in to Glasgow Prison; and they were sentenced to die, and to be executed the 11 of June, says the Cloud of Witnesses, but other Papers make it more justly the 13.

Attempt on the Soldiers at Inchbelly-bridge.

John Wharry and James Smith taken.

When they were brought to Glasgow, very much Spite and Malice was vented against them. Some Papers say, That the Soldiers suborned Two of their Number to depone they saw them kill the Soldier at Inchbelly-bridge, when the Prisoner was relieved; but I am well informed by Persons of Credit, who were present at their Trial, that no Witnesses were adduced against them, but the Court sustained it relevant, that they were found so near the Place where the Soldier was killed. Whereas it appears to be a very great Presumption in their Favour, that they were so near; since, had they been in the Engagement, it is not to be supposed they would stay so near by, but would have retired with the rest. What would make them cast themselves in the Soldiers Hands? And if they had, by some Occasion or other, been obliged to stay so near, why would they quit their Arms? This is certain, the Fact was never confessed by them, neither were there any Evidences of their being in the Attack for relieving the Prisoner. But their being found in the Vicinity, tho' without Arms, was made Ground enough to take away their Life, according to the Justice of this Time.

These brought into Glasgow and condemned to die.

They were sentenced to have their right Hands cut off, and then to be hanged, and their Bodies to be carried to Inchbelly-bridge, and there hung up in Chains. Their Carriage at their Execution was cheerful and gallant. John Wharry was ordered to lay his Hand on the Block, he thinking they required him to lay his Head down, did so with much Courage. Major Balfour said in a great Rage, It is not your Head but your Hand we are seeking. John answered, he had then heard wrong, but was most willing to lay down not only his Hand but his Neck, and all the Members of his Body, for the Cause of Christ. When his Hand was cut off, he was not observed to shrink, but holding up the Stump with great Courage, said, This and other Blood now shed, will yet raise the burnt Covenants. James Smith died in much Peace and Comfort, not in the least discomposed.

And are executed, June 13.

I have some of their Letters to their Friends, from the Prison at Glasgow, dated June 11 and 12. full of pious Matter, and discovering a very great Measure of divine Joy they were under. They appear to have been sensible serious Christians. When they were but half-choked, says the Cloud of Witnesses, they were cut down, and, in that Condition, carried on Two Carts to Inchbelly-bridge. Some honest People had provided Coffins for them, and caused bring them near, at which Balfour raged terribly, and caused break them in Pieces.

But I return to give a more direct Account of the Circuit at Glasgow, and begin first with what is in the Registers, and there are only Two Processes recorded at this Place. The First is June 13. and the Lords present are, Perth Justice-general, and Maitland Justice-clerk, with the Lords Collingtoun, Castlehill, and Forret.

That Day appear in the Pannel, John Russel Portioner in Eastfield in Monkland, Gavin Paterfoun Feuar in Bothwell-shiels, Robert Russel of Windy-edge, Mr. Thomas Hamilton of Raith, Process against Jo. Russel, Gavin Paterfoun, 1683.

Rob. Russel, Mr. Tho. Hamilton of Raith, and James Hamilton of Parkhead, all forfeited, June 13.

Raith, James Hamilton of Parkhead. The second and third of these had been before the Justiciary formerly, and how they came now to be again pannelled I know not. Their Indictment runs very short, that they had been in Arms with the Rebels at Bothwel. Their Indictment is found relevant, and the Probation is remitted to an Assize. The Depositions of Witnesses appear very lame. One depones, he saw John Russel at Meadows, and at Hamiltoun-muir, with a Horse, Sword, and Pistols. Another depones, he saw him at Scharwehead-muir, some Days before. Two Witnesses depone, they saw Mr. Thomas Hamilton and James Hamilton at Scharwehead-muir, but without Arms. One depones against Robert Russel, that he saw him at Druneclog, and another that he saw him at Hamiltoun-muir. And the same as to Gavin Paterson, one saw him at one Place, and another depones he saw him elsewhere; and, as far as I could remark, there are not Two Witnesses ad idem, as to any but Raith and Parkhead, and both declare they had no Arms; and these Gentlemen's Houses were near by, Raith's within a Quarter of a Mile of Bothwel-bridge. The Assize bring them in guilty of the Crimes libelled. The Lords forfeit them, and appoint them to be demeaned and executed as Traitors, when the Justiciary or Council shall think fit. This is another Instance of the Justice of this Period, a Sentence of Death passed upon Two Gentlemen, for being in the Company of the West-country Army, when just lying about their Houses. We shall meet with some of them afterwards, next Year.

June 15. James Maxwell of Williamwood, and John Maxwell younger of Bogtoun, both in the Parish of Cathcart in the Shire of Renfrew, and in Absence. They are indicted for being with the Rebels at Bothwel. For Probation the Advocate produceth the porteous Roll, and Dittay against the Defenders, who not compearing were outlawed, fugitate, and put to the Horn, and all their Moveables to be inbrought to the King; but the Spite against these good Men stops not here. The Lords, as the Sentence runs, conform to Act 11. Sess. 1. Parl. 2. Char. II. proceed to give further Sentence in Absence, and find the Libel relevant, and remit it to the Assize. None of the Witnesses, as far as I can see, are ad idem. John Hart in Braehead of Cathcart depones, he saw them in Arms with the Rebels in Hamiltoun, Glasgow, and some other Places some time before the Engagement. This Hart, as I am told, was in the porteous Roll himself, and was practised upon to witness in this Case, by Mr. Ezekiel Montgomery Sheriff-depute, who had Williamwood's Estate in View, but missed it. Another depones, he saw Williamwood in Arms at another Place. Another depones, he met Williamwood in the Road going to the Rebels, at the Infal on Glasgow; another, that they are held and reputed to be Rebels, and have taken Guilt on them, and fled; but not one of the Depositions agreeing as to Time and Place, the Assize bring them in guilty of being with the Rebels, and at the late Rebellion: And the Lords sentence them to be forfeited, and when apprehended to be demeaned as Traitors, &c. in common Stile.

More particular Detail of Williamwood's Sufferings.

This religious and peaceable Gentleman had suffered, as most about him did, very much from the Highland Host, January, February, and March, 1678. That same Year in June or July, there came a Party of Soldiers to his House, without any Orders which they could produce, and indeed he could not be reached by Law, for he had managed himself with all Caution and Circumspection. The Party was commanded by one Scot of Bonnitoun, and carried off, or caused carry off Fifty Bolls of Meal, Four Horses, with the whole Household-furniture left by the Highlanders, Chimneys, Pots, Pans, Crooks, Tongs, Beds, and Bed-clothes, and every Thing that was portable, without any Pretext of Law, but that Williamwood was a suspected Person.

So mad and violent were they in their Spite and Rage, that they cut and mangled with their Swords, and other Instruments, the Beds and other Things they could not carry off, and cut down and spoiled most of the young Timber about the House; yea, so virulent were they, that finding a Stack of Bear, reckoned to contain about Twenty Bolls, which they could not get transported, they set Fire to it once and again, but being wet it did not kindle. They carried all their Spoil to Rutherglen, and there sold it; and though this was once and again represented, no Redress could be had, neither can any Reason be given for this Spoil, but an Information given by Mr. Finnick, Curate of Cathcart, against Williamwood, as a Person suspect to be Presbyterian in his Judgment, and who would not joyn with him as one of his Elders.

After this Riot committed upon him, being conscious of his own Innocence, and knowing he had never been disloyal, or acted any Thing against the Government, that could justly lay him open to these Barbarities, Williamwood plenished his House of new, and continued in it; but in May or June 1680. a new Storm falls on him.

Upon a false and invidious Information given against him, as having been at Bothwel last Year, a Party of Soldiers came to his House, and, by Order from General Dalziel, seized him, and brought him Prisoner to a Kind of Camp which was at Newlands, where he was kept Prisoner some Days, and then carried into Glasgow Tolbooth, and from thence to Edinburgh, where he was once and again brought before the Council, and, no Probation being adduced of his being at Bothwel-bridge, he was set at Liberty upon Bond to compear before the Council upon the First of September.

Accor-

Accordingly at that Diet he appeared, and no Witnesses being offered, his Bail was continued till the Second of November. At that Time he went in again to Edinburgh, and no Proof being adduced, upon paying a little Money for Fees, &c. he got up his Bond from the Clerks, and came home and lived peaceably at his House, paying all Taxes and Impositions now a going, when required.

Things went on pretty smoothly with him, till November next Year, when Thomas Kenno-way, of whom above, came with a general Commission in Writ from one Carmichael at Edinburgh, as Donatar to all the Rebels Escheats in the Shire of Renfrew, and brought a Party of Soldiers with him to the House of Williamwood. It was in vain to tell them he was no Rebel, that he had been liberate by the Council last Year, and lived peaceably since. They had him, as they said, in their Commission, and unless he had been Master of a Force equal to theirs, there was no repelling this Violence, or Remedy for him.

He had sought Redress before, but all Doors were shut to Presbyterians, so the whole of his Moveables were seized, and Soldiers left to stay in the House, until they were carried off by Country Men, whom they ordinarily forced to such Pieces of Service. However, finding Kenno-way was as much for Money as Moveables, Williamwood compounded with him, and gave him a very considerable Sum, and so was delivered from the Soldiers.

When thus by long Experience he found there was no Safety or Protection to be had from the Malice of Mr. Finnick the Incumbent, notwithstanding, in obedience to the Laws, he went to Church and heard him, this Gentleman thought good to let his Land to Tenants, and live himself as privately as he could with his Family. When ordering his Affairs thus, Mr. Ezekiel Montgomery Sheriff-depute of Renfrew, who had harassed him formerly for irregular Marriage and Baptisms, hearing of this, and fearing he should thus get out of his Reach, applied to him, and sought from him, under Pretext of a Loan, (but he knew well it was never to be paid again) the Sum of Two thousand two hundred Merks, which the Sheriff alleged the Government owed him, and he could not command it at present, when he had important Business to do with it, and plainly told him, if he gave it him not he would inform against him, and prove as much as would cost him twice that Sum he now sought. These were the Methods of the Under-agents of the Government at this Time, and some greater Men than Sheriff-deputes were not altogether free of them.

Williamwood being fully conscious of his Innocence, peremptorily refused the Proposal, yet considering he had a cunning and dangerous Enemy to deal with, and having some Relations in Ireland, he began to resolve upon transporting himself and his Family thither, that for some time he might be out of Harm's Way. Accordingly, he went over to Ireland to his Brother in Law, Mr. Andrew Rowan, an Episcopal Minister there, and stayed some Months, that he might settle Matters in order to the bringing over his Family.

While in Ireland, an Indictment is left at his House, of the Date the Day of to compare before the Lords of Justiciary. Neither he nor his Wife living in the House, but a Tenant, the Paper was neglected, and not heard of till too late. Mean while, Mr. Montgomery the Sheriff-depute is as good as his Promise, and dealt with several Persons who were in the porteous Roll for being at Bothwell, to depone they saw Williamwood there, promising to get them absolved, and their Names put out of the Roll. Many refused, and would not perjure themselves to get free. At length he fell upon one Hart, as we have seen, who was in the Roll, but a profane Vagabond, who stuck at nothing, and another like him, to whom, it is said, he gave Money, and, by his Interest in managing the Roll, got Hart's Name scored out, and they deponed they saw Williamwood with the Rebels when in Arms, either at Glasgow, Rutherglen, or somewhere.

Whereupon the Justiciary passed the Sentence of Death and Forfeiture upon him, in Absence, before he ever so much as knew there was Dittay against him, being in Ireland; and his Estate was given to Provost Johnstoun in Glasgow, and his Wife and Six small Children put to shift for their Sustenance and Bread, till the happy Revolution.

And to put all the Sufferings of this good Man together, his Wife, January 1684. was harassed and persecuted with many others, because she did not appear before the Courts then holden, and swear the Oath of Abjuration; and, because she had not delivered her Husband's Papers to the said Donatar Johnstoun, for much of that Year she was obliged to hide and flee from one Place to another for Safety, till through Toil and Grief she died in November, and exchanged a present miserable Lot for a comfortable Eternity. Her Six small Children were in a very destitute Case, their Father being forth of the Kingdom, and under Sentence of Death, and they continued under Difficulties in abundance, till the general Deliverance at the Revolution.

Nevertheless, since that Time the Estate of Williamwood is in better Circumstances than ever it was, and the Persecutors, Finnick, Montgomery, and Johnstoun, are extinct, and their Families, for any Thing I know. Many kind Retributions of Providence to honest Sufferers at this Time, might be remarked. This Instance I have given at the greater Length, because I have it fully documented, and it tends not a little to open up the Spirit and Wickedness of these Times.

1683.

Many Gentlemen were indicted to the Justice court at Edinburgh.

Process against the Lord of Bradyholm.

His cautious
Cautious at Bothwell. He is indicted at the Circuit 1681.
and all further Prosecution against him discharged.

His Indictment
at this Time.

His Act of Liberation, July 25.

Many other Gentlemen received Indictments before this Court at Glasgow, and were delayed to the ordinary Meeting of the Justiciary at Edinburgh, as we have already noticed, and there either deserted or continued as they could make interest. I shall only take notice of the Sufferings of that religious and worthy Gentleman, the Lord of Bradyholm, in the Suite of Lanerk, from original Papers he was pleased to send me, of whom I would say more if his Modesty did not forbid me.

James Muirhead of Bradyholm, had been still a Countenancer of Presbyterian Ministers; and before the Rising at Bothwell, by several Summons and other Papers before me, I find he was brought to much Trouble before the Privy Council and other Courts, and paid considerable Sums of Money for hearing the Gospel preached by Presbyterian Ministers. He was further charged and fined for harbouring Presbyterian Ministers in his House, and because they prayed in his Family when they came to visit him, he was made guilty of a Houseconventicle, and underwent several arbitrary Fines.

In the Year 1679. at the Rising at Bothwell, his House being within Two Miles of the Place of Engagement, he carried with all the Caution he was capable of, and retired from his own Dwelling for several Weeks; yet he was indicted before the Circuit 1681. as being in the Rebellion, tho' without the least Shadow of Truth. His Indictment is in my Hands, and runs in the common Form above insert. After the Examination of a prodigious Number of Witnesses, and nothing being proven, and when he had given in a Representation against some of his Pursuers for suborning of Witnesses, and offered to prove it, the Matter was hushed up, and by an Order of Court just now before me, all further Prosecution of him was discharged.

When he was, as he thought, secure, he is again put into the porteous Roll, and before this Circuit at Glasgow receives a new Indictment, which being but short, I insert from the Original. ' James Muirhead of Bradyholm younger, you are indicted for the Crime of high ' Treason and Rebellion, in joining with the Rebels June 1679. and being in their Com' pany with Arms at the Schawhead-muir, Hamiltoun, Hamiltoun-muir, and several other Places, ' aiding and assisting them, giving and sending out Meat to them, or otherwise supplying
' them, sending out Horses and Servants to them, countenancing and favouring of Rebels, ' accessory to the late Rebellion, harbouring and resetting of them in your House, upon the ' Ground of your Land as Tenants, receiving Mail and Duty from them, converting and ' intercommuning with them, particularly you reset and kept Robert Turner in Gowachill
' upon your Lands, as your Tenant, and receives Mail and Duty from him; for all which ' Crimes you are to underly the Law.'

To say nothing of this informal and general Libel, when he appeared with other Gentlemen he was continued till the 25 of July at Edinburgh, where I find by a signed Extract of the Act of Adjournal he was liberated from Prison. The Act it self, containing his Petition, and a short Hint of his strange Usage, deserves a Room here.

Apud Edinburgh, 25 die mensis Julii, curia legitime affirmata.

* Because this may appear strange to such as know not the Methods of this Time, it would be noticed, that in the Year 1681.
many more Witnesses than 700 were carried into Edinburgh
from the Westcountry against the Gentlemen
then indicted, and they were
all interrogate, with respect to each Gentleman who stood his Trial.

THE whilk Day anent a Petition presented to the Lords by James Muirhead of Brady-holm younger, shewing, That he being formerly ( 1681.) convened before the said Lords for his alledged being in the late Rebellion at Bothwell, and exact Trial made, and * Seven Hundred Witnesses or thereby being examined against him, nothing of Guilt could be made appear, and the Petitioner having then pressed to go to Trial, and having an Act of Council for that effect, the Lords at that Time deserted the Diet simpliciter, and discharged all new Letters and Dittays, except by a Warrant in presentia: And yet, without any such Warrant, he was put in the porteous Roll, appeared at Glasgow, urged a Trial, and was continued to Edinburgh, where he offered of new to abide a Trial, but was committed to Prison. Therefore craving, that seeing the Petitioner hath been so oft troubled, and always appeared, and is now ready to pass to the Knowledge of an Assize, for clearing his Innocence, and is ready presently to exculpate himself by famous Witnesses, that he be ordained to be set at Liberty, and the Diet deserted simpliciter. The Lord Justice Clerk and Commissioners of the Justiciary, having considered the said Petition, do ordain the Petitioner to be set at Liberty. Extracted forth of the Books of Adjournal, by me Mr. Thomas Gordon Clerk to the Justice Court.'

Thomas Gordon.

Next Year he is again indicted, and fined in 4000 Merks, and imprisoned fourteen Months.

At this Time there was no Security for any Body who had ever favoured Presbyterians, and so, notwithstanding of this second Absolviture by the Criminal Court, next Year at the Circuit he is again put into the porteous Rolls for the same pretended Accession to Bothwell; and when he would not purge himself by taking the Test, he is remitted to Edinburgh, when he

1683.

he is libelled before the Council for Refet, Converse, keeping Conventicles, and other Points, and his Oath is taken upon the Articles of the Libel. And because, in his Deposition, he acknowledges his having had four Times Presbyterian Ministers in his House since the Inseminity, and that they went about family-worship, with not above six present more than his family, he is found guilty of keeping House-conventicles, and fined, according to a wrong Account given in of his Valuation, as an Heritor, in four thousand Merks, and was kept in Prison about Fourteen Months at Edinburgh. All this I have given the more animadversely, because every Part of it is vouch'd by principal Papers before me. And this was the Case of a great many other worthy Gentlemen next Year and this, as we may hear.

Vast Numbers of People and Wives, were cited to this and the Circuit at Air. We may guess at their Numbers by the Accounts I have given of the porteous Rolls. It is within Bounds when I term them some Thousands, and they were put to no small Charges when waiting on, besides what they had to give to Clerks and Servants about the Court. I have before me an Account of the following Persons from the Parish of Evandale, John Ayton, Caldergreen, with several others who attended this Circuit, and at a modest Computation each of them were at Two hundred Merks and more in Charges before they got home, and yet nothing could be proven against them, and their Diet was deserted. Mean while, next Year when the Circuits came about, the very same Persons in many Parishes, not visiting again.

The Country put to vast Trouble and Expenses at these Circuits.

Another Thing which fell most heavy upon honest People, at those Circuits at Glasgow, and other Places, was in drawing up the Lists for Assizers. The Clerks took Care to insert a great many worthy honest Men, who could not be otherwise reached among the Forty five Assizers, whom they well knew would suffer before they would sit upon the Assize of the Persons who were to be pannelled. And greater Sums were extorted this way from some of the most considerable Merchants in Glasgow, than one would think of. I know that excellent Christian John Luke of Claythorn, paid at different Times near Fifty Pounds Sterling to get himself excused from this vexatious Work. This was the Case of these good Men, Andrew Gibson, George Bogie, and several others.

Great Sums extorted from honest People to be freed from being on the Assize at the Circuits.

But it is Time to follow this Circuit to Air, where I find by several Accounts, the Curates in that Shire had been very active to get Matter prepared for the Lords before they came, and one Mr. Abercrombie in Carrick, signalized himself for his Diligence in Delations and Informations, as Mr. Joseph Clelland in Dalsferry had distinguished himself this way in Lanark Shire.

Circuit at Air.

The following Account of the Trouble the Country was put to about Air, by that knowing Country Man formerly mentioned, Quinn Dick in Dalmellington, deserves a Room here, as plain Matter of Fact. 'Vast Numbers of Persons (says he) were cited out of every Parish in the Shire, to give Information of any they knew had been at Bothwell, or Airs-moss, or any other Rising, or such who had refet and conversed with them. And great Numbers were given up. The Persons delated, whether of the Risings or Converse, tho' themselves had never been in Arms, were charged before the Circuit to purge themselves from Suspicion by taking the Test. All who compeared and took it not, were imprisoned, and such who did not appear, by Sound of Trumpet and Tuck of Drum were denounced at the Cross of Air. Most Part of such who were imprisoned, gave Bond and Caution to appear at Edinburgh against such a Day, and enter themselves. When they came there they were either imprisoned, or gave a new Bond to appear at another Day, and severals had a third Bond to give before the Expiration of the second, and before the Expiration of that they were allowed to prove themselves alibi at the Time of the Rising, and to purge themselves from Refet and Converse, by taking the Test. And such who did not so, were either imprisoned, or denounced Rebels at the Head-burgh of the Shire, and their Names printed in a Fugitive Roll, that all who conversed with them, or harboured them, might be as guilty as they.'

Quinn Dick says, 'that the Trouble the Shire was put to at this Circuit.'

This is a very distinct Account of the general Method taken at each of the Circuits, and it falls in much with the Way taken immediately after Bothwell, where Reflexions were made upon it. There is only one Process at Air recorded in the Registers, and I come now to insert it.

June 22. the following Persons were indicted, as above, of being in Arms with the Rebels at Bothwell. Mr. Matthew Campbel of Watershaugh, Robert Lockhart of Bankhead, James Brown Son to James Brown Portioner in Newmills, John Paterson in Dandilian, Adam Reid Portioner in Mauchlin, John Wilson Portioner in Lindsayhill, John Crawford of Toishaw, Andrew Brown of Duncanzeamer, Mr. John Halbert, Colonel John Burns, and James Macfies of Auchnairn. All of them were absent, but Bankhead and Andrew Brown. Witness when the Rebels were there, with his Sword about him; another depones, he heard him demand Corn in June 1679. for Kaitlock's Troop, and that he saw him at Strathewan, on Persons indicted at Air, and indicted.

1683.

the Friday before the Defeat, with Two Ministers, Mr. Samuel Arnot and Mr. Robert (it should probably be Hugh) Archbald. Another saw him in Company with Two Persons, who were going that Day toward Hamilton. Three Witnesses depone, they saw Mr. John Halbert riding with above Twenty of the Rebels; and one of them, that he saw him take out a Roll from his Pocket, and call over their Names, some Days before Bothwell; and Three or Four swear, that they saw Colonel Burns and James Macneilly riding with the Rebels in several Places, with walking small Swords about them. I do not observe Probation against the rest that amounts to any thing.

Robert Lockhart of Bankhead confesseth he was in the Rebellion, begs Mercy, and offers to take the Test, and petitions the Lords may recommend him to the King for a Remission. Andrew Brown confesseth the same, and offers to renounce his Heritage. The Assize bring all in guilty of Treason and Rebellion. The Lords continue pronouncing Sentence against the Two Confessors, till the 2 of August, and commit them to Claverhouse, and require him to present them that Day. They sentence the rest to be executed and damned as Traitors when apprehended, as in common Form. August 2. the Lords considering the Verdict of the Assize on Robert Lockhart of Bankhead, and Andrew Brown, at Air Circuit, June 22. sentence them to be beheaded at the Cross of Edinburgh, August 9. but I suppose Remissions were got down before that Time.

The Case of the Lord of Water-side.

I have some other Informations come to my Hand, with relation to this Circuit at Air. John Cochran of Water-side, whom we shall afterward meet with, and being yet alive I forbear his Character, was informed against, as having been with a Party of Country Men which came from Galloway to Bothwell. He was indeed accidentally at the Town of Cumnock upon Business, when they came by, in their Road to Hamilton; and some of his Acquaintances in Galloway hearing he was there, did call for Water-side, who came out of a House, and spoke to them upon the High-way, but had no Arms, not so much as a walking Sword at that Time.

Water-side finding he was informed against, and being unwilling to come in their Clutches, thought it safest to withdraw, and leave the Kingdom: Being conscious of his Innocency, he hoped in a little the Storm would blow over; but in Absence the Witnesses were examined against him; none of them could swear that Water-side had Arms. At length, with some Difficulty, they prevailed upon Two, whom many took to be suborned, to depone in terminis, that they saw him converse with the Rebels, when coming from Galloway to Hamilton. Upon which, and his Absence, the Gentleman was forfeited. We shall meet with him and his Father Two Years after this. Whatever be in the Subornation of Witnesses, which no Body ought to believe without good Evidence, good Informations bear, that both of them fell shortly into a lingering Distemper, and their Bodies waited away, and in less than a Year's Time, both of them were in Eternity, to answer for what they had done, good or evil.

Of William Boswel in Auchinleck.

Another Instance of Severity at this Circuit, was as to a young Gentleman in Auchinleck Parish, William Boswel. He was scarce Sixteen Years of Age at the Time libelled, and was riding about some Business, when he happened to fall in with a Company of Men, who were drawing up in order to march towards Bothwell. The Youth, out of Curiosity, stopped his Horse, that he might see them draw up and march away. For this he was charged before this Circuit, as being in Company with the Rebels, though he had no Arms; and, for any thing I can learn, spoke not to any of them, but only, at some Distance, looked on, when they were forming themselves in Ranks, and marching Eastward. All this he confessed, and further could not be proven; yet he was obliged to take the Test, and pay 1000 Pounds Scots to preserve his Lands from Forfeiture.

William Torbran
in Stranraer.

It was at this same Circuit, as a signed Paper before me bears, that William Torbran, late Provost of Stranraer, was cited, and afterwards forfeited. This good Man was lately alive, and endured no small Hardships, which I shall give an Abstract of, from a Paper before me fully attested. In March 1679. for mere Nonconformity, he was forced by a Party of Soldiers to leave his Family, and retire to Ireland. Mean while, his House was filled with Soldiers for some Days, and they went not off without a considerable Sum of Money. In November the same Year, he was again forced to retire for Three Months. He was no sooner returned, but Claverhouse sent a Party of Seventeen Dragoons to quarter upon him; and it cost him 85 Rix-dollars before he was rid of them, besides the Hurt they did to his House and Shop; and all this without any Sentence against him, or Crime laid to his Charge save his Noncompliance with Prelacy.

A Citation was left at his House May this Year, to compare before the Circuit at Air, tho' one of the Bailies, and another Person of Credit in the Town, depone they saw him some Time before go off for Ireland. When this was represented, all his Lawiers could prevail to get done, was to have Sixty Days allowed to cite him as one off the Kingdom. When these were out, he was forfeited, and the Sentence of Death past on him, and that upon no Crime proven against him, but his Absence and Noncompearance; and the Lords Sentence was intimated at his dwelling House in Stranraer. He notices, he was at Twenty Dollars Dollars in Charges at the Circuit at Air, in order to have this Piece of material Justice done him, and at great Expences in transporting his Goods and Family to Ireland, before the Expiration of the Sixty Days.

1683.

During Four Years, as he himself expresses it, he was obliged to live in a strange Land, upon what the Locuits had left; and when he returned, in the Year 1687. he found his Loss far greater than he imagined; for his Debtors would pay him nothing of what was owing him, whether having taken Occasion to transact his Bonds with those who had the Gift of his Forfeiture, or for what Reason, is not said. One Gentleman was owing him 3000 Merks, another 60 Pounds Sterling, Two others 1000 Merks each; of all which he never got a Farthing. And for some Time after his Return, his Trade and Business was quite stopped, it was but few would venture to converse or deal with him, till he got his Forfeiture reversed, which cost him a great Sum; yet at the Close of this Narrative, and upon Reflection on all the Treatment he had met with, this excellent Man magnifies and humbly blesses the Lord, who ever honoured him so far, as to call him to give this small Testimony of his Love and Loyalty to him and his Cause.

The next Place where the Circuit was held was at Dumfries, of which nothing is in the Registers. From other Informations before me, I shall only notice, that great Numbers having come to Bothwell, from the Bounds of that District, as well as of the others formerly spoken of, and, as we heard, their Names had been taken up, 1679 or 1680. yet no Molestation followed to the most Part, and they lived peaceably, haunting Fairs, Markets, Burials, and all publick Meetings, and no Body refrained Converse with them. At this Time, Resettled and Converse being made criminal, the whole Heritors, Gentlemen, and substantial Tenants, every Body who had any thing, and were not directly engaged in the persecuting Courses, were attacked, and Probation was not difficult to find as to Converse and Resettled.

The Circuit at Dumfries.

And in this District, very few, but Papists and Persecutors, and their Friends, escaped. The same Preparations were made before this Circuit, as we have seen upon the former; only I find it noticed, that such who had formerly signed the Bond, were made Use of as Witnesses, and brought to great Trouble if they did not turn Informers themselves, after they had made their Peace with their Persecutors. We have heard, that the taking the Test saved the Lives of such who swallowed it, and their Fortunes came in the King's Will, which ended in a swinging Composition with the Managers. This Snare took with great Numbers, and the Test was gone into. Mr. Hugh Maxwell of Dalswinton, and some few others were remitted to Edinburgh. It is further observed, that at Dumfries the Test refused it, they were not to have the Offer of it again, but upon a voluntary Petition, in Terms some way worse than the Test it self; and such who compeared not, were denounced and declared Traitors, and all who after that conversed with them, their Father, Mother, Brother, or Sister, Husband or Wife, became in Law as guilty as they; and those near Relations must either contradict the Laws of God and Nature, or ly open to the Severities of this Time. In all the Persecutions in Popish Countries, I do not remember any Instance that comes this Length; and even among Heathens, it was scarce ever ventured upon, to dissolve those nearest natural Ties.

I have no particular Accounts of the Circuits at Edinburgh and Jedburgh, save what I meet with in a Letter this Year, to the Laird of Cavers, then at his Travels abroad, from a Gentleman concerned in his Affairs, Mr. Gladstones, a Part of which containing some Things relative to the Sufferings of a great many excellent Gentlemen, at and after the Circuits, and deserves a Room here. He tells, he was stopped in some Things he designed to do, 'by a Citation to compear before the Circuit in July at Jedburgh, for alledged Resett and Converse with Rebels upon your Ground. From Jedburgh, Sir William Scot elder was with a Party of Horse, by an Order from the Council, carried in Prisoner to the Castle of Edinburgh; and all other Pannels who refused the Test, were bound over to Edinburgh, upon their finding Caution to compear there the 2 of August. At the Day of Compearance, Stevenson, Ormistoun, Mauldsley, Pollock Maxwell, Greenock, and Blackcastle, were sent Prisoners to the Cattle; Sir John Riddel, with another Gentleman, to the Tolbooth of Haddingtoun, and Bonjedburgh, Well, William Ker Uncle to Greenhead, Gideon Scot and my self to that of Edinburgh, where, with about Sixty other Gentlemen, we remained about Ten Days, till the Prison, in such a Season, with such a Throng, became dangerous for our Health. We all made several Applications to the Lords of Justiciary, for Liberty to come out, upon Caution to answer when called for; which they finding reasonable, did order our Liberty; but our Bills were not all returned with the same Answer: Some are confined to the Town of Edinburgh, till their next Day of Compearance, which is the second Munday of November. Of which Number is Sir William Scot, Riddel, Sir Daniel Carmichael, Sir John Schaw, Pollock Maxwell, Duntop of Houshill, Mr. John Veitch, Bonjedburgh, and my self, with about Half a Dozen of other Gentlemen. The rest, for the most part, were allowed the Liberty of the Country, till the second Munday of December.

N n n n

We

1683. ' We cannot yet tell how this Business will end; but all Heritors indicted for the like Crimes of Refet and Converse, and against whom the Dict was deserted, upon their taking the Test at the Justice-airs, were last Week (the Letter is dated October 2.) by Proclamation indemnified only as to their Life, and the Council is ordered notwithstanding to proceed against them, and impose such arbitrary Punishment as they shall see fit, according to the Specialities of their several Guilt.'

Effects of these Circuits.

This is all the Account offers to me as to the Circuits this Year. The lamentable Consequences of these Courts cannot be narrated. Multitudes of Families were scattered, Parents and Children, Husband and Wife, set one against another. Multitudes were obliged to remove off the Kingdom, as we have seen in some Instances already.

In short, at and after these Circuits, great Drovers of Prisoners were carried from Prison to Prison, and, generally speaking, the Prisons were emptied into Edinburgh. The Persecution was, in a special Manner, violent in Nithsdale, where mean while, the Papists were not only overlooked but encouraged; and, as hath been materially hinted, the Laird of Stonehouse, tho' a Papist, in reality acted as Sheriff of Nithsdale, and was at the Bottom of much of the Persecution there, tho' he was so honest to his Principles as not to take the Test. This may suffice as to the Circuits this Year, we shall meet with more of this Nature the following Years.

S E C T. V.

Of some other Branches of Persecution, the Plot, and other incidental Things, this Year 1683.

Contents of
this Section.

HAVING thus gone through the more publick Branches of Persecution, by the Council, Justiciary, and Circuits, I come to end my Accounts of this Year, by some other Pieces of the Hardships of Presbyterians, by Fines and otherwise, most of them consequential upon the Proclamation about the Circuits, and from the Courts held by the Persons nominate in it, under Notion of allowing the Benefit of the Test; and I shall annex a brief Hint at some other Things which fell in this Year, not so well reducible to the former Sections.

Persons named in the Proclamation, April 23 hold Courts, and harass the Country.

By the Proclamation for Circuits above narrated, Power is given to the Persons named, Officers of the Army, broken Gentlemen and others, to offer the Test; and for that end, they held Courts, and pressed the Test even beyond the Terms of the Proclamation: And indeed they might do what they would, for there was no Body to controul or call them to an Account for what they did. This Year, Hallyards, named in the Proclamation, and a Soldier of my Lord Airly's, Duncan Grant, with Powers from him, held Courts in the Parish of Kilbride, and the neighbouring Parishes in the Shire of Lanerk. This last Person was a Terror to that Neighbourhood; all who were suspect to have been at Bothwell, or to have conversed with such, were at pleasure fined as the said Grant thought good. John Wilson in Hifflet, had his House again spoiled, and lost to the Value of 673 L. 6 s. 8 d. Grant went off for some Weeks, but quickly returned with new Powers, as he said, from Airly, and in the Harvest Time, quartered his Soldiers, to the Number of Twenty, in that Parish, perfectly on free Quarters, sometimes upon one Family, sometimes upon another. He seized the last named John Wilson's Crop, and made his Neighbours swear, whether they were accessory to the shearing or uplifting any of it.

Hallyards likewise was upon the same Neighbourhood; and the Reader will easily form a Notion of the Oppression of the Country at this Time, when not only such who were allowed by the Proclamation, under the Colour of Kindness, and to give Opportunities to take the Test, as was pretended, held their Courts, for quite other Purposes, in every Parish, but their Deputes came and oppressed in their Name; yea, the same Parish was harassed with different Persons holding Courts for the same Faults, and, it may be, both of them coming more than once in the same Year. This was indeed a sweeping Befom of Oppression.

In Harvest this Year, Hallyards came with a Party of Soldiers, upon John Wat in Kilbride, and many others, and destroyed their Viſtual in the most lamentable Manner, and all for Nonconformity and Noncompearance at Circuits and Courts. In a little Time, he returned returned and spoiled John Wat's House; his Loss was above 500 Merks. John Granger, a Neighbour of his, for the same Cause, was fined, and his House was rifled, and Twelve Cows, Five Horses, and other Goods taken away to the Value of 1100 Merks. I have before me a List of Fines exacted in the same Parish at this Time, which comes to a vast Sum.

1683.

This same violent Persecutor held a Court at Glasgow, perhaps it might be some little Time after. Thither, such in the Parishes near by, as could not be reached in the parochial Courts, if I may call them so, were cited. Mr. James Creighton Curate in Aulroide, and others of the Clergy, were close Attenders. A Person present informs me, that a Woman in Kilbride was called before this Court, to give her Oath whether she kept the Church, which, it seems, she was willing to do. Mr. Creichtoun moved in the Court, 'That seeing her Husband was irregular, and waited not, as he said, upon Ordinances dispensed by him, she should be engaged upon Oath not to refet or converse with him.' The Woman answered him, after a little Silence, That such an Engagement was contrary to her Marriage-oath, and boldly asked him, Whether, when he married them, he had not made her swear, she should never forsake her Husband till Death parted them. At this Halyards and many others present could not forbear Smiling; however, he put it off with a Jeit, saying, Goodwife, will you desire your Minister once to separate you, and dismissed her without any further Trouble. Indeed the Country People, now and at other Times, when appearing at such Courts, commonly blamed the Curates for their Oppression, and many Times to their Face; and I had it noticed in the Parish of Monkland, much harried at this and other Courts, where the Heritors were not inclined to bear hard on the People, that many would have escaped the Fury of the Soldiers, and the Courts, had not the Episcopal Ministers been indefatigable in their Informations; yea, they frequently called in the Soldiers, and directed them where to search.

As this Time, besides the great Trouble many in the Parish of Evandale were brought to before the Circuit, the Laird of Netherfield, Alexander Muir in Ploughland, Alexander Hamilton in Halls, and Three or Four more, were imprisoned for alledged Refet and Converse; and tho' little was proven, they were fined in 953 L. 13 s. 4 d.

It would be likewise remembred, that besides those incidental Courts, by virtue of the Proclamation foresaid, the ordinary Sheriffs and their Deputes, either before these commissioned Persons came to particular Parishes, or afterwards, took Care not to want their Share in the Fines; so that this Oppression was so general and repeated, that 'tis impossible to give a full View of it; yet somewhat of this heavy Time may be understood from what is here collected.

And the Sheriffs and their Deputes.

Few or no Persons escaped in the Town of Cumnock. William Creighton Sheriff-depute held a Court, and most Part of the Men of the Parish of Auchinleck were cited before him, and many compelled to swear, whether they kept the Church, at least every third Sabbath. The Curate sat in the Court with the Sheriff-depute. All who came before them were likewise obliged to declare upon Oath, what they knew anent their Neighbours not keeping the Church, and such who would not swear, and engage to Regularity, were fined in Fifty Pounds, whereof they behoved to pay Twenty presently, otherwise Soldiers were sent to their Houses to poynd and drive.

Cornet Graham held his Courts in Balmaghie, and the People of that Parish and neighbouring Parishes were cited to the Kirk, and were rudely enough dealt with. When they came before him, they were welcomed with Sir, and frequently You Dog, hold up your Hand and swear. Then it was asked, How many Conventicles have you been at since Bothwel, who preached at the n, who had their Children baptized, and the like; and it was really thought, by their Rudeness and Indiscretion in many Places, they designed to fright some, whom they could not otherwise reach, to Noncompearance. If any Thing was extorted from Country People by this Examination, they were presently fined; and if they saw fit to jealous them, and had not full Probation, the Test was offered them, and if they refused it, they were suspect Persons.

In the Parish of Penningham and the neighbouring Places, Multitudes were brought to great Trouble by those Courts, who never carried Arms at Bothwel, Airs-moss, or any where else, and upon mere Suspicion the Test was put to them, tho' none but Heritors were named in the Letters about it. In those remote Corners, the Persons intrusted at those Courts did what they pleased. In that Parish William McEwmont, Weaver in Myreton's Land, who had never been in any Rising, was pressed to take the Test, and, upon refusing, sent Prisoner to Edinburgh, and in a little Time banished, and died at Sea.

The Laird of Lagg is named in the Proclamation for the Circuits, and he exercised his Power with the greatest of Virulence. He kept a Court at the Old Clachan, and forced Multitudes to take the Test, and in a very little Time he came again, and obliged many of the same Persons to take it over again.

1683.

Thomas Lidderdale of St. Mary Isle is likewise named, and in the Parish of Twinam he carried on the Persecution most violently. There was an old infirm Man confined to his House, and seemingly in a dying Condition; Lidderdale came into his House, and charging him with Irregularities, required him to purge himself by taking the Test. The poor Man refused it, and a Party of Soldiers presently took away his Cow, which was all he lived by, and threatened to carry him to Prison in this dying Case. Another Man in the same Parish, after many Threatnings, was prevailed on to swear the Test. In a little Time he was cited to another Court, for alledged Refet and Converse with his own Son, and there he was obliged to swear never to refet or speak to his Son.

The like Courts were held at Kirkcudbright and Dumfries, and all Persons whom they were pleased to suspect, and such whom they convict of Church-irregularities, had the Test put to them, and those who refused were straight committed to Prison. These same Methods, tho' not so commonly, were used in the East Country. I find about this Time a Man in the Parish of Carringtoun, attacked for Converse with his own Son, and harbouring and resetting him for a very little Time. They forced him to pay Two hundred Merks, and when he had done so, he was obliged to take the Test, or go straight to Prison; but I find it will be endless to insert Particulars.

I shall end my Account of this pressing of the Test, and these Courts, towards the Close of this Year, with a very singular Outrage committed at Moffat. This Place fell within the Commission of the Laird of Westeraw. Upon the Lord's Day he caused Intimation to be made in the Church, that the Test was to be otered to Morrow in that Parish, and summoned all the Heads of Families to appear. After this Intimation was made, this profligate Man was heard say openly, The Devil damn his Soul in Hell, but before Morrow's Night they should be all damned as well as he. And next Day, when the Parishoners came, he raged and cursed among them, threatening the Refusers, and then caused them all joyntly, in the most confused and disorderly Manner, swear it.

Besides those wicked Courts, another Thing this Year was very heavy to the Country, and made Finings very severe and general. Particular Persons had Gifts granted them of the Fines imposed by Law, in such a Precinct, Parish, or more, as they were able to make their Interest with the leading Men in the Council; and those Donatars of the Fines had Liberty granted them to make Use of the Soldiers in uplifting the Fines. This way prodigious Sums were uplifted, and Multitudes squeezed. Armillan had this Gift for the Parish of Straitoun, and some neighbouring Parishes in Carrick. I have a particular Account before me of above Five hundred Pounds Sterling that Gentleman exacted from that one Parish, this and the following Year.

Thus in the City of Glasgow, John Barns had the Gift of Fines for Nonconformity, and used his Power with Rigour enough. In the former Years Provost Bell had a Grant of the Fines by Law imposed upon such as kept not the Church in Terms of Law, with Power to apply them for the Relief of such who had suffered by the great Fire in that Place, 1678. But I do not find there was any severe Exaction of them till this Year, when Mr. Barns, a Man of no Substance, was made Provost, and he levied the Fines with ll Severity. No Accounts were kept of the Sums uplifted, but, at a moderate Computation, it was known he lifted Eighteen or Twenty thousand Merks, from the poorer Sort of People there: And I am assured this was but very little, in Comparison of the secret Bribes, and Composition with Persons of better Fashion. By the very Fines for irregular Baptisms and Marriages, he got a huge Sum from Merchants and Persons of better Condition, as they and he could agree; and many were glad, at any Rate almost, to save themselves from publick Trouble. There was never any Account made of these vast Sums; and this poor Man is at this Day living in mean enough Circumstances, upon the Town's publick Charity, in his old Age. Not a few in that Town were made to flee from their Houses, and reduced to great Straits, by the unmerciful Exaction of those Fines.

In October and November this Year, Searches were very common and severe in Towns, especially in Glasgow. Whenever the Curates or Soldiers got Notice of the Return of any who had been absent from Courts, and for a little retired from their Dwellings, or of any People come into Town from the Country, presently a Search was ordered. All who were Strangers, unless they presently complied with their Catechism, and answered their Queries satisfyingly, were carried to the Guard or the Prison.

At these Searches Multitudes were taken, and, without any Libel, Probation, or Sentence, were sent into Edinburgh, or otherwise dealt by as the Officers of the Soldiers pleased. No Man, against whom an Informer had a Grudge, was safe; and in the Searches at Glasgow, frequently good Numbers were ordered to ly round the Town, to catch such, who, upon the Search, offered to flee, and by this Means many were seized.

In October this Year, William Inglis Mason, was taken out of his Bed in his own House, merely from an Information he was a Nonconformist, and remained long in Prison, and was at last banished to Carolina, where he died. The same Month George Jackson, in the Parish of

Eastwood,

Prodigious
Sums uplifted by Donatars of the Fines.

Great Trouble
this Year from repeted Search-

Eastwood, was taken at Glasgow, being discovered by being overheard at Prayer, and consequently suspect for a Presbyterian. We shall meet with him afterwards at his Execution.

1683.

In November, John Richmond was taken by Major Balfour, and died publicly next Year. That same Night, John Dick and John Williamson were taken; the first was banished to Carolina, John Williamson made some Compliances, for which he shewed evident Repentance, and was after the Revolution a Minister of this Church. Having catched Three that Night, they were in Hopes of some more, and early next Morning the Town was surrounded with Horse, and that Day a Second general Search was made; it was very narrow, and began about Eleven of the Clock. No Place was left unsearched, Cellars, Cielings of Houses, Chetts, and all By-places they could discover were carefully observed. I hear of none taken but John Min, who had Arms about him, and was seized in the Gorbals, and we shall afterwards meet with him at his Execution.

In December, another grand Search was made at Glasgow. No Secret was made of it some Days before, that suspect Persons might retire. Mean while, Care was taken to have Soldiers waiting without the Town, at some little Distance on all Airts, to seize such as should venture to go off. It was at this Search, or some other Time this Month, that John Buchanan a Student was taken, and after a good whiles Imprisonment was sent off to Carolina.

Toward the End of this Year, the Persecution was very violent and severe. I add one Instance more, which is singular enough. James Dun in Burwhat, in the Parish of Dalmellington, a very peaceable and pious Man, who could not be reached by Law as to his personal Carriage, except for Nonconformity, suffered very much in his Family. He had Four Sons, one of them with a Son in Law of his were killed by the Soldiers, another was banished, the other Two were severely hunted and harassed. It is his Fourth Son Quintin Dun I am here to speak of: In December he was taken for his Nonconformity, and indeed he was capable of no other Crimes, not being yet full Fourteen Years of Age. However, the Party of Soldiers took him into Air, and put him in Prison, without having any Thing to lay to his Charge. All this the Boy did bear, with a Stayedness and Composure far beyond his Years. When his Father came to Air, tho' there was nothing worthy of Death or of Bonds to lay to his Door, yet he could not get him liberate, till he paid down Two hundred and forty Pounds. I question if they would have got so much for him, if they had sold him as a Slave, as they did afterwards, as we may hear.

James Dun in Burwhat his sufferings, and that of his Son Quintin Dun, of Fourteen Years of Age.

Having thus gone through what directly relates to the Sufferings this Year, I come to gather up some other Things which came not in so directly upon the former Heads. In March this Year, a Letter comes down from the King to the Council, and one of the same Import to the Lords of Justiciary, ordering Extracts to be made out of the Registers, of the Trials of such as were condemned for Rebellion. The Letter will best speak for itself.

Incidental Things this Year.

CHARLES R.

Right trusty, &c. Whereas we have thought fit to appoint Extracts to be made out of the Books of Adjournal of Our Justice-court, of the Trials of some of the most notorious Rebels, as also of the Trial of John Niven, and those Persons found guilty by a great Assize of Error, and likewise of all Papers whatsoever relating to the Trial of Archibald late Earl of Argyle, and the Process of Forfeiture led against him, to the end the same may be digested and methodized by Charles Hanses of Gray's Inn, Esq; and published for the Satisfaction of Our good Subjects: We have hereby thought fit, to authorize and require you to transmit to Our Secretary of State, to be delivered to the said Charles true and exact Copies of all Proclamations, Letters, Examinations, Confessions, Trials, Indictments, Declarations, and others, since the Decease of our Royal Grandfather King James VI. of blessed Memory, that relate to publick Matters, Our Prerogative, the former and late Rebellions, the Rebels their Suppression or Caption, the Security of the Peace whether in Church or State, or the Advancement of the Interest of Our Bishops and their regular Clergy in that Our ancient Kingdom, and of all Informations, Relations, or Petitions, sent to Our Privy Council from Time to Time, about any Thing of this Nature, as Conventicles, Insurrections, Insolencies, or Cruelties of Fanaticks, and such other Papers of any publick Concern, which you judge most proper to be published, for the Satisfaction of all good Subjects: which are to be attested under the Hand of Our Chancellor. Given at Whitehall, February 21, &c.

King's Letter Feb. 21. ordering Extracts to be sent up from the Registers, of the Trials of Rebels, in order to be methodized and published by Charles Hanses of Gray's Inn, London.

MIDDLETON.

Another Letter to the same Purpose I find recorded March 12. in the Justiciary-registers, ordering Extracts as above, and further requiring 'Copies of the several treasonable Declarations, Proclamations, Bonds of Combination in Sanquhar, Lanerk, Rutherglen, and those affixed to Church Doors, and all Papers relative to David Hackstoun, James Skene, Archibald Stuart of Borrowstounness, John Potter Labourer, Isobel Alison, John Murray Seaman, ' Christopher Another to the same Purpose directed to the Justiciary.

1683. Christopher Miller Weaver, William Gogar in Borrowstounness, Robert Sangster, Adam Philip, Andrew Pittillo, Lawrence Hay, Labourers, Mr. Donald Cargill, Mr. Walter Smith, Mr. James Boig, Preachers, William Thomson Labourer, William Cuthill Seaman in Borrowstounness, Patrick Foreman, Robert Garnock, David Ferry, James Stuart, Alexander Ruffel, Christian Eyfe, Robert Gray an English Gentleman, and John Mein Captain of the Ship called the Fortune of London; as also of Alexander Blair, Lewis Johnstoun, and Thomas Noble, Merchants, Captain John Binning Vintner, Alexander Bothwell of Glencorse, James Baylie Merchant, Mr. Andrew Temple of Raveridge, James Baird of Sauchtounhall, Robert Sandilands, James Gray of Warristoun, John Dundas of Arnistoun, John Lindsay Taylor, Robert Eliot Wright, Alexander Henrison of Newhaven; all which were a grand Affize of Error; and likewise all Debates and Pleadings in the several Processess, which the said Charles shall call for; as also the Trials of any Persons whatsoever, who have been before our Justice-court any way, which they shall think fit to be published.'

What was done in Prosecution of this Design I know not. I have found nothing in the Registers as to any Thing actually sent up, nor heard of any Narrative published at London by Mr. Hanser, or any other of the Extent this seems to have been designed. Whether it was, that, upon Reflection, the Managers were ashamed of their Procedure, or that Sir George Mackenzie had this in his View in the History he was now writing, or what the Reason was, I cannot determine. Had any Thing of this Nature been done with any Sincerity, it would have saved me a great deal of Time and Trouble.

May 22. I find the Laird of Claverhouse is made a Privy Counsellor. We have heard of his particular Diligence in the Persecution, and we shall afterward have more Instances of his Severity, and as a Premium of his unwearied Efforts to bear down the Presbyterians, he is taken into the Management of Affairs by being made a Privy Counsellor.

In June this Year the Business of the Rye-house Plot broke out in England, which I shall very much leave to English Historians. June 21. it was given out that a great Conspiracy was discovered, extraordinary Councils were frequently held, and it was alledged they had Evidence, that a designed Project was formed, when the King was passing betwixt Acremarket and London, to bring in the Wagons loaded with Carriages, at the Time the King was to go through a narrow Passage, this strait Place being stopped by the Wagons, the King's Coach and the Duke's would inevitably be stopped, and at this Time a Dozen of Blunderbushes were to be unloaded upon the King and Duke. And some other Things were shaped out to be done, about the Place called the Rye-house, from which Place this Plot gets its Denomination.

Doctor Spratt, late Bishop of Rochester, hath published the History of this Plot, and it is in every Body's Hands, alledged to have been revised by King Charles before his Death, and printed by King James's special Order. The Author, when only Doctor, struck heartily in with the Duke of York's Measures, and wrote this Narrative with a plain Party-design, and when afterward advanced to a Bishoprick in Queen Anne's Time, sufficiently discovered his Biass to the Side who were no Friends to the Protestant Succession.

This is not a Place to make Reflections upon the Doctor's Performance, so much hugged by People of that Side, I shall leave this to such as write the English History; and as to what relates to Scotland and Scotsmen, I'll now and then have Occasion to set several Things the Doctor misrepresents, in their proper Light. There is one Thing so palpably unfair, and contrary to what he himself relates, as well as other unquestionable Evidences, that I wonder this Performance is so much valued even by his own Party. Page 21. Edit. 4. 1696. he tells us, The whole Proceedings towards the Discovery of the Plot, were managed by all imaginable Integrity, there was no straining or extorting of Accusations, no Temptation of Reward proposed, no Pardon assured beforehand. For the first Branch, it is certain that the English Law did not allow Torture, and yet there seems to have been Straining and Extorting, else why was West Ten times examined? and we have heard Earlstoun was ordered, tho' even under Sentence of Death, to be tortured. The Torture of Mr. Spence and the Reverend Mr. Carstairs, are what every Body knew. And we shall find, when we come to the Case of the last named excellent Person, that he had very large Promises of Reward made him. The Doctor could not but know those and other Strainings and Rewards proposed in this Matter, and with what Sincerity such Paragraphs were published by him, the World will observe.

Much of what the Doctor says, to fix this Plot upon Protestants, seems to be overthrown, and the Plot fixed upon others by that one Fact which is asserted by the best English Historians. Mr. Robert Fergusson was certainly as deep in this Matter as it can be pretended any other was, and yet when Mr. Secretary Jenkins gave a Warrant to Mr. Legate the Messenger, to seize the Persons alledged to be in the Plot, he gave him likewise the strictest Orders not to take Mr. Fergusson, yea, to shun him, and if he should meet with him, even to suffer him to escape. The Consequences of this are obvious, and Bishop Kennet very justly observes, 'that the Fashion of the Court was now to disbelieve the whole of the Popish Plot, and to talk of nothing but the Plot of the Presbyterians.' Of which Malate Writer says, Most People looked on it as the Contrivance of the Jesuits to baffle the Popish Plot, and crush the Ring-

Claverhouse made a Privy Counsellor.

The Rye-house Plot breaks out in June.

Doctor Spratt's
Narrative of it.

Remarks on it.

leaders of that Party, who for several Years had so warmly endeavoured to prevent King James's Accession to the Throne. He afterward remarks, that many concerned were executed in King Charles's Time, and upon King James's Accession, the Court being resolved to prosecute the rest, ' the eloquent Pen of Doctor Spratt was industriously set on Work to palliate the Flaws of Keeling and other Witnesses Depositions: Accordingly in the Beginning of June, he published his Account of the Plot, adorned with all the Flourishes of Oratory, which are so far from perswading, that they rather give Truth an Air of Fiction. But however, as Affairs were then managed, Romance was as fit to serve the Court as true History. ' But I shall leave the Doctor's Performance.

1683.

That at this Time the Duke of York's engrossing all into his Hands, and the wide Steps taken for introducing Papists and Popery, awakened some Noblemen and Gentlemen to meet together secretly, and consult upon Measures proper for the preserving the Protestant Religion, and Liberty of the Subject, is very plain, and that some of the best and greatest Men in the Age were concerned in these innocent Meetings : But that ever my Lord Russell, Colonel Sidney, the Earl of Argyle, the Laird of Jerviswood, Mr. William Carstairs and others, were dipped into any murderous Design, is denied by themselves, was never proven against them, nor never will be.

This will appear at more length, when I come to hint at the particular Processes of the Scotsmen said to be concerned in the Plot. All I design here, is but to give a very short Hint of what I meet with in the Registers this Year upon this Head. A Letter comes down to the Council, dated June 27. acquainting them with the Plot, and ordering them to search for Mr. Robert Fergusson, and requiring them to compare a Letter of Jerviswood's, as was supposed, with one in his Hand, which Ewistun had. June 28. I find the English Proclamation against the Plotters, as they were called, published, ordering James Duke of Monmouth, Ford Lord Gray, Sir Thomas Armstrong, and Mr. Robert Fergusson, to be apprehended. And indeed this Plot, as to the murdering Part of it, seems to have been contrived by the Duke of York, for the staining the Duke of Monmouth and Buccleugh, and getting him removed for ever from Court ; and several excellent Gentlemen in England were sacrificed to this Jealousy of the Duke of York

Orders to the Council upon the breaking out of the Plot

I find another Letter was read in Council, July 2. bearing, ' Whereas we have thought fit, for the Good of our Service, to appoint all our Officers of State, our Privy Counsellors and all others employed in any Trust and Station, not to depart out of that our ancient Kingdom without Leave from us or you, it is now Our Will and Pleasure, and we do hereby authorize and require you, in such a Manner as you see most proper, to order all the forefaids to attend our Service in their Stations, and not to depart forth of the Kingdom on their Peril.

A Letter ordering none to leave the Kingdom without Licence.

July 4. The Council issue out a Proclamation against the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth, and others named in it, which I have insert App. No. 88. Where the Reader will see, that all Englishmen which came to Scotland since June 20. are immediately to be apprehended, all Ships are to be searched, and every Person who cannot make it appear he is come on the account of Trade alienarly, is to be seized, and an Embargo is laid upon all Ships, and they discharged to sail till they give in Lists of all Persons aboard their Vessel, with several other arbitrary Clauses which the English Proclamation wants. And indeed, our Doers at Edinburgh were accustomed to a great many Severities and heavy Articles, in their Proclamations and other publick Papers, which the English were absolute Strangers to.

Proclamation July 4. agtst the Duke of Buccleugh App. No. 88.

That same Day a Proclamation was published in the Terms of the above Letter, discharging all Officers of the Army, of State, Privy Counsellors, and Magistrates, to go off the Kingdom, and ordering them most strictly to their Posts. It is before me, but needs not be insert. And at the same Diet the Council send up a most flattering Address to the King, congratulating his Majesty upon the Discovery of the Plot, and acquainting him, that they were appointing a Thanksgiving for this.

It is August 7. before this Proclamation for Thanksgiving be insert in the Records, and it is September 9. before it is kept. The Occasion of this Delay seems to have been to keep Pace with England in theirs. The Trials of the excellent Lord Russell, Captain Walcot, Mr. Forse, and some others, are in every Body's Hands, and their Speeches and Letters in Print. When those were dispatched under Colour of Law, and the Government, or rather the Duke of York, were rid of some whom they were unwilling should live, a Day of Thanksgiving is appointed for his Majesty's merciful Deliverance, in England and Ireland. The English Declaration is pretty large, and alledges a general Insurrection was designed, and that a Correspondence was established in Scotland, and that the Earl of Argyle, Lord Melvil, Sir John Cochran, Mr. William Carstairs and others, were concerned in it. This Paper was reprinted with the Scots Proclamation, and ordered for Solemnity's sake to be read Twice from every Pulpit, to impress the People the more with ill Thoughts of the Presbyterians on whom they would fix the Plot. I have inserted this Declaration App. No. 89. There are several Proclamation for a Thanksgiving Aug. 7.

English Declaration about the Plot App. No. 89.

1683.

See Proclamation, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 90.
Remains on it.

Matters of Fact in it, which, I doubt not, were laid before the King and Council, but afterwards were discovered to be groundless and false. It is dated July 28. 1683.

The Scots Proclamation is dated August 7. and 'tis inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 90. To throw an Odium upon the Presbyterians in Scotland, it is intituled, Proclamation inditing a Thanksgiving for the Deliverance from the fanatical Conspiracy; and fanatical, the ordinary Term for expressing Presbyterians, is joyned in the Body of the Proclamation, with atheistical and republican Principles, and named in the first Room, as being, in the Sense of the Penner of this Proclamation, the worst of the Three. They likewise make the King to say, That Providence had often delivered him by Miracles; and in a few Lines again, 'tis termed a miraculous Deliverance. How well this came from the Pen of Court-parasites, and flattering Ministers, I shall not determine; but 'tis plain, common Decency might have kept them from putting this in the King's own Mouth, especially since it was not true.

What I meet with further in the Registers this Year, as to the Scots Gentlemen alledged to be concerned in the Plot, I shall delay to the next, because it will come in with more Advantage, when the particular Processes against them fall in; and this Year, the Processes are almost but tabled against them.

It is not my Work to take Notice of the Prosecutions in England upon this score, otherwise, besides the worthy Persons already named, I might acquaint the Reader, that November 21. this Year, that good and great Man Algernon Sidney was executed. One of the great Articles insisted upon against him, were some Things alledged to be of a seditious Nature, pretended to be under his Hand, among some Papers that were found in his Closet. If I mistake not, it was a loose Leaf or Two of that Gentleman's excellent Discourse upon Government, since published, and so justly and generally valued. Mr. Sidney pleaded, that the comparing of those alledged Papers of his Writing, with Letters produced under his own Subscription, and the Likeness of both, was no sufficient Evidence they were his Writing, since he offered, in a few Hours, to produce Writ so like any Hand should be given him, that the Court should not be able to distinguish: And further, that it was very hard to make a Man answerable for every Thing found in his Closet, when the spreading or publishing it to others, was not so much as alledged. But all those Defences were over-ruled, and this great Man was sentenced to die. This Instance comes nearest our sanguinary Measures in Scotland, of many Things I meet with in England.

The Design of these arbitrary Steps was against the Duke of Monmouth and his Friends;

These violent Methods were the Effects of the Spite and Rage of the Duke of York, against his Rival the Duke of Monmouth and Buccleugh; and it was to remove him from the King, and to fright his Friends, and the Asserters of the Nation's Liberty, that these bloody Steps pointed at. The Duke himself was forced to abscond for some Time, tho' 'tis plain enough, that the Correspondence 'twixt his Father and him did not break off; and he found Means, by his Friends, so fully to vindicate himself from any Share in the alledged Plot, that in a little Time he got Liberty to appear openly at Court, and was received with plain Affection by the King his Father.

This Extremity displeased the Duke of York and his Party, and therefore his Creatures used the utmost Diligence to impress the Court and King with Stories to the Duke of Monmouth's Disadvantage, and at length prevailed with the King to dismiss him from his Presence. This was so great a Point gained, that an Express comes down with the Accounts of it to our Managers at Edinburgh, who were entirely the Duke of York's Servants, and they find it convenient to read them in Council; and the curious Reader will be gratified with the authentick Account of this Matter, which is as follows, from their Books.

Upon the 12 of December, his Majesty was pleased to acquaint the Lords of Council, that since he had received the Duke of Monmouth into his Mercy, having had several Reports, that the said Duke's Servants, and others from him, endeavoured to make it believed, that he had not made a Confession to his Majesty of the late Conspiracy, nor owned the Share he himself had in it; his Majesty had thought fit, for the Vindication of the Truth of what the said Duke had declared to himself, his Royal Highness being present, to require him in Writing, by way of Letter under his own Hand, to acknowledge the same; which the Duke having refused to do in the Terms commanded him, his Majesty was so much offended therewith, that he had forbidden him his Presence, and commanded him to depart the Court. And for the Information of the Council, his Majesty directed the Letter the Duke had been required to sign, to be entred as follows, and was pleased to declare that the same should be no Secret. A Copy of the Letter, transcribed from the Copy of his Majesty's own Hand-writing, follows.

I Have heard of some Reports of me, as if I should have lessened the late Plot, and gone about to discredit the Evidence given against those who died by Justice. Your Majesty and the Duke know, how ingenuously I have owned the late Conspiracy. Altho' I was not conscious of any Design against your Majesty's Life; yet I lament the having had so great a Share in the other Part of the said Conspiracy. Sir, I have taken the Liberty to put this in Writing, for my own Vindication, and I beseech you to look forward, and endeavour to Cite of Algernon Sidney executed in England for the Plot, comes near to our arbitrary Measures in Scotland.

And the King is prevailed with to dismiss him.

Account of this in the Council-books.

to forget the Faults you have forgiven me. I will take Care never to commit any more against you, or to come within the Danger of being misled from my Duty, but make it the Business of my Life to deserve the Pardon your Majesty hath granted to 1683.

Tour dutiful, M.

At first View, one would think this Letter is in such safe Generals, that the Duke of Monmouth needed not have scrupled to sign it; but this was a Contrivance his Enemy put upon his Father, and he considered the Handle the Duke of York would have made even of this much under his Hand; and that this yielding to the King would not have secured the Duke from the After-designs of the Popish Party: And being confident of his own Innocence, and not without Hope of the King's good Intentions to him, tho' at present put upon by the Duke of York, he retired a second Time, and so the Duke of York had the more Room for executing the Designs, probably now hatching, which afterwards broke out, when the King was thinking to make himself easy for his whole Life, by a Change of People about him, in the King's sudden Removal.

Let me only remark further, that this Account, recorded at the King's Command in the Council-books, appears more probable than the Story Dr. Spratt hath, Page 208, 209. That the Duke first signed the Letter, and then got it back from the King.

I come to end my Accounts of this Year, by taking Notice, That while our Council and Army are imployed in harassing the poor Country in Scotland, and the Courtiers and Duke of York in discovering the Rye-house Plot, the loyal Oxford Gentlemen publish their famous Decree upon the 21 of July, against the Books and Tenets specified in it. The University declare the Tenets they are pleased to condemn, contrary to Scripture, Councils, Fathers, &c. and order the Books they name to be burnt, and appoint all their Readers, Tutors, Fellows, &c. to teach the Doctrine of absolute Submission to the King. A great many of the Books the Oxford Decree sent to the Flames, are of a Scots Extract, and this Nation needs neither be ashamed of the Authors or their Productions. They are, Buchanan de jure regni, Knox's History, Calderwood's Altare Damascenum, Rutherford's Lex Rex, Nepephali, the Apologetical Relation, the History of the Indulgence, and to crown all, the solemn League and Covenant.

I have, tho' it doth not immediately relate to my Subject, insert in the Appendix, this Decree for passive Obedience, and slavish Principles, because it is not in every Body's Hands to whom this History may come; and it contains a very lively Evidence of the arbitrary and tyrannical Measures that were a pursuing at this Time, through these Three Nations. The Reader hath it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 91.

And if we look over to France in July this Year, we shall find a patheticall Petition of the French Protestants presented to their King. They held their Meetings and Conventions in the Fields as well as Scots Presbyterians; and I have annexed it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 92. Whether that grand Oppressor of Protestants copied from the Management in Britain during this Reign, or if rather the Procedure of the Two Royal Brothers among us, was in Concert with him, and paved the Way to his beloved Project of rooting out the Northern Heresy, I leave to others to determine. A large Parallel might be run betwixt the noble Confessors in France, and the persecuted Party in Scotland, 'twixt the Laws made against the Reformed there, and those against Presbyterians here, and the rigorous Execution of both; but these would take up too much Time and Room. I only mention what might be done this way, that the Reader may notice this moving and affectionate Petition, as a material Vindication of the persecuted Party here. And because of the near Relation to the same Subject, I insert likewise App. N<sup>o</sup>. 93. another Petition of the same French Protestants, presented by the Marshal Schomberg, and the Marquis of Ravigny, whether before or after the former I cannot at present determine.

September 19. a Letter comes down from the King to the Council, ordering the fugitive Rolls to be printed. This was delayed for some Time. December 17. I find, the Lords of Justiciary order the fugitive Roll of Lanerk, to be amended, upon a Declaration of Sir John Harper and the Laird of Wishaw, that many named in it were dead, and some not in Being; and next Day, the Council delay the printing of the fugitive Rolls till March next, being informed by the Justices, that they are not yet in Readiness. There is no doubt some People made a good deal of Money by this Delay.

To end the Accounts of this Year, upon the 28 of November, the general Meeting of the united Societies drew up a Protestaion against the Scots Congregation, Ministers and Session, at Rotterdam, and sent it over to Mr. Hamilton their Agent, without any Orders to print or publish it, as, I find, they themselves notice in the Register of their Proceedings. Mr. Hamilton put them upon these violent Measures, and being personally piqued, and, as he thought, affronted by the Minister and Session there, at his own Hand printed the Paper.

1683.

Oxford Decree, July 21.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 91.

Petition Protestants in France to their King. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 92.

A Parallel 'twixt the French and Scots Persecution.

Another Petition, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 93.

Procedure about the fugitive Rolls, September and December.

Protestation of the Society People, against the Ministers and Session of Rotterdam, Nov. 28.

1683.

Remarks on it.

It runs mostly upon the Indulgence, and the Session at Rotterdam their admitting such as had heard the indulged Ministers, and given Bonds of Peace, &c. in Scotland, to communicate with them. The Paper hath been more than once printed, and I need not reprint it, especially when the Societies, in their apologetical Vindication, recede from several Things in it; and afterwards, when Mr. Hamilton began to discover himself, and they came to be less under his Management, they own, that though they had Matter for a Protestation, yet the Manner of going about it, without previous acquainting the Persons concerned, was what they did not approve; and they acknowledge several Expressions and Words used in that Paper, some of them were unsuitable, and others untender, bitter, and offensive.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1684.

Progressive Nature of Persecution.

THE Nature of Persecution is progressive and growing, and it can scarce be otherwise; one Sin is a native Inlet unto another, and the Wicked wax worse and worse. Malice, Envy, and Enmity, against Religion and its Followers, are insatiable; and the Lord, in the Depth of his righteous Judgment, suffers Sinners to harden themselves, and go on from evil to worse, till their Cup fill. Success in Sin emboldneth the Actors, and Thirst after Blood, like a Fever, still increases till a Crisis happen.

Which appears
this Year.

Accordingly, the Reader will find a cruel oppressive Spirit mightily upon the Increase in Scotland, this Year; the Work is turning easy, Hardships upon Presbyterians ordinary, and the Trade is gainful to not a few. Towards the End of the Year, a vast many Gentlemen, formerly out of their Reach, were attacked, and the Prospect of having a Share of swinging Fines, as good, if not better, as Forfeitures, made the Sentences go glibly on. Some of the best of the Nation were attacked, and the Duke of Tork had every Thing going in Scotland, according to his Wish.

Contents of
this Chapter.

We have this Year a new Scene of Blood, and publick Executions were frequent; and, during this Summer, Murders in cold Blood in the Fields are beginning, and we shall meet with great Numbers of them next Year.

The universal pressing of the Test, was a noble Handle for Persecution. Fines and Banishments are most frequent. The Garisons and lesser Courts, by Citations and Searches, harass the Country; and the larger Circuits bring Persons of better Quality to a great deal of Trouble. Great Numbers of Gentlemen of Note and Rank, are most exorbitantly fined, to the Value of their real Estates; and this Year is shut up with the Martyrdom of that excellent and extraordinary Person the Laird of Jerviswood.

In this Heap of Matter, where the Rigour and Severity of the Persecution is indeed far beyond any Notion I can give, or the lame Accounts that now, after so many Years, can be had, I cannot observe that Order I could desire; yet, to essay this as much as the Vastness and Variety of the Matter will allow, I shall give some Account of the Procedure of the Council this Year, from the Records, both more generally in their Acts and Commissions, and more particularly in their Processes against Gentlemen, Ministers, and others: And next, I design to lay before the Reader, the Processes before the criminal Courts, and the Forfeitures and Deaths enacted by them, with a more distinct Account of the Processes with relation to the alledged Plot. Then natively will follow the Procedure at the Circuits, and the exorbitant Fines after them, with some other Hints which came not in so well on the former Heads. This will afford Matter for Eight Sections.

S E C T. I.

1684.

Of the Procedure of the Council, relative to the Sufferings this Year 1684.

THe Privy Council, as influenced now, not only by the Clergy, but a Habit of Severity, heightened by Gain and Incomes from the Fines, was the great Spring of all the Persecution, and therefore I begin with distinct Accounts of their Procedure, as the Foundation of the other Branches of Persecution. There was not much Need of any new Acts, but a vigorous Prosecution of those made, and giving Commissions to particular Persons, with a Council and Judiciary Power. As I have done on the former Years, I here just run through what they did, in the Order of Time it fell out.

Procedure of the Council

Fines were one of the fore Oppressions the poor Country came under in the former Years, as we have heard; the most Part of them were pocketed and squandred away in Profanity, and it was but a small Part of the that ever was accounted for. The Duke of Queensberry and others of the prime Managers had observed this, and grudged it; wherefore last Year a Letter was impetrate from the King upon this Subject, which was read and recorded in the Council-books, January 3. this Year, and follows.

King's Letter about Fines received Jan. 3.

C H A R L E S R.

Right trusty, &c. Whereas We are informed, that since the Indemnity, granted by Us soon after the Rebellion at Bothwell-bridge was defeated by the Blessing of God upon Our Forces, a great Number of Fines were imposed by several of Our Judges and Magistrates, in that Our ancient Kingdom, upon Heritors, on the account of Fanatick Irregularities and Disorders, whereof a Part hath been uplifted by them, or others by their Appointment. It is now Our Will and Pleasure, and We hereby authorize and require you forthwith to call all such Judges and Magistrates to an Account of what Fines, or any Part thereof, they, or any others by their Order have received, and to take Care that with all convenient and legal Diligence, all, or such a Part of the said Fines not yet raised, as Our Privy Council there shall think fit to determine, be uplifted and received from the said Heritors, to the end that the same, as well as what is already received, may be brought into Our Exchequer, to be disposed of to such Uses, and in such Manner as We shall hereafter think fit to appoint. Providing always, that the Remainder of such Fines be not discharged, but left as an Award over their Heads, for their good Behaviour in Time coming, accordingly to be raised, or not, hereafter, as Our said Privy Council shall think fit for Our Service: And in regard it is reasonable and just, that such of the Officers of Our Forces as are or shall be employed in the extraordinary Commissions granted, or to be granted in relation to Fanatick Disorders, have not only their Charges allowed, but a Reward given them for their good Behaviour, We require Our Treasurer-principal, and Our Chancellor, to transmit to Us an Account of all such Charges as Our Officers are at, and of such Sums as they judge reasonable to be bestowed on them, to the end that We may declare Our further Pleasure. Given at Whitehall April 5. and of Our Reign the Thirty fifth Year.

M U R R A Y.

This Letter is directed to the Lord Marquis of Queensberry, Lord high Treasurer-principal, and Lord Treasurer-depute, and was remitted to a Committee, who were to bring in a Report. And,

Remitted to a Committee.

January 10. the Committee about the Fines reported, 'That having considered his Majesty's Letter, and the Council's Remit, it is their Opinion, that a Distinction cannot be made of Persons guilty or less guilty, or altogether free, or who shall deserve his Majesty's Favour or not, till the Persons decerned upon the Decreets, and their particular Case be considered upon their Application: And that therefore Letters of Horning, under the Council's Signet, should be direct upon the Sentence of the Sheriff-depute of Renfrew, as to the Heritors of that Shire in the first Place, to make Payment of their Fines in Fifteen Days, being the ordinary Term of Law; and that they or any of them who shall make Application, shall be heard before the Council; and that after the discussing of that Shire, such another Shire may be discussed as the Council shall think fit.'

Their Report Jan. 10.

The Council approve, and order the Persons charged to be heard on their Application, by way of Suspension. According to this Act, we shall, in the following Section, find a good

Heritors of Renfrew Shire attacked

1684.

Mr. Ezekiel
Montgomery
Sheriff depute,
imprisoned.

Petition of Hugh Wallace
Cash-keeper.

many of the Heritors of Renfrew, Matthew Stuart, Falside, Balgray, Brisbane, and others, have Suspensions and Reductions of their Decrets granted them. Sir John Blaxwell of Abernethy Pollock, and others of the Presbyterian Gentlemen of that Shire, were in Dependence before the Justice-court, and at the End of the Year came under most unaccountable Fines. Mean while, February 12. Mr. Ezekiel Montgomery Sheriff-depute, is ordered to be seized for many Malversations in his Office, some of them we have heard, and more will fall in.

Whether the Council went on to examine the Procedure about Fines in other Shires, I know not. All I meet with further in the Registers upon this Head, is a Petition from Hugh Wallace his Majesty's Cash-keeper, April 17. shewing, ' That the Council, by their late Act, ' were pleased to ordain Letters of Horning to be direct against all the Magistrates within ' this Kingdom, who had not made Report of their Diligence, against such as were guilty of ' Ecclesiastical Disorders, and to deliver in their Decrets and Sentences to the Lord Treasurer, Treasurer-depute, or your Petitioner in their Name, to the effect Diligence may be ' done against the Persons liable for such a Part of those Fines as belong to his Majesty. ' Conform thereunto the Magistrates of Edinburgh have been charged to give in their Decrets, which they having done, it appears the Fines received by them extend to 8349. lib. ' 12. sh. Scots, given in at the Bar. The Magistrates are ordained to pay the said Sum to ' his Majesty's Cash-keeper. And upon a Petition from the late Magistrates, to have some Allowance for the Expences and Trouble they were at, in putting the Laws in Execution ' against the Delinquents, the Council allowed them to retain the Sum of Two hundred ' Pounds Sterling, which is to be distributed among the late Magistrates for their Care in that ' Matter; that the Council may ordain the Superplus to be paid into the Cash-keeper. ' They do so, and appoint it to remain in his Hands, till it be considered what Part belongs to the King, as having a Right to Heritors Fines, and what to the Town, as being the Fines of Burgeffes and others, not Heritors.

I meet with no more about this Act. If it was put in Execution with relation to the other Burghs and Shires, where Fines were uplifted, it would amount to a prodigious Sum; and we may see what large Allowances were made to the Magistrates, who were severe in Execution of the Laws about Fines.

January 23. the Council send a Letter to the King by the Earl of Perth, seeking Liberty to dispense in some Cases with the Fines imposed upon Husbands, for the Disorders of their Wives. The Case came natively in upon the forementioned Act, and therefore I annex it here.

May it please your Majesty,

YOur Majesty's Parliament did wisely foresee, that withdrawing from the Church would leave your Majesty's Subjects to be deluded with rebellious Principles, and necessarily occasion these Field-conventicles, which have proved to be actual Rebellion, and are by your Parliaments called the Rendevouzes of Rebellion, and therefore they ordained all Persons who withdrew to be fined. And such who are intrusted to put the Laws in Execution, against that or other Ecclesiastical Disorders, having on all Occasions represented to your Privy Council, that Women were the chief Fomenters of these Disorders, and that nothing could restrain them, except making Husbands liable for their Fines: They considering, that in all other Cases of the like Nature, Husbands were liable by your Acts of Parliament for the Fines of their Wives; and that therefore, by the Analogy of Law, and Parity of Reason, the best Interpreters of all Law, they ought to be so in this Case also, did, upon those and many other Considerations herewith represented to your Majesty, find the Husbands accordingly to be liable.'

But because in Matters of Government, and Laws relating to it, your sacred Majesty, as the Fountain of all Justice as well as Power, is the best Interpreter, and your Approbation adds much Vigour to the Law, and encourages such as are to put it in Execution, we have sent the Earl of Perth your Justice-general to represent the whole Case to your Majesty, who will inform you fully of all the Reasons and Occasions of our Procedure, and answer such Questions as your Majesty may desire to be satisfied in, as to this or any other Matters relating to your Government here, which could not be done by a Letter. And we do, with Submission to your Royal Pleasure, desire an Approbation of what we have done in this Particular, with Power to dispense with the Fines of loyal Husbands, as are no ways to be suspected of Connivance with their obstinate Wives, but are content to deliver them up to be punished. We are your most, &c.

J. Drummond,	Tweddale,	Aberdeen Cancel.
Geo. Mackenzie,	Balcarras,	Alex. St. Andrews,
Geo. Mackenzie,	Livingstone,	Arthur Glasgow,
Jam. Fowles,	Jo. Eainburgh,	Queensberry,
And. Ramsay,	Elphinstoun,	Hamilton,
J. Lockhart,	Kinnaird,	Montrose,
J. Graham,	J. Falconar,	Linlithgow.

Follows

Council's Letter about the Fines imposed upon Husbands.

Follows the Tenor of the Reasons mentioned in the foregoing Letter, which induced the Council to be of Opinion, that Husbands should be liable for their Wives Fines in case of Delinquencies. 1684.

1. BY Act 7. Parl. 2. Sess. 2. Char. II. the Parliament appoints every Person to be fined who shall withdraw, which certainly must include Men and Women; and therefore there being no other Punishment imposed but that of fining, that fining behoved to be effectual, else the Law resolved in nothing: But so it is, that except Husbands be liable for the Fines, the Fine was no Punishment, because Women, who were the great Transgressors in this Point, have no Estate out of which they can pay Fines.

Reasons why
Husbands ought to be liable for their Wives Fines.

2. The Goods during the Marriage being in Communion, and the Husband having the Power over them, he should therefore in the Construction of the common Law, be liable in the Payment of the Fines imposed by Act of Parliament, without expressing this particularly, tho' sometimes it be expressed.

3. The Parliament having consented, that the Wives should be fined, they consented consequentially that the Husbands should pay it; for it is a common Rule in Law, When any Thing is granted, every Thing is granted, without which that cannot be made effectual.

4. Laws are to be interpreted by Analogy, for that is the presumed Will of the Law-givers, which has been usually allowed in all other Cases of this Nature; but so it is, that in all other Cases Husbands are made liable for their Wives Fines. Act 104. Parl. 7. Jam. VI. Papists are ordained to pay the Fines of their Wives using Popish Superstitions; and by the 38 Act, Parl. 1. Sess. 2. Husbands are ordained to pay their Wives Fines for swearing and cursing. And many other Acts, such as those against Conventicles and others, Husbands are also liable, and Parents are also liable for their Children, where there is no Act for it.

5. Laws are to be interpreted by Parity of Reason; but so it is, there is as great Reason for their being liable for their Wives Fines in this as in any Thing else.

6. Publick Interest, and the Necessity of the Government, is by all Lawyers thought a good Reason for extending Laws by Parity of Reason; and without Husbands being liable, it is impossible to preserve the Peace, or prevent Rebellion.

It was urged by Lawyers for the Defenders, that it was hard that Husbands in that Case should be liable for their Wives. To which it is answered, that Rebellion is a harder Case, and that has not been considered, in the like Cases which were as hard, by the Parliament.

2. That the former immediate Law made the Husbands liable, and therefore must be presumed to have omitted this designedly. To which it is answered, that having in other Acts expressed this, they needed not here, or at least that this was but an Omission, which in a Thousand other Cases is supplied from a Parity of Reason, and publick Interest, being universal Laws.

3. That this Law may be made practicable by Imprisonment of Wives. To which it is answered, that neither has the Law appointed Imprisonment, and if we must recur to Inferences and Consequences, the one is as reasonable as the other: But it is impossible to make the Act practicable by Imprisonment, for Offenders know we cannot imprison so many as may be guilty; but Fines is a present Punishment, and so terrible, the one makes the Husband active to persuade the Wife, but the other does not; and if a Fine once become a Debt by a Sentence, no Woman can be imprisoned for Debt during Marriage.

4. This may be dangerous to loyal Husbands. To which it is answered, that the Case by Experience is known to occur seldom; for before this way of Execution there were many Offenders; yet it is now known there are very few honest Men in those Circumstances, and if they be, they are in the Mercy of a King, who is compassionate even to Rebels, and his Majesty may empower his Council as to this.

The Occasion of this Letter was a Petition from Sir William Scot of Harden, who, we heard, was most exorbitantly fined last Year, and continued in Prison for his Lady's Irregularities. It would seem, the Bulk of the Council were not for insisting on the Fine as to him. This will come in afterwards on his Sufferings, and yet the Matter was put over upon the King, and this Letter and Reasons appointed to be sent him, and the Lords of the Clergy, such Counsellors as are Lawyers, and Duke Hamilton were appointed to draw them.

An Answer from the King comes down, February 12. bearing, 'That his Majesty approves Husbands being fined for their Wives, but authorizes the Council to dispense with the Fines on loyal Husbands, who do not connive at their obstinate Wives Ways, and are willing to deliver them Prisoners.'

In the Entry of this Year new Commissions are granted to the following Persons. This Method saved them the Charges and Solemnity of a Circuit, and did their Business as effectually and more arbitrarily. Commissions granted the Year.

1684.

Commission for Lanerk and Dumfries with Justiciary Powers.

January 3. Commission is granted as follows. ' Charles R. To all Our loving Subjects: Forasmuch as We being informed, that divers desperate Rebels do haunt and frequent about Glasgow, Dumfries, and other Places in the Shire of Lanerk, and other western Shires, some whereof are apprehended and imprisoned for being in the late Rebellion, who treasonably justify the same, or deny and disown Our Authority and Sovereignty: And We finding it necessary for Our Service, that Justice be done upon the Place upon such desperate and malicious Rebels, which may be more expeditely done, and of greater Example, We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, hereby give and grant full Power and Authority, and express Commission to the present Provost of Glasgow, the Bailie of the Regality there, the Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, Sir James Turner and Lieutenant-colonel Windram, or any Three of them, as Our Judges in that Part, for judging the Persons guilty of the said Crimes, who are or shall be apprehended, in the Shires of Lanerk or Dumbar-ton, or Jurisdictions within the same, they not being Heritors.'

For Dumfries,
Kirkcudbright,
Wigtoun, and Anandale.

' And to James Alexander Sheriff-depute of Dumfries, the eldest Bailie for the Time there, James Johnstoun of Westeraw Stewart-depute of Anandale, Thomas Lidderdale of Ile Stewart-depute of Kirkcudbright, David Graham Brother to Claverhouse, Bruce of Abbotshall, Captain Strachan, William Graham Cornet to Claverhouse, or any Three of them, for trying and judging such Persons in Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, Wigtoun, and Anandale.'

' With Power to meet when and where they please, to hold Courts, create Members, call before them the Persons foresaid not being Heritors, and put them to the Trial of an Assize, and pass Sentence, and see Justice done accordingly, conform to Law, and this Commission to continue till recalled, recommending to the Advocate and the Clerk of the Justice-court, to send fit and qualified Persons to serve as Deputies for them, before Our said Justices, promitten. to hold firm and stable.'

D. Falconar,	Livingstone,	Montrose,	Queensberry,
Jam. Fowlis,	Jo. Edinburgh,	Lintithgow,	Athole.
Southesk,	Douglas,	Aberdeen Cancel.

For Renfrew
and Airshire.

February 19. I find another Commission granted in the very same Terms, and with the same Powers, only Renfrew and Airshire are included, to the Lord Ross, the Provost of Glasgow, Sir William Fleming of Ferm, Lieutenant-colonel Windram, Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, Sir James Turner, Somerwel of Spittle, and William Stirling Bailie of the Regality of Glasgow, or any five of them.

Several Persons were condemned, by virtue of this Commission, at Glasgow, in March, and I scarce think they would spare all who came before them at Dumfries, the Commissioners being a Set of the most violent Persecutors of that Time, yet I have no Accounts of their Procedure. The Account of those executed at Glasgow, I shall delay till the third Section, where the publick Executions will come in.

New Directions give to these Commissioners, Feb. 28.

Meane while I find those Commissioners corresponding with the Council, and receiving Directions from them. February 28. ' The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered a Letter from the Commissioners of Justiciary at Glasgow, containing some Doubts and Queries as to their Procedure against the Persons indicted before them, in the Cases where Pannels are silent, or make no direct Answers, or such who, albeit guilty, yet offer to take the Test. In those the Lords allow them to delay Procedure against them, and administer the Test to such as desire it, and to acquaint the Council with their particular Cases and Repentance, that they may give particular Directions therein. And the Lords expect, where Probation is clear as to any who were actually in the Rebellion, and assert treasonable Principles, that they will proceed against such, and cause Justice be done according to their Commission.

The same Orders are repeated to the Justices at Dumfries, with this Alteration, that when the Pannels refuse to answer, and there is no Probation, the Justices send them into Edinburgh.

And upon another Case, which offered as to Persons without the Bounds specified in their Commission, April 22. the Council declare, ' That their Commissioners for judging Rebels in the several Shires, ought to proceed against Rebels without the Bounds of their Commission, wherever they formerly lived, or were apprehended, as against those within the same Shire, they being brought to them, and to proceed in all respects, as if this had been a Clause of their Commission. ' This is all I meet with as to these Justiciary Commissions.

Remarks on
these.

They are plain Instances of the Bloodiness of this Time. There had been very lately Circuits, the Justice Court was sitting at Edinburgh, and this Year we shall meet with new Circuits: Yet to awe the poor Country, and to dispatch the People they had apprehended in their Searches, and were daily catching, this Power is granted, and was exercised with much Severity.

Perhaps

Perhaps it might be to prepare Matters for this Country Justiciary, that the Laird of Mel- drum, January 14. gets Commission to make Trial for Rebels in Lanerk Shire. The Reason 1684. given is, the Council was informed of some Disorders and Insolencies committed in Carstairs and Lefmahago, by stabbing some Dragoons Horses, and taking away some Goods and Corns belonging to Rebels. Commission to Malden.

It seems, all their Diligence for recovering the Fines got into the Hands of Under-magistrates, and the uplifting of what was not paid, had little Effect through the Country. And therefore a new Commission to Colonel Thomas Buchan, is granted by the Council, to uplift those Fines in the Shire of Air, much in the same Terms of some granted last Year.

That same Day, April last, the Council make another Act, which was the Occasion of further Oppression of the Country. The Lords of Council being informed, that since the Justice Court (the Circuits I suppose are meant) divers of these Rebels denounced for not appearing before the Justices, have been harboured, reset, entertained by several disaffected Persons in the western Shires, to the great Encouragement of them to persist in those rebellious Courses, give Orders to the Sheriffs and other Deputes, and the ordinary Magistrates and Officers of the Army, to inform themselves of the Persons guilty of the Reset of Rebels, and to lead Probation for proving thereof before themselves, and where they find the same proven, to search for and apprehend the Persons guilty of the Reset of Rebels, and imprison them till they be brought to Justice; recommending to the Commissioners of the Justiciary in the several Shires, to do Justice upon some of those, not being Heritors, most guilty, and the Heritors to be tried and judged by the Justice Court; and recommend it to the Lord Treasurer and Treasurer-depute, to commissionate some fit Persons in the Country, to sequestrate, secure, sell and dispose upon the Goods and Moveables of these Resetters, whether Heritors or not, after they shall be found guilty as aforesaid, and have subscribed Lists of their Names from those who shall adduce Probation against them, to be made for coming for his Majesty's Use.

Council's Act
about Rebel Rebels, April
last.

It hath been frequently observed, that Nonconformity, Reset and Converse are at this Time the Two great Pretexes made Use of for Persecution, the most Part of such who were actually in the Risings being either cut off, or out of the Country; and we see how carefully the Managers prosecute both. This last, of Reset and Converse, was what the whole Country were one way or other engaged in, since People concerned in the Risings were overlooked for Two or Three Years, and frequented Fairs and Markets, and all other publick Meetings, undisturbed. And now by this Act, the leading Probation against, and Trial of such Persons, is committed to the Officers of the Army, with Power to search for, apprehend, and imprison Persons guilty. Thus the Execution of the Laws and Justice is committed to the Army, the Consequences of which need not be insisted upon. We shall have a View of them in the general Hints of Persecution this Year, to be cast together in the last Section. I only remark as to the Persecution for Nonconformity, it turned more extensive, by the turning out of the indulged Ministers, which was almost completed this Year, and so the Persecutors had new Matter to work on, in many Parishes formerly not open to them.

Remarks upon
it.

Another Thing the Council are taken up with, is the Banishment and Transportation of a great many of the meaner Sort, and some others, to the Plantations. Indeed, by the Methods we have heard of, the Prisons were overstocked, and there was not Room for these they were daily apprehending: Therefore, in a Letter to the King, April 11. they humbly offer to his Majesty's Consideration, whether it be not fit to empower his Council to send abroad such of the Rebels as appear penitent, tho' they take not the Test, because the Prisons are full, and Ships are going to the Plantations, and they have Reason to believe, that, if this be granted, it will encourage other Planters to free the Nation of such Persons.

Council's Letter
to the King
April 11. desiring Liberty to banish Rebels to the Plantations.

To this Request comes an Answer, dated April 24. 'Wherein the King declares it is his Pleasure, that such of the Rebels as are found penitent, be sent to the Plantations, tho' they have not taken the Test, within the Time prescribed by Act of Parliament.'

King's Answer
April 24.

In pursuance of this, May 5. they write to the Commissioners, appointed anent Disorders in several Shires, for Accounts of the Condition of the Prisoners, Men or Women, and who they are, who have harboured and reset, conversed or corresponded with Rebels, and require distinct Accounts of them to be sent in to the Clerks of Council, with the Names of Witnesses, or their own Confessions.

Great Multitudes were at this Time sent away to the Plantations, by virtue of this Power. I cannot so much as do Justice to a great many of these good People, by recording their Names: As far as the Council-records go, I have noticed them, but there were many sent away from Glasgow and other Places of the Country, that I have no distinct Account of. However, I shall here set down what I meet with for some Months, as to Banishments in the Great Numbers banished.

1684.

Persons banished
May 17.

May 22.

Registers, and add some few Hints from some other Accounts come to my Hand, that the Reader may have some View of this Part of the Council's Procedure.

The Council, May 17. banish to the Plantations, William Laing in Hawick, James White in Douglas, John Harper in Firwick, Gavin Muirhead in Cannethan, John Gardner in Monkland, David Jamison a Sweet-linger; James Balfour in Fife. Their alledged Crimes are Rebellion and Refet of Rebels. And, May 22. Two Balfours, imprisoned as concerned in the killing the Bishop of St. Andrews, but had exculpate themselves of that, are ordered to be transported, and the Persons to transport them, were to give 10000 Merks Bonds for each of them, that they should safely carry them to the Plantations.

After the Managers had agreed for the Transportation of such as were banished, with Walter Gibson Merchant in Glasgow, May 27. the Council make the following Act granting Prisoners to him.

At May 27. granting Prisoners to Walter Gibson.

FOrasimuch as the King's Majesty, by his Letter April 24. last, signified, that it is his Royal Pleasure, that such of the Rebels as are now in Prison, and appear penitent, tho' they have not taken the Test within the Time prescribed by his Majesty's Proclamation, be sent abroad to the Plantations, and by the said Letter authorized the said Lords to do or cause the same to be done, at such Times and in such Manner as to them should seem most fit and proper. And whereas the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council are informed, there are divers of the Rebels in the Prisons of Glasgow, Dumfries, and other Prisons in the West, where they have granted Commissions for judging and trying of them, according to Law; they, to the effect that such of them as appear penitent, may taste and share of his Majesty's great Clemency and Mercy, do hereby, in pursuance of his Majesty's said Letter, fully committionate, impower, and authorize the Persons formerly committionate by them, at Glasgow or Dumfries, and their Quorum, for putting the Laws in Execution against such Rebels, to sentence and banish such of them as appear penitent, to the Plantations in America, in the Ship belonging to Walter Gibson Merchant in Glasgow, bound thither, he still finding Caution to them for transporting the said Persons to the Plantations, and for returning a Certificate of their Landing, under the Hand of the Governor there, to be reported to the Clerks of the Council, before November 1. 1685. and that under the Penalty of 1000 Merks, for ilk one of the said Rebels who shall be sentenced and delivered to him, in case of Failie, (Sea-hazard and Pirates being always excepted.) And as to such of the said Rebels who do not appear penitent, the said Lords do authorize the said Commissioners to proceed according to their Commission, according to Law; with Power to the said Commissioners, to sentence and banish in Manner and upon the Terms foresaid, such Persons Rebels, not being Heritors or Ministers, as are or shall be hereafter imprisoned, and do appear penitent, conform to his Majesty's said Letter.

Remarks on it.

It is a Knick peculiar, I think, to this Period, to pretend Kindness and Grace in the greatest Severities inflicted by them: Thus last Year and this, the taking the Test was pretended to be a Favour, and yet the Country was forced into it, and now Banishment to the Plantations, is another Act of Grace and Favour to Penitents, much the same with the Coup de grace in France.

More banished
June 19.

June 19. Sir William Paterson, who had been West at Glasgow upon the Conventicles we shall presently hear of, reports to the Council, that Two and twenty Persons, Prisoners in the Tolbooth of Glasgow, are now banished to the Plantations, and ordered to be transported in Walter Gibson's Ship. And the same Diet at Edinburgh, the Lords by Sentence appoint James McGachin in Dalry, John Crichtoun in Kirkpatrick, John Matthison in Clofure, John Mabbisholm in Spittle, libelled for Refet and Converse with Rebels, found guilty by their Confession judicially adhered to, to be transported to the Plantations. And August 15. about Fifteen more are ordered to the same Place.

Others banished
Oct.

This is all I have observed in the Council-books this Summer. From other Papers upon this Head, I find March 4. James Forrest Younger, John Colin, James Gourlay, Dennis Giltreof, Thomas Jackson, George Jackson, were before the Committee for publick Affairs, and, as they say in their joyn't Testimony before me, the Chancellor after a long Speech aggravating their rebellious Principles; Refet, &c. declared to them, that they were banished to West Flanders, never to return on Pain of Death. In their Testimony they vindicate themselves from the Imputation of Diloyalty and Rebellion, and leave their Testimony for the Scriptures, Confession, and Covenants, against Popery, Prelacy &c. And John Colin hath a separate Paper by himself, likewise before me, wherein he gives the Reason why he could not say God save the King, and tells, he desired the Committee to let him know the Meaning of those Words, which they did, by telling him, it imported an owning his Person and Government, and the Laws and present Actings, which, adds he, satisfied me much, and I think no serious Christian would approve those.

Remark on the saying God save the King.

John Dick banished
Oct.

I have likewise some original Letters of John Dick, dated April and June this Year, with his Interrogatories without Date; but I take them to have been in April, at Glasgow. He was in in June banished to Carolina. Some of his Interrogatories and Answers deserve a Room here, he being a very sensible knowing Person. Being asked, if it was lawful to bear Arms, answered, he thought it lawful for the Defence of Religion, that is, when People are oppressed for adhering to their Principles, pressed to deny them, and killed for not denying them, and for personal Defence against Robbers and Murderers. He was further asked, but what if the King should carry on a Course contrary to the Word of God, may he be opposed by Arms? He answered, he might, when no other Means could prevail. The Bishop, or Professor of Divinity, he does not mind which, said, but I'll make it plain to you from the Word of God, that though the King carry on a Course contrary to Scripture, he ought not to be opposed. John interrupting him, said, the World will never do that, for it is a setting Scripture against it self, and the like of it was never heard. Then it was asked, if he would kill one of the King's Guards if he found them in the Way. He answered, he was of no such murdering Principles. They were very close upon him, as to his praying for the King; and after many Questions this way, they asked, can you now pray for him; he said, I can as he hath a Soul, and hath not sinned the unpardonable Sin, but to pray for him as he is King, and for the Prosperity of his Courses, I cannot do. He notices the Bishop, with a great deal of Pains and Cunning, essayed to bring him to some Acknowledgment that might have been Matter of Libel, but he endeavoured to bear off. In his original Letters, he excuses their entering into Terms with Walter Gibson for Transportation, and expresses his Doubts, how far they were obliged to propale their Principles, when they could not be proven against them, and whether Silence or Shifting were not lawful without making Compliances, and presses Sobriety, which he complains there is but little of, and Peremptoriness against all Sin.

1684.
His Examination.

The original Testimony of about Two and Twenty, who were banished to Carolina, at Glasgow, probably by the Court there, is before me. That Day they received their Indictment, as they say in their Paper, for not owning the King's Supremacy (and indeed it was that most of the Country People meant when they refused to own his Authority) their declining to call Bothwell-bridge Rebellion, and refusing to renounce the Covenants. The Names of the Persons signing this joyn't Testimony are,

Two and Twenty banished to Carolina

James McIntoch, John Buchanan, William Inglis, Gavin Black, Adam Allan, John Galt, Thomas Marisbal, William Smith, Robert Vrie, Thomas Brice, John Syme, Hugh Syme, William Syme, John Alexander, John Marisbal, Matthew Machan, John Paton, John Gibson, John Young, Arthur Cunningham, George Smith, and John Duart.

Two of them, John Buchanan and Arthur Cunningham, add to their Names a Confession, that they had fainted in giving Consent to their own Banishment. The Matter stood thus, as far as I can gather it from the Accounts before me. Most part of them had been picked up at Searches and otherwise, in Glasgow, Eastwood, Englisbam, and other Places round about, and had continued in Prison some Months. Walter Gibson and his Brother were sending off a Ship to Carolina, and had come to some of them, asking if they were willing to go with them to the Plantations; promising if so be they would go with them, they would make Interest and get their Lives spared, and if not, they assured them they would be publickly executed. Some of them yielded to this, but afterwards when it was represented by some as an owning of Guilt, and having a Share in their own Banishment, they acknowledge it as a Step of Fainting: So hardly put to it were these honest good People upon all Hands. John Dick, in the forementioned Letter, very modestly vindicates this Step, and observes that their Sentence had no Relation to this dealing with Gibson, neither was it at all judicially considered.

Those Persons, with some others, after Sentence, were given to the Gilsons, and this Year were transported to Carolina. I have Letters written by several of them, and their particular Testimonies, with some of their Examinations; but they all running upon the ordinary Topics at this Time, the King's Supremacy, Popery and Prelacy, &c. I do not swell this Work with them.

I find them lying in Greenock Road, ready to sail towards the Beginning of July. There is before me a particular Account of the Hardships they met with in their Passage, of which I shall insert an Abstract, if once I had noticed, that it was in this same Ship, I suppose, the Reverend Mr. William Dunlop, formerly mentioned, whom I can never name without the greatest Regard to his Memory, transported himself, and voluntarily withdrew from the Iniquity of this Time. And, if I mistake not, the excellent and truly noble Lord Cardross left his native Country at the same Time.

Captain James Gibson commanded the Vessel, and is represented to have been very rude to the poor Prisoners, who were about Thirty Two. And his Seamen and Under-officers, were yet harsher. Any small Money their Friends had scraped together for them before they sailed, was taken from them, and they could have no Redress. They were disturbed when at Worship under Deck, and threatened, and whenever they began to sing Ysolms, the Hatches were closed upon them. They had their Water given them in very scanty Measure: One Man was allowed only a Mutchkin in Twenty four Hours. And when there Severities to them in their Passage, and afterwards.

1684.

happened to be a Mutchkin or less over, it was carefully distributed among them all, or they would parcel it out by Spoonfuls to such as were most necessitous. All this was really from ill Nature, for there was no Strait. When they came ashore in Carolina, they had fourteen Hogheads of Water to cast out, besides a good Number of Hogheads of Beer remaining.

At the Beginning of their Voyage, every eight of them had a Scots Pint of Pottage allowed them, and a little Beer: Their other Food was salt Beef, with a few Pease, three or four Years old, sodden in salt Water; this they had literally by Weight, two Ounces and an Half to every two of them, with a Bisket, which was old enough. Their Bread was indeed so ill, that they could not eat it, but bartered it with the Seamen for the Rain-water they gathered. The Sick were miserably treated, and had no other Thing allowed them but what the rest had. Some of the Prisoners who were sick, desired to be put ashore at Bermudas, offering all Security to Captain Gibson, if they recovered, to come to Carolina. At first the Captain promised, but, when he found so many sick, altered his Mind. The very Ship's Crew were like to mutiny for Want of Water, and John Alexander died of Thirst, as was thought.

When they landed in Carolina, all the Prisoners almost were sick; they were taken out, and put into Houses under a Guard: Some Cloth and other Things given by their Friends in Scotland, to be sold at the best Advantage, and distributed among them in Carolina, was otherwise disposed of, and they had none of it. John Dick, formerly mentioned, having paid his Freight, to thirty Shillings, tho' he offered his Bond for it, and a Comrade of his offered to serve in his Room, till that Remainder of his Freight was paid, yet the Captain would in no wise yield to it, but forced him up the Country with him as his Servant, where he died. His Case differed from the rest of the Prisoners, because of the Contract he had entered into with the Captain, but no Faith was kept to him. Two of the Prisoners, John Smith and John Paton, offering to make their Escape, were discovered, and most barbarously used, being beaten eight Times every Day, and condemned to perpetual Servitude.

Harsh Treatment of Elizabeth Linning.

My Account of Banishments this Year, shall be ended with an Instance of Severity, great enough. When these Prisoners were lying ready to sail from Clyde, Elizabeth Linning, yet alive attesting this Account, came down to visit the Prisoners, some of them being her Relations; when she came aboard, Captain Gibson ordered her to be kept and taken with them, tho' he had nothing to charge her with: She perceiving this, took an Opportunity, when those who were watching her were asleep, to get ashore. She was soon missed, and the Captain ordered most of the Crew ashore in Search of her; they found her and brought her back, and carried her to Carolina with them.

After they arrived there, and the Prisoners were set ashore, she fell indisposed. One Day she heard the Captain say, when he did not know she was within hearing, Since she is sickly, let her go ashore, but see that she come aboard every Night till we get her sold. Upon this she took the first Opportunity to get ashore, and went straight to the Governor, and acquainted him how she was forced to that Place, and what she had heard. The Governor was very civil, and caused cite the Captain to the next Court-day, where he appearing was interrogate, if he brought the Girl from Scotland without Sentence, or her own Consent; the Captain owned he had, and trumped up a Story, which she utterly refused, that she had come with Letters to the Prisoners, and Means were essaying to procure their Escape, tho' he had given Bond to the Council of Scotland for Two and thirty of them at a thousand Merks per Piece. The Governor told him, that could not be, since, as he was informed, she was taken after she had made her Escape. To this he answered nothing, but that he had an Order from Lieutenant-colonel Windram to keep her, for she was such a Rebel as ought not to be permitted to stay in the Nation. The Governor desired him to produce this Order, the other answered, he had it only by Word of Mouth. Whereupon the Court ordered her Liberation, and allowed her the following Extract.

At a Council held at Charlestown, October 17. 1684.

‘UPON the reading of the Petition of Elizabeth Linning, against Captain James Gibson, Commander of the Carolina Merchant, in a full Council it was ordered as follows. Whereas, upon the Confession of Captain Gibson, that the within written Elizabeth Linning, was, without the Consent of the said Elizabeth, brought to this Province by Force, and by a pretended Order from Lieutenant-colonel John Windram, but the said Gibson producing none, it is ordered that the said Elizabeth be set at Liberty as a free Woman.

In short, most Part of the Prisoners died in Carolina, and scarce Half a Dozen of them ever returned to their native Land; and a great many Years after, their Commander, with the Ship he was in, perished in the American Seas, after a most unfortunate Voyage. Many others were banished this and the following Year, of whom I shall be scarce able to give any Account; but I now return to the Proceedings of Council at Edinburgh.

Toward

Toward the End of April, in the Vacation of the Session, a good many of the Managers were in the Country, and yet they were not willing any Sitt should be in the Persecution, therefore the following Order is made, April 22. 'The Counsellors who are in Town, are appointed to meet in the Intervals of Council, and impowered to do every Thing they shall find necessary for his Majesty's Service, the Exigence of the Government, and Peace of the Country, and receive Accounts from Magistrates of Burghs and Officers of the Army, and give Orders; with Power to them to convene the Council.'

1684.
Council Power
given to the Counsellors at Edinburgh.

That same Day the Council recommend it to General Dalziel, 'to ordain Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, with Five Companies of Foot, and the Lord Ross's Troop, to march to the Shire of Air, and that Half of the Troop of Guards march thither also; that Colonel Graham be ordered to post his own Troop at Dumfries, or where he thinks most convenient in that Country, and to post the Two Troops of Dragoons in the Garisons of Kaitloch, Ballagan, Kenmuir, Macbrimmore, or Monigaff; that Colonel Graham command all the Forces in Air Shire while there, and have Power to quarter them in the Shire of Air and Renfrew, or where most convenient for the King's Service; that Captain Cleland's Troop be put into the Houses of Covington and Blackwood, till Strevan be ready.'

Orders about
the Forces.

May 5. the Council 'appoint a Garison at Kenmuir, and because the Lady is to ly in, the Soldiers are for the Time dispersed to Barscob, Waterhead, Knockgray, and Kaitloch.' Other Accounts at this Time bear, that the Garisons were increased, especially in the South, so that much of Scotland was, as if it had been a Country conquered by an Enemy. That strong Garison at Kaitloch was continued, Two were set up in the Parish of Carsphairn, another in Lefmahago, and one in Craveford-muir, besides these at Newmills, and several other Places.

Garisons.

Parties from those Garisons were the great Instruments of many of the Murders in the Fields in cold Blood, which now were a beginning; and to them likewise the Country owed the gravaminous Searchings at this Time so common, and continually almost Parties were travelling from the Waterhead of Dough to Lefmahago, or Craveford-muir, or down to Newmills, and other Places, so that the Wanderers were very hard put to it. Those Searches were most uneasy to good People through the Country in the Summer, and they were mostly in Towns and Cities in the Winter.

Last Year we heard, that the printing the fugitive Rolls was delayed from Time to Time, now, May 5. the Council publish them, and a Proclamation before them; I have annexed both in the Appendix, N<sup>o</sup>. 94. Remarks need not be made on the Proclamation, after the many such Papers we have met with. The Rebellion is represented as the great Matter upon which they were cited who are fugitated, but it was but very few of them who had been in the Rising, and they were only guilty of the alledged Reset of Persons who had been there; and if the Reader look back on what hath been said, he will see, that none in the West or South were free of Converse with such who were at Bothwell, since good Numbers of them were never staged for some Years, and openly frequented all ordinary Places of publick Meeting. The Design of printing the Roll, is alledged to be to prevent harbouring them, and to stir up every Body to persecute them. It allows such as are wrong insert to the First of August, to get their Relaxation gratis, by Production of Evidences of their having taken the Bond or Test; and there seems to be a Prorogation of the Time for taking the Test to that Day, if I understand the Proclamation. I make no Remarks on the Rolls, there are many Mistakes in them, but they contain a List of very good People persecuted for Conscience sake.

Fugitive Rolls
now published with a Proclamation.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 94.
Remarks upon
it.

May 17. 'the Council having appointed a Committee to consider the Case of the Prisoners in the Tolbooth, who have been long there without any Probation:' Upon their Report the Council order Eight or Ten to be liberate, on Promise to keep their Parish-church; they were poor Country People, who had nothing to maintain themselves, and had been imprisoned for Reset and Noncompearance, and would not take the Test. 'But remit George Hutchison of Harelaw, and George Jackson, to the Justices, and continue their Proceedings against David McLivie Taylor; John Hodge Sword-slipper in Glasgow, Archibald Shiels, James Gray of Chrystoun, Mr. William Wisheart, William Scot in Libbertoun, are continued until the Council further consider their Condition.'

Council's Procedure against the Prisoners,
May 17.

The Committee for publick Affairs, May 22. find, 'That some of the Rebels who have neither taken the Bond nor Test, and have been made Use of by the Laird of Meldrum, and some others having Commission, to discover Rebels, do think it fit, in regard they are under Process, and so notailable, that they be put in Prison, and the Justices proceed against them with all Speed.' This is the Reward some of those, who were useful to Meldrum and others in their Oppression, got, and readily, however the Treason for a Season was encouraged, yet the Traitors were hated.

Towards the Beginning of June, the famous Conventicle at the Black-loch broke out, which being the Occasion of much Trouble to many Gentlemen and Ministers, I shall give what I meet with thereanent in the Registers. Conventicles now were very rare, and the Managers make as great a Bustle anent this, as if the whole Country had been up. The Conventicle at Black-loch, in June.

1684.

Committee for publick Affairs, who now have much of the Council Business among their Hands, meet June 10.

That Day they have Information, that on the 8 of June, a Conventicle was designed at Black-loch, where an Hundred Men were said to be in Arms together; that a Party of Soldiers were sent out under Colonel Windram, who traced them out, and pursued, but did not overtake them. He came to the Muir-head, and traced them to Camnethan Church, and thence to the Ford of Clyde, and that about fourscore Men and Twenty Women kept together all the Sabbath. June 12. the Committee send out Orders to General Dalziel, at this Time in the West Country, to examine Gavin Lawrie in Redmire, James Stuart of Hartwood, and James Walker of Rosehall Chamberlain to Duke Hamilton.

Sir William Paterson sent to Glasgow upon the Accounts of it.

That Day in the Afternoon, the Committee think fit to send West Sir William Paterson Clerk to the Council, to be present with the General and others at Glasgow, to examine all Witnesses, and take Information, who, through the Country, conversed with those Rogues in Arms, and to meet with the Commissioners of Justiciary now sitting at Glasgow; and the Advocate is to draw his Instructions against to Morrow.

Instructions to
him.

Accordingly, the Committee for publick Affairs give Orders to the Advocate, June 13. to process the Heritors upon whose Lands some Rebels were lately seen in Arms, conform to Proclamation July 8. 1682. and consent to the Instructions to Sir William Paterson, which are as follow.

‘ That he wait upon the Archbishop of Glasgow and the General, and shew them, the Committee expect further Accounts of those lately in Arms, and on whose Ground they were seen, and of Magistrates, Heritors, and others, who have been guilty of Connivance, or supine Negligence, in not giving an Account of these Rebels, to the Counsellors, or Officers of the Army, to be punished exemplarily conform to Law, and the Proclamation on July 1682. which clearly meets with this Case; and that Stuart of Hartwood, and Walker be most strictly examined, and if not ingenuous, that they be imprisoned, and Lawrie to be strictly examined, and his Wife and Servants, since the Rebels, in a Body, drank at his House.’

‘ It is to be considered, that those Three Persons are exceedingly to be blamed, that they did not dog and follow those Rebels, and give present Information, and have palpably contravened the Tenor of the said Proclamation.’

‘ You are to shew, that the Committee for publick Affairs are displeased with the Slowness of the Procedure of the Commissioners of Justiciary at Glasgow, against the Rebels and other disorderly Persons now Prisoners at Glasgow, and advise them forthwith to proceed according to Law and their Instructions. Such against whom the Probation is clear, or who confess their being in the Rebellion, and continue obdurate in their rebellious Principles, are to be instantly sentenced and punished according to Law; such as are penitent, and disown the Rebellion, and all rebellious Principles and Practices, are to be forthwith banished to the Plantations, in the Terms of the former Acts.’

‘ As to the rest of the Prisoners, against whom there is no clear Probation of their being in the Rebellion, and will not confess their being accessory thereunto, yet if they or any of them will not acknowledge the Insurrection at Bothwell-bridge to be Rebellion, and a Sin against God Almighty, and refuse to declare that it is unlawful for Subjects, upon the account of the Covenant, or any account whatsoever, to rise in Arms against his Majesty or his Authority, and the present Government in Church or in State, and refuse to enact themselves never to rise in Arms, and to live regularly, and to keep their Parishes hereafter, and refuse to take the Oath of Allegiance, that they be immediately banished to the Plantations, as above. And generally, you are to advise the said Commissioners, in any thing relating to their Commission, that may contribute for his Majesty’s Service.’

His Report to
the Council,
June 19. with their Procedure.

‘ Sir William Paterson returns, and makes his Report to the Council, June 19. As to that Part of his Instructions with relation to the banishing People to the Plantations, we have had the Report above; and as to the Matter of the Black-loch, the Lords find, by Examination taken by the said Sir William, that the most Part of the Heritors and Inhabitants of the Parishes of Shotts, Camnethan, and Monkland, have been extremely guilty, in not giving any Information anent the said armed Rebels, tho’ they did march through those Parishes, to the Number of Eighty or an Hundred armed Men; that the Heritors have been remiss and supinely negligent in their Duty, and neglected to give timely Information of the said Rebels, and appoint them to be cited against Tuesday the First of July, and the Sheriffs of Stirling, Linlithgow, and Lancerk, to be cited to the same Day, as also Stuart of Allantoun, Stuart of Hartwood, William Cochran of Ochiltree younger, Walker of Hacketburn, on whose Lands, and near whose Houses the said Rebels appeared in Arms, to be cited to that Day; and in regard Mr. William Violant, indulged Minister at Camnethan, albeit the said Rebels patled his House in Rank and File in Arms, did did not give Information thereof to any Magistrates and Officers of the Army, tho' some of them lay within Three or Four Miles of him, the Lords do ordain him to be cited.

1684.

The same Day, the Sheriffs of Mid-lothian, Peebles, and Linlithgow, and the Heritors of the Parishes in whose Bounds the Rebels were seen, are cited to appear before the Council, in the Terms of the Proclamation July 1682.

The particular Sufferings of those Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, who were brought to Trouble upon the account of this Conventicle, will come in upon the next Section; and this is growing so much, that it will be proper to leave them to it.

I only remark further upon this Subject, July 16. that the Committee for publick Affairs write a Letter to Sir William Murray of Stenhope, Sir Archibald Murray of Blackbarony, John Veitch of Durwick, signifying, that there was a Conventicle kept, June 1. at Carnhill, and another at Colstons-loup in Peebles Shire; and complain those Gentlemen had not given Advertisement of them, according to the Proclamation of Council, July 1682. which at this Diet the Council order to be reprinted, and order them to make diligent Search, and apprehend the Hearers and Preachers, and take the Assistance of the Garison at Boghall. We shall afterwards hear of particular Prosecutions for these Conventicles.

Another Conventicle in Peebles.

July 1. the Council recommend it to Claverhouse, to inform himself of the Heritors of the Lands where some Rebels had laid on Ambuscade for the King's Soldiers, and one of them was killed, and of the substantial Tenants, and report. This is what I have observed this Year, until the new Commission sent down this Month to the Council, which I come now to take Notice of.

Upon the 15 of July, a new Commission comes down from the King to the Council, none of the former Members were left out, and some new ones put in, and new Powers were granted; and at the same Time the Earl of Perth is declared Chancellor in Aberdeen's Room, and Linlithgow is Justice-general. That Day the King's Letter was read to the Council, which deserves a Room here.

A new Commission to the Council, Perth made Chancellor, and Linlithgow Justice-general.

CHARLES R.

Right trusty, &c. Whereas, for weighty Reasons, We have thought fit to recal the late Commission of Our Privy Council, and being fully assured of the entire Loyalty and Affection of you who were in that Commission, We have thought fit again to nominate you, together with some others, ( of whose Loyalty we have good Reason to be assured ) to be in the same Capacity, not doubting, but as you have always continued zealously and faithfully to serve Us, by administering Justice, maintaining Our Authority, asserting Our Prerogative, and refused to comply with any such, as inclined either to support or countenance fanatical, or disaffected and turbulent Persons; so We doubt not, in consideration of this Trust We repose in you, and of your Duty to Us, you will go on firmly and faithfully in Our Service, by doing Justice to Our People, by putting the Laws vigorously in Execution against the Fanaticks, those Enemies not only of Our Person and Government, but likewise of all Religion and Society, from whose Principles We can expect nothing less than Rebellion and Conspiracies.

We do therefore recommend to your particular Care, to prevent their Malice, by all legal and suitable Means, prosecuting and disabling all such as you find obnoxious to Our Laws and Government. And that you might meet with no Impediment from Us, We have removed from Our Councils and highest Offices, all such as We thought forward in favouring, and slow in proceeding against them, or Countenancers of disaffected and turbulent People, that you may see how inconsistent Our Favour is with those Ways.

In the next Place, We require you to encourage Our regular Clergy, by maintaining them in their just Rights and Privileges, and securing their Persons and Goods from Violence and Outrage, especially Our Archbishops and Bishops, seeing We look upon all Discouragements they unjustly meet with, among the highest Affronts to Our Authority.

You are likewise to advert to the Security of the Peace of the Country, preventing, by all suitable Means, the Disorders that may arise from Argyle Shire, and other disaffected Places; and in every thing, not only in your joyn't but separate Capacities, doing whatever may most conduce to the Advancement of Our Interest, maintaining Our Prerogative, and securing your own Peace and Prosperity. In Confidence whereof We bid you heartily farewell. Given, &c. Windfor, June 13. 1684.

Reflections upon this Paper formed by the Managers, are needless; they grow in their Reproaches and Spite at the suffering Presbyterians, and make the King charge all who go under 1684.

S f f f

Remarks on it

under the Name of Fanaticks, with such Principles as they were entirely free of. If the Earl of Aberdeen and others now displaced, be pointed at as Favourers of, or at least flow Proceeders against the Sufferers, it is very much for their Honour. However that be, 'tis plain from this Letter, that the main Work of the Council was to maintain the King's Prerogative now sufficiently absolute, support the Prelates its Creatures, and to be their Burriers in persecuting the suffering Presbyterians; and to these they engage themselves in their Return to his Majesty that same Day, which I likewise insert.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

The Council's Answer.

WE should be sorry that our Affairs have of late been so troublesome to your Majesty, if we found not, by your Majesty's gracious Letter, dated June 13. that your Majesty has thereby understood perfectly your own Interest and ours: Nor can we doubt, but that hereafter, all who serve your sacred Majesty, will be convinced there is no Security in complying with turbulent and disaffected People, tho' that Compliance was become of late very plausible, from the Principles of Fear or Popularity; it being truly much easier, nobler, and safer, to disable your Enemies than to flatter them.'

'In Return to this your Majesty's most gracious Letter, we again renew, with all our Heart, the most sincere Offer of our Lives and Fortunes, with our grateful Acknowledgment of the great Kindness done to us, in preferring such among us to the chief Employments, as deserve to be our Leaders in those dangerous Times, and whose Preference being the Effect of your Majesty's perfect Knowledge of their tried Merit, gives us just Occasion to believe they will, by their Deportment, justify your Majesty's Royal Choice, and awake the Diligence of such as are joyned with them.'

'We also, whom your Majesty has honoured with the great Trust of being Privy Counsellors, by this your last Commission, find our selves obliged to bestow all possible Pains and Diligence, in serving so gracious and so judicious a Monarch, in the Way which, because your Majesty prescribes it, we have among other Reasons just Cause to believe to be the best.'

'And therefore, SIR, we shall do our utmost to administrate Justice to your Subjects, maintain your Authority, assert your Prerogative, protect the orthodox Clergy, and suppress Fanaticks, and to deserve in every Thing, as far as is possible for us, the happy Name of'

Your Majesty's most faithful, most humble, and most obedient Subjects and Servants,

Subscribed at in Sederunt.

It hath been remarked, that the Committee for publick Affairs have had a great Part of the Work of Persecution committed to them by the Council: Thus they continue to do, and therefore at this first Sederunt, the Council fail not to appoint this Committee. The Members and Powers of it follow.

Act anent the Committee for publick Affairs, July 15.

Act appointing the Committee for publick
Affairs.

THE Lords of his Majesty's privy Council considering that, from Time to Time, they have been in Use to appoint a Committee for publick Affairs, and whereas now by his Majesty's late Commission to his Council, the Committee formerly nominate is dissolved, and it being necessary for the Administration of his Majesty's Affairs, that a new Committee be appointed, do therefore hereby nominate and appoint the Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, the Earls of Linlithgow, Balcarras and Tweddale, the Lords Drumlanerck and Livingstone, the Lairds of Drumetzier and Claverhouse (Officers of State and Lord President of the Session being always supernumerary) or any Three of them to be a Committee of Council for publick Affairs, with Power to them or their Quorum foresaid, to receive Accounts, from the several Magistrates of the Kingdom, of their Procedure and Diligence in the Execution of the Laws against fanatical and disorderly Persons, as also from the Officers of the Army anent such Persons, and to call and examine Prisoners, or such Persons as they shall have reason to suspect guilty of seditious or treasonable Crimes, or of publick Disorders, and to imprison or dismiss them as they shall find Cause; and generally, to do all and sundry other Things which may be expedient for his Majesty's Government and the Peace of the Kingdom; and appoint their first Meeting to be to Morrow at Three of the Clock after Noon, and thereafter at such Times as they shall think most convenient; and Accounts of their Procedure to be given in for their Approbation.

Thus

Thus we have the Beginnings of this new appointed Council ; they just go on where they left, and we shall find them prosecuting Heritors and others, for not raising the Hue and the Cry. I only notice some of their more general Acts. July 17. ' The Council being informed that the Rebels have been seen passing through some Parts of the Shire of Air, and that the Heritors and Inhabitants have not given Advertiement, grant Commission to the Sheriff-depute, and Captain John Inglis, or any of them, to call before them and examine upon Oath, all such Persons as can give best Information of the Heritors through whose Lands the said Rebels were seen to pass, and send in an Account to the Council. ' I need scarce notice that these Rebels so much Sputter is made about, were Mr. Renwick's Followers, who were obliged at the Conventicles, and I may say almost at all Times, for their own Defence, to carry Arms ; and such of them, whose Way homeward from Conventicles lay together, are the Rebels now marching up and down the Country.

But not satisfied with those Orders, July 22. a Proclamation is emitted for discovering Rebels and their Refettors in the West, which I have added App. No. 95. The Penners of this Paper make the King assert, That the Monarchy is devolved upon him by God alone ; which, in the plain and ordinary Sense of the Words, is not true, and would have been very far from his Stile in the Year 1649 or 1650. when the Monarchy was made over to him by the Presbyterians, and those very People in England and Scotland whom he hath been violently persecuting for upwards of Twenty Years. The Proclamation adds, by the Nature of the Monarchy devolved thus on him, and by his inherent Prerogative he was impowered to take such Courses for securing the Government as were best, that is, such Methods as he pleased, without any Proclamation, or Acts of Parliament, as the Tenor of this Sentence necessarily gives us to understand it ; which is a plain avowing the Nature of this Government was tyrannical, and that Tyranny was from God. Whether this Clause is designed to be a Cover for the Murders committed in the Field by the Soldiers in cold Blood, I cannot say ; but we shall find in the last Section a very barbarous one committed in Airshire, this same Month of July.

1684.
Commission
for the Shire of
Air, July 17.

Proclamation
July 22. for discovering Rebels in the West
App. No. 95.
Remarks upon
it

Next, the Subjects are told, that if this terrible Hue and Cry be neglected, other and effectual Methods will be taken. What those were are not expressed, and the Reader is left to guess whether a larger standing Army, an Highland Host, or rather the sanguinary and inhumane Orders to kill in cold Blood, all who did not answer the Soldiers Interrogatories, given towards the End of this Year, be meant, and were in View. It follows, that two hundred armed Rebels marched up and down. Informers could soon make two Hundred of Fifty, but when their own Registers make them but Eighty, and that just at the dismissing the Conventicle, we may see what Weight is to be laid upon the Numbers in their publick Papers. It is wisely inferred, they behoved to have been harboured and refet in the Shires they marched through ; undoubtedly they could not live without Meat and Drink, and yet one would think Two hundred Men in Arms would take Subsistence upon paying for it, if it were refused them. But all this is a Fetch to bring in the Sheriffs, &c. their Orders to apprehend them, and inform the Council who refet them, against the 15 of August, otherwise other and effectual Methods would be fallen upon ; and we shall find, that within Ten Days, without waiting so long, the Army is sent West. This Proclamation is to be read from all Pulpits after divine Service, which, I believe, the orthodox Clergy would not forget. And it opens a new Door for a general Harassing of the Country.

That same Day another Proclamation is emitted, ordering all the Forces and Militia to be in a Readiness to suppress the Rebels. It is much in the same Strain with the former, and so needs not be insert.

July 23. the Council form an Act, and record it, relative to the Thumbkins, for the Terror, as we shall hear, of Mr. Spence and others under Process about the Plot last Year : And being but short, I insert it here. ' Whereas the Boots were the ordinary Way to expiscate Matters relating to the Government, and that there is now a new Invention and Engine, called the Thumbkins, which will be very effectual to the Purpose and Intent foresaid, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do therefore ordain, that when any Person shall by their Order be put to the Torture, that the said Boots and Thumbkins both be applied to them, as it shall be found fit and convenient. '

Council's Act
about Thumb-
kins, July 23.

Accordingly, as was threatened in the Proclamation just now named, the Council fall upon other Methods with a Witness, for oppressing the Country, besides the Examinations of the Sheriffs, and send the Army to the West Country, and impower the Officers to examine the Country. The Act will give the best View of this, and follows.

Act anent the Army, and im-powering the Officers to examine the West Country,
Aug. 1.

Act anent the Army, August 1. 1684.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council considering, that several desperate Rebels do daily break out in Arms in Multitudes, at their seditious Field-conventicles, and lay

S f f f 2

' Am-

1684.

‘ Ambuscades for his Majesty’s Forces, and kill some of them, and rescue Prisoners in their Custody, to the high Contempt of the Laws, and Affront of his Majesty’s Government, to prevent and suppress all such rebellious Courses for the future, and to reduce the Country to their due Obedience, and not to suffer any skulking vagrant Rogues to go up and down the Country, to the Disturbance of the Peace thereof, and Disquiet of the Kingdom, have thought fit to dispose of his Majesty’s Forces, so as they may be most fit for Service; and therefore recommend to General Dalziel to continue the Foot where they are, and further, that he dispose the other Forces as follows. One Squadron of his Majesty’s Guard in and about Edinburgh; the Second Squad to go to Fife, and quarter as the Earl of Balcarras shall order; that Sir James Turner and his Company of Dragoons, attend near Glasgow; that Meldrum and his Troop of Horse, and the Lord Charles Murray’s Troop of Dragoons, go to Teviotdale; that the General’s Troop of Dragoons and Captain Strachan’s, ly at Garifons in Galloway and Nithsdale, the Lord Drumlanerke’s at Dumfries; that Two Squadrons of the Guards, Claverhouse his Troop, the Lord Ross’s Troop, Captain Inglis and Captain Cleland’s Troop of Dragoons be for Air Shire, or any where else the commanding Officer shall think best for the Good of the Government; that Claverhouse and Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, Commanders of the Five Troops in Air Shire, continue, with Power to them, or any of them, in the others Absence, to command and give necessary Orders to them, and the hail Forces, Foot and Horse, and Dragoons, in the Shires of Air and Clydsdale.’

‘ And to the effect Discovery may be made of the Rebels in Arms, and such as have been present at Field-conventicles, and upon whose Lands these Conventicles have been kept, or were seen, and did appear, may be known, the said Lords empower and commission Colonel Graham of Claverhouse, and Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, or any one of them, or, in their Absence, such as they shall think fit to appoint, (for whom they are to be answerable) to call for and examine upon Oath, all such Persons as can give any Information in the Premises; and for that effect to use all legal Diligence, and ordain them to report an Account of their Procedure as soon as possible.’

Observes upon it.

I need make no Observes upon this Act. I suppose the Ambuscade spoken of here and elsewhere, was the Attempt made at Enterkin-path, upon a Party of the Soldiers carrying in some Prisoners to Edinburgh. The Shire of Air still continues to be the Butt of the Army’s Fury, and more Forces are cantoned there, than almost through all the rest of the Country. And the commanding Officers of the Army, yea, whomsoever they shall please to substitute, are put in the Room of the ordinary Magistrates, and have Power to examine the Country upon Oath.

Act about the Prisoners, that they be executed Six Hours after Sentence.

That same Day, August 1. the Council form a very ill-natured Act, as to the poor People in Prison, full of severe Threatnings. ‘ The Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council having resolved, that all Persons now in Prison for Crimes against the Government, in the Tolbooths of Edinburgh and Canongate, for being in the late Rebellion, or Reset of Rebels, be speedily brought to Justice, do ordain his Majesty’s Solicitors to visit the Tolbooths of Edinburgh and Canongate, and report what Prisoners are there on these accounts; that it may be recommended to the Justices, to proceed and pronounce Sentence of Death against them immediately, which Sentence they are to cause execute within Six Hours after pronouncing of it; and command the Commissioners of Justiciary at Glasgow and Dumfries to proceed immediately against the Prisoners in the Tolbooths there, in the like Circumstances, and pronounce Sentence of Death against them, and put the Sentence in Execution within Three Hours after the pronouncing of it.’

Remarks.

Such barbarous Acts to hurry good People into Eternity in Six Hours Time, make my Hair stand when writing them, and I think are no where to be met with but from a Scots Council; and yet the Orders given the End of this Year, for killing in the Fields in a few Moments, go beyond them.

Many Prisoners found wrongously imprisoned.

Perhaps it is upon the Report of those sent to the Prisons in Edinburgh and Canongate, that August 5. the Council find good Numbers of the Prisoners seized, as being in the Rebellion, only because of the same Name with some who had been there; and others because they were with the Rebels, seeking for their Goods and Horses some Days before Bothwell. Those, upon their Petitions, are released, and it would swell this Work too much, to insert all such as by the Records I find were wrongously imprisoned.

Act requiring the Advocate to process such as owned Authority according to the Covenant.

August 19. the Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council considering, ‘ That several of the Persons called and examined before themselves, will not own the King’s Authority, but according to the Covenant, and their own treasonable Limitations, do hereby give Order and Warrant to his Majesty’s Advocate, to process and indict such of these Persons as are already brought in, or shall be brought in for the said Crime, before the Justices, that they may be proceeded against according to Law.’ Thus the owning of the King’s Authority according to the Covenants, was made Treason, which was what the Parliament would not venture venture on, and only discharged the owning of the Obligation of them. By this Process were intended against Multitudes of Country People, who would own the King no other way but in a Constancy with the Word of God and Covenants. Thus a Blot and Stain is put on what was, and will still be the Glory of these Lands, that they were devoted to the Lord, and Religion and Reformation, and our valuable civil Liberties solemnly engaged into. When a Papist was near to mount the Throne, it was high Time to put the greatest Contempt upon those great Bulwarks against Popery.

Remarks on it.

1684.

Another Report is made at the same Diet of Council, as to the State of the Prisoners, in the Canongate and Edinburgh Tolbooths, by a Committee formerly appointed for this end. It seems, either the Solicitor's Report did not satisfy, or new Prisoners were come in since, and indeed they were sent in in Crowds every Week; and the Council approve the Report, that about Twenty of the Prisoners (mean Country People, from Glasgow and Ayrshire) be set at Liberty upon their enacting themselves to keep their Parish-kirk under Five hundred Merks Penalty, and to live regularly; that Robert Tam in Carmonnock, William Campbell at Muirkirk, Gabriel Thomson in Carmonnock, John Ure Maltman in Glasgow, John Mclevey Shoe-maker in Kilmarnock, James Niccol in Peebles, William Young Taylor in Evandale, be proceeded and indicted before the Justices, that they may be proceeded against according to Law. We shall meet with a good many of them afterwards, when I come to give the Proceedings of the Justiciary this Year. And ordain John Campbell Tenant in Muirkirk, John Campbell Son to William Campbell of Over-wetwood, (a worthy Gentleman yet alive, whom we shall meet with upon the next Session) to be proceeded before the Council, in order to their Banishment, for refusing the Oath of Allegiance; and that James Niccol be proceeded against for his disowning the King.

Report from the Committee appointed to examine Prisoners, approved.

The Prosecution of some of those and some others at this Time, was happily prevented by the breaking of the Canongate Prison, and Escape of a good many, of which I shall afterwards give some Account. Here I only notice, August 22. The Magistrates of Edinburgh being called to the Bar of the Council, for the Escape of the Prisoners out of the Canongate Tolbooth last Night, it is recommended to the said Magistrates, that when any Persons are indicted by the Justices, or under the Sentence of Death for treasonable Crimes, they cause them immediately to be put into the Irons, and secure them; and they are assured that the Council hereafter will not question the Keepers of the Tolbooth, but them, for the Escape of Prisoners, they being answerable for the Keepers.

Prisoners escape from the Canongate Tolbooth. Aug 22.

In September new Justiciary Courts are appointed, with a particular Eye to the Gentlemen who were to be fined to the Value of their Estates; but I leave them to a Session by it self.

September 10. the Lords of Council, understanding there are several publick Papers and Writs in the Hands of the Earl of Aberdeen late Lord Chancellor, do appoint the Earl of Kintore to call for the said Earl of Aberdeen, and examine him upon Oath on what Papers he hath not hitherto delivered up, particularly anent some Papers given in by the Earl of Balcarras, taken from a Man in Fife, relative to the Plot and Conspiracy, before the same was discovered, and to receive them and transmit them to the Clerks.

Earl of Aberdeen late Chancellor, to be examined upon Oath what publick Papers are in his Hands.

A very remarkable Act follows, September 16. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council empower the Committee for publick Affairs, to call and convene before them, at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, such of the Prisoners as are guilty of such Disorders and Convictions, and refuse to take the Oath of Allegiance, and to pronounce Sentence of Banishment against them. And if any of these Prisoners shall refuse to own the King as their lawful Sovereign, or will not call the Rising at Bothwell-bridge, a Rebellion, or the Archbishop's Murder, a Murder, or does own the Covenant, or that 'tis lawful in defence thereof to rise against the King, or seem to hesitate, the Council authorizes the said Committee to remit them to the Justices, to be tried criminally.

Act of Council Sept. 16. ordering such who own not Bothwell Rising to be Rebellion, the Archbishop's Death Murder, or own the Covenant, or hesitate upon these, to be prosecuted criminally.

This Act I take to have been the Pattern of the Soldiers Catechism after this, and their Queries they proposed to People they met with in Searches, or in the open Fields, many of whom they murdered in cold Blood. No doubt they varied, and sometimes intermixed other Things with these, but most Part of their Interrogatories run upon these Points, and so good a Pattern as that of the Privy Council, ordering a criminal Process to be pursued for the Pannel's Life, in case of not answering satisfiingly those Queries, or any of them, yea, their hesitating upon any of them, would be followed by the Soldiers, when they had a Council and Justiciary Power lodged in them, as we shall hear they had in the Close of this Year. For many Years we have seen these were the chief of the Queries put to Sufferers in their Examinations, and Multitudes, we have seen, were executed upon their refusing to give Satisfaction in those Points; and now they are by this Act turned to a Foundation, whereupon the Justiciary are to condemn poor People. I do not enter upon the Illegality and Unreasonableness of taking poor Country Peoples Lives upon such Heads as many of these are, only in fact, tho' the King's Authority were owned, yet if the Bishop's Death was not per- notorily declared Murder, if the Covenants were not disowned, and Self-defence, as the Question was ordinarily proposed, was not disowned, or defensive Arms, or the Defence of the Covenants, and Pentland and Bothwell were not expressly condemned, then there was no Mercy for the Person. Thus Hundreds of religious and conscientious People were hurried into Eternity, without Libel, Witnesses, or Process, merely because they hesitated, or would not declare their Sentiments upon those Points.

This is the Pattern of the Soldiers Catechism in their Searches, Examinations, and Murders in cold Blood.

1684.

Persons given in private Lists, ordered to be seized.

During the Months of September and October there is little in the Council Registers, save what relates to the Justiciary Courts, which will come in best upon the Narrative of those.

October 31. Captain Graham is required immediately to seize some Persons living in and about Edinburgh, given him in a private List. Whether this was some pretended Conspiracy, or what was the Occasion, I know not; but no Body was secure from Trouble, when those private Lists formed from the Stories Informers trumped up, were made Rules of by the Managers.

The Months of November and December open a new and blacker Scene of Persecution than yet we have met with. Without any Provocation given, we find the Managers were ready enough to go great lengths against the suffering Wanderers up and down the Country; but at this Time it must be owned they had a greater Handle given them than ever, and I shall endeavour to give plain Matter of Fact from the publick Records, and other Papers come to my Hand, in a Section by it self, wherein I shall give the Declaration of War, as it was ordinarily termed, by the Society People, upon Provocations in their own Nature tempting to such Extremities, the Persecution of some for putting it on Church-doors, the Swine-abbay Murder, with the rigorous Proceedings on the back of it, the Orders for killing in the Fields, and the many Commissions granted on this Declaration in December.

Some prosecuted for making Coffins to the Persons executed, Nov. 24.

November 24. 'The Council being informed, that this Day three Coffins were carried down the Street for the Persons who were this Day ordered to be executed for treasonable Practices, and owning the late treasonable Declaration, the Council recommend it to Sir William Paterson, to enquire into the Maker and Painter of them.' So very low did their Zeal against the Sufferers creep.

Instructions
for a Search,
Nov. 28.

November 28. the Lords of Council order a strict Search to be made in the Town of Edinburgh, and Suburbs thereof, and Leith, to Morrow, according to the following Instructions.

'The Bailies of the Suburbs to attend at Four in the Morning at Holy-rood-house, to know the Council's Pleasure.'

'The Constables of the Town at the same Time to attend my Lord Provost, that he may send the Key to the Nether-bow, and the Keys are to ly in the Provost's Hands this Night.'

'At the opening of the Ports the Town-council are to attend the Magistrates, who are to appoint Sixteen of their Number to attend the Officers who make the Search.'

'The Ports being opened, a Bank is to be beat through the Town with all the Drummers can be had, and in all the Lanes of the City, discharging all Persons to quit their Houses upon their Peril.'

'The Council in the mean time are to attend near the Cross, to give Orders.'

'That Captain Graham with his Company, post themselves at Haddocks-hole to guard the Prisoners.'

'The Counsellors who attend the Searchers, to have Power to break open the Doors of such Houses as are pretended to be waste, if their Landlords presently bring not the Keys.'

Council's Thanks to Judge Jeffreys.

I shall shut up my Accounts of this Year in this Section, by noticing the close Correspondence 'twixt our Managers at Edinburgh, and bloody Jeffreys in England. Birds of a Feather flock together. Only Jeffreys was tied down by the English Laws, far less sanguinary than ours at this Time. However, he went as far as he could to stretch the Laws, and some farther, and offers his Service to our People at Edinburgh. Accordingly, December 3. 'the Advocate representing how ready Judge Jeffreys was to joyn with the Council for Support of the Government, it is recommended to him to signify to the Judge, the great Resentments the Council had of his Kindness towards this Kingdom, in giving his Concurrence against such pernicious Rogues and Villains who disturb the publick Peace; and desiring he may cause apprehend the Persons of hiding and fugitive Scotsmen, and deliver them securely on the Scots Border, to such as shall be appointed to receive them.' It is now high Time to come to more particular Prosecutions.

1684.

S E C T. II.

Of the Sufferings of particular Persons, Noblemen, Gentlemen, Ministers and others, not to Death, this Year 1684.

LAST Year we heard of the begun Prosecution of the indulged Ministers, and it is carried on in the Beginning of this, against the most of them now remaining, and toward the End of it they are all turned out. It may not be improper to give here as much of the Council's Procedure against them as I can gather. Council's Procedure against the indulged Ministers.

By the Justiciary Records, I find, January 7. Mr. Anthony Schaw Minister at Newmills, a Person of great Piety and Learning, appears, and his Indictment is read, charging him with 'holding a Field-conventicle to Two thousand Persons and upwards, in the Church-yard of Colmonel, and with preaching, praying, and baptizing there, contrary to Act 5. Seff. 2. Parl. 2. Char. II.' The Lords continue this Process till the Council's Mind be known about it. Mr. Anthony Schaw, Jan. 7.

The Case seems to have been this. Mr. Schaw at a Communion, where the Church of the indulged Minister would not hold the People who came, as was very ordinary then and yet, preached at a Tent in the Church-yard. This was indeed a Breach of his Confinement, but all of them were guilty this way; but according to the Letter of the Law, it is made a Field-conventicle, which was Death to the Preacher. And tho' he gave in a very moving Petition, and was singularly moderate, yet such a Man as he, after all his yielding, behoved to be processed for his Life. 'January 8. the Justices, with Consent of the Advocate, as Pursuer, desert the Diet against him, and ordain him to find Caution to appear before the Council, January 10.'

January 10. Mr. Anthony Schaw being called, compeared, and the Lords, upon his Dismission, declare the Indulgence granted him to preach, to be void and at an End, and declare the Kirk vacant; and ordain him to find Caution not to preach, or exercise the Function of the Ministry within this Kingdom hereafter, under the Pain of Five thousand Merks, or otherwise to remove off the Kingdom, within the Space of a Month after the Date hereof, and not return without Licence, under the Pain foresaid.

When the Sentence was intimated, Mr. Schaw refused to find Caution to desist from preaching hereafter; this was another great Hardship put upon Presbyterian Ministers at this Time, that with their own Hand they must unminister themselves; upon which the Council order him to Prison, till he find Caution to remove forth of the Kingdom, and not return, as aforesaid.

In Prison he continues till January 22. where I find 'the Lords of Council liberate Mr. Anthony Schaw, being old and infirm, Caution being found, that he shall keep no Conventicle in House or Field, or baptize and marry, but demean himself peaceably, and frequent Ordinances where he lives, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks.' To this Trouble was this good Man brought, and the Attack was almost general upon all the Indulged.

Mr. John Campbell indulged Minister at Sorn, and Mr. James Veitch at Mauchlin, appear before the Council, January 3. and are charged with the Breach of their Confinement, and the Probation remitted to their Oath. They confessed they had broke their Confinement, prayed and exercised in private Families, that they did not read the Proclamation for the Thanksgiving. The Council declare their Licence void, and order them either to find Caution to go forth of the Kingdom against March 1. next, or not to preach or exercise their Ministry, under Five thousand Merks, and to keep Ordinances, and appoint them to go to Prison if they find not Caution. Mrs. John Campbell and James Veitch.

Mr. James Veitch at this Time went to Holland, where he continued under some Trouble from Robert Hamilton and his Party, but increasing in Learning and Grace till the Toleration, he returned to his Charge at Mauchlin. Mr. Veitch goes to Holland.

Amidst those Severities against indulged Ministers, the Council shew some Kindness to the Relict of one of them, and January 22. gave to Mrs. Wedderburn, whose Husband died 1678. and hath a numerous Family, the Stipend of Duntop Parish. Whether Mr. Gabriel Cunningham was preaching there or not, I know not; it was well the Stipend went to no worse Use.

January 30. Mr. William Eccles indulged at Paisly, compears, and confesseth Breach of Confinement, and that he did not preach May 29. every Year. The Council declare his Li- Mr. William Eccles.

1684. cence void, and ordain him to find Caution, either not to preach, or remove off the Kingdom.

Mr. Robert Eliot and Mr. Thomas Black.
Mr. John Baird.

That same Day Mr. Robert Eliot indulged at Lintoun, is dealt with in the same way; and Mr. Thomas Black at New-tyle, being cited and not compearing, is denounced.

March 6. Mr. John Baird at Paisly, of whom before, had been cited against that Day. A Testimonial of his Sickness is produced, and he is continued until April. Whether this Sickness carried him to Heaven at this Time, I know not, but I find no more about him in the Registers. He was a Minister of great Learning and Piety, and singular Skill in Medicine.

Mr. William
Erskine Seven
Year close Prisoner.

April 8. Mr. William Erskine presents a Petition to the Council, shewing, 'That he had been now Seven Years close Prisoner in Blackness Castle, and other Places, and that merely for preaching the Gospel as he had received Power from Christ, and that he was now turned valetudinary, therefore craving the Council's Compassion.' All they do is to allow him to walk about the Castle, and take the Air with a Keeper. And upon what Reasons I know not, Mr. John Hutchison is allowed to return from Ireland, whither the Council had banished him in the Year 1682. for his Breach of his Confinement. This Liberty is granted April 1.

The last of this Month, Mr. John Sinclair, who had been Minister at Ormistoun, was represented as having preached Sedition abroad; and we shall find him this Year processed criminally.

Mr. William
Wysheart Student,
in Prison.

May 5. Mr. William Wysheart Student in Divinity, since the Revolution Minister at Leith and Edinburgh, and when I write this, the reverend Principal of the College there, presents a Petition to the Council, bearing, 'That having left his Studies at Utrecht, to come home and visit his aged and dying Parents, upon some Mistake he was put in Prison, as being one of those who deny his Majesty's Authority, whereas he disowns these Principles, and nothing is laid to his Charge, craving that he may be liberate.' The Council order his Liberation as soon as the Advocate is satisfied as to his Principles, upon Caution to compear when called. The Advocate for some time neglected to report, and so he continued a considerable Time in the Iron-house, in no small Trouble.

Mr. John Rae sent to the Bass.

About the same Time the Advocate is ordered to insist in a Process before the Justices, against Mr. John Rae, for preaching at Field-conventicles some Four or Five Years ago. September 15. I find him sent to the Bass. He was a zealous successful Gospel Minister. We shall just now meet with Mr. William Violant, upon another Head attacked and laid aside. And August 17. the Advocate is ordered to raise a criminal Process against Mr. Alexander Ross, a worthy Minister in the North, for Conventicles; they could only be Conventicles kept in Houses with People at the Doors, for there were no real Field-conventicles in that Country.

Mr. Alexander
Ross.

Mr. John Knox.

September 16. Mr. John Knox, indulged at West-calder, appears before the Council, and is imprisoned, where he continued till the King's Death. Having some attested Accounts of this worthy Minister, and the Ingratitude exercised towards him, I cannot but take some Notice of them.

Mr. Knox was Son to Mr. John Knox Minister at Bowden in Teviotdale. The Person I am now accounting for, was ordained Minister at North Leith. When a Probationer, he was in the Army, and Chaplain to Sir John Brown's Regiment of Horse, and was engaged among the Royalists in the Battle at Inverkeithing. He was Chaplain in the Castle of Tintallan, when the English besieged it; and after he had safely conveyed my Lord Angus and some Ladies, to their Boat for North-berwick, he was deserted by the Lieutenant and most Part of the Soldiers; yet he capitulated with the English, and got very good Conditions. He had an elder Brother, Mr. Henry Knox, a Youth of very bright Parts, who waited upon the King in the Time of his Exile, and was more than once employed by the King, and sent over to Scotland, to negotiate his Affairs. Mr. John was one Person to whom the King's Letters to his Friends in Scotland were directed; and I have seen a Letter writ by the King himself to him, yet in his Son's Hand, a Copy whereof the curious Reader will desire to see, and it follows.

St. Germans, August 3. 1652.

King's Letter
to him, Aug. 3.
1652.

I Am promised this Letter shall come safe to your Hands, and therefore I am willing, that you should know from my self, that I am still alive, and the same Man I was when I was amongst you. I am very much troubled for what you suffer, and am using all the Endeavours I can to free you, and before many Months I hope you will see I am not idle: In the mean time, I cannot but let you know, that I am in greater Straits and Necessities than you can easily apprehend, and am thereby compelled to leave many Things undone which would be of Advantage to me and you. I could heartily wish therefore, that by your Interest and Negotiation with these you dare trust, and who you know with me ‘ me well, some Way might be thought of to assist me with Money, which would be a very seasonable Obligation, and could never be forgotten by me. I need say no more to you, but that I shall be glad to receive any Advice or Advertisement from you that you think necessary for me, and shall always remain,’ 1684.

Tour very loving Friend,

CHARLES R.

Notwithstanding of all these Services done for the King in his Straits, Mr. Knox was turned out of his Church in North Leith, at the Restoration, because in Conscience he could not subject to Prelacy. Indeed he got the Benefit of being connived at in West Calder for some Years, till now he was summoned in before the Council, and was charged with breaking his Confinement, which every Body knew none of the Indulged kept, with not keeping the 29 of May, and baptizing Children of other Parishes; and tho’ he gave satisfying Answers to all, and took the Liberty to signify the peculiar Services he had Occasion to be employed in for the King, and the Letters he had under his Hand, which he offered to produce; yet no Favour could be done him, unless he would give Bond never to preach or exercise any Part of the ministerial Function in Scotland. To which he answered. ‘He looked on himself as a Minister of Christ, and would never tie up himself from preaching his Gospel.’ Whereupon he was immediately ordered to Prison, and lay there from September to February next, when the King died.

The Design was now formed to turn out all the indulged Ministers, and either to make Presbyterian Ministers promise not to preach, or engage to go off the Kingdom. Accordingly, we shall afterward find it an Instruction to the Circuits in October, to examine all the indulged Ministers, and lay them aside who had broken their Instructions; and such as would not find Caution not to preach, or remove off the Kingdom, were to be sent in Prisoners to Edinburgh. The Managers now resolved to rid the Prelates of all Presbyterian Ministers by whole Sale, and at this Time they came to no small Hardships. They had carried most peaceably and loyally, to that Degree, that the Society People censured and reproached them, and no Reason could be given for such Hardships upon so many pious and godly Men, but the Malice of the Prelates, to whom they had been Eye-fores, and the Prevalency of Popish Designs which were ripening very fast under the Duke of York’s Influence.

A Design against the Indulged, and all other Presbyterian Ministers.

Accordingly, October 13. I find Mr. Anthony Murray in Prison, because he will not engage to quit his Ministry; and the Council allow him Liberty to visit his dying Brother the Laird of Glendoick, upon Bond to re-enter Prison against the 20 of November, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks. And, October 30. Mr. James Curry is liberated from Prison, upon condition he preach none, otherwise to forfeit his Bond of Five thousand Merks.

Mr. Anthony Murray.

Mr. James Curry.

By an original Letter of the Reverend Mr. John Carstairs, to the Secretary of State, dated November 3. it appears, that he looked upon it as a Thing projected, that all Presbyterian Ministers should be silenced or banished. I shall insert Part of his Letter relative to this, which likewise gives the present Circumstances of this worthy and eminent Minister of Christ.

Mr. John Carstairs’s Letter to the Secretary, Nov. 3. 1684. the State of Presbyterian Ministers.

Right honourable, and my very noble Lord,

‘ I Presume, Necessity constraining me, upon the Acquaintance I have the Honour of with your Lordship, humbly to kiss your Hands with this Line, and to beseech your Lordship, that seeing, as it would seem, it is resolved, that all Presbyterian nonconform Ministers shall be either perpetually imprisoned, or exiled his Majesty’s Dominions, to grant me your Lordship’s Pass to go out of my native Country, (where I thought I would have been permitted to die, being an aged Man, entering, if I live so long, the Sixth of January next, into my great Climaterick, and being so very infirm, that I have not but twice, and that not without some Difficulty, walked between the Cross and Trone, these Two and thirty Months, nor so much as croiled the narrowest Street or Lane in Edinburgh these Twelve Months bygone) unclogged with any gravaminous Condition, as of not exercising my Ministry, (to which, whatever may be my Practice, which I hope shall be without Offence, I dare not engage, come of me what will) or of not returning, since that is on the Matter a Sentence of Banishment, and consuetable withal, as the Grant of my own Desire. I can ingenuously declare to your Lordship, I have no Thought, let be fixed Resolution, of returning, having some Design to remove to such a Distance, that it is more probable I shall die by the Way than go the Length, let be return; and if ever I shall have

U u u u

‘ Thoughts

1684.

'Thoughts of returning, which is not probable, I shall not do it without acquainting your Lordship first. If your Lordship think fit to grant me a Pass (which my Lord Secretary no doubt may, of and by himself, do to any Subject under no Sentence, Censure, Suspicion or Citation,) to be gone in the Spring, if I be in Capacity, (having been, in the Beginning of this Year, Four whole Months unable to take so much as one Turn in my Chamber, and a considerable Part of that Time in Bed, under great Agony,) with some Protection for my poor disconsolate Family, to whom, at least the very short while I am to be with them, your Lordship will allow me to be a Minister, it will be a singular Obligation.' The rest of the Letter goes on with a particular Deduction of Mr. Carstairs his very considerable Appearances for the King, when in a low Condition, and his untainted Loyalty to him, in the Instances already noticed, after the Restoration. He further appeals to his Declaration before the Council, Four Years ago, which hath likewise been considered, and concludes with a confident Hope, that his Lordship's Generosity at least will secure him from being in worse Case by this Address to him.

What the Reception or Consequent of this Address to the Secretary was, I know not, but I think, this singular and eminent Servant of Christ died not long after this, and got beyond their Reach; yet still the Ingratitude and Severity of this Period toward this worthy Minister and others, was not the less, and many were brought to hard Circumstances.

All the indulged Ministers ordered to be turned out, Nov. 27.

By the Registers I find, November 27. that the Council order 'all the indulged Ministers to be outed, because they kept not their Instructions, and some of them did not keep the Thanksgiving in September last Year.' And by the Instructions given to the Commissioners in different Shires, December 2. 'the indulged Ministers are to be obliged to give Bond not to exercise any Part of their Ministry in Scotland,' of which in its own Room.

Many of them imprisoned.

And December 11. Mr. Ralph Rogers, Mr. William Tullidaff, and Mr. Robert Boyd, refusing to give Bond not to exercise their Ministry while they remain in the Kingdom, are ordered to Prison. January 8. 1685. Mr. Robert Boyd is liberate from Prison, and confined to a House in Edinburgh. December 22. Mr. John Macmichan, Mr. Cant, Mr. Archibald Macgachan, are indicted before the Justiciary, for Refet of Rebels; they appear and offer to abide Trial. The Diet is deserted simpliciter, and the last enacts himself, under Five thousand Merks, to appear when called. And January 17. Mr. Macmichan and Mr. Cant are brought before the Council, and their Bond taken to live peaceably, and that they shall not preach. That same Day, Mr. Robert Bell, indulged at Dalry, his Licence is made void. And January 22. Mr. John Oliphant, who had been formerly confined to his Chamber, his Confinement is renewed for a Month. And February 3. Mr. Robert Duncanson, and Mr. Duncan Campbell, indulged Ministers in Argyle, are sent to Prison, upon their Refusal to engage not to exercise any Part of their ministerial Work. Some more Hints about them will come in next Year.

Other Accounts of their Trouble.

By other Accounts, I find, that several Ministers and others, in the Year 1684. were made Prisoners, as Mr. George Meldrum, Mr. James Urquhart, Mr. John Stuart, Mr. Alexander Dunbar; and all the indulged Ministers in the western Shires and elsewhere, were summarily laid aside, and those of them who would not oblige themselves not to preach, were imprisoned, first in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, and then in Blackness or the Bass, as Mr. Ralph Rogers, Mr. William Tullidaff, Mr. Anthony Murray, Mr. John Greg, Mr. James Hutchison, Mr. Andrew Miller, Mr. Peter Kid, Mr. John Knox, Mr. Walter Mowat, Mr. James Curry, &c. This is all I can give relating to those worthy and useful Ministers of Christ, now laid aside, and I have chosen to put it all together in this Place. I come now forward to take Notice of the Hardships Gentlemen and others were brought to this Year.

Miller of Water-shaugh liberate under a Bond of 4000 Lib. Sterl.

January 3. John Miller of Water-shaugh petitions the Council, that he hath been in Prison these Nine Months, for alledged Correspondence with Rebels at Bothwell, and no Proof brought against him, craving to be liberate. The Council order him to be liberate from the Canongate Tolbooth, upon his giving Bond and Caution, under the Penalty of Five thousand Pounds Sterling, that he shall answer to any Crime laid to his Charge, upon six Days Citation, at his House; and that in the mean time he shall live orderly, and frequent Ordinances at his own Parish-church. I have no more concerning this Gentleman; but Five thousand Pounds Sterling was a most exorbitant Sum, upon mere Suspicion of Correspondence.

Sir William Scot of Harden his exorbitant Fine for his Lady's Nonconformity.

We heard of Sir William Scot of Harden his Case last Year; and that upon his exorbitant Fine of 46000 Pounds, for his Lady's Nonconformity, the Council had applied to the King, for Power to remit Fines, where Husbands were loyal. January 22. he presents his Petition for his Enlargement. In this extraordinary Case, I shall set down what I meet with in the Registers.

